Claimant unemployment among this group has fallen by 70 per cent. in the three years since April 1997 and by 56 per cent. since April 1998 when the New Deal was introduced. Part of this fall is due to the delivery of a strong and stable economy, but the New Deal for Young People has helped unemployment to fall even faster. The fall of 56 per cent. since the New Deal was introduced compares with a fall of 18 per cent. in total unemployment, 23 per cent. in total youth (18–24) unemployment and 26 per cent. in the total number unemployed for six months or more. The effect of the New Deal is confirmed by independent research from the National Institute of Economic and Social Research.

It is not possible to measure the New Deal effect exactly in each constituency. However, in Glasgow, Pollok the falls in unemployment among the New Deal client group have also been substantially faster than for other groups. In Glasgow, Pollok constituency in the two years since April 1998 claimant unemployment among those aged 18–24, unemployed for six months or more, has fallen by 68 per cent. from 315 to 101. This compares with a fall of 18 per cent. in total unemployment, 28 per cent. in total youth (18–24) unemployment, and 32 per cent. in the total number unemployed for six months or more.

School Uniforms

Mr. Nigel Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what advice he gives to school governors regarding school uniform policies which ban girls from wearing trousers. [130433]

Jacqui Smith: We have not issued guidance about school uniforms because we believe school governors should be free to decide what their school uniform or dress code policies should be.

Teachers (Performance-related Pay)

Mr. Willis: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what the cost is of the implementation of each part of the teachers' performance-related pay scheme; and what the current cost is of administering the scheme. [130207]

Ms Estelle Morris [holding answer 12 July 2000]: We have made up to £1 billion available to support the cost of our teaching reforms in England until March 2002. Most of this extra money will be spent on the new teachers' pay system. The total cost of administering the pay reforms will be dependent upon the number of school visits carried out and this will not be known until later in 2000.

New Deal for Schools

Mr. Allan: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment if he will list, for the latest date for which figures are available, the total value of grants made by each local education authority in England and Wales to schools, through the New Deal for Schools, for the repair of school buildings. [130209]

Jacqui Smith [holding answer 12 July 2000]: The following table shows allocations made to local education authorities in England under the New Deal for Schools rounds 1 to 4. Information covering Welsh Authorities is not held by this Department.

Further Education

Mr. Boswell: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment if he will make a statement about trends in enrolment to further education in the last 12 months. [130086]

Mr. Wicks [holding answer 12 July 2000]: Snapshot figures for November 1999 show that adult learners funded by the Further Education Council (FEFC) declined by 1.9 per cent. on 1998 while numbers of 16–18 year olds rose by 2.5 per cent. in the same period. The decline in adult learners reflects our squeezing out of the inappropriate franchising by some colleges allowed by the previous Government. The measures announced by the FEFC this year will help ensure that recruitment rises in line with Government projections for 2000–01 and 2001–02.

Neo-natal Hearing Screening

Mr. Boswell: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what resources his Department (a) has allocated and (b) plans to allocate to develop language and educational provision in preparation for the launch and national roll-out of the pilot project for neo-natal hearing screening. [130104]

Jacqui Smith: There has been a £1.1 billion increase in education through Standard Spending Assessment (SSAs) in 2000–01. Through this, money is made available to all local education authorities (LEAs). It is for LEAs to determine how to make best use of this money and decide which services they make resources available for.

In addition in 2000–01, we have made the following increases in funding available to schools and LEAs: £500 million extra in grant to the standards fund; £50 million to support school budgets; £14 million in extra support for Excellence in Cities; and £290 million directly for schools in the March Budget. Taken together these amount to an increase in funding per pupil of £180 in real terms.

Non-departmental Public Bodies

Mr. Allan: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment how many and what percentage of the (a) paid and (b) unpaid appointments which he has made to Non-departmental Public Bodies since 1 May 1997 were women. [129841]

Mr. Wills [holding answer 11 July 2000]: The total number of appointments and re-appointments to DfEE Non-departmental Public Bodies since 1 May 1997 is 410. Of these, 141 have been women, 15 of which have been paid appointments (25 per cent. of all paid appointments and re-appointments) and 126 have been unpaid (36 per cent. of all unpaid appointments and re-appointments).

This Government are committed to increasing the representation of women in public life. In support of this, the Department has drawn up an action plan for increasing the number of women and ethnic minorities holding public appointments. The latest plans, together with the Government's overall plan, were published 24 May 2000 in "Quangos: Opening up Public Appointments 2000–2003", copies of which are in the Libraries of the House.

Residential Care Homes

Dr. Cable: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what arrangements exist to ensure that residential care establishments teach the National Curriculum. [129770]

Jacqui Smith: Although residential care establishments are able to access and use the National Curriculum if they are undertaking education within their establishments, only maintained schools are obligated to do so.

The Government expects and is committed to providing mainstream education including access to the full National Curriculum for all children of school age, wherever this is suitable. The recently published joint Department for Education and Employment and Department of Health "Guidance On The Education of Children and Young People in Public Care" stipulates that: "The Government expects local authorities to set a maximum time limit of twenty school days within which they must secure an education placement for any pupil in public care. It will be a full-time place in a local mainstream school unless the circumstances of the child make full-time or local or mainstream provision unsuitable". This is supported by statutory guidance in Circular LAC(2000)13.

Youth Employment

Mr. Coaker: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what estimate he has made of the numbers of 16 and 17 year-olds in full-time work with no training. [127615]

Ms Jowell: The Department's latest estimate is that there were 114,000 16 and 17-year-olds in employment and not in education or training in England at the end of 1999.

WALES

A3XX Airliner

Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what recent discussions he has had with the First Secretary concerning a regional selective assistance grant for the A3XX airliner, with reference to the likely date of the First Secretary's decision; and if he will make a statement. [129500]

Mr. Paul Murphy: I meet the First Secretary on a regular basis, and our discussions have included the A3XX project. I understand that BAE have submitted a new RSA application with a new case for a grant for £25 million and that the National Assembly is awaiting more detailed information from the company in support of the case before a decision can be made.

New Deal

Mr. Evans: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales how many people in Wales aged 25 years and over have left the New Deal for jobs lasting less than 13 weeks but have been included in the number leaving for sustained employment as a result of not having returned to jobseeker's allowance. [131035]

Mr. Paul Murphy: The definition of a sustained job is one from which the employee does not return to Jobseeker's Allowance within 13 weeks. Information is not available on whether those employees retain the same job.

Latest figures, to the end of April 2000, show that 2,382 people had gained sustained employment from the 25+ New Deal programme.

Mr. Evans: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales how many people in Wales have joined the New Deal since it was established. [131037]

Mr. Paul Murphy: To April 2000, 29,330 young people joined the 18–24 New Deal programme. 13,440 joined the 25+ New Deal programme.

Mr. Evans: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales how many people have left their New Deal scheme in Wales to be placed on (a) Incapacity Benefit, (b) Income Support, (c) Jobseeker's Allowance and (d) other benefit. [131053]

Mr. Paul Murphy: To the end of April 2000, 4,590 people left the 25+ New Deal and continued to claim Jobseeker's Allowance. An additional 1,190 transferred to other benefits including Incapacity Benefit and Income Support. No breakdown of this figure is available.

Mr. Evans: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales how many New Deal participants in Wales have found sustained unsubsidised jobs of 13 weeks or more before having had a New Deal interview. [131041]

Mr. Paul Murphy: To April 2000, 1,060 participants left the 18–24 programme and 225 left the 25+ programme for sustained unsubsidised jobs before participating in a New Deal interview.

Mr. Evans: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what the average cost of the New Deal in Wales is per participant. [131048]

Mr. Paul Murphy: Approximately £1,577.

Mr. Evans: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what proportion of New Deal participants in Wales have seen their wages rise on leaving the scheme. [131040]

Mr. Paul Murphy: No central information is held on the wage levels of those leaving New Deal.

Police Time

Mr. Evans: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what the average amount of time spent by a police officer on the beat was between (a) May 1997 and May 1998, (b) May 1998 and May 1999 and (c) May 1999 and May 2000. [130983]

Mr. Paul Murphy: The deployment of police officers is a matter for individual Chief Constables.

Information about the percentage of officer time spent in public has been published by the Audit Commission in the 1997–98 and 1998–99 editions of "Local Authority Performance Indicators—Police and Fire Services".

Home Office Allocation

Mr. Evans: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales how much money Wales was allocated from the Home Office budget between (a) May 1997 and May 1998, (b) May 1998 and May 1999 and (c) May 1999 and May 2000. [130984]

Mr. Paul Murphy: The allocation of the Home Office budget is a matter for my right hon. Friend the Home Secretary.

LORD CHANCELLOR'S DEPARTMENT

Towel Rails

Mr. Stephen O'Brien: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department what the cost was of each towel rail installed in the last 12 months in the premises used by the Lord Chancellor privately or officially in the Palace of Westminster; how many towel rails were installed; and what the labour cost was for the installation of each towel rail. [130805]

Mr. Lock: The Parliamentary Works Directorate is responsible for carrying out repairs in the Palace of Westminster. Two defective heating radiators in bathrooms in the Lord Chancellor's residence have been replaced by them in the last 12 months. Each radiator cost £536.66 and was subject to a 5 per cent. handling charge, the total labour charge was £174.20 and the VAT was £227.71, giving a total of £1,528.90 for the two radiators. The entire cost went to the House of Lords current works 2000–01 budget.

TREASURY

Export Credits Guarantee Department

Mr. Chaytor: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will make it his policy to (a) establish environmental guidelines for the Export Credits Guarantee Department and (b) support the introduction of such guidelines at the G8 summit in Okinawa. [130830]

Mr. Caborn: I have been asked to reply

ECGD has enhanced its procedures to assess the environmental impact of projects for which its support is requested. In the context of the current review of its mission and status, ECGD is also looking carefully at what more should be done to ensure its support for projects is consistent with the Government's sustainable development objectives, including possible further improvements to its environmental screening and assessment process.

At the forthcoming G8 summit in Okinawa, the UK will support moves to reaffirm the mandate from the Cologne summit, at which it was agreed to work within the OECD towards common environmental guidelines for export credit agencies. At their meeting in June, OECD Ministers welcomed the good progress made in the OECD Export Credit Group on strengthening common approaches on the environment and requested a report on progress at the next meeting.

Mortgages and Endowment Policies

Mr. Cousins: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what powers are available to the Financial Services Authority to regulate, and take sanctions against, market abuses of the sale of financial products which seek to offer protection against shortfalls in endowment policies designed to pay off mortgages. [130821]

Mr. Timms: The Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 and other legislation provide the relevant regulators with an effective statutory framework with which to tackle market abuse of all kinds. It is illegal to conduct unauthorised insurance business.

Dr. Cable: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what approaches (a) he and (b) the Financial Services Authority have made to individual firms requesting the numbers of 25 year endowment contracts (A) with-profits and (B) unit linked purchased (i) one year ago, (ii) five years ago, (iii) 10 years ago, (iv) 15 years ago and (v) 20 years ago which are still in force today; and if he will publish the data received. [130635]

Miss Melanie Johnson: On behalf of the Financial Services Authority, the Personal Investment Authority (PIA) collects and publishes information on the persistency of endowment contracts, but only for periods of up to four years after policies begin. The latest figures were published in October 1999 in the PIA's "Fifth Survey Of The Persistency Of Life And Pensions Policies", a copy of which has been placed in the House of Commons Library.

Dr. Cable: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer when he proposes to bring forward amendments to the law to protect house purchasers from the mis-selling of mortgages. [130650]

Mr. Timms: The Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 provides a statutory framework for the regulation of mortgages.

The House will be asked to approve a Regulated Activities Order in the next few months. This will include further details of how mortgages will be regulated.

On the timing of mortgage regulation, I refer the hon. Gentleman to the answer my hon. Friend the Economic Secretary to the Treasury gave to my hon. Friend the Member for Stevenage (Barbara Follett) on 27 January 2000, Official Report, columns 263–64W.

Motor Service Garages

Mr. Jenkin: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many motor service garages which subcontract their MOT business to an approved test centre have been investigated by HM Customs and Excise for under-declaration of Value Added Tax since November 1996; how many have been found to have under-declared their Value Added Tax liability; and if he will make a statement. [130718]

Dawn Primarolo: Visit information about motor service garages that subcontract their MOT business is not held centrally by Customs and Excise. But visits are made to check businesses' Value Added Tax declarations on the basis of Customs' overall assessment of revenue risk. This takes account of local information including knowledge about under-declarations found on visits to other businesses. In the years 1998–99 and 1999–2000 the number of visits made by Customs to motor service garages to check their Value Added Tax declarations was 2,249 and 1,987 and the number found to have under-declared their Value Added Tax liability was 1,347 and 1,227 respectively.

Working Families Tax Credit

Mr. Ruffley: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will make a statement on the costs to business of the implementation of the Working Families Tax Credit. [129339]

Dawn Primarolo: I refer the hon. Member to the regulatory impact assessment which was published and placed in the House Library in December 1999.

Mr. Ian Bruce: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what changes have taken place in (a) staff and (b) premises since the introduction of Family Tax Credit; and what further changes are planned. [130005]

Dawn Primarolo [holding answer 10 July 2000]: Around 3,500 full-time equivalent (FTE) staff transferred from the Benefits Agency to the Inland Revenue in October 1999 to form the Tax Credit Office (TCO). Staffing levels have not changed significantly since that time, and there are still currently around 3,500 FTE staff in the TCO. The TCO still occupies the same premises as it did in October 1999. There are no plans within the TCO to change either staffing levels or accommodation, although both are kept under review.

Mr. Ian Bruce: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will make a statement on the operational effectiveness of the introduction of Family Tax Credit. [130003]

Dawn Primarolo [holding answer 10 July 2000]: The Tax Credit Office (TCO) was set up in October 1999. For the period between October 1999 and 31 March 2000, most of the TCO's inherited targets have either been met or exceeded. A full analysis of performance against targets will be contained in the Inland Revenue Plan 2000–01 which is to be published shortly.

Mr. Ian Bruce: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what the average time is from receipt of application to receipt of tax credit for Family Tax Credit; and what is the current number of cases being processed. [130006]

Dawn Primarolo [holding answer 10 July 2000]: We do not record the average time between receipt of Working Families Tax Credit (WFTC) applications by the Tax Credit Office (TCO) and receipt of tax credit payments by applicants. However, the TCO aims to settle 90 per cent. of all WFTC applications within 30 working days of receipt. The actual percentage of applications settled within 30 days since the beginning of this financial year and the end of June 2000 is 97.6 per cent. The number of applications being processed as at 30 June 2000 was 61,000.

Withholding Tax

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will make a statement on the Austrian Government's blocking of the withholding tax proposal, with particular reference to the use of the national veto. [129921]

Dawn Primarolo: All 15 member states have agreed to accept exchange of information, and not a withholding tax, as the way forward for the EU to tackle the problem of cross-border tax evasion.

VAT (Continence Pads)

Mr. Burstow: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer, pursuant to his answer of 18 May 2000, Official Report, column 268W, on VAT, by what mechanism incontinent people apply for zero-rated continence pads. [130754]

Dawn Primarolo: The mechanism for claiming VAT relief on supplies of continence pads works on the basis of self assessment. Individuals living in their own homes and suffering from incontinence declare to suppliers that they are chronically sick or disabled and are therefore entitled to purchase zero-rated continence pads.

Departmental Initiatives

Dr. Lynne Jones: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if she will list each departmental initiative since May 1997 requiring bids for funding together with the total resources available, the number of successful bids and the proportion this represents of total bids received; and what data he collects on the average expenditure of organisations bidding for funding through each initiative. [131088]

Mr. Andrew Smith: New spending plans for the years 2001–02 and 2003–04 are being considered in the current Spending Review. The outcome of the review will be announced on 18 July.

Pensioner Savings

Mr. Sarwar: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many pensioners benefited from the changes to income tax on savings announced in the Budget. [130959]

Dawn Primarolo: Six out of 10 pensioners do not have any income tax to pay. Many of the remaining pensioners with savings could benefit from the measures announced in the Budget.

Married Person's Allowance

Mr. Simon Thomas: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many men born between 6 April 1935 and 5 April 1936 are affected by the withdrawal of the married person's allowance in (a) the UK, (b) Wales and (c) Ceredigion. [127871]

Dawn Primarolo: Six out of 10 pensioners do not have any income tax to pay. People become entitled to the age-related personal allowance at the age of 65. This is worth up to £1,405 over and above the basic allowance.

In his 1999 Budget, the Chancellor increased the age-related personal allowance by more than inflation, and someone aged 65 to 74 can have an income of £111 a week in 2000–01 before paying tax.

Mr. Todd: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what estimate he has made of the additional tax collected in 2000–01 as a result of the abolition of the married couples allowance. [130769]

Dawn Primarolo: An estimate was provided in appendix A2.1 of the March 2000 Financial Statement and Budget Report. A copy is held in the Library of the House.

Imports (Israel)

Dr. Starkey: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer, pursuant to his answer of 20 March 2000, Official Report, column 449W, if the European Commission has asked the UK, through HM Customs and Excise, to begin a posteriori verification measures under the Origin Rules Protocol in respect of imports from Israel. [130181]

Dawn Primarolo: Yes.

Dr. Starkey: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer, pursuant to his answer of 20 March 2000, Official Report, column 450W, following the Israeli Government's admission concerning the definition of territoriality it uses in issuing certificates of origin, if the European Commission will require security bonds or deposits on new importations of products labelled, "Made in Israel", similar to those previously shown to have been produced in settlements on the West Bank, Gaza, East Jerusalem or the Golan Heights. [130183]

Dawn Primarolo: No such decision has yet been taken.

Dr. Starkey: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer in cases prior to October 1999, where HM Customs and Excise initiated a posteriori verification procedures with Israel's customs concerning importations under preferences of products that Customs and Excise had reason to suspect may have been wholly produced or substantially processed in the territories occupied by Israel since 1967, what answers HM Customs and Excise received from Israeli customs concerning the originating status of the products concerned. [130185]

Dawn Primarolo: No such verifications were initiated.

Dr. Starkey: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer, pursuant to his answer of 20 March 2000, Official Report, column 449W, if HM Customs and Excise have begun to apply, or will apply, a posteriori verification measures under the Origin Rules Protocol to (a) all Israeli products and (b) new imports of products labelled, "Made in Israel", similar to those previously shown to have been produced in settlements on the West Bank, Gaza, East Jerusalem or the Golan Heights. [130182]

Dawn Primarolo: HM Customs and Excise have begun a posteriori verifications based on information supplied to it by the European Commission. No decision on additional verification measures beyond this has yet been taken.

Dr. Starkey: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer, pursuant to his answer of 20 March 2000, Official Report, column 449W, when the European Commission completed its assessment of the evidence provided by HM Customs and Excise relating to Israeli violations of the EC-Israel Trade Agreement. [130180]

Dawn Primarolo: At the beginning of April 2000, the European Commission instructed member states to commence verification inquiries with Israel as set out in Article 32 of Protocol 4 to the EC-Israel Trade Agreement.

Dr. Starkey: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if there have been instances where imports to Britain, accompanied by Israeli certificates of origin, have been prevented by HM Customs and Excise from benefiting from preferential treatment because the labelling, the locales named in the origin certificates, or other information indicated that the goods in question were wholly produced or substantially processed in the occupied territories of the West Bank, Gaza or Golan Heights. [130184]

Dawn Primarolo: There have been no such instances.

BEST Pensioners

Mr. Sanders: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will make a statement on the dispute between the Inland Revenue and Standard Life in respect of the BEST pensioners. [130058]

Dawn Primarolo: We are unaware of any such dispute.

Children's Tax Credit

Mr. Willetts: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many forms have been sent out inviting people to apply for the Children's Tax Credit; how many completed forms have been returned; and what proportion of completed and returned forms have been completed (a) incorrectly and (b) by someone who is ineligible for the Children's Tax Credit. [130222]

Dawn Primarolo: The Children's Tax Credit will reduce the tax bills of 5 million families by up to £442 a year. Taken with other reforms such as the record levels of Child Benefit and increases in the amounts of Working Families Tax Credit, 1.2 million children will be lifted out of poverty by April 2001.

Claim forms for the credit were sent at the end of June to around 8 million PAYE taxpayers whom our records suggest may be eligible. Over 1.5 million forms have already been returned. No figures are available on the number of forms filled in incorrectly.

Mr. Willetts: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what the total cost to date is of the administration of the new Children's Tax Credit including the costs of (a) producing and distributing the forms, (b) advertisements and (c) the telephone helpline. [130221]

Dawn Primarolo: The Children's Tax Credit will reduce the tax bills of 5 million families by up to £442 a year. Taken with other reforms such as the record levels of Child Benefit and increases in the amounts of Working Families Tax Credit, 1.2 million children will be lifted out of poverty by April 2001.

We estimate the costs to date of implementing the credit at around £4 million, including £1.5 million for publicity and £1.7 million for the issue of claim forms. No separate figures are available for the cost to date of the helpline.

Ms Buck: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if entitlement to Working Families Tax Credit will be affected by the Children's Tax Credit. [130381]

Dawn Primarolo: Families who are eligible to claim both credits will be entitled to do so.

Call Centres

Mr. Etherington: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer (1) how many call centre jobs there were in (a) 1992, (b) 1997 and (c) 2000 in (i) England and Wales and (ii) the City of Sunderland; [130201]

(2) what the average salary was for employees of the call centre industry in (a) England and Wales and (b) the City of Sunderland in (i) 1992, (ii) 1997 and (iii) 2000. [130202]

Miss Melanie Johnson: The information requested falls within the responsibility of the National Statistician. I have asked him to reply.

Letter from Len Cook to Mr. Bill Etherington, dated 17 July 2000:

As National Statistician I have been asked to reply to your recent questions regarding the number of call centre jobs and the salaries of employees in call centre jobs. (130201/2)

The Labour Force Survey (LFS) is National Statistics major source of labour market data on individuals and the New Earnings Survey (NES) is the most comprehensive source of earnings information in Great Britain. Both surveys use the Standard Occupational Classification (SOC) to allocate people to a certain code depending on their occupation. Under the current classification for 1990 (SOC90) call centre staff are allocated to a number of occupation codes, depending on the industrial sector in which they work, which include:

Telephone salespersons - SOC Code 792

clerks (not otherwise specified) - SOC Code 430

counter clerks and cashiers - SOC Code 411

accounts and wage clerks, book-keepers, other financial clerks - SOC Code 410.

However, these occupations also include those people who do a similar job with the same SOC number, but who do not work in a call centre - e.g. bank and insurance clerks. Thus the number of call centre staff, and hence their salaries, cannot be separately identified.

In the newly updated SOC2000, call centre agents/operators will be identified as a separate code. LFS and NES data for SOC2000 will be available in 2001.

Public Appointments

Mr. Allan: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many and what percentage of the (a) paid and (b) unpaid appointments which he has made to non-departmental public bodies since 1 May 1997 were women. [129839]

Dawn Primarolo: [holding answer 11 July 2000]: This Government are committed to increasing the representation of women in public life. In support of this, I have drawn up an action plan for increasing the number of women and ethnic minorities holding public appointments in public bodies of the Chancellor's Departments and Agencies.

The same question was tabled by the hon. Member for Taunton (Jackie Ballard) in April 1998 and an answer was subsequently given on 29 April 1998, Official Report, columns 161–62W. Information of appointments made since then is as follows:

Number of appointments since 29 April 1998

	Paid	Unpaid
Number of women appointed	5	33
Women as percentage of appointments	38	85

Departmental Payments

Mr. Chope: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what percentage of correctly presented bills were paid by his Department in (a) 1998–99 and (b) 1999–2000 within 30 days of receipt of (i) goods and services, (ii) a valid invoice and (iii) other agreed payment terms. [130031]

Mr. Andrew Smith [holding answer 11 July 2000]: I refer the hon. Member to the answer given by the Minister for Small Businesses and E-commerce on 13 July 2000, Official Report, column 621W.

Taxation and National Insurance

Sir Teddy Taylor: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what percentage of GDP is taken in taxation and National Insurance contributions (a) in the UK and (b) in each other EU member state. [130083]

Dawn Primarolo: The information requested can be found in the OECD publication, "Revenue Statistics 1965–1998", a copy of which is in the Library.

Mr. Nigel Jones: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what assessment he has made of the views expressed by the Professional Contractors Group concerning the effect of the IR35 proposals on (a) the wages paid by large foreign-owned companies and (b) United Kingdom entrepreneurs. [130392]

Dawn Primarolo: There is no reason why the IR35 changes should have any effect on the wages paid by large foreign-owned companies or on genuine UK entrepreneurs.

Mr. Nigel Jones: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what recent representations he has received concerning the IR35 tax proposals. [130393]

Dawn Primarolo: We continue to receive correspondence expressing a range of views on this policy.

Adoption

Mr. McNamara: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will amend the regulations to enable prospective parents of children placed for adoption and awaiting its confirmation to qualify for (a) Working Family Tax Benefit and (b) Sure Start maternity grant. [130425]

Dawn Primarolo: The tax, benefit and local authority support systems will be considered in the light of the recommendations of the recently published report on adoption undertaken by the Performance and Innovation Unit.

VAT (EU)

Mr. Mitchell: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what value added tax (a) rates and (b) exemptions are applied by each Government in the EU states; and what court cases have been (i) initiated and (ii) concluded in the European Court of Justice concerning the application of value added tax since 1 May 1997. [130292]

Dawn Primarolo: This information is supplied periodically in the "International VAT Monitor."

European Single Currency

Mr. Matthew Taylor: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what studies (a) are being undertaken and (b) have been undertaken by the Government concerning the effect on trade and competition of the United Kingdom entering the single currency. [130247]

Miss Melanie Johnson [holding answer 12 July 2000]: I refer the hon. Member to the answer I gave him on 3 February 2000, Official Report, column 687W.

Public Sector

Mr. Matthew Taylor: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what estimate he has made of the level of (a) public sector net worth and (b) public sector gross worth in financial year 1999–2000; and if he will make a statement. [130275]

Mr. Andrew Smith [holding answer 12 July 2000]: Forecasts of public sector net worth as a percentage of GDP were published in Table 2.6 of the March 2000 "Financial Statement and Budget Report". Forecasts of public sector gross worth are not available.

Net worth has recently been on an upward trend. This follows a prolonged period in which the poor state of the public finances led to it falling below 15 per cent. of GDP, from over 77 per cent. of GDP in 1980–81.

Monetary Policy Committee

Mr. Matthew Taylor: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what criteria he uses to decide whether the Monetary Policy Committee members have knowledge and experience which is likely to be relevant to the Committee's functions; and on what grounds he decides whether to renew their membership. [130313]

Miss Melanie Johnson [holding answer 13 July 2000]: All members appointed to the MCP have distinguished professional track records in fields relevant to monetary policy. In deciding whether or not to reappoint external members the Chancellor takes into account the need to strike a balance between continuity and ensuring that there are opportunities to bring new ideas and perspectives into the MCP at regular intervals.

Fuel Duty

Mr. Brake: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what assessment he has made of the advantages and disadvantages of allowing duty on fuel products to be paid at the terminal instead of at the point at which they leave the refinery. [130717]

Mr. Timms: I have made no such assessment.

Nigeria

Ms Walley: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will make a statement in respect of debt owed by Nigeria to the UK. [130991]

Miss Melanie Johnson: The UK welcomes Nigeria's new democratic government and its determination to push ahead with economic reform. As Nigeria's largest creditor we have been working to help Nigeria resolve its debt burden within the context of IMF support so that freed-up resources can be devoted to poverty eradication. The Chancellor has taken a two-stage approach: first, a generous debt rescheduling at the Paris Club once an IMF programme has been agreed; and then, once Nigeria has built a track record of reform, the UK has made clear that it would be willing to consider partial debt cancellation subject to a debt sustainability analysis.

DEFENCE

PFI Contracts

Mr. Matthew Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence (1) what mechanisms are in place to monitor the (a) service provided by defence projects delivered under the private finance initiative and (b) performance of PFI contracts for projects already operating; [128590]

(2) what monitoring is undertaken by his Department of Private Finance Initiative contracts; and if he will make a statement; [129202]

(3) what the average period of time is between the completion of a full business case and signing of the final contract for PFI contracts in his Department; and if he will make a statement. [129204]

Mr. Spellar: MOD signs PFI deals when appropriate contractual arrangements have been negotiated in order to secure best value for money. The time taken to complete such deals varies from contract to contract. Detailed records covering this particular aspect are not held centrally. Each PFI contract contains performance measures against which service provision is reviewed. MOD also seeks to apply lessons learned from its own PFI deals and from elsewhere in Government, drawing on guidance from the National Audit Office and other relevant bodies.

Mr. Hoon: The issue of light weapons and ammunition provided by the UK Government to the Government of Sierra Leone, including the 5 million rounds of 7.62 mm ammunition and 4,000 81 mm mortar bombs, is controlled by a senior British military officer in Freetown. The Government of Sierra Leone has provided assurances that all weapons and ammunition will be used only by regular Sierra Leone Army soldiers and in accordance with international humanitarian law and human rights standards.

Nuclear Weapons (Iraq and Israel)

Mr. Savidge: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what recent assessment he has made of the nuclear weapons capability of (a) Iraq and (b) Israel. [130679]

Mr. Hoon: We remain concerned about the potential for Iraq to resume its covert programme to develop a nuclear weapons capability. Hence the importance we attach to re-establishing weapons inspections in Iraq under the relevant United Nations Security Council resolutions.

Israel is a non-party to the nuclear non-proliferation treaty (NPT). We consistently call on Israel to join the NPT as a non-nuclear weapons state, to place all its nuclear facilities under international Atomic Energy Agency safeguards, to ratify the comprehensive nuclear test ban treaty and to engage in negotiations on a fissile material cut-off treaty.

Electronic Test Facility

Mr. Matthew Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what representations he has received from the Irish Government with regard to his Department's Electronic Test Facility, formerly sited at the British Nuclear Fuels Ltd. site at Capenhurst, Cheshire since 19 October 1999; when these were received; and from which Departments of the Irish Government. Mr. Spellar [holding answer 17 July 2000]: Options for the future basing of the Joint Services Adventurous Training (Gliding) Centre and the Royal Air Force Gliding and Soaring Association Bicester Flying Club are currently being investigated. One option being considered is a move from RAF Bicester to RAF Little Rissington.

Until this work is completed later this year, it will not be possible to decide where these units will be located in future or to progress a move.

Falkland Islands

Mr. Baker: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what is the total annual amount spent by his Department in respect of the Falkland Islands in the last year for which figures are available. [130417]

Mr. Spellar: The outturn cost to the Ministry of Defence for the Falkland Islands Garrison in financial year 1999–2000 was £71.1 million.

This figure relates to the costs incurred by the Commander British Forces Falkland Islands only. It does not include the costs of the RAF airbridge to the Falkland Islands, nor the cost of naval deployments to the South Atlantic. These costs fall to other budgets and could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

TRADE AND INDUSTRY

Nuclear Fuel

Mr. Llew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what proportion of the respective stockpiles of reprocessed uranium from (a) magnox fuel, (b) AOR fuel, (c) SGHWR fuel and (d) fast reactor fuel have been re-cycled in new fuel to date; and if he will list the quantities and current locations of the reprocessed uranium stored to date. [129967]

Mrs. Liddell: Proportion (a) is approximately 50 per cent. Proportion (b) is 0 per cent. Proportions (c) and (d) cannot be calculated without incurring disproportionate cost, because UKAEA does not separately distinguish the source of the uranium which it uses for fuel manufacture.

My Department published the figure of holdings of civil depleted, natural and low enriched uranium at 31 December 1999 on 13 June. This material is stored at licensed civil nuclear sites in the UK.

Mr. Llew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry which (a) Government Departments, in (i) the United Kingdom and (ii) Japan, (b) en route states, (c) nuclear regulatory bodies and (d) non-governmental groups in (1) the United Kingdom, (2) Japan and (3) en route states were consulted on the decision to return plutonium MOX fuel to Sellafield; what considerations underlay the decision to transport the plutonium fuel; what other options were considered; what his estimate is of the cost of the shipment and subsequent processing at Sellafield; and what is the basis for his estimate. [130850]

Mrs. Liddell: The agreements announced on 11 July on resolving the problem of the MOX fuel at Takahama in Japan followed discussions between BNFL and its Japanese customer, Kansai Electric Power Company, and between the UK and Japanese Governments.

The Government's support for BNFL's decision followed full consultation across Departments. The cost of the return shipment and the subsequent handling of the fuel at Sellafield is a commercial matter for BNFL.

Mr. Chaytor: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what estimate he has made of the total cost of returning the defective MOX fuel from Japan to the United Kingdom; and if he will break down the main components of the cost. [131301]

Mrs. Liddell: British Nuclear Fuels plc (BNFL) is responsible for the return of the MOX fuel in Japan. The fuel will be returned at BNFL's expense. The cost is a commercial matter for BNFL.

Export Licences

Mr. Chope: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry how many export licence applications to his Department have been awaiting a decision for more than (a) three months, (b) six months and (c) a year. [130049]

Dr. Howells [holding answer 11 July 2000]: At 7 July 2000, a decision had not yet been taken on 634 applications for new individual export licences received since 2 May 1997. These are broken down as follows:

	Standard individual export licences	Open individual export licences
Applications received between:
7 July 1999 or earlier	62	68
8 July 1999 and 7 January 2000	118	52
8 January and 7 April 2000	242	92

The figures for open individual export licences do not cover amendments, extensions or OIELs for protective clothing for the media.

However, this information should be considered in light of the answer I gave to my hon. Friend the Member for Kingswood (Mr. Berry), on 27 July 1999, Official Report, columns 307–08W.

Mr. Cousins: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry how often in (a) 1997, (b) 1998 and (c) 1999 an export required a licence under the weapons of mass destruction end use controls; in which states these end-users were located; and in how many cases the licence was refused. [130800]

Dr. Howells [holding answer 17 July 2000]: Details of all export licensing decisions taken between 2 May 1997 and 31 December 1998 were set out in the Government's 1997 and 1998 annual reports on strategic export controls, published by the Foreign and Commonwealth Office; copies are in the Library of the House. These reports list by country of destination the numbers of export licences issued and refused in each entry in the relevant legislation under which the export of goods is controlled, which is known as their rating.

The end use control applies to goods, not otherwise subject to control, where the exporter has been told or knows or suspects that the goods would or might be used in activities connected with weapons of mass destruction or missiles for their delivery. Goods controlled for these reasons are given the rating "End Use".

Information on export licensing decisions taken in 1999 will be set out in the 1999 Annual Report on Strategic Export Controls, which will be published soon.

Venture Capital

Mr. Kidney: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what steps he has taken to help developers of agriculture-related projects obtain access to venture capital. [130732]

Ms Hewitt: The Enterprise Fund's venture capital elements, the UK High Technology Fund and the Regional Venture Capital Funds, are being established to stimulate the availability of equity finance for smaller businesses which offer significant growth potential.

A range of agriculture-related projects will be eligible to receive equity funding through the Enterprise Fund venture capital schemes. However, all investment decisions under these programmes will be made by professional Fund Managers in pursuit of the best possible commercial returns for their funds. It is therefore not possible to pre-determine the sectors in which investments will be made.

Sub-post Office

Mr. Viggers: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will investigate ways of increasing the incomes of sub-post offices by (a) the payment of wages to their staff, (b) provision of swipe cards for the collection of child allowances, pensions and other benefits, (c) encouraging their use for the charging of electricity key meters, (d) the issue of vehicle excise licences and (e) other means. [131162]

Mr. Alan Johnson: The Performance and Innovation Unit's report on the future of the post office network identified new business opportunities for sub-post offices and the Post Office is also seeking out new commercial opportunities in order to sustain or enhance the income of sub-post offices.

Mortgages (Insurance Products)

Mr. Cousins: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what his policy is towards tying the sale of insurance products to mortgage lending; and if he will make a statement. [130810]

Dr. Howells [holding answer 17 July 2000]: I consider that tying-in of mortgages with insurance often means that consumers pay uncompetitive premiums for their insurance cover. I believe that consumers should be free to shop around for the best deal.

DTI is therefore now consulting on a proposal to ban compulsory tie-ins of mortgages with insurance products. Once I have considered fully all the responses to the consultation, I will then look at how this proposal can be taken forward.

Intellectual Property Rights

Mr. Baker: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry (1) what documentation has been prepared by his Department for the TRIPS Council to demonstrate compliance of the United Kingdom's intellectual property law with the TRIPS Agreement which incorporates Article 10bis of the Paris Convention; what response his Department has received from the TRIPS Council; and if he will place a copy of both the document and response in the Library; [130410]

(2) what discussions his officials have had with the TRIPS Council regarding the compliance of the United Kingdom's intellectual property law with the TRIPS Agreement that incorporates Article 10bis of the Paris Convention. [130411]

Dr. Howells: As required by the World Trade Organization (WTO) Trade Related Aspects of Intellectual Property Rights (TRIPS) Agreement the United Kingdom notified its main dedicated intellectual property laws and regulations to the WTO. These were published by the WTO during 1996 in documents with the references IP/N/1/GBR/1, IP/N/1/GBR/C/1, IP/N/1/GBR/C/2, IP/N/1/GBR/T/1, IP/N/1/GBR/T/2, IP/N/1/GBR/G/1, IP/N/1/GBR/G/2, IP/N/1/GBR/D/1, IP/N/1/GBR/D/2, IP/N/1/GBR/P/1, IP/N/1/GBR/P/2, IP/N/1/GBR/P/3, IP/N/1/GBR/L/1, IP/N/1/GBR/U/1, IP/N/2/GBR/1 and IP/N/6/GBR/1.

The United Kingdom participated in reviews of developed country WTO members' TRIPS implementing legislation carried out by the TRIPS Council throughout 1996 and 1997. Records of introductory statements made by the United Kingdom delegation, questions put to the United Kingdom delegation and the responses given were published by the WTO in four documents with references IP/Q/GBR/1, IP/Q2/GBR/1, IP/Q3/GBR/1 and IP/Q4/GBR/1. All of these documents are available to the public on the WTO website, www.wto.org.

Employment Tribunals

Helen Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will review the appointment of Mrs. J. Upshall as a member of employment tribunals taking account of the operation of Integrate Services in Warrington. [130669]

Mr. Alan Johnson: I am not aware of any grounds for action in relation to Mrs. Upshall's appointment.

TREASURY

Financial Services and Markets Act 2000

Mr. Love: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will publish the timetable for implementation of each part of the Financial Services and Markets Act 2000. [126975]

Miss Melanie Johnson: I expect the Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 to come into force in about one year's time. This will complete the process of the modernisation of financial services regulation announced by my right hon. Friend the Chancellor of the Exchequer in May 1997. The timescale provides a framework within which proper preparations can be made for the new regulatory system.

The Government believe that both the financial services industry and consumers will benefit from a single regulator with clear statutory objectives providing a light touch where possible, protection where necessary.

Aggregates

Mr. Gill: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer when the Quarry Products Association was informed of specific legal objections to their proposed preferential purchasing scheme for aggregates from quarry operators meeting certain environmental criteria. [131096]

Mr. Timms: The Quarry Products Association put forward their developed proposals for a preferential purchasing scheme in late 1999. The Government at that time made it clear that this scheme raised concerns in terms of both EU procurement law and on competition grounds.

Mr. Gill: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer when he discussed the Quarry Products Association's proposed preferential purchasing scheme for aggregates from quarry operators meeting certain environmental criteria with (a) the Office of Fair Trading, (b) the European Commission, (c) the DETR and (d) the Department of Trade and Industry. [131095]

Mr. Timms: Discussions with the relevant Government Departments on the Quarry Products Association's proposed preferential purchasing scheme began as soon as further details of the scheme were brought forward in late autumn 1999.

Pesticides Tax

Mr. Alan Simpson: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will list (a) the representations the Treasury has received and (b) meetings it has held on the proposed pesticides tax, giving details of meetings held with (i) the British Agrochemicals Association, (ii) UKASTA, (iii) NOAH, (iv) the National Farmers Union, (v) the Country Landowners Association, and (vi) agrochemical companies, indicating which companies; and what the duration of the meetings was in each case. [131103]

Mr. Timms: I refer my hon. Friend to the answer I gave him on 21 June 2000, Official Report, columns 215–16W.

Spending Review (Devolved Administrations)

Mrs. Lawrence: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will publish the funding rules for the devolved Administrations applied in the 2000 Spending Review. [131564]

Mr. Andrew Smith: Copies of the updated statement of funding policy, which sets out the funding arrangements for the devolved Administrations, have today been placed in the Libraries of both Houses of Parliament.

Parliamentary Questions

Mr. Stunell: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many written parliamentary questions were tabled to his Department between 19 October 1999 and 20 April; and how many did not receive substantive answers citing disproportionate cost as the reason. [131201]

Mr. Timms: 1,676 written questions were tabled to the Chancellor of the Exchequer in the period concerned. Disproportionate cost was cited in 15 instances as the reason why the information requested could not be provided. In a further 28 cases, some of the information sought was provided, but some other information would have been disproportionately costly to obtain.

Tax Returns (Internet)

Mr. Matthew Taylor: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many individual taxpayers who file self-assessment tax returns have registered for the Inland Revenue service for filing tax returns on the internet in each month since the service became available; and if he will make a statement. [130564]

Dawn Primarolo: Since the registration service became available on 3 April, 63,301 individual taxpayers who file self-assessment tax returns have registered for the Inland Revenue service for filing tax returns on the internet. The number of registrations in each month were as follows:

Month	Registrations	Cumulative total
April	32,937	32,937
May	14,877	47,814
June	10,677	58,491
July[1]	4,530	63,021
July[2]	280	63,301

Mr. Tyrie: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will update the statement on travel on Government business by the Treasury's special advisers deposited in the Library on 27 July 1999 to include information about the period after 13 July 1999. [124123]

SOCIAL SECURITY

Average Incomes

Ms Roseanna Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security, pursuant to his answer of 22 June 2000, Official Report, column 256W, on average incomes, if he will list the figures requested for single parents and disabled people. [128063]

Mr. Bayley: The information is not available in the format requested. Data are not available for all the years requested. The earliest and latest financial years for which data from the Family Resources Survey (FRS) data are available are 1994–95 and 1998–99 respectively.

Year on year changes in average amounts of State benefits reflect changes in employment status, income from other sources (for income-related benefits), benefit entitlement and caseload mix.

Results are subject to statistical variability. Comparisons of one year with the next should be treated with considerable caution.

For the purposes of these statistics, disabled people have been defined as anyone in receipt of at least one disability benefit, i.e. Disability Living Allowance (care or mobility), Attendance Allowance, Severe Disablement Allowance, Disability Working Allowance or Incapacity or Invalidity Benefit.

Their average weekly income from state benefits (including the State Retirement Pension) per individual was £110 in 1994–95. It remained at this level in 1995–96 then rose to £117 in 1996–97, £120 in 1997–98 and £124 in 1998–99. The same figures rebased in constant May 2000 prices to adjust for inflation were £129 in 1994–95, £125 in 1995–96, £129 in 1996–97, £128 in 1997–98 and £130 in 1998–99. This represented 34 per cent. of average earnings in 1994–95, 33 per cent. in each of the years 1995–96, 1996–97 and 1997–98, and 32 per cent. in 1998–99.

Results for single parents are sensitive to the proportion of single parents in employment and are presented separately for those in work—defined as working 16 hours or more per week—and those not in work. The proportion of single parents in work, according to the FRS, rose from 37 per cent. in 1994–95 to 43 per cent. in 1998–99. Benefit income is of course much lower for lone parents in work, who therefore have income from earnings, than lone parents not in work. (For recipients of disability benefits the proportion in work, as recorded in the FRS, was stable over this period.)

Average weekly income from State benefits (including the State Retirement Pension) per individual lone parent in work was £64 in 1994–95, £66 in 1995–96, £65 in 1996–97, £68 in 1997–98 and £74 in 1998–99. The same figures rebased in constant May 2000 prices to adjust for inflation were £75 in 1994–95, £75 in 1995–96, £72 in 1996–97, £73 in 1997–98 and £77 in 1998–99. This represented 20 per cent. of average earnings in 1994–95 and 1995–96 and 19 per cent. in each of the years 1996–97, 1997–98 and 1998–99.

Average weekly income from state benefits (including the State Retirement Pension) per individual lone parent not in work was £135 in 1994–95, £142 in 1995–96, £144 in 1996–97, £149 in 1997–98 and £155 in 1998–99. The same figures rebased in constant May 2000 prices to adjust for inflation were £158 in 1994–95, £162 in 1995–96, £160 in 1996–97, £160 in 1997–98 and £161 in 1998–99. This represented 41 per cent. of average earnings in 1994–95, 42 per cent. in 1995–96, 41 per cent. in 1996–97 and 1997–98 and 40 per cent. 1998–99.

The amounts listed here and used in the calculation of percentages are per individual. Benefits have been assigned to the individual in receipt. For example, if Income Support is paid to a disabled person with a non-disabled partner, the full amount of Income Support is assigned to the disabled person in these tables.

The mean has been used to calculate the average weekly income from State benefits for all individuals in the various different groups.

Real term figures have been calculated by uprating cash term figures to reflect May 2000 prices. The headline Retail Prices Index has been used for this calculation.

Average earnings figures, used as the base for calculation of the percentage figure, are for all full time adult employees and are based on data from the New Earnings Survey (Office for National Statistics) which is conducted in April of each year. As FRS data is for financial years the April in which the FRS financial year begins has been used as the average earnings base.

It should be noted that benefit receipt is based on self-assessment and therefore may be subject to mis-reporting.

All income figures have been rounded to the nearest pound and percentages rounded to the nearest integer.

Vaccine Damage Payment Scheme

Mr. Ian Stewart: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security, pursuant to his oral statement of 27 June 2000, Official Report, column 720, what additional payments will be made to people who received a (a) £10,000, (b) £20,000, (c) £30,000 and (d) £40,000 payment under the 1979 Vaccine Damage Payment Scheme; and on what basis these amounts have been calculated. [130842]

Mr. Bayley: Top-up payments are intended to represent the difference, in real terms, between the original payments and the proposed new £100,000 rate. Calculation of the proposed top-up payments is as follows:

Original payment	Top-up payment
10,000	67,000
20,000	62,500
30,000	61,500
40,000	58,000

The original payment made to past recipients has been revalued from the date that the relevant rate of that payment was introduced up to April 2000 using the Retail Prices Index (All items) and the normal method applied in revaluing Social Security benefits across successive upratings.

Mr. Lilley: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security (1) where he intends to publish the criteria which will be used under the revised Vaccine Damage Payment Scheme to determine whether a person is 60 per cent. disabled; [131126]

(2) where the criteria determining whether a child is 80 per cent. disabled are published; [131131]

(3) if he will publish the protocols used by SEMA Group to determine whether a person's injuries were caused by a vaccine; [131132]

(4) if he will publish the protocols used by SEMA Group to determine whether a person is 80 per cent. disabled. [131119]

Mr. Bayley: Section 1(4) of the Vaccine Damage Payments Act 1979 directs that the level of disablement in vaccine damage cases be assessed as for the purposes of section 103 of the Social Security Contributions and Benefits Act 1992. Assessment is further covered in Schedule 6 to the latter Act, and in the Social Security (General Benefit) Regulations 1982 (SI 1982/1408), reg 11 and Schedule 2.

Assessment of 80 per cent. disablement is made by doctors specially trained in disability assessment medicine. They assess the degree of disablement by reference to and comparison with assessments, including guidance on percentage impairments, prescribed in the above legislation. They are assisted in this task by guidance contained in "The Severe Disablement Allowance Handbook for Medical Advisers", approved by the Department of Social Security's Chief Medical Adviser and published by Sema Medical Services, a copy of which will be placed in the Library. Because of the proposed change to the disability threshold under the scheme the need for revised guidance on the 60 per cent. disablement criterion will be considered, and made publicly available as appropriate, before the new threshold comes into force.

Sema doctors advise on whether, on the balance of probabilities, a person's injuries were caused by a vaccine on the basis of the current consensus of informed medical opinion. The use as reference the book "Adverse Events Associated with Childhood Vaccines" by the Institute of Medicine. Sema doctors also carry out regular electronic searches of published medical research papers. The majority of such research in the past three years has been published in The Lancet. The current consensus of informed medical opinion is summarised in Sema medical Services' procedural guidance to its doctors on processing referrals for advice on vaccine damage claims, a copy of which will be placed in the Library.

Mr. Lilley: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security (1) when he plans to publish regulations increasing the statutory sum available under the Vaccine Damage Payments Scheme; [131127]

(2) if the £60 million sum for the costs of revisions to the Vaccine Damage Payments Scheme is intended to cover only the top-up payments for previous recipients of awards; [131130]

(3) if additional funds will be made available (a) this year and (b) in future years if more people than anticipated qualify for a vaccine damage payment when the Vaccine Damage Payments Scheme is revised; [131117]

(4) when he plans to introduce legislation on the Vaccine Damage Payments Scheme; [131118]

(5) pursuant to his oral statement of 27 June 2000, Official Report, columns 719–20, on vaccine damage payments, if he will make a statement on the basis of the calculations that top-up payments of £58,000 to £67,000 will provide recipients with a total payment of £100,000 in real terms. [131193]

Mr. Bayley: The draft Vaccine Damage Payment Act 1979 Statutory Sum Order 2000 was laid on 5 July and is being debated in both Houses this week. We estimate that the costs of implementing the proposals as they affect all existing cases will be around £60 million. There is a statutory entitlement to a vaccine damage payment if the relevant criteria are met and such payments will be made regardless of the future number of awards.

The original payment made to past recipients has been revalued from the date that the relevant rate was introduced to April 2000 using the Retail Prices Index (All items) and the normal method applied in revaluing Social Security benefits across successive upratings. The top-up payments represent the difference between this figure and the proposed new £100,000 rate.

We will bring forward primary legislation to implement the proposed changes to the time limit and the disability threshold as soon as possible.

Occupational Pensions Regulatory Authority

Maria Eagle: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security when he expects to receive the Occupational Pensions Regulatory Authority's fourth annual report; and if he will make a statement. [131562]

Mr. Darling: I have received the fourth report of the Occupational Pensions Regulatory Authority which documents how the organisation has carried out its regulatory functions and worked with others to raise standards in the pensions industry. I have laid copies of the report before both Houses today.

Widowers

Mr. Field: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how many widowers have had their claims for retrospective payment of Widow's Benefits or compensation for not receiving those benefits recently refused; and if he will make a statement on the grounds on which those claims were refused. [131184]

Angela Eagle: In the two months to 31 May 2000, 104 claims for Widow's Benefits were received from men. All such claims are disallowed as men are not entitled to Widow's Benefits under current legislation.

Mr. Field: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how many widowers have contacted his Department to make an inquiry about the possible payment of retrospective Widow's Benefits to men or a settlement following the European Court of Human Rights ruling. [131183]

Angela Eagle: There has been no ruling from the European Court of Human Rights (ECHR). The ECHR's published judgments on two cases explained that, having reached a friendly settlement, these cases have been struck out of the list.

We have received 40 letters inquiring about Widow's Benefits for men in relation to the European Court of Human Rights.

Mr. Field: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how many widowers have claims for Widow's Benefit for men or compensation for the non-payment of those benefits before the European Court of Human Rights. [131185]

Angela Eagle: Fifteen applications have been referred to us by the European Court of Human Rights, including two cases which have been struck out of the list following acceptance of the Government's offer by way of friendly settlement.

Disability Benefit

Maria Eagle: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how he intends to respond to the Social Security Commissioner's decision that telephone conversations could in certain circumstances count as attention for the purpose of giving entitlement to Attendance Allowance or the care component of Disability Living Allowance. [131563]

Mr. Bayley: We know that many people get support from telephone contact with friends and advisers. However, the purpose of Attendance Allowance and the care component of Disability Living Allowance (DLA) is to provide a contribution for the extra costs of people who are so severely disabled that they need another person present to help them. We must ensure that the benefits are provided for those people for whom they were intended. Subject to Parliamentary approval, we therefore intend to introduce amending regulations to ensure that benefit entitlement is not available simply where people speak over the telephone or similar media.

Other assistance is available from social services and social work departments; they have powers to provide assistance with telephone expenses to people who are assessed as needing them for emergency situations.

Stakeholder Pensions

Mr. Willetts: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if the Government will have access to information on stakeholder pensions to enable it to ascertain whether sales are to people outside or within its target group. [130762]

Mr. Rooker: We are planning to collect a range of statistical data. It is intended that this data will, in due course, include information about the level of members' earnings which will enable us to determine how many sales are to people in the target group, as part of the total market for Stakeholder Pensions.

Mr. Field: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what the basis is for his calculation that it would be advantageous for a person earning £9,500 to contract out of the state second pension into a stakeholder pension. [131326]

Mr. Rooker: Stakeholder pensions will be open to people at all income levels but are primarily intended for moderate earners—those earning between around £10,000 and £20,000 a year—as well as higher earners. It will be for individuals to decide whether or not to use a stakeholder pension to contract out of the state scheme, but National Insurance rebates for people who do contract out are set at a level which reflects the cost of providing the state benefits forgone. The state second pension is structured to provide extra help in the state scheme above that available from SERPS for people on earnings up to around £20,000. The new contracting-out arrangements have been designed so that members of contracted-out pension schemes will benefit from the extra help that the state second pension brings to low and moderate earners, either through higher rebates or a state scheme top-up.

Maternity Pay

Ms Harman: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what percentage of women's average earnings flat rate Statutory Maternity Pay represents; and what was the highest percentage it has ever represented. [131112]

Mr. Bayley: The flat rate of Statutory Maternity Pay was 27 per cent. of average women's earnings in 1999–2000, the latest year for which there are figures. This percentage was at its highest in 1987–88 when it reached 28 per cent.

Ms Harman: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what the total annual cost is of Statutory Maternity Pay flat rate; and what it would be if it was increased to £100. [131113]

Mr. Bayley: Statutory Maternity Pay is paid at 90 per cent. of a woman's average weekly earnings for the first six weeks of her maternity leave and a flat rate of £60.20 for the following 12 weeks.

The cost of the SMP flat rate is £210 million.

The total full year cost of paying flat rate at £100 a week would be £350 million.

Ms Harman: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what the total extra cost of flat rate Statutory Maternity Pay would be if it were extended from 12 weeks to up to the child's first birthday. [131114]

Mr. Bayley: The extra full year cost in 2000–01 of extending the flat rate of Statutory Maternity Pay from 12 weeks up to the child's first birthday would be up to £495 million.

Pensions

Mr. Alan Williams: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will estimate for 2000–01, the (a) gross and (b) net difference between the cost of the actual pension increase and (i) an increase of 2.5 per cent., (ii) an increase in line with earnings and (iii) the provision made in the Department's estimates. [131254]

Mr. Rooker: The estimated extra cost for 2000–01 of a 2.5 per cent. increase in basic pension rates would be £530 million gross, £400 million net of means-tested benefits.

The extra cost of an increase in line with earnings would be £1,310 million gross, £1,000 million net. The estimates made in the Departments Report assume a 1.1 per cent. increase and as this was the level of increase there is no difference.

Notes:

1. Assumed average earnings growth is 4.6 per cent. The measure of earnings used is the annual change in the seasonally adjusted, three months to July average earnings index, which was used to uprate the Minimum Income Guarantee.

2. Estimates are rounded to the nearest £10 million.

3. Costs include benefits whose rates are linked by statute to the rate of basic Retirement Pension (principally Widow's Benefits and long-term Incapacity Benefit).

4. Gross costs have been estimated by the Government Actuary's Department. Offsetting means-tested benefit savings have been estimated using the Department's Policy Simulation Model.

Housing Benefit

Mr. Tynan: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will make a statement on the Government's plans for the extension of the Housing Benefit Verification Framework; and how the Government intends to achieve this extension, with particular reference to incentives or penalties for local authorities failing to (a) comply fully with the scheme or (b) commit themselves to a date. [130763]

Angela Eagle: We are working in partnership with local authorities in developing and implementing anti-fraud initiatives such as the Verification Framework. Local authorities are in a position to consider their specific needs and local circumstances before deciding when to take forward these initiatives.

That said, we continue to encourage all local authorities to implement the Verification Framework. We have made £100 million available to enable all authorities to implement the Framework by 2001. In addition we have introduced changes that mean that authorities which are compliant with the Framework can claim additional subsidy under the Weekly Benefit Savings Scheme.

Mr. Tynan: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will list for each local authority in Great Britain, for each of the last two financial years, weekly benefit savings for (a) thresholds, (b) claimed savings, (c) amount of additional subsidy claimed and (d) amount of subsidy penalty applied. [130963]

Angela Eagle: The information has been placed in the Library.

Parliamentary Questions

Mr. Stunell: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how many written parliamentary questions tabled to his Department between 19 October 1999 and 20 April did not receive substantive answers, citing as the reasons commercial or other confidentiality. [131202]

Mr. Rooker: Of the 1,815 questions we received during this period, we were unable to give substantive answers to three questions where we cited the information was commercial in confidence and one answer where the information was confidential.

Correspondence

Mr. Winnick: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security, pursuant to his reply of 10 July 2000, Official Report, column 389W, for what reason the Director of the Disability and Carer Benefits Directorate did not sign the reply of 4 July to the hon. Member for Walsall, North concerning a constituent; and why the letter gave no explanation of why the Director was unable to sign. [130658]

Mr. Bayley [holding answer 17 July 2000]: The Director personally signs letters to right hon. and hon. Members unless he is unavailable, when a nominated deputy signs on his behalf.

The Director was out of the office on 4 July. I regret that, in his absence, the normal procedures were not followed in this particular case.

In future additional guidance will be given to staff about who may sign letters received by Benefits Agency Directors from Members.

Minimum Income Guarantee

Mr. Webb: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security, pursuant to his answer to the hon. Member for Southwark, North and Bermondsey (Mr. Hughes) of 25 May 2000, Official Report, column 619W, how many pensioners are in receipt of the Minimum Income Guarantee (a) in total and (b) in each parliamentary constituency, for each year for which figures are available. [131196]

Mr. Rooker: The total number of pensioners claiming Income Support has been reducing since 1988 as the following table shows.

Minimum Income Guarantee claimants in Great Britain[1]

Year	Total
2000	1,604,200
1999	1,627,900
1998	1,650,500
1997	1,713,900
1996	1,763,640
1995	1,781,000

1990	1,674,700
1989	1,606,500
1988	1,719,300

[1] Before April 1999 this would have been expressed as Income Support

Figures for parliamentary constituencies for the Minimum Income Guarantee which was introduced in April 1999 have been placed in the Library.

INTERNATIONAL DEVELOPMENT

Low-income Countries

Dr. Tonge: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development for each low-income country, what proportion of total bilateral aid it received in (a) 1996–97 and (b) 1999–2000; and what total amount of bilateral aid it received in 1996–97. [130862]

Clare Short: Data for 1999–2000 are not yet available. The tables show both Department for International Development bilateral expenditure and UK Gross Public Expenditure on Aid (GPEX) for 1996–97 and 1998–99, the latest year for which figures are available. Low-income countries are defined as those with a 1995 GNP per capita of less than $766. The total figures include bilateral expenditure which cannot be attributed to individual countries, including for instance block grants and regional allocations.

Dr. Tonge: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what definition her Department uses for low-income countries in relation to its performance target set out in its Public Service Agreement. [130863]

Clare Short: The definition of low-income countries, used in the Public Service Agreement, is those with a GNP per capita in 1995 of less than US$766. There are 64 such countries and they are listed on pages 164–166 of the latest (1999) edition of "Statistics On International Development" (a copy of which is in the House Library). The definition was developed by the World bank.

Aid Indicators

Dr. Tonge: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what the level of each of the indicators was in (a) 1996–97 and (b) 1999–2000 for each of the targets listed in her Department's Public Service Agreement for the 30 largest recipients of British aid; and what action is being taken by her Department to increase progress towards achievement of the targets for each of the targets. [130962]

Clare Short: The level of each of the Public Service Agreement (PSA) indicators for the baseline year and for 1999–2000 are set out in Box g (items 1 to 3) of the Department for International Development's 2000 Departmental Report. Copies of the Departmental Report and the latest public drafts of the Target Strategy Papers which set out the action necessary to achieve the International Development Targets have been deposited in the House Library. The final Target Strategy Papers will be published over the next few months. A revised PSA for DFID, covering the years 2001–04 will be published shortly as Command Paper 4808.

Nolan Rules

Mr. Stunell: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development if she will list each group that is responsible to her Department, with significant and plural membership from outside the Civil Service, and to which the Nolan rules on non-departmental public bodies do not apply; and for each such group, if it (a) is a company limited by guarantee, (b) is a charity, (c) has no formal legal basis and (d) has some other legal basis, giving details. [131174]

Clare Short: The only body which meets these criteria is CDC Group plc. It is not a company limited by guarantee, nor is it a charity. CDC Group plc has a formal legal basis and was formerly a statutory corporation. On 8 December 1999 CDC was registered as a plc in accordance with, and by virtue of, the CDC Act 1999. CDC is presently wholly owned by Government. The Secretary of State for International Development holds the shares, less one which is held by the Treasury Solicitor. It is to these two members that CDC Group plc is responsible.

Parliamentary Questions

Mr. Stunell: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development how many written parliamentary questions were tabled to her Department between 19 October 1999 and 20 April; and how many did not receive substantive answers citing disproportionate cost as the reason. [131200]

Clare Short: 574 written parliamentary questions were tabled to my Department between 19 October 1999 and 20 April 2000. Of these, five were not answered substantively because of disproportionate cost.

Nepal

Mr. Bill O'Brien: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what plans her Department has to assist the development of the economy of Nepal; and if she will make a statement. [129553]

Mr. Foulkes: The objectives of the UK's development programme to Nepal are set out in the Country Strategy Paper, published in November 1998 (a copy of which I am placing in the House of Commons Library). More recently we have been working with other Donors to help the Government implement its Reform Programme which was announced at the Development Forum meeting at Paris in April. This focuses on key areas such as macro-economic stability and fiscal administration, creating an enabling environment for private sector development, financial sector reform, and better governance (including decentralisation, anti-corruption measures, and civil service reform).

Debt Relief

Mr. Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development if she will make a statement on the UK's progress towards meeting the G7 commitment on debt relief. [131188]

Clare Short: So far, eight countries have qualified for debt relief under the enhanced HIPC Initiative, which is fewer than we had hoped. Some countries who could benefit from HIPC debt relief are involved in conflict, or have failed to demonstrate their commitment to tackling poverty. At the Spring Meetings of the World bank and IMF in April, the Government's proposal to establish a joint World bank/IMF committee to oversee the implementation process was agreed. The committee has begun its work and should provide a focus for efforts to meet the target set by the G7 at the Cologne meeting, that three quarters of eligible countries start to receive debt relief before the end of 2000.

We have committed over $315 million to the Trust Fund established under the Heavily Indebted Poor Countries (HIPC) debt Initiative to help the multilateral financial institutions fund their shares of HIPC costs. This is the largest contribution from any country. The figure includes our share of the substantial EC contribution for which we pressed; our contribution to the costs of the IMF delivering its HIPC debt relief is additional. We expect the whole of our commitment to be disbursed over the next three years.

Ministerial Visits

Mr. Streeter: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development if she will list the overseas visits (a) she and (b) the Parliamentary Under-Secretary will make during August and September. [131319]

Clare Short: I shall be going to Prague for 24 and 25 September for the World bank meetings. I have no other overseas visits planned for August and September though I do intend to visit the west of Ireland for my holiday. The Parliamentary Under-Secretary has no overseas visits planned for August and September.

NORTHERN IRELAND

Diplock Court System

Mr. McNamara: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what progress has been made on the review into the future operation of the Diplock court system; and when he expects a report to be published. [130422]

Mr. Ingram: On 14 December 1999, during the Second Reading of the Terrorism Bill in the House of Commons, the Home Secretary announced that in parallel with the passage of the Bill the Government would conduct a review of the Diplock court arrangements. The Review Group has now completed its work and presented its report to the Secretary of State. The report was placed in the libraries at Westminster on 4 July and I enclose a copy for information.

While the Government's overall objective remains a return to jury trial for all offences in Northern Ireland, the Secretary of State agrees with the Review Group's recommendation that the time is not yet right for such a move. The Review Group's report also addresses a number of detailed points in relation to the operation of the Diplock court and will be considered further by the Secretary of State.

SOLICITOR-GENERAL

Director of Public Prosecutions

Maria Eagle: To ask the Solicitor-General when the Director of Public Prosecutions will publish his Annual Report. [131511]

The Solicitor-General: I can confirm that I have today placed copies of the Annual Report in the Libraries of the House.

Roisin McAliskey

Mr. Goggins: To ask the Solicitor-General if he will make a statement concerning the possible prosecution of Roisin McAliskey. [131514]

The Solicitor-General: Further to the statement of the Home Secretary on 10 March 1998, Official Report, column 133W, that he would not order the extradition of Roisin McAliskey to Germany, the Crown Prosecution Service, in accordance with this country's obligations under Article 7 of the European Convention on the Suppression of Terrorism, has considered whether to prosecute Roisin McAliskey in this country for the offences allegedly committed in Germany in relation to the Osnabruk bombing of 28 June 1996.

The test applied by the Crown Prosecution Service is the test set out in the Code for Crown Prosecutors that applies to all prosecution will be commenced or proceeded with only if there is sufficient evidence to afford a realistic prospect of conviction and that prosecution is in the public interest.

The Crown Prosecution Service, having taken the advice of Senior Treasury Counsel, has concluded that there is not a realistic prospect of convicting Miss McAliskey for any offence arising out of the Osnabruk bombing. It has reached that conclusion having taken into account the available evidence and the likely result of any argument that may be put forward by Miss McAliskey that to prosecute her now would be an abuse of process.

The Law Officers have been consulted and we agree with the conclusion reached by the Crown Prosecution Service.

It is not usual for the Law Officers to make announcements concerning consideration of individual cases. In this instance, the Home Secretary, in a written reply, 20 March 1998, Official Report, column 742W, said that this matter would be considered for prosecution in the United Kingdom. It is right that the House should be informed of the outcome of those considerations.

WALES

Further Education Colleges

Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what discussions he has had with the First Secretary concerning facilitating access to further education colleges in Wales by (a) single parents, (b) the long-term unemployed and (c) others; and if he will make a statement. [125561]

Mr. Hanson: My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State meets the First Secretary on a regular basis to discuss a range of issues including education and training. I also have regular discussions with the Assembly Secretary for Post-16 Education and Training.

The new arrangements for post-16 education and training in Wales will enable a coherent system between all providers of post-16 education and training, thereby increasing choice for all our people whatever their personal circumstances. It is envisaged that the new National Council for Education and Training for Wales (CETW) will fund a wide range of learner support measures that will enable more people to participate in training.

The National Assembly provides Access Funds for students who experience financial difficulties while studying or who are prevented from entering further education because of financial reasons. Further Education Access Funds have been substantially increased from £0.5 million in 1998–99 to a total of £13.3 million over the period 1999–2000 to 2001–02.

Police

Mr. Evans: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales how many police there were in Wales in (a) May 1997 and (b) July 2000. [130981]

Mr. Paul Murphy [holding answer 17 July 2000]: Figures are not held centrally for the months specified. At 31 March 1997, there were 6,593 police officers in Wales, and at 30 September 1999 there were 6,692 police officers.

Assembly (Information Exchange)

Mr. Evans: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will make a statement on information exchange between the United Kingdom and the Welsh Assembly. [131064]

Mr. Paul Murphy [holding answer 17 July 2000]: The Memorandum of Understanding between the United Kingdom Government and the Cabinet of the National Assembly for Wales published in October 1999 says in paragraph 9 that:

> the administrations will aim to provide each other with as full and open as possible access to scientific, technical and policy information including statistics and research and, where appropriate, representations from third parties.

Parliamentary Questions

Mr. Stunell: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales on how many occasions he has deposited papers in the Library in response to parliamentary questions tabled to his Department between 19 October 1999 and 20 April. [131129]

Mr. Paul Murphy: Six papers were deposited in the Library in response to parliamentary questions tabled between 19 October and 20 April.

AGRICULTURE, FISHERIES AND FOOD

Over-30-months Scheme

Mr. Levitt: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what assessment he has made of the efficiency and environmental standards of the Durga process for burning over-30-months scheme carcases. [129652]

Ms Quin: Durga were one of a number of companies contracted to provide incineration services following a competitive tender held by the Intervention Board during 1996. The company's contract required them to have all necessary planning and environmental consents in place prior to commencement of operations. Incineration services began in October 1997 and the company have operated under Environment Agency supervision successfully destroying over 43,000 OTMS carcases by the end of June 2000.

EDUCATION AND EMPLOYMENT

Interactive Voice Response

Mr. Ben Chapman: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment how many departmental telephone lines used by the general public are responded to by interactive voice response systems. [127404]

Mr. Wills: Within the Department for Education and Employment there are no departmental telephone lines used by the general public which are responded to by interactive voice systems.

Lunchtime Exclusions

Helen Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment (1) what recent guidance his Department has issued on the exclusion of pupils at lunchtime; and if he will make a statement; [128125]

(2) if he will make it his policy to monitor the number of fixed-term lunchtime exclusions; and if he will make a statement. [128126]

Jacqui Smith [holding answer 3 July 2000]: My Department's guidance, Circular 10/99 "Social inclusion: Pupil Support", issued in July 1999, makes it clear that lunchtime exclusions are fixed period exclusions and as such are governed by the exclusion provisions in the School Standards and Framework Act 1998. This statutory framework protects the rights of pupils, parents and headteachers.

We already collect data on all permanent and certain fixed period exclusions but collecting data on lunchtime exclusions would impose an unjustified additional burden on schools.

Departmental Payments

Mr. Chope: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what percentage of correctly presented bills were paid by his Department in (a) 1998–99 and (b) 1999–2000 within 30 days of receipt of (i) goods and services, (ii) a valid invoice and (iii) other agreed payment terms. [130035]

Mr. Wills [holding answer 11 July 2000]: I refer the hon. Member to the answer given to my hon. Friend the Member for Elmet (Mr. Burgon) on 23 July 1999, Official Report, columns 677–78W.

Departments and their Agencies are currently collating this information for 1999–2000 and this will be made available to the House shortly.

Holocaust Memorial Day

Mr. Öpik: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what progress his Department has made with the production of a resource pack for Holocaust Memorial Day; when the pack will be made available; and if he will make a statement. [130283]

Jacqui Smith: We are working with the Home Office and key organisations involved in Holocaust Education to develop the resource pack. It will comprise guidance and materials for schools, suggesting activities for teachers and pupils to follow, for example in classroom activities and assemblies, and it will be available in autumn this year.

In June, we launched a teaching pack and guidelines to accompany the Anne Frank Declaration and to support primary and secondary school teachers in their work on Education for Citizenship and the Teaching of Democracy.

Language Teaching

Mr. Pike: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what plans the Government have to increase the teaching of a second language in primary and junior schools. [130286]

Jacqui Smith: Around a quarter of all primary schools already offer a second language. The revised National Curriculum, published last November, contains guidance for teaching 7 to 11-year olds, covering skills, knowledge and understanding. It also contains suggested attainment targets. Furthermore, we have published a Scheme of Work for French aimed at this age group, and will add German and Spanish later this month.

We are piloting approaches to extending language teaching in primary schools, through our Early Language Learning initiative, in which we are gathering good practice and providing classroom materials and a draft curriculum framework. We have asked the Qualifications and Curriculum Authority (QCA) to consider the potential to extend this further in the longer term.

Official Visits

Mr. Matthew Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment if he will list the visits outside Britain made by his Department's Permanent Secretary on official business since 1 January 1999, indicating the date and purpose of the visit in each case. [130489]

Mr. Wills: Michael Bichard has made the following visits since 1 January 1999:

13–14 January 1999—Germany

18–19 February 1999—France

4–5 November 1999—Netherlands

25–26 November 1999—Finland

29 February 2000—USA.

In all cases the purpose was to exchange views on education and employment issues, including in the first three cases in the EU context.

Home Education

Mr. Coaker: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what grants are available to parents for educating their children at home. [130975]

Jacqui Smith: Section 7 of the Education Act 1996 places a duty on parents to ensure that their children receive suitable full-time education, either by regular attendance at school or otherwise. Some parents opt to educate their children at home. Although local education authorities are not required to provide financial help to home educating parents, some do provide support and assistance, including free National Curriculum material. Education authorities are also under a duty to monitor home education to ensure that the education a child receives is suitable to their age, ability, aptitude and any special educational need they may have.

Access to Work Grants

Mr. Andrew George: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what research his Department has completed, commissioned or co-operated in which estimates the take-up of Access to Work grants in each of the last five years. [130755]

Ms Hodge [holding answer 17 July 2000]: Responsibility for the subject of this question has been delegated to the Employment Service under its Chief Executive. I have asked him to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from Richard Foster to Mr. Andrew George, dated 18 July 2000:

As the Employment Service is an Executive Agency, the Secretary of State has asked Leigh Lewis to reply to your question regarding what research his Department has completed, commissioned or co-operated in which estimates the take up of Access to Work grants in each of the last five years. This is something which falls within the responsibilities delegated to Mr Lewis as Chief Executive of the Agency. I am replying in his absence.

The Employment Service commissioned independent research into Access to Work in 1996 and 1998. On both occasions the research focused on a wide range of issues within Access to Work including types of disability, age and gender of applicant, employment type, time taken to provide support and general satisfaction with the programme. Copies of both research reports have been placed in the libraries and their titles are; The Access to Work Programme - A Survey of Recipients, Employers, Employment Service Managers and Staff, the Social & Community Planning Research 1996; and Evaluation of Access to Work, the Institute for Employment Studies, 1998.

Neither report was commissioned to look specifically into the take up and spend of the Access to Work programme but we do collect management information that gives us this information. The table shows you how many disabled people have been helped and how much has been spent through Access to Work between April 1995 and March 2000.

Year	Number of beneficiaries	Total spend (£ million)
1999–2000	20,729	24.3
1998–99	16,094	19.5
1997–98	12,825	14.6
1996–97	10,119	12.5
1995–96	13,577	19.9

I hope this is helpful.

Environment Taskforces

Mr. Heathcoat-Amory: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment how many people took up a job with an environmental taskforce under the New Deal during (a) 1999 and (b) the first half of 2000. [130544]

Ms Jowell [holding answer 17 July 2000]: During 1999, 18,000 young people took advantage of the work experience opportunities offered by the Environment Taskforce option of the New Deal for Young People. Latest available figures to April 2000, show that a further 5,800 young people have started this option.

Higher Education Funding

Mr. Boswell: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what response he has sent to the Greenaway report on Higher Education Funding. [130565]

Mr. Wicks: The Greenaway Report was commissioned by the Russell Group of Universities, not the Government. I understand that it has been passed to the Committee of Vice-Chancellors and Principals, to form part of their wider inquiry into university funding. The Government are opposed to "top-up" tuition fees and have legislated to prevent universities from levying such charges.

School Funding (Sheffield)

Mr. Bill Michie: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment how much has been invested in total in Sheffield schools in the financial years 1999–2000 and 2000–01 to date; and if he will indicate the investment in each school. [131329]

Ms Estelle Morris: In 1999–2000, £205.3 million of revenue funding and £9.8 million of capital funding was available for use by Sheffield Local Education Authority. The corresponding figures for 2000–01 are £224.2 million of revenue funding and £10.6 million of capital funding. It is not possible to provide revenue and capital allocations for individual schools.

Infant Class Sizes (Middlesbrough)

Dr. Kumar: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what progress he has made in reducing infant class sizes in the constituency of Middlesbrough, South and Cleveland East; and if he will make a statement. [131203]

Ms Estelle Morris: We are well on course to deliver our pledge to limit infant classes to 30 pupils. We have since January 1998 already reduced the number of children in infant classes of over 30 pupils by 300,000. £620 million is available to support the pledge, and allocations so far to Middlesbrough LEA amount to some £750,000. This has helped to reduce the size of the average Key Stage 1 class in Middlesbrough, South and Cleveland, East to 25.6. The figure in January 1998 was 26.8.

HEALTH

NHS Estates Executive Agency

Ms Keeble: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will publish the Annual Report and Accounts 1999–2000 for the NHS Estates Executive Agency. [131479]

Mr. Denham: We have received the report and copies have today been laid in accordance with the requirements of section 5 of the Exchequer and Audit Departments Act 1921. Copies have also been placed in the Library.

ENVIRONMENT, TRANSPORT AND THE REGIONS

Road Haulage Firms

Mr. Mitchell: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what initiatives have been taken by the Council of Ministers, or Commission of the European Community, concerning the desirability and practicality of requiring registration, under commonly agreed conditions, of road haulage firms within the Community licensed to carry goods on surface or sub-surface routes across the sea between the United Kingdom and other member states of the European Community, other than the Republic of Ireland. [128851]

Mr. Hill: A system of registration already exists. Since the entry into force of Council Regulation (EEC) 881–92 on 1 January 1993, hauliers seeking to operate internationally within the Community must be in possession of a Community Authorisation certificate as issued by the licensing authorities in the country in which they are established. This applies to heavy goods vehicle traffic to and from the Irish Republic as well as to haulage operations on mainland Europe.

UK/US Air Services

Mr. Fearn: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions if he will make a statement on progress in the negotiations between the UK and the US authorities on air service agreements. [129440]

Mr. Mullin: A further round of talks took place in Washington on 5–6 July. The discussions were constructive and covered a wide range of issues, including ideas for phasing-in liberalisation. Negotiations will resume again in London in September.

Housing

Ms Buck: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what assessment he has made of the effectiveness of the HOMES scheme and similar mobility schemes for social housing tenants; and if he will make a statement. [130233]

Mr. Mullin: The activities of HOMES are monitored on an ongoing basis by the DETR. In particular through a requirement on HOMES to agree annual objectives with the Department; to report on their achievement of objectives; and to submit a three year business plan. The level of grant funding DETR provides to HOMES is subject to effective implementation of the plan. The Housing Green Paper "Quality and Choice: A decent home for all" sets out the Government's proposals to promote lettings and transfers policies that offer more choice for existing and prospective tenants of social housing. The role and effectiveness of mobility schemes will be an important consideration. The Government will consider responses to the Green Paper and would wish to discuss any proposals with key interested parties.

Ms Buck: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions (1) what steps he plans to take to meet the commitment in the Housing Green Paper to strengthen the obligation on registered social landlords to co-operate with local authorities in offering accommodation to households on local authority housing registers; and if he will make a statement; [130239]

(2) what assessment he has made of the effectiveness of the obligation on registered social landlords to co-operate with local authorities in the provision of accommodation to households on local authority housing registers; and if he will make a statement. [130238]

Mr. Mullin: Statutory guidance issued by the Housing Corporation requires registered social landlords (RSLs) to make available at least of 50 per cent. of their lettings to local authority nominees from the housing register, in order to comply with the duty of co-operation placed on RSLs under section 170 of the Housing Act 1996. Under current arrangements, RSLs with more than 250 units of accommodation or 250 bed spaces are required to provide comprehensive data about households and properties in respect of all their lettings. The Housing Green Paper states that the Government will be reviewing—with a view to strengthening—the current obligation on RSLs to co-operate with local authorities in offering accommodation to people on authorities' housing registers. The Government will consider responses to the Green Paper before deciding how to take this forward, and would wish to discuss any proposals with representatives of local government, the Housing Corporation, the National Housing Federation and others before introducing any changes.

Ms Buck: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what plans he has to allow social housing tenants to move across local authority boundaries; and if he will make a statement. [130234]

Mr. Mullin: The Housing Green Paper, "Quality and Choice; A decent home for all", sets out the Government's proposals for increasing choice in social lettings. As part of these proposals, we are interested in exploring the scope for promoting greater flexibility and more movement across local authority boundaries, and will consider responses to the Green Paper before deciding whether to develop this further. We would wish to discuss any proposals with representatives of local government, Shelter and others before taking them forward.

Ms Buck: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what plans he has to introduce a standardised monitoring system for the letting of social housing stock by registered social landlords and local authorities; and if he will make a statement. [130236]

Mr. Mullin: The Housing Green Paper, "Quality and Choice; A decent home for all", sets out the Government's proposals for increasing choice in social lettings. In taking these proposals forward we will wish to consider the arrangements for monitoring lettings by social landlords.

Homelessness

Ms Buck: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions (1) what assessment he has made of the impact of stock transfer on the availability of social housing for homeless people; [130235]

(2) what account will be taken of the need to provide housing for homeless people in the proposed selection criteria set out in the Housing Green Paper for applications for stock transfer. [130237]

Mr. Mullin: The Government consider that stock transfer is an important way of improving the quality and availability of affordable social housing. The proposed selection criteria do not explicitly address the issue of homelessness because, following the transfer of their housing stock, local housing authorities retain their obligations towards homeless households under Part VII of the Housing Act 1996. They must also continue to keep a register of applicants who qualify for the allocation of accommodation. To ensure they have access to accommodation to enable them to discharge their housing functions, authorities generally negotiate nomination rights with the transfer landlord of between 50 per cent. and 75 per cent. of the transferred stock.

Brownfield Development

Mr. Sheerman: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what his latest assessment is of the availability of brownfield land suitable for housing purposes in urban centres. [130218]

Ms Beverley Hughes: Estimates for 1998 of the amount of previously developed land that is unused or may be available for redevelopment, including how much may be suitable for housing, are published on the National Land Use Database website (www.nlud.org.uk). Figures are available for England and the Government Office Regions. Figures for local authority districts show amounts of previously developed land with planning allocation or permission for housing. There are no estimates for "urban centres".

Mr. Paul Marsden: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what his targets are for the percentage of new homes in Shrewsbury and Atcham to be built on brownfield sites. [131148]

Ms Beverley Hughes: The Secretary of State expects Shrewsbury and Atcham Borough Council to contribute towards the regional target of 61 per cent. contained in Regional Planning Guidance for the West Midlands (RPG 11: April 1998). Local authorities are required to set their own land recycling targets in development plans which will contribute to attaining the regional target. It is understood that in its review of the local plan the borough council proposes to exceed the regional target. The Government's Planning Policy Guidance Note 3: Housing (March 2000) confirms the national target of 60 per cent. of additional housing on previously developed land and requires local authorities to give priority to the re-use of such land within urban areas in allocating sites for housing in development plans.

Crown Exemption

Mr. Brake: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what plans he has to remove Crown exemption from the planning system. [130680]

Ms Beverley Hughes: Crown exemption will be removed from the planning system when a suitable legislative opportunity arises.

Hedge Control

Mr. Rowe: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions when he will make a decision on the control of Leylandii and other hedges. [130631]

Mr. Mullin: We expect to make a statement, setting out our decision on the way forward on this issue and the reason for them, before the summer recess.

Housing Projections (Suffolk)

Mr. Ruffley: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions how many new homes are currently projected to be built in (a) St. Edmondsbury Borough Council and (b) Mid-Suffolk District Council area between 2000–01 and 2015–16; and what corresponding projections were used by his Department in 1997–1998. [130739]

Ms Beverley Hughes: The adopted Suffolk Structure Plan provides for 540 dwellings per annum for St. Edmundsbury and 420 dwellings for Mid Suffolk over the period from 1998 to 2006. These totals are relevant to both 1997–98 and 2000–01. The structure plan is currently under review and the totals for 2006–16 will be determined as a result of Suffolk County Council's consideration of the appropriate level of housing in the county.

A14 (Road Accidents)

Mr. Ruffley: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions how many (a) fatal and (b) non-fatal road accidents were recorded as taking place on the A14 between Bury St. Edmunds and Stowmarket in (i) 1996–97, (ii) 1997–98, (iii) 1998–99 and (iv) 1999–2000. [130740]

Mr. Hill: The information requested is shown in the table.

Fatal	0	1	2	4
Serious	7	10	2	4
Slight	20	22	19	19
Injured	27	32	21	23
Total	27	33	23	27

Official Visits

Mr. Matthew Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions if he will list the visits outside Britain made by his Department's Permanent Secretary on official business since 1 January 1999, indicating the date and purpose of the visit in each case. [130490]

Ms Beverley Hughes: Sir Richard Mottram has made one overseas visit on official business. He attended the 49th Königswinter conference in Düsseldorf from 18 to 20 March 1999.

Zoos

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions how many zoos within the UK use (a) electric goads and (b) other weapons to discipline animals; and if he will make a statement. [130486]

Mr. Mullin: The information requested is not held centrally.

Responsibility for the licensing of zoos under the Zoo Licensing Act 1981 rests with local authorities. Inspectors, appointed by the Secretary of State, assist local authorities in reaching their decisions.

Statutory guidance to inspectors is given in the "Revised Secretary of State's Standards of Modern Zoo Practice", which came into effect on 3 April 2000. The revised Standards require that handling must be done with care in order to protect an animal's well being, and avoid unnecessary discomfort, stress or physical harm. Appendix 7 further advises that training methods should be based on positive reinforcement and that if negative reinforcement is used, it must never compromise the welfare of the animal.

Assured Tenancies

Mr. Hilary Benn: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what plans he has to amend the law relating to assured tenancies; and if he will make a statement. [130827]

Mr. Mullin: We remain firmly committed to the current legal framework of assured and assured shorthold tenancies. Certainty and confidence are essential if we are to persuade reputable landlords and investors to increase the supply of decent rented housing.

Private Finance Initiative

Mr. Cousins: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions when he received a request to provide Private Finance Initiative credits for community and leisure use aspects of an educational Private Finance Initiative programme in Newcastle-upon-Tyne; what amount of Private Finance Initiative credits was involved; and when a decision was given to the City of Newcastle-upon-Tyne authorities. [130825]

Ms Beverley Hughes [holding answer 17 July 2000]: The first contact with Newcastle City Council about this proposal was in August 1999. A formal outline business case was submitted in February 2000 and supporting information provided on 31 May 2000. This was assessed in preparation for the July endorsement round. Newcastle City Council was informed of the outcome of that assessment on 14 July. Details of the sums involved are a matter for the local authorities.

Regional Offices

Mr. Denzil Davies: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what has been the cost to public funds in the most recent financial year of the administration of the Yorkshire and Humberside Government Regional Office. [131249]

Ms Beverley Hughes: Running costs for the Government Office for Yorkshire and the Humber are as follows:

	1999–2000
Pay	5,911.0
Accommodation	1,227.0
Other	1,749.9
Total	8,887.9

Notes:

Running costs allocations do not include any provision for pay rises. Therefore any increases in costs have to be met by efficiency savings which usually run at around 3 per cent. per year. Any additional funds provided by Departments are only given for new areas of work.

Mr. Denzil Davies: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what has been the total cost to public funds from inception to the latest available date of administering the Yorkshire and Humberside Regional Development Agency. [131309]

Ms Beverley Hughes: Yorkshire Forward (Yorkshire and Humber Regional Development Agency) came into existence on 14 December 1998 and became fully operational when it was designated on 1 April 1999. Administration costs were as follows:

	1998–99	1999–2000
Salaries and wages	144	5,645
Other administration costs	342	6,692
Total	486	12,337

[1] From 14 December 1998 to 31 March 1999
[2] Includes initial setting up/office costs

Note:

The administrative resource allocation for 2000–01 is £8.525 million.

Further information is available in Yorkshire Forward's Annual Report and Accounts 1999–2000 which will be available as a public document, after it has been laid before Parliament before the summer recess.

Red Ensign

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions if he will ensure that the Red Ensign is flown from public buildings to mark Merchant Navy Day on 3 September. [130559]

Mr. Hill [holding answer 17 July 2000]: The Department of the Environment, Transport and the Regions will fly the Red Ensign from its headquarter buildings on Merchant Navy Day. The day will be marked by special events to celebrate our merchant navy and to highlight the opportunities of a merchant navy career.

Aggregates

Mr. Gill: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what discussions he has had with the Chancellor of the Exchequer regarding the Quarry Products Association's proposed preferential scheme for aggregates from quarry operators meeting defined environmental criteria. [131092]

Ms Beverley Hughes: My hon. Friend the Minister for Housing and Planning held a number of discussions with my hon. Friend the Financial Secretary to the Treasury on the Quarry Products Association's proposals for a voluntary alternative to a levy on primary aggregates, including their scheme for preferential procurement of aggregate by the public sector.

Mr. Gill: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions if he will make a statement about the green purchasing commitments set out in the document entitled, "Building a better quality of life—a strategy for more sustainable construction". [131093]

Ms Beverley Hughes: In "Building a better quality of life—a strategy for more sustainable construction", which I launched during National Construction Week this year, we recognised the Government's responsibilities, as the industry's leading client, to set an example in the sustainable procurement, maintenance and operation of its built assets.

On 10 July my hon. Friend the Minister for Housing and Planning launched the sustainability action plan of the Government Construction Clients' Panel—"Achieving sustainability in construction procurement". The plan's framework is based upon the 10 themes for action from "Building a better quality of life". It supports other cross-government initiatives such as "Achieving Excellence", sets milestones, and outlines a collective programme for implementation. The plan also commits Departments, agencies and NDPBs to assess their current situation, and develop their own action plans (or update existing plans). These would be in line with overall objectives, but specific to individual Departments' activities. The Local Government Task Force is developing a similar approach for local authorities to apply to their construction procurement.

Disabled Drivers

Mr. Shepherd: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions how many disabled drivers are awaiting an on-road assessment; how many have been waiting since November 1998; and when he will amend the regulations to allow the Driver and Vehicle Licensing Centre to authorise applicants to drive for one day for the purposes of assessing whether they are fit to resume driving. [130562]

Mr. Hill [holding answer 17 July 2000]: There are currently 51 drivers awaiting on-road assessments. Of these, three have been waiting since November 1998. The process of amending the regulations is at an advanced stage and we hope to implement the changes later this year.

Planning Consultations

Mr. Baker: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions how many representations have been received to the consultations initiated by GOSE on PPG3 and RP69; how many of these were (a) on the official response form and (b) in other forms; and what weight was given to each such type of response. [131320]

Ms Beverley Hughes: My Department consulted on PPG3 last year and received 620 responses, of which the majority were supportive. Final PPG3 was published in March of this year. The Government Office for the South East led the consultation on draft RPG9 this year and have received 922 responses, all of which are being considered very carefully irrespective of the form in which they were made.

Car Registrations

Mrs. Browning: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions how many new motor cars were registered at the DVLA in each month from January 1999 to May 2000 using (a) the DVLA form V55/1 and (b) the DVLA form V55/5. [131323]

Mr. Hill: Figures for the first registration of new motor cars categorised by the type of application form used are not readily available. Vehicles registered on form V55/1 include all types of new vehicles. Vehicles first registered on form V55/5 include vehicles that are not new. Many new vehicles are registered by motor dealers using an electronic system, known as AFRL (automated first registration and licensing). These cases do not use a paper form, but would have used the V55/1 form if they had not been processed through the AFRL system. The table shows the number of registrations recorded at DVLA for all vehicles by type of form and the number of AFRL registrations.

Declaration of Interest

Mr. Robathan: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions if he made a declaration in relation to the Rail and Maritime Transport Union of his interest in accordance with paragraph 110 of the Ministerial Code, at the meeting he held with the Department of Trade and Industry and unions to discuss ship building on 13 July. [131194]

Ms Beverley Hughes: No declaration was made as my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State has no private interest in the business discussed.

Parliamentary Questions

Mr. Stunell: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions how many parliamentary questions were tabled to his Department between 19 October 1999 and 20 April which requested information pursuant to previous answers. [131125]

Ms Beverley Hughes: For the period in question, 48 parliamentary questions were tabled to my Department which requested information pursuant to previous answers out of a total of 2,865 questions.

Mortgages

Mr. Matthew Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions, pursuant to his answer of 13 July 2000, Official Report, column 567W, what proportion of (a) all mortgages and (b) the total value of mortgages, were new mortgages on (i) fixed, (ii) discounted variable and (iii) other variable rates in each year from 1994 to 1998. [131325]

Mr. Mullin: The proportion of new mortgages that were fixed rate, discounted variable rate and other variable rate is provided in the table.

Percentage of new mortgages by number

Most fixed rate mortgages will revert to variable rate mortgages after an agreed period of anything from six months up to 10 years.

House Prices

Mr. Woodward: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what were the average house prices in (a) South East England, (b) London, (c) North East England and (d) the West Midlands, in (i) 1995, (ii) 1996, (iii) 1997, (iv) 1998 and (v) 1999. [131065]

Mr. Mullin: The figures for average house prices are as follows:

	South East	London	North East	West Midlands
1995	83,030	89,528	46,565	62,123

FOREIGN AND COMMONWEALTH AFFAIRS

Iraq

16. Mr. Galloway: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will meet Mr. Scott Ritter to discuss progress made on the disarmament of Iraq; and if he will make a statement. [129556]

Mr. Hain: The responsibility for ensuring the destruction of Iraq's weapons of mass destruction capability lies with the United Nations Monitoring, Verification and Monitoring Commission (UNMOVIC) and the International Atomic Energy Agency (IAEA), under relevant United Nations Security Council resolutions. We are in close touch with both organisations. I shall be discussing this important issue with the Executive Chairman of UNMOVIC, Dr. Hans Blix, on 27 July.

Mr. Llew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs how many British companies are listed in United Nations reports of inspection visits to Iraq since 1991 as having provided technology used in the Iraqi programmes of weapons of mass destruction. [130851]

Mr. Hain: It is not our practice to comment on information that was given to us in confidence by the United Nations Special Commission (UNSCOM). In any case, UNSCOM did not share information from inspection reports with the UK except when seeking our help to follow up that information.

Copies of UNSCOM's reports to the UN Security Council are held in the Libraries of the House.

Germany

17. Mr. Bradshaw: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what assessment he has made of bilateral relations between the UK and Germany; and if he will make a statement. [129557]

Mr. Vaz: As my right hon. Friend the Prime Minister said at this year's Königswinter Conference our relations with Germany are as excellent as any bilateral relations can be. Three weeks ago my right hon. Friend the Prime Minister visited the German Chancellor in Berlin, and just this morning my right hon. Friend the Foreign Secretary met the German Foreign Minister to discuss a range of EU issues where we have many important common interests. I invited the German Minister for Europe Herr Christoph Zopel to London on 14–15 April and I visited him in Berlin in March.

Italy

19. Mr. Casale: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement about recent progress in strengthening British-Italian bilateral relations. [R] [129559]

Mr. Vaz: British-Italian relations are strong both in bilateral and the EU and NATO contexts. President Ciampi visited Britain for a brief visit on 1 June when he attended a lunch hosted by HM the Queen and Prince Philip. During the visit my right hon. Friend the Foreign Secretary held bilateral meetings with Foreign Minister Lamberto Dini.

Her Majesty the Queen will make a State Visit to Italy 16–19 October, visiting Rome and Milan.

International Criminal Court

20. Tony Wright: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on progress in establishing the International Criminal Court. [129560]

Mr. Hain: To date the Rome Statute of the International Criminal Court has been signed by 97 States and ratified by fourteen. The Court will be established once 60 states ratify. A Preparatory Commission completed two important subsidiary documents to the Statute at its last session in June.

Kosovo

21. Mr. Coaker: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what assessment he has made of the progress being made by UNMIK in Kosovo. [129562]

Mr. Vaz: UNMIK has made significant progress in the last year. Over one million refugees and internally displaced persons have returned, the KLA has demilitarised, schools and hospitals have reopened, a functioning judiciary is being established, houses are being reconstructed, joint administrative structures have been set up and over 800,000 people have registered for the forthcoming local elections. The UK has played an important part in pushing all this forward. But I do not want to minimise the difficulties we still face in restoring normal economic life in Kosovo and bringing about ethnic reconciliation. It will take time but we are determined to get the job done.

Mr. Mackinlay: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs when he expects the municipal elections in Kosovo to take place. [130660]

Mr. Vaz: UNMIK have confirmed that municipal elections in Kosovo will be held during this coming October. An exact date in October has not been decided.

Middle East

22. Dr. Iddon: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on the Middle East peace process. [129563]

30. Mr. Clapham: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on progress in the Middle East peace process. [129571]

Mr. Hain: The Middle East could soon see further steps towards lasting peace. The summit between the Israelis and Palestinians called by President Clinton at Camp David is a crucial event in the search for Permanent Status Agreement. My right hon. Friend the Prime Minister saw Ehud Barak on 3 July and sent a message to President Arafat on the eve of the summit. We wish both parties and President Clinton every success in making progress in the talks.

On the Syrian track, we welcome statements by the new Syrian Government that they are keen to restart negotiations with Israel. We hope that this can happen as soon as possible.

We welcome UN confirmation of Israeli withdrawal from Lebanon. This too is an important step towards a comprehensive peace in the region.

Yugoslavia

23. Mr. Wilkinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on the UK's relations with Yugoslavia. [129564]

Mr. Vaz: The Federal Republic of Yugoslavia broke off diplomatic relations with the UK on 25 March 1999. Since then relations have been conducted through the British Interests Section of the Brazilian Embassy in Belgrade and the Federal Republic of Yugoslavia Interests Section of the Cypriot High Commission in London.

Syria

24. Sir David Madel: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what plans he has to meet the President of Syria; and if he will make a statement. [129565]

Mr. Hain: I met Bashir al-Asad during my visit to Syria in May. My right hon. Friend the Foreign Secretary met him at the condolence ceremony for his father on 13 June. We look forward to continuing our dialogue soon, both to improve bilateral relations and as part of our continuing support for all parties seeking a comprehensive peace in the region.

Drugs Trade

26. Mrs. Ann Winterton: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what discussions he has had with his counterparts abroad on tackling the international illegal drugs trade. [129567]

Mr. Battle: I take every opportunity to discuss, with our counterparts, the UK's international activities to combat the trade in illicit drugs. We take the lead in co-ordinating and prioritising such activities across Government in close co-operation with the UK anti-drugs co-ordinator Keith Hellawell. The UK plays an active role in international forums dealing with the threat posed by illicit drugs, including in the UN G8 and EU. Last year the Foreign and Commonwealth Office spent over £6.5 million on international counter-drugs activities.

Single Currency

27. Miss McIntosh: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what recent discussions he has had with the Chancellor of the Exchequer on progress towards joining the European single currency. [129568]

Mr. Vaz: My right hon. Friend the Foreign Secretary meets Cabinet colleagues to discuss a range of issues. The Government's policy towards the single currency has not changed and will not change. We will only recommend joining a successful single currency if it is in our national economic interest to do so, and if the economic case for the UK joining is clear and unambiguous. The Treasury will make another assessment of the five economic tests early in the next Parliament.

and the Ministers of Budget, Justice and Social Affairs. These contacts form part of our Step Change initiative to increase contacts with our EU partners.

Brigadier Saunders

31. Mr. Paul Marsden: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on progress made to bring to justice those responsible for the murder of Brigadier Saunders in Greece. [129572]

Mr. Battle: Since the incident Her Majesty's Government has been in close contact with the Greek authorities at the highest level. At their request, a team of specialists from the Metropolitan police flew to Athens on the day of the murder. They are still there, working closely with the Greek police. The House must understand that the operational aspects must remain confidential. However, we remain committed, as do the Greek Government, to bringing the perpetrators to justice.

Mr. Battle: We have kept in close touch with the Fijian authorities since the beginning of the current crisis. On 23 May my right hon. Friend the Foreign Secretary spoke personally to the then President Mara to assure him of our support for a peaceful negotiated solution to the hostage situation. Departmental Presentation

35. Sir Teddy Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what assessment he has made of the effectiveness of procedures for informing the public about his Department's policies. [129576]

Mr. Hain: Members of the public may access information on Her Majesty's Government's foreign policy via the Foreign and Commonwealth website—http://www.fco.gov.uk—which includes an archive of ministerial policy speeches dating back to May 1997 and other key policy statements and documents. "Briefing Papers" are published on topical areas of foreign policy and the "Key Foreign Policy Issues" section includes detailed contributions from many Departments on specific policy work, for example "Britain and the EU", "Human Rights in Foreign Policy", "UK and the United Nations" and "UK and the Commonwealth".

The Foreign and Commonwealth Office website is one of the most heavily accessed sites in Whitehall, with around 350,000 page impressions to the site per week. The majority of visitors to the website are from the UK. The "Britain and the EU" home page has been accessed over 8,800 times since the beginning of June. Users may also register their personal foreign policy interests with the website and receive notification by e-mail of the latest news updates. To date, 12,500 UK-based users have registered their interest this way.

As part of the London String of Pearls Millennium Festival, the Foreign and Commonwealth Office is open to the public every Tuesday between 9 May and 25 July. In addition to viewing the Foreign and Commonwealth Office historic rooms, an average of 3,000 visitors per week have seen displays on the Foreign and Commonwealth's work in particular areas, such as Europe, International Security, Global Issues and the Americas. Feedback from the visitors has been very positive.

World Service

37. Mr. Öpik: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what recent meetings he has held with ministerial colleagues to discuss funding for the BBC World Service; and if he will make a statement. [129578]

Mr. Hain: There have been numerous contacts between the Foreign and Commonwealth Office and other ministerial colleagues in the context of the current Spending Review. We have presented a strong case for increased funding for the BBC World Service, as for the Foreign and Commonwealth Office as a whole.

Lord Levy

Mr. Baker: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what mechanism exists for his Department to receive reports from Lord Levy when he is acting as the Prime Minister's personal envoy on foreign affairs. [129566]

Mr. Hain: Lord Levy's visits are reported to my right hon. Friends the Prime Minister and the Foreign Secretary, in person by Lord Levy, and by telegram from the Ambassador in the country concerned.

Mrs. Brinton: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on the Government's policy towards India's claim to a permanent seat on the UN Security Council. [131110]

Mr. Hain: Our policy is for each regional group to recommend who should occupy any permanent seat allocated to them in an enlarged Security Council. My right hon. Friend the Foreign Secretary reiterated this point when he visited India earlier this year. India would clearly be a contender for any eventual Asian Group seat.

Afghanistan

Ms Buck: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on the application for an export licence for mine-clearance equipment to Afghanistan. [131317]

Mr. Hain: Following consultations with this Department and the Ministry of Defence, the Department of Trade and Industry recently issued a licence for the export of mine clearance equipment for the use by the HALO Trust to aid their demining activities in Afghanistan. This licence was granted for humanitarian purposes. This decision does not affect the Government's continued support for the EU Common Position on arms exports to Afghanistan.

British Indian Ocean Territory

Mr. Coleman: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on policy towards the British Indian Ocean Territory. [131318]

Mr. Battle: The territory's immigration laws and policy are currently the subject of an action in the High Court. We are aware that some of the Ilois community have expressed an interest in returning to settle on the outer islands of the archipelago. We have been studying the feasibility of settlement on the outer islands, which have been uninhabited for 30 years, and the potential environmental impact. This work is not complete and we will continue it.

Recently we have sponsored a group of Ilois to visit the outer islands to see conditions there for themselves.

We shall maintain our sovereignty over the BIOT for as long as our treaty obligations require it. Thereafter, we stand by the undertaking we have made that we would cede sovereignty of the territory to Mauritius.

Mr. Hain: We have discussed proposals for development aid for southern Lebanon with the Lebanese Government, with other EU member states in regular meetings of the relevant EU working groups, and with the European Union Special Envoy, Miguel Moratinos. These proposals focus on the rehabilitation of southern Lebanon into the infrastructure of Lebanon and the effective disbursement of international aid to the area.

Dr. Starkey: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what proposals his Department has discussed for resolving the issue of Palestinian refugees in Lebanon with (a) the Lebanese Government and (b) other EU member states. [130427]

Mr. Hain: The issue of Palestinian refugees in Lebanon is part of the wider permanent status negotiations between the Israeli Government and the PLO. We support for all Palestinian refugees the implementation of UNGA Resolution 194 through negotiation and agreement between the parties. We discuss this issue regularly with the Lebanese Government, as host country of this refugee group, and wither other EU member states, as well as with Israel and the Palestinian Authority.

Indonesia

Mr. McGrady: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what recent reports he has received on the level of violence in Indonesia; and if he will make a statement. [131191]

Mr. Battle: We receive regular reports on Indonesia from our Embassy, NGOs and others. We are particularly concerned by the sharp escalation of violence in Maluku, and the extensive loss of life and serious injury. I discussed this with the Indonesian Ambassador on 3 July and the Head of the Diplomatic Service raised our concerns directly with President Wahid on 4 July. There is an urgent need to respond to the growing humanitarian crisis. We are working closely with the United Nations Development Programme (UNDP) to establish mechanisms for managing the international humanitarian response. The UNDP has recently despatched three teams to Maluku to assess current needs.

Her Majesty's Government will be represented by an FCO official, who has published a history of the negotiations leading up to the signing of the Act on 1 August 1975.

EU Enlargement

Mr. Mackinlay: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what advice has been given to applicant countries with EU candidacy status about the need to have institutions charged with promoting awareness about equal opportunities which are empowered to seek aid and assistance and to enforce rights consistent with European Union norms; and if he will make a statement. [130661]

Mr. Vaz: Before negotiations for accession can begin, the EU requires that applicant states achieve stability of institutions guaranteeing human rights and respect for and protection of minorities.

Article 13 of the Treaty of Rome requires member states to take action on discrimination whether based on sex, racial origin, religious belief, disability, age or sexual orientation. The issue of discrimination is a prominent part of the Social Policy and Employment acquis of the EU. Applicant states are expected to implement the acquis and treaty obligations by accession. The Commission monitors applicant states implementation of these requirements in its annual progress reports and makes specific recommendations to each applicant.

The EU currently operates a programme on equal opportunities for men and women. This programme is open to all applicant states and has a budget of 30 million euro. The Community is to adopt an action programme to combat discrimination based on race, sex, religious belief, disability, age or sexual orientation. This programme will be open to applicant states. It will have a budget of 98 million euro. The programme objectives include improving the understanding of discrimination and developing the capacity of applicant states to address it.

Separately, the Home Office meets regularly with Government officials from applicant states to discuss race equality matters. This includes advice on the function of the Commission for Racial Equality.

Mr. Mackinlay: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what consultations his Department is having with (a) other Government Departments, (b) the Government of Gibraltar, (c) trade unions in Gibraltar and (d) representatives of the maritime industry operating in Gibraltar, prior to the United Kingdom formulating its response to the proposals about the future of competition in European ports outlined by the Commissioner for Energy and Transport; and if he will make a statement. [130859]

Mr. Streeter: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs which country directorates in the British Council will be assessed for closure over the next five years; and if he will make a statement. [131255]

Mr. Hain: The British Council is conducting a strategic review to ensure the sustainability of its overseas network and maximise the impact of its work, for example by taking full advantage of new information technology. This review may recommend reallocation of resources to the new priorities and the closure of some country directorates on the basis of their relative importance to the UK. As yet no decisions have been taken; my right hon. Friend the Foreign Secretary will be consulted over any closures.

General Affairs Council

Mr. Jim Marshall: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what was the outcome of the General Affairs Council held in Brussels on 10 and 11 July; and if he will make a statement. [130428]

Mr. Vaz: The General Affairs Council in Brussels on 10 July adopted the A points in document 10051/00 and noted the resolutions, decisions, and opinions adopted by the European Parliament at its part-session in Strasbourg listed in document 8849/00. Copies of these documents will be placed in the House Libraries as soon as they become available.

Western Balkans

The Council held an open debate on the Western Balkans, but also discussed it as a formal agenda item, and adopted conclusions.

The Council confirmed the EU's intention to hold a summit between the EU and the Western Balkans this autumn. This will confirm that these countries are bound to Europe, will clarify the reciprocal commitments between them and the EU, and will reiterate that the door will also be open to a democratic FRY.

The Council noted with great concern the revision of the FRY constitution. The Council reiterated its support for the democratically elected authorities in Montenegro and urged them not to yield to provocation from Belgrade.

The Council extended the suspension of the ban on flights between the territories of the European Community and the FRY until 31 March 2001, and welcomed the Commission's intention to increase the number of companies on the financial sanctions "white list".

Follow-up to Feira

The Presidency announced its work programme for the various items following up the Feira European Council, notably on enlargement and European defence.

Ministers agreed that continued work on the latter should be a priority for the French Presidency, and took note of Presidency papers outlining future work on permanent structures within the EU; EU/NATO working groups; and elaboration of the headline goal for military capabilities. They looked forward to the Capabilities Commitment Conference in November, which would represent an important measure of progress on enhancing military capabilities; and also to continued work on the relationship between the EU and the six European members of NATO outside the EU.

Russia

The Council adopted conclusions on Russia which underline the importance of the Common Strategy in developing a strategic partnership with Russia; orient the work plan on the Common Strategy towards institutional/economic reform, democratization, and the strengthening of civil society and the independent media; and urge the Commission to resume preparation of the TAXIS indicative programme for 2000–03 and to propose a targeted action plan for 2000. The Council emphasized that a long-term relationship with Russia must be based on common values, that it remained concerned by the situation in Chechnya, and that it would remain vigilant to ensure that Russia respected its commitments to the Council of Europe and the OSCE.

Zimbabwe

The Council agreed Conclusions on the recent elections in Zimbabwe. Bananas

The Council invited the Commission to examine the possibility of a quota-based regime based on the "first-come first-served" licensing system. It also asked the Commission, once it had done this, to report back on possible solutions, including a tariff-only regime and its implications. The Council highlighted its desire to reach a solution as quickly as possible, having regard to WTO rules, the interests of Community procedures and the commitments of the Union to the ACP, especially the most vulnerable.

Under Any Other Business, the Council supported a Spanish proposal to create a working party to seek a solution to IRELA's financial difficulties.

The Council was followed by Association Councils with Kazakhstan and Kyrgyzstan.

As envisaged in the Belfast Agreement, the British-Irish Council comprises representatives of the British and Irish Governments, the devolved Administrations in Northern Ireland, Scotland and Wales, together with representatives of the Isle of Man, and the Baliwicks of Jersey and Guernsey.

Special Advisers

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: To ask the Minister for the Cabinet Office what criteria are used to distinguish between a special adviser and Civil Service appointment; and who approves an increase in numbers in either category. [128806]

Marjorie Mowlam: Recruitment into the Home Civil Service is governed by the Civil Service Order in Council. Appointments are made on merit on the basis of fair and open competition unless covered by one of the exemptions set out in the Civil Service Order in Council. Special Adviser appointments are one such exemption.

With the exception of the most senior (SASC) posts, Ministers and office holders in charge of Departments determine the number of permanent Civil Service posts within their organisation. All appointments to the SASC group are approved by the Prime Minister.

Under the terms of the Ministerial Code, the Prime Minister approves the appointment of Special Advisers.

Departmental Initiatives

Dr. Lynne Jones: To ask the Minister for the Cabinet Office if she will list each departmental initiative since May 1997 requiring bids for funding together with the total resources available, the number of successful bids and the proportion this represents of total bids received; and what data she collects on the average expenditure of organisations bidding for funding through each initiative. [131083]

Mr. Stringer: I refer my hon. Friend to the answer given by my right hon. Friend the Chief Secretary to the Treasury on 17 July 2000, Official Report, column 93W.

Parliamentary Questions

Mr. Stunell: To ask the Minister for the Cabinet Office on how many occasions she has deposited papers in the Library in response to parliamentary questions tabled to her Department between 19 October 1999 and 20 April. [131128]

Mr. Stringer: Between 19 October 1999 and 20 April 2000 there have been 35 parliamentary questions tabled to the Cabinet Office which received full answers including a commitment to place documents in the Libraries of the House.

Sickness Absence

Mr. Matthew Taylor: To ask the Minister for the Cabinet Office when she will publish statistics on progress towards reducing sickness absence in the civil service in 1998 and 1999; and if she will make a statement. [130715]

Mr. Stringer: The civil service is collectively working towards reducing sickness absence by 20 per cent. by 2001 and 30 per cent. by 2003, against a 1998 baseline. Details of sickness absence in the civil service for 1998 were given in the answer my right hon. Friend the Minister for the Cabinet Office gave to my hon. Friend the Member for Stevenage (Barbara Follett) on 11 May 2000, Official Report, columns 433–34W. Figures for 1999 will be available shortly.

LORD CHANCELLOR'S DEPARTMENT

Queen's Counsel

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department if he will make it his policy for Queen's Counsel who have not practised at the bar for five years to be examined to establish their fitness to return to practise as a Queen's Counsel; and if he will make a statement. [130629]

Mr. Lock: The Lord Chancellor recognises the need to ensure that all lawyers are competent to do the job. He has no plans, however, to introduce the policy proposed for QCs, the regulation of whose professional standards is primarily for their professional bodies.

Community Legal Service

Mr. Kidney: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department what research his Department (a) has commissioned and (b) intends to commission to assist him in evaluating the effectiveness of the introduction of (i) the new civil court rules and (ii) the Community Legal Service in widening access to justice. [130731]

Mr. Lock: Three research projects have been commissioned which fall within the first topic area: Monitoring the Rise in the Small Claims Limit; Cross-Jurisdictional Issues in Case Management; The Impact of Conditional Fees on the Selection, Handling and Outcomes of Personal Injury Cases. In addition, the Court Service conducts locally run customer satisfaction surveys at courts and tribunals in a two-year rolling cycle. The surveys identify trends and changes in customer requirements as well as providing information on delivery of service. The Department is currently discussing the possibility of commissioning a research project which might look at further improvements to case management and the use of joint experts in court proceedings.

A project to examine Local Legal Need, which aims to measure the effectiveness of the Community Legal Service, is being undertaken by Legal Services Research Centre. Currently, there are no plans to commission further research on the Community Legal Service.

The Department carries out a review of its requirements in formulating its priorities for research in its annual programme of work. This is currently under way.

Dr. Kumar: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department if he will make a statement on the relationship between the community legal services and debt and money advice services. [131210]

Mr. Lock: The provision of debt and money advice will be an important part of the local networks of legal services we are developing, and which will be supported by local Community Legal Service Partnerships.

For example, there are 430 solicitors' firms and 171 not-for-profit agencies with contracts from the Legal Services Commission (LSC) to provide debt advice services. In addition, the LSC is running six pilot projects to look at alternative methods of delivering debt advice, including outreach services in Carlisle, Stoke-on-Trent and Birmingham, and telephone services in Sheffield, Norfolk and Northumberland.

Advisory Committee on Public Records

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department what the current composition and role is of the Advisory Committee on Public Records; who appoints its members and for how long they remain on the Committee; how frequently the Committee meets and when it last met; who decides which matters are on its agenda; how its activities will be affected by the implementation of the Freedom of Information Bill; and if he will make a statement. [130686]

Mr. Lock: The current composition of the Advisory Council on Public Records is as follows:

Chairman: the Master of the Rolls (ex officio)

Miss Amanda Arrowsmith, Director of Libraries and Heritage, Suffolk county council

Professor David Cannadine, Director of the Institute of Historical Research, University of London

Sir John Chilcot GCB, retired, formerly Permanent Under-Secretary of State, Northern Ireland Office

Professor Peter Clarke, Professor of Modern British History, University of Cambridge and Fellow of St. John's College, Cambridge

Mr. Ian Coulson, teacher, schools inspector in Kent

Miss Rosemary Dunhill, County Archivist of Hampshire

Professor Ralph Griffiths, Professor of Mediaeval History, University of Wales, Swansea

Mrs. Anne Hanford, film librarian and consultant in the management of media collections

Mrs. Gillian Hughes, a professional researcher and record agent

Professor Rodney Lowe, Professor of Contemporary History, University of Bristol

Professor the Earl Russell, Professor of British History, Kings College London. Represents the Liberal Democrats on the Council

Mrs. Shahwar Sadeque, educational and information technology consultant

Mr. Andreas Whittam Smith, Journalist, former editor of The Independent, chairman of the Sir Winston Churchill Archive Trust and president of the British Board of Film Classification

Dr. Anne Thurston, executive director of the International Records Management Trust

Right hon. Lady Trumpington, former Baroness in Waiting, House of Lords. Represents the Conservative Party on the Council

Right hon. Alan J. Williams, Labour MP for Swansea West. Member of the Public Accounts Committee.

The role of the Council is set out in the Public Records Act 1958 s1(2), as being:

> to advise the Lord Chancellor on matters concerning public records in general and, in particular, on those aspects of the works of the Public Record Office which affect members of the public who make use of the facilities provided by the Public Record Office.

The Council's current terms of reference were set by the Lord Chancellor on 22 January 1998 and were published with the Council's annual report for 1997–98 in the Keeper's Report for that year (HC 840).

In accordance with the terms of the Public Records Act 1958, members are appointed by the Lord Chancellor. They normally serve for a three-year term, which is renewable once.

The Council meets four times a year, normally in February, June, October and December. It last met on 15 June 2000. Much of the Council's agenda is determined by the timetables for applications by Departments for the retention or extended closure of public records. Other items appear on the agenda at the request of members of the Council, of members of the public, or of the Keeper of Public Records. The agenda is approved by the Master of the Rolls.

The Freedom of Information Bill is expected to give the Council a statutory role in advising on the availability to the public of information in public records once they are more than 30 years old. This will be much the same function as it has exercised for the last 40 years in advising the Lord Chancellor on the operation of s5(1) of the Public Records Act 1958. The Bill currently before Parliament provides for extension of the Advisory Council's role by inserting S1(2A) as follows:

> The matters on which the Advisory Council on Public Records may advise the Lord Chancellor include matters relating to the application of the Freedom of Information Act 2000 to information contained in public records which are historical records within the meaning of Part VI of that Act.

The Advisory Council's involvement in the release of information in public records will be set out in some detail in Part II of the Lord Chancellor's code of practice on the management of records under Freedom of Information, a working draft of which will be published shortly.

Royal Family

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department, what public records concerning (a) the Royal Family and (b) other matters, relating to events prior to the First World War, have not been made publicly available; and for what reasons. [130687]

Mr. Lock: There are two public records concerning the Royal Family dating from before the First World War which have not been opened. These are both Treasury records. The first concerns the taxation and property rating of members of the Royal Family for the period 1899–1904 and is due for release in 2005; the second concerns Queen Alexandra's annuity and income tax in the period 1910–1914 and is due to be opened in 2015. (They are closed in accordance with Lord Chancellor's Instruments 5 and 6 respectively.) The guidance under which these records were closed for 100 years is currently being re-examined by the Cabinet Office and Public Record Office.

Records concerning other matters dating from before the First World War and not yet opened are as follows:

The decennial censuses of 1901 and 1911 are closed for 100 years in order to protect the confidentiality of the information given by the public. They are closed in accordance with Lord Chancellor's Instrument 12. There are approximately 65 items originating from the predecessors of the Crown Estate dating from 1900–1914 which are still closed. These concern leases or other property assignments which are still current. There are three records dating from 1876–1914 concerning activities of the Secret Service in Ireland and Irish terrorist organisations which are currently retained. The sensitivity of these records is currently being reassessed.

Legal Services (Teesside)

Dr. Kumar: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department, what assessment he has made of the extent of the needs for assistance in respect of legal services in (a) Teesside and (b) Middlesbrough, South and Cleveland, East; and if he will make a statement. [131212]

Mr. Lock: The Northern Regional Legal Services Committee of the then Legal Aid Board carried out an assessment of the need for legal services in Middlesbrough, Redcar and Cleveland, Hartlepool and Stockton during the course of 1998. The results of this assessment were published by the Legal Aid Board in February 1999.

Following the launch of the Community Legal Service in April 2000, Community Legal Service Partnerships (CLSPs) have been formed in each of the four local authority areas. Further assessments of legal needs are being carried out as part of the work of these Partnerships. In Middlesbrough, the needs assessment has been completed and will be discussed by the Partnerships on 18 July 2000. In Hartlepool the needs assessment is currently underway and in Redcar and Cleveland and Stockton the needs assessment will be carried out later this year.

Dr. Kumar: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department, what plans he has to create a community legal service partnership in the Teesside Region; and if he will make a statement. [131211]

Mr. Lock: Community Legal Service (CLS) Partnerships have been formed in Middlesbrough, Stockton-on-Tees, and Hartlepool. The Legal Services Commission is also looking to establish a Community Legal Service Partnership in Redcar and Cleveland, but this is still subject to further discussions with the local authority. We hope that Redcar and Cleveland will form a CLS Partnership by Spring 2001. If it proves possible to form a CLS Partnership in this area earlier, we would be delighted.

Advocates

Mr. Baker: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department what assessment he has made of the relative work load per case for (a) prosecution advocates and (b) defence advocates. [130412]

Mr. Lock: None. In developing a unified fee scheme my officials will work together with the Crown Prosecution Service; the General Council of the Bar; and the Law Society to identify areas where the work undertaken by the prosecution differs fundamentally from that undertaken by the defence.

Legal Aid

Mr. Baker: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department how many (a) legal practices and (b) solicitors in England and Wales were undertaking legal aid work in (i) 1990, (ii) 1995, (iii) 1999 and (iv) 2000. [130413]

Mr. Lock: The Legal Services Commission and its predecessor, the Legal Aid Board have always made payments to solicitors' offices, not to individual solicitors, or practices. It is therefore not possible to provide details of the numbers of individual solicitors undertaking legal aid work. The statistical information collected also relates to the financial year rather than the calendar year. The numbers of solicitors' offices receiving payment for undertaking legal aid work during the years in question were as follows:

	Number
1989–90	11,455
1994–95	11,062
1998–99	11,263
1999–2000	11,099

Mr. Baker: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department how many applications for legal aid were (a) accepted and (b) rejected in each year since 1990. [130416]

Mr. Lock: The numbers of legal aid applications granted and rejected, in each year for which information is available, were as follows:

	Civil legal aid[1]		Assistance by way of representation[1]
	Accepted	Rejected	Accepted	Rejected
1990–91	333,444	84,347	73,948	12,284

Mr. Baker: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department what was the total amount (a) paid and (b) received in respect of legal aid, broken down by (i) costs recouped under orders for costs, (ii) value-added tax, (iii) savings on national insurance payments and (iv) other income in the last year for which figures are available. [130414]

Mr. Lock: The Legal Aid Board (which was replaced by the Legal Services Commission on 1 April 2000) recovered costs totalling £318,366,000, overwhelmingly from matters dealt with in the civil courts. The Board paid costs to the opponents of funded clients totalling £2,229,000. It is not possible to separate out the proportion of either the receipts or payments that were paid under the orders for costs.

The Legal Aid Board was not required to account separately for VAT and some payment systems that it operated do not recognise VAT as a separate item. Since not all disbursements attract VAT, and not all solicitors and counsel are registered for VAT, it is not possible to calculate the amount of VAT that was paid out of, or into the legal aid Fund.

There are no national insurance savings that the Commission is aware of that had an effect on the Fund.

Other income to the legal aid Fund during 1999–2000 totalled £159,820,000. This includes such items as contributions paid by funded clients, moneys recovered through statutory charges placed on property gained or kept by funded clients with the benefit of legal aid, and interest on these charges.

Mr. Baker: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department for what reason the Legal Aid Board was renamed; and what estimate he has made of the costs arising from this change. [130415]

Mr. Lock: The Legal Aid Board has not been renamed. It was replaced on 1 April 2000 by a new executive non-departmental public body—the Legal Services Commission—established under Part I of the Access to Justice Act 1999. The Commission is charged with establishing, maintaining and developing two new services for the provision of publicly funded legal services—the Community Legal Service and the Criminal Defence Service. The Commission has also taken over the functions of the Legal Aid Board in relation to any cases being conducted under the provisions of the Legal Aid Act 1988. The appointments of the Chair and members of the Commission were announced on 17 December 1999 and 9 March 2000 respectively. However, costs directly attributable to the naming of the Legal Services Commission are: Design and development of logotype, including tender (£6,587.13); Regulations on usage of logotype (£6,431.95); Nameplates for Regional offices (£3,666.00); Internet domain name registration (£141.00); Corporate seal (£120.00).

Owen McMahon

Mr. McNamara: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department, how many files he retains concerning activities of the RIC in Northern Ireland in 1922; for what reason files relating to the murder of Owen McMahon in March 1922 are withheld from public access; and when the last review of documents of this period was held and what its outcome was. [131380]

Mr. Lock: The Northern Ireland Court Service does not hold any records concerning the activities of the RIC or the murder of Owen McMahon in 1922. There is a Ministry of Home Affairs file on the case which is held by the Public Records (Northern Ireland) Office and which is open to the public. All records listed and indexed by the Public Records (Northern Ireland) Office for review have been completed up to 1970.

Parliamentary Questions

Mr. Stunell: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department, how many of the written parliamentary questions tabled to his Department between 19 October 1999 and 20 April did not receive substantive answers, citing as the reason that the information was (a) not held centrally, (b) not held in the form requested and (c) not available. [131198]

Mr. Lock: According to departmental records of the relevant period:

(a) four parliamentary questions did not receive substantive answers because the information was not held centrally and a further 12 received partial answers for this reason;

(b) one parliamentary question did not receive a substantive answer because the information was not held in the form requested and a further two received partial answers for this reason; and

(c) five parliamentary questions did not receive a substantive answer because the information was not available and a further four received partial answers for this reason.

HOME DEPARTMENT

Animal Experiments

Mr. Bradshaw: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department when his review of section 24 of the Animals (Scientific Procedures) Act 1986 will be completed. [130533]

Mr. Mike O'Brien: Section 24 of the Animals (Scientific Procedures) Act 1986 prevents the disclosure of information about the use of animals in scientific procedures that has been provided in confidence. Under the proposals for the Freedom of Information Bill, all statutory bars are being reviewed, including section 24.

The maintenance of the necessary protection for individual scientists and their research institutions from animal rights extremists is a priority in the review of section 24 and I am considering very carefully how best it can be achieved. The extremists and the violence make openness more difficult than it would be otherwise. In view of this, a decision on whether to repeal or amend section 24 will not now be made until later this year.

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) if he will take steps to reduce the number of experiments on dogs conducted in UK research laboratories and breeding centres; and if he will make a statement; [130476]

(2) if he will take steps to prohibit experiments on dogs that do not provide researchers with new information; and if he will make a statement. [130483]

Mr. Mike O'Brien: Dogs are primarily used in medicinal drug research and development and in pharmaceutical safety and efficacy evaluations. They are also used, when no other species is suitable, in the evaluation of cardiovascular and cardiorespiratory problems in humans. Such work contributes to advances in human healthcare. Dogs are also used in the development of veterinary medicines and techniques.

In my replies I gave the hon. Member on 17 April 2000, Official Report, column 380W and on 12 July 2000, Official Report, column 595W, I stated that members of the public often find it particularly difficult to accept that species that are kept as domestic pets or companion animals, such as dogs, are also used in research to find cures for illnesses. Such animals must be purpose bred and supplied by designated establishments and can be used only if there is no viable alternative for that particular procedure.

Dogs are used in regulated procedures where their use is justified under the Animals (Scientific Procedures) Act 1986. There are no current plans to change the legislation. All applications to use protected animals in research are subjected to a detailed cost/benefit assessment by Home Office inspectors. The likely adverse effects on the animals concerned must be weighed against the benefit likely to accrue as a result of the proposed programme of work.

We are continuing to work to ensure that animals are only used where it is fully justified and where there are no alternatives which replace the use of animals, reduce the numbers of animals used, or refine the procedures in which they are used.

Figures in recent years reflect a downward trend in the use of dogs in research. I should emphasise that dogs are used only in about a quarter of one per cent. of all procedures.

Trafficking in Women and Girls

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what recent assessment the Government have made of the extent of trafficking in women and girls; from which areas of the world this trafficking is most extensive; and what measures Her Majesty's Government are supporting to tackle this. [130694]

Mr. Charles Clarke: The Home Office has recently published a ground-breaking study, which establishes for the first time the possible extent of trafficking in women into this country: 'Stopping Traffic: Exploring the extent of, and responses to, trafficking in women for sexual exploitation in the United Kingdom.' That study indicates that 18 trafficking cases were identified by the police during 1998, involving 71 women. The majority of those women claimed to come from Europe and the remainder from Brazil and Thailand. The study indicates that these figures do not reveal the full extent of this phenomenon and makes a number of recommendations about tackling it. These are currently being considered by the Government.

Criminal Cases (Police Conduct)

Mr. Cotter: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) what action is taken against constabularies that are reported as failing to comply with the Criminal Procedure and Investigations Act 1996 by withholding unused material from defence lawyers in criminal cases; [130537]

(2) what steps he is taking to ensure the full implementation of the Criminal Procedure and Investigations Act 1996, with particular reference to full disclosure of evidence by police to defence lawyers; [130639]

(3) what recent representations he has received about non-disclosure of information to defence lawyers; and if he will make a statement; [130640]

(4) if the implementation of the Criminal Procedure and Investigations Act 1996 is being monitored; and if he will make a statement. [130638]

Mr. Charles Clarke: The Government are aware of concerns about the operation of the disclosure provisions of the Criminal Procedure and Investigations Act 1996. Since the beginning of this year, my right hon. Friend the Home Secretary has received three letters from Members of Parliament and one from a member of the public on this issue. Action is well underway to address these concerns.

The Director of Public Prosecutions (DPP) has made disclosure a business priority for the Crown Prosecution Service (CPS) and has initiated a programme of work focusing on the basic principles of disclosure, with a special emphasis on the prosecutor's duty to ensure a fair trial. He has asked Chief Crown Prosecutors to take up with Chief Constables any concerns that they may have with police disclosure practice in their area. Last year, the Crown Prosecution Service Inspectorate undertook a thematic review of disclosure and its report was published in March. The recommendations in that report are being considered and taken forward in the form of an action plan as part of the DPP's programme of work. The Association of Chief Police Officers has also established a working party to look into the working of the disclosure provisions in relation to the police.

The Attorney-General is developing guidelines on disclosure. In February, these were issued in draft for consultation and the responses are now being considered. The Attorney-General is aiming to issue the final version of the guidance in the summer.

In addition, as part of its general responsibility to evaluate new legislation the Government have commissioned an independent research study to evaluate all aspects of the disclosure provisions. The study will build on the CPS Inspectorate's report and draw on surveys of the legal profession carried out by the Criminal Bar Association and the Law Society. The work began in January 2000 and is expected to be completed in 12 months. In the light of the research, we will consider what further action needs to be taken.

Cycling on Pavements

Mr. Cox: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many prosecutions there have been within the Greater London area for the offence of cycling on pavements during the last 12 months. [130536]

Mr. Charles Clarke: Available information taken from the Home Office Court Proceedings Database shows that provisionally in 1999 there were 42 prosecutions for the offence of cycling on the pavement in the Greater London area (prosecutions at courts within areas policed by the Metropolitan Police Service and the City of London police). In 1998, there were 67 prosecutions.

The fixed penalty system for this offence was introduced on 1 August 1999 and up to, and including, 31 December 1999 a combined total of 39 fixed penalty notices were issued by the Metropolitan and City of London police forces.

Asylum Seekers

Fiona Mactaggart: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many people have applied under the regularisation scheme set up under section 9 of the Immigration and Asylum Act 1999; what their nationalities are; how many applications (a) have been granted, (b) have been refused and (c) are still pending; and how many applicants had been in the United Kingdom (i) more than and (ii) fewer than seven years at the time of application. [130535]

Mrs. Roche: On 13 July, the number of applications received under the regularisation scheme was 1,653. Approximately 175 of these applications have been granted. Most are awaiting substantive consideration. I regret that further information could be obtained only by examination of individual case records and is, therefore, available only at disproportionate cost.

Mr. Stinchcombe: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) in each of the last four years for which figures are available, (a) how many people were detained for more than 24 hours under immigration powers who (i) were and (ii) claimed to be under the age of 18 at the time of their detention, (b) what the average length of time was for which they were detained and (c) what the longest period of time was for which any such person was detained; [130734]

(2) in each of the last four years for which figures are available, (a) how many asylum applicants detained for more than 24 hours under immigration powers, were subsequently accepted to be under the age of 18 at the time of their detention, (b) what the average length of time was for which they were detained and (c) what the longest period was for which any such person was detained; [130735]

(3) in each of the last four years for which figures are available, (a) how many asylum applicants detained for more than 24 hours under immigration powers (i) were and (ii) claimed to be under the age of 18 at the time of their detention, (b) what was the average length of time for which they were detained and (c) what was the longest period of time for which any person was detained; [130738]

(4) in each of the last four years for which figures are available, (a) how many people were detained for more than 24 hours under immigration powers who were subsequently accepted to be under the age of 18 at the time of their detention, (b) what the average length of time was for which they were detained and (c) what the longest period was for which any such person was detained. [130733]

Mrs. Roche: Information on the age of persons detained under Immigration and Asylum Act 1999 powers is not held centrally. Nor is a central record kept of cases where age is disputed, whether or not the person is detained. The information requested is, therefore, available only at disproportionate cost.

Our policy, however, is that where we are satisfied a person is under 18 he or she should be detained only in very limited circumstances. The detention of minors using immigration powers is always regrettable. Unaccompanied children should never be detained other than in the most exceptional circumstances and then only overnight with appropriate care if they, for example, arrive alone at an airport. Where he or she cannot be cared for by responsible family or friends in the United Kingdom, an unaccompanied child should be placed in the care of the local authority while the circumstances of the case are determined.

Children are also sometimes cared for in detention facilities as part of a family unit in preference to separating them from their parents. In addition to existing facilities for detaining families, extra family accommodation has recently been made available at Oakington Reception Centre, where families may be held together for around seven days if it appears that their applications can be decided quickly. Occasionally, the detention of families is necessary to effect the removal of those who have no authority to remain in this country but who refuse to leave voluntarily. In such circumstances, detention should be planned to be effected as close to removal as possible so that families are not normally detained for more than a few days.

Mr. Stinchcombe: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) for each of the last four years for which figures are available, (a) how many persons under the age of 18 years have been detained with their parents in Tinsley House Reception Centre, (b) what was the average length of time for which they were detained and (c) how many of those persons were (i) 0 to 5, (ii) 6 to 11, (iii) 12 to 16 and (iv) 17 to 18 years old; [130737]

(2) how many persons under the age of 18 have been detained with their parents in Oakington Reception Centre since 20 March; and how many of those persons were (a) 0 to 5, (b) 6 to 11, (c) 12 to 16 and (d) 17 to 18 years old. [130736]

Mrs. Roche: I regret that the information held centrally on persons detained under the Immigration and Asylum Act 1999 powers at Tinsley House Detention Centre is available only in the form of a snapshot at a point in time. Nor is it possible to identify from these data the age of detainees. The information requested is, therefore, available only at disproportionate cost.

The most recent data available for persons detained at Oakington show that up to 2 July 2000, a total of 538 principal asylum applicants and 50 dependants of asylum seekers have been detained at various times since it opened on 20 March 2000. Oakington has accommodated family groups since 10 May 2000. A total of 36 children have been accommodated with one or both of their parents in dedicated family accommodation up to 2 July 2000. Further information regarding the age ranges of the children is available only at disproportionate cost.

Police (Sick Days)

Mr. Matthew Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will make a statement on the progress made by police forces since 1997 in reducing sick days per officer; and if he will make a statement. [130714]

Mr. Charles Clarke: The average number of days taken on sick leave per police officer in England and Wales has reduced over the last three years, as given in the table. The figures for 1999–2000 are not yet available.

	Average number of days
1996–97	12.5
1998–99	11.7

The Comprehensive Spending Review set police a two per cent. year on year efficiency target, including the reduction of sickness absence in police forces in England and Wales and nearly all forces now have targets to reduce sickness absence as part of their efficiency plans.

Police Budgets

Mr. Lidington: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will break down the police funding statistics used to calculate the statement in the Government's Annual report 1999–2000 that police budgets have risen on average by 3.6 per cent.; and if he will make a statement. [131367]

Mr. Charles Clarke: The figures requested are given in the table.

Immigration Advisers

Mr. Darvill: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what progress the Immigration Service Commissioner has made in establishing the scheme of regulation for immigration advisers and service providers; and if he will make a statement. [131481]

Mrs. Roche: As I indicated in my reply to my hon. Friend the Member for Ellesmere Port and Neston (Mr. Miller) on 22 May 2000, Official Report, column 370W, the Immigration Services Commissioner took up post on that date. The Commissioner is in the process of consulting widely within the advice sector in order to formulate the rules and standards which will govern the regulatory scheme. The Commissioner expects to have published the documents required by Part V of the Immigration and Asylum Act 1999 and to be ready to consider exemptions and applications for registration from 30 October 2000. We expect the full regulatory scheme to come into force in April 2001.

Animal Procedures Committee

Mr. Fitzpatrick: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department when he will publish the latest annual report of the Animal Procedures Committee. [131482]

Mr. Mike O'Brien: I have today placed a copy of the Animal Procedures Committee's annual report for 1999 in the Library. I welcome the progress the Committee has made on its extensive programme of work.

Hieratic Disqualification

Mr. Mackinlay: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) if he will seek an early legislative opportunity to relieve priests of the Church of England and the Roman Catholic Church from disqualification as hon. Members of the House; and if he will make a statement; [130663]

(2) what assessment he has made of the compatibility of the disqualification of priests of the Church of England and the Roman Catholic Church from membership of the House with the United Kingdom's obligations under the European Convention on Human Rights. [130664]

Mr. Mike O'Brien: The disqualification of priests from standing or acting as Members of Parliament was the subject of a Private Member's Bill in June 1999. Since this measure was lost, we have been sounding out opinion of the relevant churches in England, Scotland, Wales and Northern Ireland. However, there is no immediate prospect of legislation being brought forward by the Government.

The question of compatibility with the European Convention on Human Rights would be a matter for those bringing forward a relevant Bill.

Blue Travel Documents

Ms Ward: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what representations he has made to the French Government about allowing blue travel documents to be accepted at French ports. [129561]

Mrs. Roche: We are not aware of any difficulties for those using 1951 Convention travel documents (blue) when travelling to France and have not, therefore, had cause to discuss this with the French authorities. However, we are aware that a number of European Union partners will no longer accept the Certificate of Identity (CID) issued by the Immigration and Nationality Directorate. This is a brown travel document issued to certain foreign nationals, other than refugees, who are resident in the United Kingdom and cannot obtain a national passport on which to travel. This type of document is not issued under international convention but has been widely accepted for travel in the past. It is for the authorities of each country to decide whether they will accept the CID as a valid form of travel document. However, my officials are in discussion with colleagues in the various European Union countries in order to identify their particular concerns and if possible provide any reassurance which might encourage them to accept the CID for travel.

Police Pay

Mr. Woodward: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what plans he has to introduce a pay-weighting scheme for police officers in the South East of England; and what recent representations have been made to him on this matter. [131066]

Mr. Charles Clarke: I refer my hon. Friend to the reply given by my right hon. Friend the Home Secretary to the hon. Member for Guildford (Mr. St. Aubyn) during the debate on the Policing of London on 23 June 2000, Official Report, columns 563–64.

Non-food Crops

Mr. McNamara: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what the response was to the consultation on non-food crops launched by his Department on 7 April. [132014]

Ms Quin: Thirty-seven replies were received to this consultation, and I have arranged for copies to be placed in the Libraries of the House, and also to be made available for public inspection in the Ministry library at Whitehall Place. The proposal for a Government-industry forum on non-food crops was widely welcomed. My Department is now studying the responses in detail and considering how to put the proposals into effect.

Pesticides Safety Directorate

Mr. McNamara: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food when he will publish the 1999–2000 Annual report of the Pesticides Safety Directorate. the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food, [132015]

Mr. Nick Brown: The 1999–2000 Annual Report and Accounts for the Pesticide Safety Directorate were laid before Parliament today. Copies are available in the Library of the House.

European Food Authority

Mr. Gareth Thomas: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what recent discussions he has had with his European counterparts and the European Commission in respect of plans to establish a European Food Authority. [130926]

Ms Stuart: I have been asked to reply.

The proposal to establish a European Food Authority and associated work has been discussed in various Councils this year. Department of Health Ministers and the Chairman of the Food Standards Agency have also had informal meetings with the Commission.

SOLICITOR-GENERAL

CPS (Essex)

Mr. Bob Russell: To ask the Solicitor-General if he will order an inquiry into the handling by the Essex Crown Prosecution Service of a case of alleged careless driving in respect of a fatal accident at Colchester on 6 May 1999; and if he will make a statement. [131076]

The Solicitor-General: I shall be speaking to the Chief Crown Prosecutor for Essex to discuss the circumstances of this case and will be seeing the hon. Member within a week.

TRADE AND INDUSTRY

Inventors

Mr. Coaker: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what specific grants are available to help inventors start up businesses. [130974]

Ms Hewitt: Last year the Government introduced the Smart Micro Project grant, worth up to £10,000, specifically to help lone inventors—including those starting up in business—and micro firms develop simple, low-cost prototypes of new products or processes which involve technological advance or novelty. Investors may also apply for other elements of the Small Business Service Smart scheme, which offer grants of up to £45,000 for technical and commercial feasibility studies into innovative technology or up to £5,000 for technology consultation.

Departmental Initiatives

Dr. Lynne Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will list each departmental initiative since May 1997 requiring bids for funding together with the total resources available, the number of successful bids and the proportion this represents of total bids received; and what data he collects on the average expenditure of organisations bidding for funding through each initiative. [131084]

Dr. Howells: I refer my hon. Friend to the statement made by my right hon. Friend the Chancellor of the Exchequer on 18 July 2000, Official Report, columns 219–29.

Universal Bank

Mr. Lilley: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if the proposed universal bank will be expected to operate on an arm's-length commercial basis without subsidy. [130648]

Mr. Byers [holding answer 17 July 2000]: Until a business case has been completed and approved, it is too early to say what, if any, Government contribution may be required.

Mr. Lilley: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if the proposed universal bank operating through sub-post offices will be competing with the Alliance and Leicester Girobank in the provision of certain services. [130649]

Mr. Byers [holding answer 17 July 2000]: A major strength of the Post Office is the extensive reach of the post office network and its ability to provide access to a wide range of banking products on behalf of its clients. The extent to which the universal bank may compete with certain services offered by Alliance and Leicester Girobank or other banks will depend on the range of basic banking services these banks wish to make available through the post office network.

Mr. Lilley: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what consultations have taken place between his Department, the Post Office and Alliance and Leicester Girobank about the establishment of a universal bank operating through sub-post offices. [130695]

Mr. Byers [holding answer 17 July 2000]: Consultations are in progress between the Post Office and a wide range of banks including Alliance and Leicester Girobank, about the establishment of a universal bank operating through the post office network.

Electricity Pylons

Miss McIntosh: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry, pursuant to his answer of 4 July 2000, Official Report, column 136W, on electricity pylons, if the replacement of trees felled as a result of the proposed construction of the Lackenby to Shipton overhead transmission line is intended (a) to mitigate the impact of consented development or (b) as an environmental measure. [131344]

Mrs. Liddell: The replacement tree planting scheme is intended to serve both purposes.

Miss McIntosh: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry, pursuant to his answer of 4 July 2000, Official Report, column 136W, on electricity pylons, who is responsible for the payment of compensation to farmers and landowners affected by the tree planting scheme. [131343]

Mrs. Liddell: Compensation for [illegible] which the National Grid Company carries out on other people's land is a matter for the company.

Renewable Energy

Mr. Colman: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what arrangements his Department has made to purchase the electricity supply from renewable energy sources for its main headquarters building; and what percentage of its electricity is supplied from such sources. [131403]

Dr. Howells: As part of the annual tendering exercise for electricity supply, energy from renewable sources was procured for one of our buildings on the London HQ estate. This supply amounts to 26 per cent. of the electricity purchased for the London HQ buildings.

Computer Disasters

Mr. Fabricant: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what estimate he has made of the time it would take to get new computers running in the wake of a major computer disaster in his Department. [130970]

Dr. Howells: The Department and our Agencies have a range of computer systems in use to support our day-to-day work. The responsibility for support of these is in the main outsourced to the private sector. For each of them disaster arrangements are in place to enable recovery of each system appropriate to the criticality of the business it supports. This includes the basic IT infrastructure on which each of these systems operates. The arrangements include built-in resilience, aimed at minimising loss of service generally. In the event of a major disaster impacting DTI's building, priority users have also been identified so that vital services can be restored first to these key personnel in the event of such a disaster.

The Department's disaster recovery programme covers appropriate testing of arrangements and any lessons learned are applied to strengthen the supporting processes and procedures.

Postal Workers Dispute

Mr. Burstow: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will make a statement on the current postal workers dispute in London. [131422]

Mr. Alan Johnson: This is an operational matter for the Post Office.

Mr. Burstow: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what estimate he has made of the size of the backlog of delayed post caused by the current postal workers dispute in London. [131423]

Mr. Alan Johnson: None. This is an operational matter for the Post Office.

Insolvency Service

Mr. Salter: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what targets he has set his Department's Insolvency Service Executive Agency for 2000–01. [131887]

Dr. Howells: The Insolvency Service's planning assumption is that compulsory insolvencies will total 26,500 in the year to 31 March 2001. On that basis and with the resources allocated to it, I have set the following performance targets:

To complete sufficient bankruptcy and compulsory liquidation case administrations so that the number of open current cases at 31 March 2001 are no more than 17,225 cases—that is, equivalent to no more than eight months of new case input; with no more than 5 per cent. of those cases being more than 36 months old;

To maintain in real terms the unit cost of administering bankruptcy and compulsory liquidation cases over the period 1999–2002 at the level of 1998–99, taking account of the additional shorter-term costs of its new IT infrastructure and the delivery of improvements in its services to users;

To reduce in real terms the unit cost of its investigation of bankruptcy and liquidation cases by 10 per cent. over the period 1999–2002, also taking account of the additional shorter-term costs of its new IT;

To continue to achieve the level of disqualification proceedings and orders against unfit directors as in 1999–2000;

To continue to submit reports of criminal misconduct at a level consistent with the Service's investigative caseload and resources;

To report to creditors on assets and liabilities within eight weeks in at least 97 per cent. of all cases: and within 12 weeks in 98 per cent. of all cases;

To hold the initial meetings of creditors within 12 weeks in 96 per cent. of all appropriate cases, and within four months in 98 per cent. of all appropriate cases;

To submit reports within 10 months in at least 90 per cent. of bankruptcy cases and at least 80 per cent. of compulsory liquidation cases where there is evidence of criminality;

To submit disqualification reports within 12 months in at least 65 per cent. of cases and within 15 months in at least 80 per cent. of cases where there is evidence of unfit conduct by directors; and

To check and action at least 97 per cent. of Insolvency Services Account payment requisitions within four days or by the due date.

The Service is expected to action 100 per cent. of invoices for payment within 30 days of receipt and the Agency Chief Executive is expected to reply within 10 days to all Members of Parliament delegated to him for reply.

I have asked the Agency Chief Executive to develop for 2001–02 and beyond one or more outcome-based targets for the Service's activities; and to review its quality of service performance in the light of its experience of its new IT infrastructure and the views of its users.

Sunbeds

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will take steps to ensure that the regulations relating to sunbeds and their use are reviewed; and if he will make a statement. [128334]

Yvette Cooper: I have been asked to reply.

There are no current plans to amend legislation as it applies to sunbeds and their use but the situation is kept under review.

The use of sunbeds is a matter of personal choice. However, people should be aware that their use entails exposure to ultraviolet radiation and that there is strong evidence that this is a cause of skin cancer.

HOME DEPARTMENT

Multi-agency Helpline

Mr. Simon Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will assess the benefits of the Audit Commission proposal for the creation of a multi-agency helpline to relieve pressure on the existing 999 emergency number; and if he will make a statement. [128533]

Mr. Mike O'Brien [holding answer 5 July 2000]: I have asked officials, in consultation with the Association of Chief Police Officers, to develop proposals for a new call handling strategy. Relieving pressure on the 999 service and using new technology to receive from and provide information to the public will be considered as part of that strategy.

Police Numbers

Mr. Simon Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what the total number of police officers and police civilian staff was (a) in England and Wales and (b) in each force on (i) 31 March 2000, (ii) 30 September 1999 and (iii) 31 March 1997; and if he will make a statement. [130027]

Mr. Straw: The information is set out in tables. At the end of March 2000, the total number of police officers in England and Wales was 124,418 and there were 53,227 civilian support staff in the police service. Table VI additionally compares the percentage change in police numbers over the 12 month period 31 March 1999 to 31 March 2000, against the percentage increase in police budgets for 1999–2000 in both cash and real terms.

A reduction in police numbers for March 2000 was forecast in the projections on police numbers in the reply my hon. Friend the Minister of State gave to the hon. Member on 15 March 2000, Official Report, columns 177–79W.

I have already announced my plans to reverse the decline in police numbers. The Crime Fighting Fund was intended to provide funding for the recruitment of 5,000 more officers—3,000 this year and 2,000 next, over and above the number that forces would have planned to recruit over the three years from April 2000. As a result of the Spending Review, we will be making funding available for the recruitment of a further 4,000 officers—making 9,000 in all. The additional 4,000 will come on stream in 2001–02 and 2002–03. So forces will be able to recruit up to a maximum of 3,000 this year, 3,000 next year and 3,000 in 2002–03.

Though numbers are important, tackling crime is more than a matter of police numbers. I am announcing today a major increase in resources for policing to boost police effectiveness. By 2003–04, annual funding will have increased by over 20 per cent.—£1.6 billion of which £1.3 billion is newly announced.

In my reply to my hon. Friend the Member for The Wrekin (Mr. Bradley) on 15 June 2000, Official Report, column 714W, I announced that £15 million had been earmarked from the Police Modernisation Fund this year to enhance the policing of rural areas. Allocation of this new money will be announced very shortly. This extra funding should contribute to a further increase in police numbers in the rural forces.

I am also stepping up efforts to tackle robbery with a cash boost this year from the Police Modernisation Fund. £20 million will be shared between the Metropolitan Police (£9.1 million), West Midlands Police (£3.3 million), Greater Manchester Police (£3.2 million), West Yorkshire

Police (£2.6 million) and Merseyside Police (£1.8 million). This additional funding will help these forces fund and develop additional initiatives to tackle robbery in their areas.

The Government's £400 million Crime Reduction Programme, too, has expanded rapidly. The Programme includes:

£153 million under the Closed Circuit Television Initiative;

£62 million targeted on two million homes in 500 neighbourhoods in England and Wales with high burglary rates;

£31 million for the long-term initiative "On Track" aimed at children aged between 4–12 at risk of getting involved in crime;

£30 million has been earmarked for problem-oriented or intelligence-led policing projects; and

£13 million to enable 70 Youth Inclusion schemes to be set up to prevent youth offending and the associated risk factors.

The various initiatives we have put in place will help the police and local communities work more effectively towards the reduction of crime and make our country a safer place in which to live.

The relevant tables have been placed in the Library.

Elderly Prisoners

Mr. Boswell: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many prisoners are aged over 60 years; and what arrangements are made to meet their needs. [130642]

Mr. Boateng: On 30 June 2000, there were 1,266 prisoners who were aged 60 and over. There are no separate arrangements for this group of prisoners. The Prison Service aims to assess each prisoner in order to identify their individual needs.

Integrate Services (Warrington)

Helen Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department when the Charity Commission will publish the report of its investigation into Integrate Services in Warrington; and if he will ensure that a copy of the full report is placed in the Library. [130704]

Mr. Boateng [holding answer 18 July 2000]: I understand that the Charity Commissioners expect to complete their Inquiry into Integrate Services and publish a report in September. A copy of the report will be placed in the Library.

Tagging and Curfews

Mr. Lidington: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what the basis is for the statement on page 35 of the Government's Annual report 1999–2000, that tagging and curfews are more effective ways of punishing offenders; to what Government initiatives this statement refers; and if he will make a statement. [131379]

Mr. Boateng [holding answer 18 July 2000]: The introduction of curfew orders enforced by electronic monitoring as a sentence to all courts in England and Wales on 1 December 1999 built on four years of successful trials. Home Office research has shown that the successful completion rate of 82 per cent. during the first two years of the trials of the sentence compared favourably with other community sentences (the completion rate for probation orders was also 82 per cent., while that for community service was 71 per cent.).

The evaluation of the trials found that curfew orders were more strictly enforced than other community sentences, a fact that places greater value on rate of completion. The primary reason for this is the fact that the electronic monitoring contracts leave little discretion in the enforcement of breaches. The monitoring equipment ensures that violations of curfew are detected immediately, and offenders in breach of their order are very quickly returned to court by the contractors.

Curfew orders enforced by electronic monitoring provide the courts with a flexible sentencing option for use in respect of those offences for which the sentence is not fixed by law. Firstly, as a stand-alone sentence, it provides the punitive element of restricting an offender's liberty during the period of the curfew, while enabling those who have families to support to continue to do so. A curfew order can also be used in conjunction with another community sentence to help structure the times of attendance at, for example, probation or drug rehabilitation appointments. The trials of the sentence demonstrated that in this way, electronic monitoring could help to address the chaotic lifestyle of some offenders.

Given the operational effectiveness of curfew orders enforced by electronic monitoring, the sentence can also be shown to provide a cost-effective alternative to a custodial sentence.

The operation of the sentence in England and Wales is the subject of an evaluation by the Home Office Research, Development and Statistics Directorate. The findings of the evaluation of the first two years of the trials of curfew orders enforced by electronic monitoring are published in Home Office Research Study 163 and 177.

Human Rights

Miss Widdecombe: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) what assessment he had made of the compatibility of Government legislation enacted in the 1997–98 parliamentary session with the Human Rights Act 1998; and if he will make a statement; [131383]

(2) what estimate he has made of the number of declarations of incompatibility that will be made by the courts under the Human Rights Act 1998 (a) in the year from 2 October and (b) subsequently in each year; and if he will make a statement. [131385]

Mr. Straw: The Human Rights Act 1998 gives further effect in United Kingdom law to rights and freedoms in the European Convention on Human Rights. Successive Governments have sought to comply with the provisions of the Convention since 1951. Therefore we should not expect major changes to have to be made once the Human Rights Act is fully in force. Following its enactment, Departments have reviewed their legislation and procedures in the light of the Human Rights Act. Where changes have been judged appropriate, these have been made or are in hand.

Miss Widdecombe: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what assessment he had made of the impact of the Human Rights Act 1998 on (a) total Government and (b) individual department's spending in (i) 2000–01, (ii) 2001–02 and (iii) 2002–03. [131384]

Mr. Straw: I refer the right hon. Member to the reply given by my hon. Friend the Under-Secretary to the hon. Member for New Forest, West (Mr. Swayne) on 23 May 2000, Official Report, column 401W.

Fire Extinguishing Sprinklers

Mr. Andrew George: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) what assessment he has made of the potential hazards to disabled people of having domestic fire extinguishing sprinklers installed in their homes; [129023]

(2) what proposals he has to fund the installation of domestic fire extinguishing sprinklers in the homes of disabled people. [129024]

Mr. Hutton [holding answer 4 July 2000]: I have been asked to reply.

Local housing and social services authorities have responsibilities for funding housing adaptations for disabled people under the Housing Grants, Construction and Redevelopment Act 1996 and the Chronically Sick and Disabled Persons Act 1970. These responsibilities include making housing safe for disabled people. Decisions about the funding of adaptations in individual cases are taken at local level following an assessment of need. We have no plans to change these arrangements in respect of domestic fire extinguishing sprinklers. No specific research by either the Department of the Environment, Transport and the Regions or the Home Office has been conducted into the potential hazards to disabled people of having domestic fire extinguishing sprinklers in their homes.

DEFENCE

Presentation of Information

Mr. Hoyle: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what changes he intends to make to the presentation of information on the strength of the armed forces. [131788]

Mr. Spellar: In order to provide a more accurate and relevant picture of the overall full-time manpower available to the Armed Forces, we plan to include in the definition of the strength of the Services all full-time personnel including Full-Time Reserve Service personnel and, in the case of the Army, Gurkhas. In view of their discrete and specialised task in a particular location the Royal Irish (Home Service) will be reported separately. This change will take effect from September 2000.

The inclusion of Full-Time Reserve Service personnel is in line with our aim to make reserve forces more relevant and usable and is a natural consequence of the Reserve Forces Act 1996 which provides for the employment of reservists in place of full-time regular personnel.

Royal Ordnance Factory, Nottingham

Mr. Coaker: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence (1) what discussions he plans to have with British Aerospace and the trade unions about the future of the Royal Ordnance factory in Nottingham; and if he will make a statement; [130508]

(2) he has had with British Aerospace and the trade unions about the future of the Royal Ordnance factory in Nottingham; and if he will make a statement. [130507]

Mr. Hoon [holding answer 17 July 2000]: My ministerial colleagues and I meet representatives of BAe Systems regularly to discuss a wide range of business. Most recently I met Mr. John Weston of BAe Systems on 25 May, when he briefed me on a number of matters arising from the recent acquisition of the defence business of GEC Marconi. Mr. Weston confirmed then that the future of the site at RO Nottingham was under review and I understand that work on the review continues. My noble Friend Baroness Symons, the Minister of State for Defence Procurement, met Trade Union representatives on 6 July to hear their views on the future prospects for RO Nottingham and expects to meet Trade Union representatives again shortly.

Departmental Initiatives

Dr. Lynne Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will list each departmental initiative since May 1997 requiring bids for funding together with the total resources available, the number of successful bids and the proportion this represents of total bids received; and what data he collects on the average expenditure of organisations bidding for funding through each initiative. [131078]

Dr. Moonie: I refer my hon. Friend to the answer given to her by my right hon. Friend the Chief Secretary to the Treasury on 17 July 2000, Official Report, column 93W.

Arms Sales

Mr. Cousins: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if, pursuant to the reply given to the hon. Member for Leyton and Wanstead (Mr. Cohen) of 10 July 2000, Official Report, columns 375–76W, on arms sales, memoranda of understanding of the type described apply to any arms sales in the Middle East; and if Memoranda of Understanding restrict the availability to third parties for training purposes of defence material exported from Government to Government. [130803]

Mr. Hoon [holding answer 17 July 2000]: Not all sales of defence material to the Middle East are subject to Government to Government Memorandum of Understanding arrangements.

Where there are MOUs, restrictions on transfer would typically include transfers for training purposes.

Parliamentary Answers

Mr. Field: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many parliamentary answers from his Department have been amended following publication using the mechanism of a pursuant answer in the past month. [131033]

Dr. Moonie [holding answer 17 July 2000]: The Ministry of Defence has used the mechanism of a pursuant answer on three occasions from 13 June to 17 July 2000.

Golf Courses

Mr. Bob Russell: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will list the locations of possible golf courses which have been provisionally selected to be sited on military land; which sites will be (a) leased and (b) sold to private operators; how many other sites (i) within the Colchester Garrison estate and (ii) elsewhere were investigated but will not be proceeded with; and if all revenue obtained from leasing or selling land for such golf courses will be retained by his Department. [131074]

Dr. Moonie: The information requested is not held centrally. I will write to the hon. Member and a copy of my letter will be placed in the Library of the House.

Flight Data Recorders

Mr. Martin Bell: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what progress is being made in fitting flight data recorders to Lynx, Puma and Sea King helicopters. [130472]

Dr. Moonie: Both the Royal Navy and Army Lynx aircraft are to undergo major upgrades: for the Royal Navy aircraft this will be through the Mark 8 Enhancement package, and for the Army aircraft through the Future Lynx programme. In both of these programmes, the aircraft will be fitted with a Health and Usage Monitoring System which includes Cockpit Voice and Flight Data Recorders (CVFDR). Work has been taking place to assess how to fit the equipment to the aircraft, and we aim to place a contract in the spring of 2001.

A proposal to fit CVFDRs to our Sea King and Puma fleets is under consideration.

TREASURY

Computer Disasters

Mr. Fabricant: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what discussions he has had with financial institutions regarding disaster contingency measures. [131069]

Miss Melanie Johnson: Treasury Ministers frequently discuss a wide range of issues with representatives of financial institutions. The Financial Services Authority, as financial regulator, works closely with the institutions it supervises to ensure that their risk management processes follow good practice.

Fuel Duty

Mr. Russell Brown: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will investigate the feasibility of introducing different fuel duties in rural and urban areas. [130407]

Mr. Timms [holding answer 13 July 2000]: The Government have no plans to do so.

Differential fuel duties would be difficult and expensive to administer. No new arrangements for differential rates of road fuel duty have been sanctioned by the European Commission since the completion of the single market.

Endowment Mortgages

Dr. Cable: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer (1) how many, and what percentage of, 25 year endowment contracts (a) with profits and (b) unit linked purchased (i) one year ago, (ii) five years ago, (iii) 10 years ago, (iv) 15 years ago and (v) 20 years ago are still in force today; [129952]

(2) what research has been conducted in the last 10 years by (a) the Treasury and (b) the Financial Services Authority and its antecedent bodies, into long-term persistency rates on endowments, particularly linked to mortgages; and if he will publish figures for overall persistency for that period. [129953]

Miss Melanie Johnson: The Personal Investment Authority collects and publishes information on the persistency of endowment contracts, but only for terms of up to four years after the contract is effected. The latest figures were published in October 1999 in the Personal Investment Authority's "Fifth Survey Of The Persistency of Life And Pensions Policies", a copy of which has been placed in the House of Commons Library. Persistency data are collected on endowments generically without distinguishing endowments used to repay mortgages from endowments used for savings purposes and without distinguishing with-profits endowments from unit linked endowments. There has been no specific research commissioned into the persistency of mortgage endowments.

FOREIGN AND COMMONWEALTH AFFAIRS

Sierra Leone

Mr. Maude: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on (a) the Indian peacekeepers detained by the RUF in Sierra Leone and (b) the UN personnel surrounded by the RUF in the south east of Sierra Leone; and what the conditions for their release are. [127657]

Mr. Hain: The 21 Indian peacekeepers detained by RUF at Pendembu in Sierra Leone were released unconditionally during the last week in June. We are pleased that the 233 UN personnel surrounded by RUF in the south east of Sierra Leone at Kailahun are now safe following the successful action by UNAMSIL forces on 14–15 July.

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what was the nature of the support offered by British officials observing the Lomé peace negotiations. [130788]

Mr. Hain: British officials were present in Lomé in order to observe the peace negotiations. They were in close touch throughout with the negotiators and other observers helping to facilitate the negotiations.

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what assessment he has made of the application of Article XVIII of the Lomé Peace Agreement to the Government of Sierra Leone's helicopter support. [130831]

Mr. Hain: The application of Article XVIII of the Lomé Peace Agreement to the Government of Sierra Leone's helicopter support is a matter for the Government of Sierra Leone.

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs, pursuant to his answer of 23 June 2000, Official Report, column 318W, if the Commonwealth Secretariat was used as a medium to transmit the views of Her Majesty's Government on the best method to reach a settlement in the Lomé Peace Accord; and if he will make a statement. [130853]

Mr. Hain: We remained in close touch with the Commonwealth Secretariat throughout the Lomé peace negotiations, as well as with other observers and the negotiators themselves. The decision on reaching a settlement rested with the Government of Sierra Leone and the Revolutionary United Front.

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs, pursuant to his answer of 26 June 2000, Official Report, column 400W, on Sierra Leone, if he will identify the (a) Cabinet positions and (b) Deputy ministerial positions occupied by RUF members; and what their present positions are. [130839]

Mr. Hain: The Cabinet positions occupied by members of the Revolutionary United Front (RUF) were the Ministry of Trade and Industry, the Ministry of Energy and Power; and the Ministry of Lands, Housing, Country Planning and the Environment. The Deputy ministerial positions occupied by members of the RUF were in the Ministry of Rural Development and Local Government; the Ministry of Transport and Communications; and the Ministry of Agriculture, Forestry and Marine Resources.

None of these positions is now occupied by members of the RUF. We have made clear our view that, after the attacks by the RUF on United Nations peacekeepers and the RUF's clear violation of the Lomé Peace Agreement, there can be no role for members of the RUF in the present Government of Sierra Leone.

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs, pursuant to his answer of 26 June 2000, Official Report, column 400W, on Sierra Leone, if the Government persuaded negotiators in the Lomé Accords to modify their negotiating position to (a) take account of the Government's position, and (b) to facilitate the reaching of a peace agreement. [130837]

Mr. Hain: The Lomé Peace Agreement was negotiated and entered into by the Government of Sierra Leone and the Revolutionary United Front. Negotiating positions were a matter for the parties concerned.

Observers in Lomé, including Britain, remained in close touch with the negotiators throughout, and were able to offer advice in order to help facilitate the negotiations where requested.

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs, pursuant to his answer of 26 June 2000, Official Report, column 401W, on Sierra Leone, for what reason the Commission for the Management for Strategic Resources, National Reconstruction and Development was not fully established by the end of April; and if all the Commission's funds are accounted for. [130838]

Mr. Hain: A number of factors hampered the establishment of the commission for the Management of Strategic Resources, National Reconstruction and Development. The United Nations Secretary-General's report dated 19 May states that the Commission, chaired by Foday Sankoh, had not produced a plan of action, and that there appeared to be a lack of political consensus on the role of the Commission vis-a-vis existing Government Ministries.

As far as we are aware, the Commission had received no direct funding, although at least one donor had indicated a willingness to provide funds to help it to become established.

Mr. Matthew Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will list the visits outside Britain made by his Department's Permanent Secretary on official business since 1 January 1999, indicating the date and purpose of the visit in each case. [130492]

UN Resolution 520

Mr. Colman: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on UN Resolution 520. [131171]

Mr. Hain: We welcome the withdrawal of Israeli troops from Lebanon, in compliance with UNSCRs 425 and 426, as demanded by UNSCR 520. We look forward to the Lebanese Government taking measures to assert its authority throughout its territory. We support UNSCR 520's call for the sovereignty, territorial integrity, unity and political independence of Lebanon to be respected. We also support the Resolution's reaffirmation of support for the rights of the civilian population of Lebanon.

Departmental Initiatives

Dr. Lynne Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will list each departmental initiative since May 1997 requiring bids for funding together with the total resources available, the number of successful bids and the proportion this represents of total bids received; and what data he collects on the average expenditure of organisations bidding for funding through each initiative. [131086]

Mr. Hain: I refer my hon. Friend to the answer given by my right hon. Friend the Chief Secretary to the Treasury on 17 July 2000, Official Report, column 93W.

Israel

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what estimate he has made of the (a) costs and (b) benefits to Israel of acceding to its agreement with the European Communities, 2000/384/EC (L147, volume 43, 21.6.2000); what benefits are denied to accedants of such an agreement which are granted to EU member states; and if he will make a statement. [130782]

Mr. Vaz: It is primarily for Israel or any other third country to estimate the costs and benefits to their country of entering into agreements with the EU. The EU-Israel Association Agreement is a reciprocal agreement which confers specific benefits on both parties. It is in no way comparable to EU membership.

EU Enlargement

Mr. Mackinlay: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what advice has been given to the countries most recently given EU candidacy status about the need to have on their statute book a process providing for (a) restoration of property rights and (b) a compensation regime which is subject to both arbitration and judicial review, in relation to property arbitrarily seized during the period of totalitarian rule, after 1945. [130662]

Mr. Vaz [holding answer 18 July 2000]: The EU monitors applicants' progress in meeting the political and economic criteria for membership of the EU, including issues related to the restitution of property, in the Commission's annual progress reports and the EU's regular dialogue with the applicant countries concerned. However, property restitution is a bilateral issue for the states concerned and does not fall within the scope of the accession negotiations.

We have not bilaterally offered advice to those countries recently given EU candidacy status but we have taken a particular interest in the situation in Poland, which affects a number of British nationals of Polish origin. We have continually made clear to the Polish authorities the need for a speedy resolution of the problem. At the end of last year the Polish Government presented its proposals to Parliament, which is still discussing them.

Human Rights

Mr. Russell Brown: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs when his Department will publish its Annual report on Human Rights. [131789]

Mr. Hain: The Foreign and Commonwealth Office annual report on human rights will be published as a Command Paper at 2.30pm on 20 July. Copies will be placed in the Libraries of both Houses and distributed throughout Parliament in the usual way. The report will be placed on the FCO websites www.fco.gov.uk and hrpd.fco.gov.uk and will be available through The Stationery Office.

UNITA (Sanctions)

Mr. Jim Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on the UN Secretary-General's recent appointment of experts to look into breaches of UN sanctions against UNITA. [131486]

Mr. Hain: The UK has given full support to the ground-breaking work of Ambassador Robert Fowler, Chairman of the Angola Sanctions Committee, to ensure that UN sanctions against UNITA are made to bite. We financially supported the Angola Expert Panel to the tune of 200,000 US Dollars. The Panel investigated reports of sanctions breaking and reported to the UN Security Council on 15 March. The Security Council welcomed the Panel's report in UN Security Council resolution 1295, adopted on 18 April 2000.

The report gave a detailed analysis of the problem of sanctions breaking. It reports the alleged involvement of a number of individuals. For example, it states that the central figure in UNITA's external procurement and diamond trade operations is Marcelo Moises Dachala, known as "Karrica", based in Ougadougou and that Imad Kabir > has been purchasing weapons for Savimbi which were being delivered to Kinshasa. From 1995–96 until the fall of Andulo in October 1999, Kabir is said to have served as UNITA's primary broker for importing arms and military equipment.

Security Council resolution 1295 (2000) requested the UN Secretary-General to establish a monitoring mechanism to collect further information and investigate relevant leads relating to allegations of violations of UN sanctions against UNITA and report to the Security Council by 18 October 2000. That mechanism has now been established. On 11 July the Secretary-General appointed five experts to serve on it.

We greatly welcome the fact that Ms Christine Gordon, a British national and independent writer, consultant and researcher, has been appointed to the monitoring mechanism, and wish her well in her important task.

Sanctions breaking must be stopped. The Expert Panel's report, the adoption of Security Council resolution 1295 (2000) and the establishment of the monitoring mechanism show that the international community will no longer tolerate sanctions breaking.

Fiji

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on (a) the political settlement of the recent crisis in Fiji, including its racial aspects, and (b) Fiji's future membership of the Commonwealth. [131413]

Mr. Battle: We are relieved that all the hostages have now been released, but dismayed that George Speight and his supporters have been allowed to overthrow Fiji's democratically elected Government at the point of a gun, and that the 1997 Constitution has been abrogated. We continue to call for the restoration of a democratic and constitutional Government which respects the rights of all Fijians. Unless Fiji's new interim administration can demonstrate a clear road map for returning Fiji to democracy, the Commonwealth may wish to consider further measures at the next meeting of the Commonwealth Ministerial Action Group (CMAG) in September.

Uganda

Mr. Tony Lloyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what assessment he has made of the fairness of the Ugandan referendum on the Movement System of 29 June; what discussions he has had with the Government of Uganda (a) during and (b) since the campaign; and if he will make a statement. [131414]

Mr. Hain: In its statement of 1 July, the International Donor Referendum Group, which includes the UK, concluded that although the voting had been peaceful and orderly, the Referendum campaign as a whole had not been conducted on a level playing field. While noting that it was not clear that these shortcomings were on a scale significantly to influence the result of the Referendum, the Group expressed its hope that the presidential elections scheduled for 2001 would resume momentum towards more inclusive Government.

The Group has since met with President Museveni to discuss progress towards greater pluralism, good governance and democratic accountability.

East Timor

Dr. Tonge: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what progress has been made with his plans to help train members of East Timor's civil and foreign service. [131467]

Mr. Battle: We are preparing to bring a group of East Timorese diplomats to the United Kingdom later this year for an intensive four-week tailor-made training course. These students will form the nucleus of East Timor's Diplomatic Service. We are also exploring other projects for East Timor's fledgling civil services, to be funded through our Support for Democracy Programme.

CABINET OFFICE

COI Trading Fund

Mr. Borrow: To ask the Minister for the Cabinet Office when she will publish the accounts of the Central Office of Information Trading Fund. [131672]

Mr. Ian McCartney: I have arranged for the accounts of the Central Office of Information Trading Fund to be laid before the House today.

Rural Issues

Mr. Breed: To ask the Minister for the Cabinet Office what work is being carried out on rural issues by (a) the Social Exclusion Unit, (b) the Performance and Innovation Unit, (c) the Women's Unit and (d) the Regulatory Impact Unit. [128046]

Marjorie Mowlam: These units often carry out work on issues that are relevant to both rural and urban areas. Their recent work specifically on rural issues, or with a rural theme, includes:

(a) the Social Exclusion Unit's recent consultation framework document on a National Strategy for Neighbourhood Renewal;

(b) the Performance and Innovation Unit's reports on Rural Economies (published December 1999) and the Post Office network (published June 2000); and

(c) the work of the Women's Unit in ensuring that the preparation of the Rural White Paper takes account of issues of importance for rural women.

Departmental Vehicles

Mr. Pearson: To ask the Minister for the Cabinet Office if she will list for her Department and its agencies the approved list of manufacturers of (a) cars and (b) commercial vehicles; and if she will make a statement on her Department's leasing and purchasing policy. [128983]

Mr. Ian McCartney: The make and model of car which the Government Car Service (GCS) can offer to Ministers, senior officials and other approved customers are set out in the Prime Minister's guidance on ministerial travel. Currently, GCS can offer the following cars:

Make	Model
Ford	Mondeo
Jaguar	Sovereign, Daimler
Nissan	Primera
Rover	R45
Vauxhall	Omega, Vectra

Other than for the GCS, my Department does not operate approved lists of cars or commercial vehicles. Purchase, or leasing, decisions are taken on the basis of best value for money based on while life costs.

Pesticides Tax

Mr. Alan Simpson: To ask the Minister for the Cabinet Office if she will list (a) the representations her Department has received and (b) meetings it has held on the proposed pesticides tax with the (i) UKASTA, (ii) NOAH, (iii) the National Farmers Union, (iv) the Country Landowners Association, and (v) agrochemical companies, indicating which companies; and what was the date and duration of each of the meetings. [131102]

Marjorie Mowlam: I refer my hon. Friend to the answer given by my hon. Friend the Financial Secretary on 18 July 2000, Official Report, column 110W.

Disaster Contingency Measures

Mr. Fabricant: To ask the Minister for the Cabinet Office (1) what representations she has received from consumer and pensioner groups about the need to have in place effective disaster contingency measures; [130965]

(2) what recommendations she has made to the principal Departments of state about disaster contingency measures. [130966]

Mr. Mike O'Brien: I have been asked to reply.

I refer the hon. Member to a reply I gave to the hon. Member for Mid-Bedfordshire (Mr. Sayeed) on 5 July 2000, Official Report, column 219W.

INTERNATIONAL DEVELOPMENT

Pakistan and Bangladesh

Mr. Sarwar: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development if she will make a statement on her Department's programmes in Pakistan and Bangladesh. [130961]

Clare Short: The main goal of our programmes in Pakistan and Bangladesh is systematic reduction of the unacceptably high levels of poverty which prevail in both countries. In Bangladesh, Pakistan and elsewhere we work to help them move towards the achievement of the International Development Targets. Our plans for addressing this in Bangladesh are described in our relevant Country Strategy Paper, a copy of which is in the House of Commons Library. In Pakistan, where our work was disrupted by last year's military coup, we are providing technical assistance to the Pakistani administration to support action to reduce poverty and corruption and support the development of genuine democracy.

Ilisu Dam

Dr. Tonge: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what discussions she has held with the UK Executive Director of the World Bank since the findings of the Independent Inspection Panel's report on the Ilisu Dam became available. [131314]

Clare Short: I have had no discussions with our Executive Director about the findings of the Independent Inspection Panels on Ilisu Dam as neither my Department nor the World Bank is involved in the project.

NORTHERN IRELAND

Decommissioning

4. Mr. Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will make a statement on recent developments regarding the inspection of paramilitary weapons dumps. [129863]

6. Mr. Hilary Benn: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what recent discussions he has had with General de Chastelain regarding decommissioning. [129865]

Mr. Mandelson: Mr. Ramaphosa and Mr. Ahtisaari have reported that they have completed their first inspection of several IRA arms dumps. We welcome this development—it represents substantial progress and an honouring of commitments given at the beginning of May. I am confident the inspectors will report any further progress that has been made when they deem it appropriate to do so.

Equally significant is the renewal of contact by the IRA's representative with General de Chastelain's Decommissioning Body, and they will resume their discussions so that IRA arms are ultimately put completely and verifiably beyond use.

16. Mrs. Betty Williams: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what recent discussions he has had with General de Chastelain about progress to date in decommissioning. [129875]

17. Sir David Madel: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what progress has been made on the decommissioning of illegal arms and explosives in Northern Ireland. [129876]

23. Miss McIntosh: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what recent representations he has received on progress towards decommissioning; and if he will make a statement. [129882]

Mr. Ingram: Under the Good Friday Agreement, the Decommissioning Commission operates as an independent body to resolve the decommissioning issue. The Commission has provided written reports on progress on a number of occasions.

20. Mr. Grieve: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland when he expects the decommissioning of illegal arms and explosives to begin. [129879]

Mr. Ingram: We hope decommissioning will start as soon as possible.

Oversight Commissioner

8. Mr. Temple-Morris: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland when he last met the Oversight Commissioner. [129867]

24. Mr. McWalter: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland when he last met the Oversight Commissioner. [129883]

Mr. George Howarth: The Secretary of State last met with Mr. Tom Constantine, the Oversight Commissioner, on 31 May 2000.

Parades

9. Mr. Fabricant: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will make a statement on recent violence at parades. [129868]

Mr. George Howarth: The Government condemn the violence which occurred during the past week. The behaviour we witnessed on occasions was nothing less than pure vandalism and thuggery. We should, however, congratulate the security forces for their efforts to maintain order and uphold the lawful ruling of the Parades Commission.

19. Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what recent discussions he has had with the Parades Commission concerning the criteria it uses to determine parade routes. [129878]

Mr. Ingram: The criteria used for making decisions are set out in legislation and in the guidelines and Code of Conduct produced under this legislation. It is for the Parades Commission to determine the appropriate factors to be taken into account, and to take the final decision.

Security Situation

10. Mr. Stephen O'Brien: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will make a statement on the security situation in Northern Ireland. [129869]

11. Mr. Soames: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will make a statement on the security situation in Northern Ireland. [129870]

Mr. George Howarth: The Government believe the main paramilitary groups are maintaining their ceasefires. There remains, however, a threat from dissident paramilitaries on both sides who are opposed to the Good Friday Agreement.

Devolved Government

12. Dr. Palmer: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will make a statement on progress in respect of devolved Government in Northern Ireland. [129871]

Mr. Mandelson: Assembly Members resumed their positions quickly and Assembly procedures are operating efficiently. Two Bills—Appropriation and Members' Allowances—have already been passed by the Assembly and more legislation is expected to follow soon after the summer recess. The Executive Committee is now preparing its programme for Government. I have every confidence in the Assembly's continuing success and wish it well.

Young Offenders

13. Mr. Fitzpatrick: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will make a statement on the range of schemes available to deal with young offenders. [129872]

Mr. George Howarth: The Criminal Justice Children (Northern Ireland) Order 1998 was introduced in January 1999 and brought in a new juvenile justice centre order of between six months and two years, half of which is spent in custody and half under close supervision in the community. The Community element of the sentence is delivered by the Probation Board for Northern Ireland.

A range of programmes for young people, both in custody and in the community, has been developed. Programmes such as cognitive behaviour training to tackle offending and the associated causes and problems such as drugs and alcohol misuse, car crime, aggressive behaviour and sex offending, have been developed on a multi-agency basis.

EU Structural Funds

14. Mr. David Stewart: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what consultation he has had relating to the future of EU structural funds allocated to Northern Ireland. [129873]

Mr. Mandelson: I met Commissioner Barnier on 18 May during the suspension of devolution in Northern Ireland. The allocation of EU structural funds is now a matter for the Northern Ireland Executive.

Peace Process

15. Mr. Salter: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland when he last met the Irish Prime Minister to discuss progress towards peace. [129874]

Mr. Mandelson: I last met with the Taoiseach on 31 May in the course of a visit to Dublin to hold discussions with the Irish Foreign Minister.

Prisoners (Early Release)

18. Mr. Clifton-Brown: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will make a statement on the early release of terrorist prisoners. [129877]

Mr. Ingram: The early release of prisoners is dependent on the continuation of the current ceasefires. The Secretary of State is in constant touch with his security advisers and keeps the security situation continually under review.

Crime Statistics

21. Mr. Randall: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will make a statement on the current levels of recorded crime in Northern Ireland. [129880]

Mr. Ingram: I refer the hon. Member to the answer given today to the hon. Member for Epping Forest (Mrs. Laing), Official Report, column 363.

School Links

22. Helen Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what steps he is taking to encourage links between schools in Northern Ireland, the rest of the United Kingdom and the Irish Republic; and if he will make a statement. [129881]

Mr. Mandelson: Responsibility for this subject has been devolved to the Northern Ireland Assembly, and is therefore no longer a matter for the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland.

Police Ombudsman

25. Mr. Quinn: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland when he last met the police ombudsman. [129884]

Mr. Ingram: The Ombudsman met with the Secretary of State on 1 November 1999.

Good Friday Agreement

26. Mr. Ivan Lewis: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what progress is being made on implementation of the Good Friday Agreement. [129885]

Mr. Mandelson: The Government are committed to the full implementation of the Belfast Agreement. The provisions for policing, criminal justice, equality and rights, prisoners and security are progressing with all due speed. The prospects for decommissioning are good. I am confident we will fulfil our commitment to implement the Agreement in full by June 2001.

Crimes of Violence

27. Ms Southworth: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what progress he is making on tackling crimes of violence in Northern Ireland. [129886]

Mr. Ingram: Figures on violent crime for the period April 1999 to March 2000 show an increase of 12.6 per cent. on the number of offences recorded for the same period during 1998–99. The total number of violent crimes cleared during 1999–2000 increased by 25.3 per cent. compared with the previous year. Overall the clearance rate for violent crime rose from 55.7 per cent. in 1998–99 to 62 per cent. during 1999–2000. The ongoing progress being made by the RUC towards moving to 'intelligence-led policing' will, it is believed, assist in tackling the problem of violent crime.

Abortion and Contraceptive Services

28. Fiona Mactaggart: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will make a statement on access to abortion and contraceptive services for women in Northern Ireland. [129887]

Mr. George Howarth: Responsibility for this subject has been devolved to the Northern Ireland Assembly and is therefore no longer a matter for the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland.

Royal Ulster Constabulary

29. Mr. Evans: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what discussions he has had with former members of the RUC concerning the Patten report on the future of the RUC. [129888]

Mr. Ingram: During the three-month period of formal consultation on the Patten Report, and in discussions since then, Ministers have met a wide range of police representative groups to discuss the Patten Report and the future of the RUC. These have included retired officers, disabled officers, police widows and their families. Ministers have also received, and replied to, many letters from former RUC officers.

EDUCATION AND EMPLOYMENT

New Deal

Mr. Paul Marsden: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment how many people aged over 50 years are eligible for guaranteed minimum take-home pay under the New Deal for the over 50s in Shrewsbury and Atcham; and if he will make a statement. [131147]

Ms Jowell: New Deal 50 plus is a major new programme of personal advice, support and financial help for people over 50 who are looking for work. The programme is aimed at unemployed and economically inactive people in receipt of benefit for six months or more and their dependent partners. The following table shows the number of people who are directly eligible for New Deal 50 plus. However, in addition, dependent partners of these benefit recipients may also be eligible, as will be men aged 60–65 receiving National Insurance credits automatically.

The £170 minimum income guarantee applies to those people going into full-time work and additionally receiving the Employment Credit of £60 per week. It is not possible to say how many people will be eligible for the Employment Credit, but our assumption is that about 90 per cent. of those who apply will be eligible for this important new support for people aged 50 or over.

Income Support, Jobseekers Allowance, Incapacity Benefit and Severe Disablement Allowance recipients aged 50 or over with a current claim duration of six months or more, as at February 2000

Thousand

	Shrewsbury and Atcham
Income Support	2.8
Jobseekers Allowance	0.1
Incapacity Benefit	1.4
Severe Disablement Allowance	[1]0.2

[1] Numbers are based on very few sample cases and are subject to a high degree of sampling error. These figures should be used as a guide to the current situation only.

Notes:

1. Income Support figures exclude claimants who also receive IB/SDA
2. IB figures exclude those persons receiving National Insurance Credits only
3. Jobseekers Allowance figure for June 2000

Ms Buck: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment if he will make a statement on the impact of the New Deals for (a) 18 to 24-year-olds and (b) lone parents in (i) Westminster and (ii) Kensington. [130230]

Ms Jowell: The New Deal for Young people is aimed at people aged 18–24 who have been claiming unemployment benefits for six months or more. Claimant unemployment among this group has fallen by 56 per cent. since April 1998 when the New Deal was introduced. Part of this is due to the delivery of a strong and stable economy, but the New Deal for Young People has helped unemployment to fall even faster. The 56 per cent. fall in youth long-term unemployment compares with a fall of 18 per cent. in total unemployment, 23 per cent. in total youth (18–24) unemployment and 26 per cent. in the total number unemployed for six months or more. The effect of the New Deal is confirmed by independent research from the National Institute of Economic and Social Research.

It is not possible to measure the New Deal effect exactly in each area of the country. However, in Westminster and Kensington the falls in unemployment among the New Deal client group have also been substantially faster than for other groups. In Westminster in the two years since April 1998 claimant unemployment amongst those aged 18–24, unemployed for six months or more, has fallen by 43 per cent. from 418 to 238. This compares with a fall of 16 per cent. in total unemployment, 25 per cent. in total youth (18–24) unemployment, and 18 per cent. in the total number unemployed for six months or more.

In Kensington and Chelsea, over the same period, claimant unemployment among those aged 18–24, unemployed for six months or more, has fallen by 41 per cent. from 280 to 165. This compares with a fall of 23 per cent. in total unemployment, 23 per cent. in total youth (18–24) unemployment, and 28 per cent. in the total number unemployed for six months or more.

New Deal for Lone Parents aims to help lone parents in receipt of Income Support to improve their job readiness and help them take up paid work. Independent evaluation by the Institute for Employment Research suggests it has attracted substantial numbers of participants and secured very positive feedback from them. Analysis has also shown that after 18 months more people had left IS in NDLP prototype areas than in comparison areas.

It is also not possible to measure the effect of New Deal for Lone Parents exactly in each area of the country. Local information on NDLP performance is produced for parliamentary constituencies. Up to the end of April 2000, in the Cities of London and Westminster constituency, 95 lone parents had started on NDLP, of which 18 had moved into work, while in the Regent's Park and North Kensington and Kensington and Chelsea constituencies, 388 had started on the programme and 80 had moved into a job.

Mr. Cox: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment how many (a) men and (b) women aged between 18–24 years have entered the New Deal within the Greater London Authority area to date. [130770]

Ms Jowell: The latest figures to April 2000 show that 47,850 young men and 24,200 young women have entered the New Deal in the Greater London area. 27,470 of these young people have gained jobs which is a significant contribution to our being on target to meet the manifesto commitment to help 250,000 young people into jobs through the New Deal. At the end of April we had reached a total of 216,200.

Youth Unemployment (Cumbria)

Mr. Martlew: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment if he will make a statement on youth unemployment in (a) Cumbria and (b) Carlisle. [131409]

Ms Jowell: There are currently (June 2000) 2,037 claimant unemployed people aged 18–24 in Cumbria and 447 in Carlisle. In the three years to June 2000 unemployment among young people has fallen by 36 per cent. in Cumbria and by 37 per cent. in Carlisle. The equivalent fall in the UK as a whole over this period is 36 per cent.

Part of this improvement is due to the delivery of a strong and stable economy, but the New Deal for Young People has helped youth unemployment to fall even faster. The New Deal for young people is aimed at people aged 18–24 who have been claiming unemployment benefits for six months or more.

In both Cumbria and Carlisle the fall in unemployment among the New Deal client group has been substantially faster than for other groups. In Cumbria, in the three years to June 2000, claimant unemployment among those aged 18–24, unemployed for six months or more, has fallen by 71 per cent., from 1,397 to 402. This compares with a fall of 31 per cent. in total unemployment and 51 per cent. in the total number unemployed for six months or more.

In Carlisle, in the three years to June 2000, claimant unemployment among those aged 18–24, unemployed for six months or more, has fallen by 70 per cent., from 274 to 81. This compares with a fall of 31 per cent. in total unemployment and 46 per cent. in the total number unemployed for six months or more.

The impact of the New Deal is confirmed by independent research from the National Institute of Economic and Social Research, though it is not possible to measure the New Deal effect exactly in each area of the country.

Pre-school Places (Middlesbrough)

Dr. Kumar: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment how many new pre-school places have been created in the constituency of Middlesbrough, South and Cleveland, East since May 1997; and if he will make a statement. [131205]

Ms Hodge [holding answer 18 July 2000]: Since this Government came to office, 120,000 new, free, early education places have been created for three and four-year-olds nationally. Data on early years education places are not available by constituency, but we have provided sufficient funding to ensure that all four-year-olds and the majority of three-year-olds in Middlesbrough South and East Cleveland receive a free, part time, early education place.

Sex and Relationship Education

Mr. Leigh: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what the meaning is of the word (a) inappropriate, as used in (i) paragraph 8 of the introduction, (ii) paragraph 1.8 of and (iii) paragraph 1.14 of and (b) research, as used in paragraph 1.7 of, the Sex and Relationship Education Guidance issued in July 2000. [131195]

Jacqui Smith [holding answer 19 July 2000]: We have made it clear that head teachers and governors must not use teaching and materials which are inappropriate with regard to the age and the religious and the cultural background of the pupils concerned. In making their judgments, head teachers and governors should have regard to the Personal, Social and Health Education framework, which sets out what is expected at each Key Stage in education, and to the law.

There is a variety of research that shows that effective sex and relationship education does not encourage early sexual experimentation. These are summarised in the Social Exclusion Unit's Report on Teenage Pregnancy. Copies are available in the Library.

School Science Laboratories (Middlesbrough)

Dr. Kumar: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what steps he has taken to update school science laboratories in the constituency of Middlesbrough, South and Cleveland, East; and if he will make a statement. [131206]

Jacqui Smith [holding answer 18 July 2000]: Under the initiative "School laboratories for the 21st Century", £60 million is being allocated from the Capital Modernisation fund to tackle deficiencies in secondary school science accommodation over the next two years. This will enable around 400 improvement projects to be carried out at those schools most in need.

In line with the Department's policy of reducing bureaucracy and paperwork, grants are being allocated to local education authorities (LEAs) by formulae. LEAs will then distribute funding to schools according to need. Middlesbrough LEA is to receive £115,109 this year and a further £115,109 in 2001–02.

Additionally, LEAs have been able to apply for funding from the New Deal for Schools (NDS) programme to improve the condition of school laboratories. So far, 151 such projects have been funded, at a cost of just under £37 million. They may also have incorporated improvements to science accommodation within larger schemes of school expansion or rationalisation.

Computer Disasters

Mr. Fabricant: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what estimate he has made of the time it would take to get new computers running in the wake of a major computer disaster in his Department. [130969]

Mr. Wills: Contingency plans exist for all of the major computer systems in the Department and they should be operational again within three working days.

Departmental Initiatives

Dr. Lynne Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment if he will list each departmental initiative since May 1997 requiring bids for funding together with the total resources available, the number of successful bids and the proportion this represents of total bids received; and what data he collects on the average expenditure of organisations bidding for funding through each initiative. [131080]

Mr. Wills: I refer my hon. Friend to the reply given by my right hon. Friend the Chief Secretary to the Treasury on 17 July 2000, Official Report, column 93W.

Health and Sex Education

Mr. Coaker: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what rights parents have to withdraw their children from the health and sex education element of National Curriculum Science at Key Stage 2 for religious reasons. [130976]

Jacqui Smith: Section 405 of the Education Act 1996 gives parents the right to withdraw their children from any or all parts of a school's programme of sex education, but not those elements of health and sex education which are required by the National Curriculum Science Order. We encourage schools and governors to consult parents over their Sex and Relationship Education policy.

Learning Support Units

Mr. Coaker: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment (1) how many Learning Support Units will be established in Nottinghamshire; [131068]

(2) what the timetable is for setting up the new Learning Support Units for disruptive pupils; and if he will make a statement. [130979]

Jacqui Smith: The 223 Learning Support Units (LSUs) in the 24 Local Education Authorities (LEAs) in Phase 1 of the 'Excellence in Cities' (EiC) programme have been established progressively over the current academic year and are now operating. The LSUs in the 22 LEAs in Phase 2 of the EiC programme, which includes the City of Nottingham, will start to be set up from September 2000. Most should be operating from January 2001. We are currently assessing these LEAs' final plans. The LSUs in LEAs outside EiC areas, which includes Nottinghamshire, will be established progressively from September 2000. Most should come into operation between January and March 2001.

The City of Nottingham is planning for all of its 21 secondary schools to have an LSU. Information about Nottinghamshire LEA's plans is not yet available. The Authority was notified on 30 June of its allocation—a total of some £671,000 to cover both capital and recurrent expenditure over the financial years 2000–01 and 2001–02. It is now for the LEA in consultation with its schools to decide how many LSUs to establish within those resources and in which schools.

Learning Support Units are a proven strategy for improving behaviour and reducing exclusions, and they are cost effective. They enable schools to get disruptive pupils out of the classroom quickly while not excluding them. We aim to have over 1,000 established by 2002.

Grammar School Ballots

Mr. Dismore: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment which grammar schools have not provided to Electoral Reform Ballot Services the information required to determine the number of signatures needed for a trigger ballot within the time limit provided by the relevant regulations; and if he will make a statement. [130942]

Ms Estelle Morris: One grammar school has not provided to Electoral Reform Services (ERS), within the time limit, all the information required to determine the number of signatures needed to trigger a ballot. This is the Latymer School in Enfield. The school raised queries before providing a list of feeder schools. ERS have written to the feeder schools and are processing replies.

School Organisation Committees

Mr. Willis: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what plans he has to carry out an assessment of the effectiveness of schools' organisation committees; and if he will take steps to give their role greater clarity. [131246]

Ms Estelle Morris: We shall be reviewing the issues which arise for School Organisation Committees as they increasingly become involved in complex school organisation decisions. This review will help us determine whether further guidance or changes in the procedures governing the conduct of Committees would be helpful.

School Playing Fields

Mr. Chidgey: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment, pursuant to the answer of 22 June 2000, Official Report, columns 269–70W, how many sales of school grass areas smaller than a sports pitch he has (a) approved and (b) rejected in each month since October 1998; what the acreage is of the school grass areas smaller than a sports pitch whose disposal he has (i) approved and (ii) rejected in each month since October 1998; and what has been the total sale value of such areas whose disposal he has (A) approved and (B) rejected in each month since October 1998. [131214]

Jacqui Smith: The Department has approved the sale of 18 school grass areas smaller than a sports pitch of 2000m^2 between October 1998 and June this year. The following table shows the information requested.

Sale of grass areas smaller than a school sports pitch approved under section 77 of the School Standards and Framework Act 1998 since 1 October 1998

	Number of sales approved	Number of sales rejected	Area (m^2)	Total sale value (£)

June	2	—	910	37,500

Notes:

1. In this table a sports pitch is regarded as being an area of open grassed land equal to, or greater than, 2000m^2.
2. All sale proceeds are used to provide new or improved education or sports facilities at maintained schools.

Holy Trinity Church of England Primary School, Sunningdale

Mr. Trend: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment how many children applying for places at the Holy Trinity Church of England primary school in Sunningdale have been refused on the ground that admission would breach the maximum class size of 30; how many of these have siblings in the school; and how many of those referred were new to the area. [131304]

Ms Estelle Morris: I understand from my officials, who have contacted the school, that no applications were refused on the ground that admission would breach the class size limit. Thirteen children were refused admission because there were forty-three applications for only thirty available places. The school's standard number of thirty, which indicates its capacity, pre-dates our class size legislation.

The thirty places were allocated to Sunningdale residents, thirteen of whom had siblings in the school. Of those applicants refused, four were non residents of Sunningdale with siblings in the school. The school gives priority for admission to children resident in the ecclesiastical parish of Sunningdale. A further four applications from the Sunningdale area were received after places had been allocated, and were refused.

Ministerial Code

Mr. Robathan: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment (1) on how many occasions since May 1997 Ministers in his Department have made a declaration of interest to their colleagues under circumstances envisaged in Paragraph 110 of the Ministerial Code; [129146]

(2) if he will list the occasions on which ministers in his Department have sought the advice of the Permanent Secretary under the circumstances envisaged in paragraphs 118, 121 and 123 of the Ministerial Code. [129180]

Mr. Wills: Information relating to internal advice and consultation is not disclosed under Exemption II of the "Code of Practice on Access to Government Information".

PRESIDENT OF THE COUNCIL

Early-day Motions

Mr. Sayeed: To ask the President of the Council what the total cost of early-day motions was in (a) 1999 and (b) 1998. [130028]

Mr. Kirkwood: I have been asked to reply.

The printing and publication costs associated with early-day motions was (a) approximately £597,000 in 1999 and (b) approximately £750,000 in 1998. Other costs associated with early-day motions, such as editorial preparation and control and electronic publication, are not separately identifiable. I am informed that costs arising in Government Departments could be provided only at disproportionate costs.

ENVIRONMENT, TRANSPORT AND THE REGIONS

Incineration

Mr. Pickthall: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what is the Government's assessment of the relationship between rates of death and projected increases in incineration of waste. [126470]

Mr. Meacher [holding answer 20 June 2000]: A methodology for assessing the health impacts of air pollution (particles, sulphur dioxide and ozone) from industrial sources, including waste incinerators, is being considered by the Committee on the Medical Effects of Air Pollution (COMEAP), which advises the Department of Health, and a full statement from COMEAP is expected in due course.

Emissions from incineration are already tightly controlled, and incinerators can now be designed to meet the standards in the forthcoming Waste Incineration Directive, which will further reduce emissions, for example reducing emissions of total dust by 67 per cent. and of dioxins by 99 per cent. An assessment of the health benefits of the tighter standards in the Waste Incineration Directive has been made by my Department for the regulatory and environmental impact assessment of the proposed Directive. The relevant consultants' reports are available in the House Library.

Public Water Supply

Mr. Etherington: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions if he will list the chemical compounds added to the public water supply in England and Wales, indicating which is used for (a) water treatment, (b) ingestion and (c) other purposes; and if he will give details of the most recent safety tests carried out by his Department on each such compound. [130203]

Mr. Mullin: The Water Supply (Water Quality) Regulations 1989 provide for the approval of products, substances and processes used in the provision of public water supplies. The Secretary of State is advised on approvals issues by the Committee on Chemicals and Materials for Use in Public Water Supply. The Secretary of State's List of Approved Products, which includes all chemicals approved for use in public water supplies, is published annually by the Drinking Water Inspectorate. The list is installed on the Inspectorate's website www.dwi.detr.gov.uk

Approved chemicals are classified according to whether they are used for water treatment or other purposes. Where residues of the chemical are likely to be ingested, a condition of approval imposes a maximum dosing concentration as a public health protection measure.

Household Waste Collection

Mr. Green: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what guidelines he has given local authorities about the frequency with which they should collect household waste; and if he will make a statement. [130527]

Mr. Meacher: Under section 45 of the Environmental Protection Act 1990, local authorities have a duty to collect household refuse, but the Act does not stipulate the frequency with which local authorities should collect it. We have not provided any guidance on the frequency with which collections should take place.

A30

Mrs. Browning: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions when the A30 Honiton to Exeter road will be resurfaced. [130540]

Mr. Hill [holding answer 17 July 2000]: Our 10-year Transport Strategy, which will be published shortly, will include further proposals for dealing with road noise. Those roads with the worst noise problem will be dealt with first.

Aggregates

Mr. Gill: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions on what grounds the Quarry Products Association's proposed preferential purchasing scheme for aggregates was considered incompatible with the green purchasing commitments set out in his Department's publication entitled "Building a better quality of life—a strategy for more sustainable construction". [131094]

Ms Beverley Hughes: The proposals in the Quarry Products Association's Q-mark scheme were carefully considered by my right hon. Friend the Chancellor in preparing his Budget Statement. However, the proposed conditions of entry to the Q-mark scheme, which would qualify suppliers for preferential purchasing of aggregate by the public sector were, on the basis of the information provided, felt to be incompatible with UK competition law and EU procurement law. The burden of meeting the Q-mark entry conditions would have borne differentially on different sizes of operators, and in particular could have been harder for the small and medium-sized enterprises in the industry, including those not in QPA membership, to meet.

Home Energy Efficiency Scheme

Mr. Green: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions (1) how many contractors he expects to use under the New Home Energy Efficiency Scheme; [131310]

(2) how many contractors used by the Home Energy Efficiency Scheme in the period up to April 2000 are not eligible for the New Home Energy Efficiency Scheme; [131311]

(3) what guidance he has issued to determine which contractors are eligible to be considered under the New Home Energy Efficiency Scheme; and if he will make a statement. [131312]

Mr. Meacher: Some 100 insulation and heating installation contractors are currently appointed to the New Home Energy Efficiency Scheme, which started in June. The two Scheme Managers for New HEES expect to appoint up to a further 45 contractors. The New HEES scheme, which started in June, provides vulnerable householders with a comprehensive package of insulation, together with efficient central heating for householders over 60 in age, through grants of up to £2,000. The previous scheme provided householders with one insulation measure per household, mainly draughtproofing, with a maximum grant of £315. Funding for the scheme has been increased from about £76 million last year to around £122 million this year and around £153 million next year.

Some 130 insulation contractors were involved in the previous scheme.

The Scheme Managers for New HEES, Eastern Energy and the EAGA Partnership Ltd., were appointed by my Department following UK Public Procurement Rules and Regulations. They are contractually required to appoint installers using the same competitive tendering process and following the same Regulations. All existing installers were eligible to tender for appointment to the new scheme. Installers have been chosen on the basis of their technical abilities to deal with the wider range of measures provided through New HEES, their ability to meet the quality standard, and the price tendered.

Mr. Paul Marsden: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions (1) how many council homes in Shrewsbury and Atcham will benefit from home energy efficiency measures by the end of this year; and if he will make a statement; [131157]

(2) how many households will be helped out of fuel poverty by 2002 through energy-efficiency schemes in Shrewsbury and Atcham. [131137]

Mr. Meacher: The Government have introduced a wide range of programmes to tackle poor energy efficiency, one of the main causes of fuel poverty. These are as follows.

From 1 June, the Home Energy Efficiency Scheme provides grants of up to £2,000 for comprehensive packages of insulation and heating improvements. The scheme is aimed at those households which are most vulnerable to cold-related ill health: older people and families on low incomes, and the disabled and chronically sick. HEES has a budget of £275 million for the first two years, which is expected to help some 460,000 households. The scheme is focused on the private sector, where nearly 70 per cent. of the fuel poor in England are found. However, limited funds will still be available for social housing in the first two years.

We have released substantial additional funds to help improve our housing stock; in total some £5 billion is being made available over the lifetime of this Parliament for investment in housing. Most of the additional resources are going to local authorities and will be spent according to the needs and priorities identified in their housing strategy. We estimate that around one third of the money is likely to lead directly or indirectly to improvements in energy efficiency.

Government-funded programmes operated by the Energy Saving Trust improve the energy efficiency of both fuel poor households and others. In addition, some of the Government funded regeneration schemes will help to improve home energy efficiency in specific areas.

To support the installation of energy efficiency measures, from 1 July 1998 the Government have reduced VAT from 17.5 per cent. to 5 per cent. for the installation of energy efficiency materials through Government-funded grant schemes such as HEES. The Spring 2000 budget extended the reduced rate of VAT of 5 per cent. to include the installation of energy saving material in "all" homes and the installation of heating measures through Government funded grant schemes.

The Government are also introducing provisions to enable lessors to claim capital allowances on their investment in boilers, radiators and controls installed in residential properties under the Affordable Warmth Programme. The Programme will operate from 2000 to 2007, with the aim of helping up to 1 million low income households, primarily in the social sector, benefit from improved energy efficiency.

In addition to Government energy efficiency programmes, since 1994, public electricity suppliers have, under the Energy Efficiency Standards of Performance, been required to encourage and assist customers with energy efficiency measures. The new Director General of the Office of Gas and Electricity Markets has, from this year extended these to also include public gas suppliers and the overall size of the programme has been doubled to £50 million a year. 65 per cent. of this expenditure will be allocated to low income households.

Under the Home Energy Conservation Act (HECA) 1995, local authorities with housing responsibilities were required to prepare, publish and submit to the Secretary of State an energy conservation report identifying energy conservation measures considered to be practicable, cost-effective and likely to result in a significant improvement in the energy efficiency of all residential accommodation in their area.

In England, authorities are now reporting annually on the progress being made in implementing the measures identified. Furthermore, we have now asked local authorities to report on their policies and achievements specifically in combating fuel poverty, at the same time as they submit their HECA progress reports. The next HECA progress report from local authorities is due by 31 July 2000.

The energy conservation report prepared by Shrewsbury and Atcham Borough Council, and their most recent progress report, should be available from the Council.

CULTURE, MEDIA AND SPORT

Opinion Research

Mr. Don Foster: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport, pursuant to his answer of 25 May 2000, Official Report, column 581W, if he will place copies of all unpublished results of market and opinion research relating to the work of the Millennium Commission and the operation of the Dome in the Library. [124905]

Janet Anderson [holding answer 8 June 2000]: The main focus of the Millennium Commission is the distribution of grants through its funding programmes. A small amount of market research has been carried out in relation to the way in which the Millennium Commission is viewed rather than the work that it has funded. The results have only internal relevance and are used by the Commission's Communications Department to assess the impact of their communications strategy. For this reason it would not be appropriate to publish or release this research. However, the Commission did undertake opinion research which looked at how MPs regard the work of the Commission. A summary of the results of this work will be placed in the Library.

The majority of market research relating to those projects funded by the Millennium Commission is undertaken by the projects themselves. As part of the application process and subsequent development and operation of projects, market research is often carried out. However, this research is the property of the projects and is provided to the Commission on a confidential basis.

Osborne Convalescent Home

Mr. Peter Ainsworth: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what legislative process is required to (a) repeal the Osborne Estates Act 1902 and (b) close the Osborne convalescent home. [127308]

Mr. Chris Smith [holding answer 22 June 2000]: An Act of Parliament is required to repeal the Osborne Estate Act 1902. Closure of the King Edward VII Convalescent Home does not require legislation. My responsibility under the 1902 Act is to devote part of Osborne house to the benefit of members of the Armed Forces and Civil Service, but the running of a convalescent home is not a specific requirement.

Dome (Loans)

Mr. Peter Ainsworth: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what recent discussions he has had with interested parties concerning the loaning of public money to the Dome; and if he will make a statement. [129280]

Janet Anderson [holding answer 6 July 2000]: My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State has had no discussions with interested parties concerning the loaning of public money to the Dome.

New Millennium Experience Company

Mr. Baker: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport for what reason the signed-off accounts of the NMEC relating to the period ended 31 December 1999 have not been placed in the Library. [130395]

Janet Anderson [holding answer 13 July 2000]: The New Millennium Experience Company (NMEC) will publish its Annual Report and Financial Statement before the start of the Parliamentary recess as planned. Copies of the Report will be placed in the Libraries of the House.

Annual Reports

Mr. Rendel: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what the cost of producing the annual report of (a) the Arts Council of England and (b) the National Lottery was in each of the two most recent years in which they were published. [131121]

Kate Hoey [holding answer 18 July 2000]: I have asked the Arts Council of England to provide the separate costs of producing their grant-in-aid and National Lottery reports for 1998 and 1999. When this information is available, I will write to the hon. Member and place a copy in the Library of the House.

World Cup 2006

Mr. Peter Ainsworth: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what assessment he has made of the value for money obtained by the England bid to host the 2006 World Cup. [130844]

Mr. Chris Smith [holding answer 17 July 2000]: The Football Association's funding agreement with Sport England set out in detail how Lottery money could be used to support the 2006 World Cup bid—primarily the costs of staff, administration, events, exhibitions and technical studies. Sport England is fully satisfied with its monitoring arrangements for ensuring that the Lottery funding allocated to supporting the bid has been used with the maximum of economy.

The uses to which the bid's other sources of funding have been put are entirely matters for the FA, the Premier League and the bid's commercial sponsors.

World War II Commemoration

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport if he will implement the recommendation of Sir John Mortimer's Advisory Group that there should be in an open space a statue commemorating Women in World War II; and if he will make a statement. [130814]

Mr. Alan Howarth: Sir John Mortimer's advisory group considered that, rather than being placed on the vacant plinth in Trafalgar Square, the proposed memorial to Women in World War II should be located in a park or an open space where it could be more easily enjoyed. My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State agrees with the Mortimer group's recommendations. Finding an appropriate location for the memorial is a matter for the Women in World War II campaign charity. My Department is, however, currently exploring the possibility of a site in Whitehall which might be used for the proposed memorial.

Yorkshire and Humberside Regional Cultural Consortium

Mr. Denzil Davies: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what has been the total cost to public funds from its inception to the most recent date for which figures are available of administering the Yorkshire and Humberside Regional Cultural Consortium. [131243]

Janet Anderson: At 11 July 2000, the Regional Cultural Consortium for Yorkshire and the Humber had spent £15,000 from the budget allocated to it by my Department. Within that total, £12,000 has been spent on work in connection with the preparation of a regional cultural strategy, including the publication of a consultation paper "Towards a Cultural Strategy for the Yorkshire Region", while £3,000 has been spent on what might be deemed administration, for example organising and facilitating meetings and the travel and subsistence costs of Consortium members. It is not possible to cost staff time associated with the work of the Consortium for either the one staff member from my Department in the region, or for other help received from staff of the regional cultural agencies, regional partners and local authorities.

Note:

Figures have been rounded to the nearest £1,000.

ITV Nightly News

Mr. Kaufman: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport if he will call for a report from the Independent Television Commission stating the deadline for compliance by ITV with the ITC's requirement to bring forward the timing of the nightly news. [130857]

Janet Anderson: I understand that the Independent Television Commission will consider the matter at their meeting on 20 July.

Hotel and Restaurant Regulation

Mr. Matthew Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what assessment he has made of the Better Regulation Task Force report entitled "Tackling the Impact of Increasing Regulation—A Case Study of Hotels and Restaurants"; and if he will make a statement. [130539]

Janet Anderson [holding answer 17 July 2000]: My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State and I welcome the Better Regulation Task Force's report. It recognises the key importance of hotels and restaurants to the national economy, and the industry's concern about the possible impact of regulation on its successful development. This is something we are already addressing by improving the machinery for considering the effects of policies on hotels and restaurants—one of the outcomes of the first Tourism Summit of Ministers held earlier this year. My Department, as lead sponsor for the tourism industry, will be co-ordinating the Government's formal response to the report over the next three months. The response will be reported to the House.

PRIME MINISTER

Electronic Test Facility (Capenhurst)

Mr. Matthew Taylor: To ask the Prime Minister what representations he has received from the Irish Government with regard to the Ministry of Defence's Electronic Test Facility formerly sited at the British Nuclear Fuels Ltd. site at Capenhurst, Cheshire, since 26 July 1999; when they were received; and from which Irish Government Departments. [130494]

The Prime Minister: The Irish Foreign Minister spoke to my right hon. Friend the Foreign Secretary on 24 January about the allegations raised last year in a Channel 4 television programme about the Ministry of Defence's former Electronic Test Facility at Capenhurst.

I understand that the Irish Ambassador also raised these allegations at meetings with FCO officials on 12 October 1999 and 10 January 2000.

Kosovo

Mr. Dalyell: To ask the Prime Minister what assessment he has made of how long the presence of (a) the British Army and (b) KFOR will be required in Kosovo. [131063]

The Prime Minister: UNSCR 1244 did not set a fixed end-point for the deployment of the international security presence in Kosovo. The Government are doing all they can to encourage progress in Kosovo, but it is not possible at this stage to say when KFOR, including the British contribution to it, will be able to leave.

Engagements

Sir Peter Tapsell: To ask the Prime Minister if he will list his official engagements for Wednesday 19 July. [130795]

The Prime Minister: This morning I had meetings with ministerial colleagues and others. In addition to my duties in the House, I will have further such meetings later today.

LORD CHANCELLOR'S DEPARTMENT

Public Records

Mr. John M. Taylor: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department, pursuant to his answer of 16 May 2000, Official Report, column 114W, about public records, if he will list the correspondence between Mr. Denis McCready and the Chairman or Secretary of the Advisory Council on Public Records during the period from 18 June 1997 to March 2000; and if he will publish the correspondence dated 14 and 17 June 1997. [130929]

Mr. Lock: There was no direct correspondence between Mr. Denis McCready and the Chairman or Secretary of the Advisory Council on Public Records during the period from 18 June 1997 to 31 March 2000. The correspondence dated 14 and 17 June was summarised in the answer given by my predecessor on 8 July 1999, Official Report, column 622W. It would not be appropriate to publish the correspondence in full as the letters were between the Advisory Council and a private citizen.

Mr. John M. Taylor: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department what action the Lord Chancellor will need to take in the next decade, under the provisions of the Public Records Act 1958, to release the Registrar General from his statutory duty to transfer the 1921 to 1971 census returns to the Public Record Office; and in which years that action will need to be taken. [130930]

Mr. Lock: Census returns are subject to 100 year closure, in line with section 1(3) of the Census Confidentiality Act 1991 and with the Government policy set out in the White Paper "Open Government" (Cm 2290, 1993). This is on the grounds that they consist of documents supplied in confidence, the disclosure of which would constitute a breach of good faith.

At present the census returns for 1921 to 1961 are retained by the Office for National Statistics under section 3(4) of the Public Records Act 1958. The following Lord Chancellor's Instruments (LCI) are current:

LCI (Retention of Public Records) No 23, 1992: retention of 1961 returns for 10 years (which gives authority for retention until 2003)

LCI (Retention of Public Records) No 38, 1996: retention of 1921 and 1951 returns for 10 years (which gives authority for retention until 2007).

The 1971 returns are not yet 30 years old and are therefore not due for transfer to the Public Record Office. In the next decade I would expect the Office for National Statistics to apply for further retention of these records under the Public Records Act 1958.

The Registrar General remains subject to the Public Records Act 1958 and under that legislation will continue to transfer census returns to the Public Record Office at the appropriate time.

Departmental Initiatives

Dr. Lynne Jones: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department if he will list each departmental initiative since May 1997 requiring bids for funding together with the total resources available, the number of successful bids and the proportion this represents of total bids received; and what data he collects on the average expenditure of organisations bidding for funding through each initiative. [131090]

Mr. Lock: I refer my hon. Friend to the answer given to her by my right hon. Friend the Chief Secretary to the Treasury on 17 July 2000, Official Report, column 93W, and to the Statement on the Spending Review made by my right hon. Friend the Chancellor of the Exchequer on 18 July 2000, Official Report, columns 219–44.

HEALTH

Residential Homes

Mr. Hilary Benn: To ask the Secretary of State for Health further to his written answer of 19 April 2000, Official Report, column 512W, when he expects to make an announcement on research into the impact on life expectancy of the closure of residential homes for the elderly. [130223]

Mr. Hutton: We are aware that when residential homes close, elderly residents may be affected. However, when such a decision is made, it is essential that there should be proper arrangements for the safe and satisfactory transfer of all residents to other suitable homes in a way which creates the minimum possible discomfort to all concerned.

We take research into life expectancy seriously. This is an issue that the Office for National Statistics tracks carefully and we are considering investing in a longitudinal study to give us information on life expectancy. However, we have concluded that research into life expectancy that focuses narrowly on the closure of residential homes cannot be a priority for public funding. It would be unlikely to have an impact on the life of elderly people or decisions about the closure of homes.

Parkinson's Disease

Jane Griffiths: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what assessment he has made of the efficacy of therapeutic cloning in the treatment of Parkinson's disease. [128877]

Yvette Cooper: The application of therapeutic cloning to human healthcare was considered by the Chief Medical Officer's Expert Group on Therapeutic Cloning. The group's report is currently being considered by Ministers.

Emergency Contraception

Ms Oona King: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will examine the feasibility of making the morning-after pill available on a non-prescription basis; and what recent representations he has received on making the morning-after pill available through specific certified outlets without prescription. [128764]

Yvette Cooper: The Medicines Control Agency is presently consulting on an application to reclassify levonorgestrel 0.75 milligramme for emergency contraception from prescription only to pharmacy availability for women aged 16 years and over. The consultation period ended on 29 June 2000. The responses will then be considered by the Medicines Commission and their recommendations presented to Ministers for a decision. If we decide to go ahead, an Order would be laid before the House later in the year.

Whatever is decided, emergency hormonal contraception, the morning after pill, will continue to be available, free of charge under existing National Health Service arrangements, from general practitioners, family planning clinics and some hospital accident and emergency departments.

Shona McIsaac: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) if he will make a statement on the availability of emergency contraception; [129944]

(2) what plans he has to make emergency contraception available over the counter at pharmacists. [129943]

Yvette Cooper: Emergency hormonal contraception is currently available on prescription through general practitioners, family planning clinics, youth services, walk in centres, and some accident and emergency departments. The Sexual Health/HIV Strategy is looking at improving access to National Health Service contraception services including emergency contraception products.

The Medicines Control Agency is presently consulting on an application to reclassify levonorgestrel 0.75 milligramme for emergency contraception from prescription only to pharmacy availability for women aged 16 years and over. The consultation period ended on 29 June 2000. The responses are to be considered by the Medicines Commission and their recommendations presented to Ministers for a decision. If it were decided to proceed, an Order would be laid before the House later in the year.

Shona McIsaac: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) what assessment he has made of the recent trials of over-the-counter prescribing of emergency contraception; [129942]

(2) what assessment he has made on the impact on levels of abortion in the trial areas for emergency contraception; and if he will make a statement. [129941]

Yvette Cooper: There are currently two pilot schemes run by health action zones (HAZs) in Manchester, Salford and Trafford and Lambeth, Southwark and Lewisham where emergency contraception is supplied by pharmacists, under a patient group direction. Both pilots form part of the HAZs' overall strategy to reduce the rate of unwanted pregnancies locally. Both pilots are to be fully evaluated and the results will be published.

Abortion data by health authority are published annually and provisional data for 2000 will not be available until May 2001. It is therefore too early to make any assessment on the impact on levels of abortion in the pilot areas. Fluctuations in the abortion rate may be subject to a number of different factors and it is therefore difficult to attribute any changes to one intervention or event. There have been no studies which have been able to predict the effect the availability of emergency contraception through pharmacies may have on unwanted pregnancy rates.

Mr. Gummer: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) for what reasons his Department encourages increased use of the morning-after pill as part of its National Sexual Health Strategy; and if he will make a statement; [130693]

(2) for what reasons his Department promotes the morning-after pill as a way to reduce the rate of teenage pregnancies; and if he will make a statement. [130692]

Yvette Cooper: Emergency contraception is a safe and effective method of preventing pregnancy when a woman has had unprotected sex or when she knows something has gone wrong with her usual method. We therefore want to ensure the best possible access to emergency contraception for those who need it. The sexual health/HIV strategy is looking at improving access to the full range of National Health Service contraception services, including emergency contraception products. One of the aims of the strategy is to reduce the number of unintended pregnancies in all age groups, and reducing the rate of teenage pregnancy is one of my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State's key priorities.

Emergency contraception should not be seen as a replacement for regular contraception, as it is not as effective as regular hormonal contraception such as the pill and therefore should be used only as an occasional measure.

Mr. Gummer: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) what measures are in place to ensure that a woman's medical history is known before she is issued with the morning-after pill; and if he will make a statement; [130683]

(2) what follow-up care is available to women prescribed the morning-after pill; and if he will make a statement. [130684]

Yvette Cooper: The Faculty of Family Planning and Reproductive Health Care at the Royal College of Obstetricians and Gynaecologists have researched the available evidence and published updated Recommendations for Clinical Practice regarding emergency contraception in April of this year[1].

The Faculty recommendations advise that established pregnancy is the sole contraindication for use of hormonal emergency contraception (HEC). The Faculty considers that for all other women the benefits of HEC, particularly the progestogen-only method, generally outweigh the risks.

Regarding follow up action, the recommendations suggest that future contraception should be discussed sympathetically and, preferably arranged. Advice should be given as to when the woman can expect her next period and an appointment offered and/or arrangements made to discuss any problems including on-going contraception information/supply.

Mr. Gummer: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many prescriptions of the morning after pill there were in the last 10 years for which figures are available; and if he will provide a breakdown by age. [130727]

Yvette Cooper: The information requested is in the tables.

Table 1 shows the number of prescriptions dispensed in the community in England. A breakdown by age of the patient receiving these prescriptions is not available. Table 2 shows the number of prescriptions for hormonal emergency contraceptives prescribed at National Health Service family planning clinics in England from 1989 to 1998. Table 3 shows the number of prescriptions for hormonal emergency contraceptives prescribed at NHS family planning clinics in 1998–99, by age.

Information about NHS Family Planning Clinic activity is derived from the Department of Health annual return KT31 and is published each year. The latest information is contained in the Statistical Bulletin "NHS Contraceptive Services, England: 1998–99". A copy of the bulletin is in the Library and can also be found on the Department of Health website www.gov.uk/public/sb9930.htm.

Mr. Gummer: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what discussions he has held with the All-Party Pharmacy Group on the morning-after pill; and if he will make a statement. [130688]

Yvette Cooper: There have been no discussions between Health Ministers and the All-Party Pharmacy Group on the issue of emergency contraception. However there has been correspondence between my hon. Friend the Member for Dartford (Dr. Stoate), chair of the group, and myself following the group's report on extending access to emergency contraception through community pharmacies.

Mr. Gummer: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he defines the morning-after pill as an abortifacient; and if he will make a statement. [130691]

Yvette Cooper: The accepted legal and medical view is that emergency contraception is not a method of abortion. Emergency contraception pills work before implantation and so before a pregnancy has been established. Emergency contraceptive pills will not cause an abortion if taken after implantation.

My right hon. Friend the Attorney-General, in answering a parliamentary question in 1983, stated that medical practitioners would not be prosecuted for illegal abortion if they sought to prevent implantation by the use of the 'morning-after pill' or an inter-uterine device.

Mr. Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what advice he has issued to general practitioners on prescribing of the morning-after pill; and if he will make a statement. [131381]

Yvette Cooper [holding answer 18 July 2000]: None. Prescribing of emergency contraception is a matter for the clinical judgment of the practitioner concerned. The Faculty of Family Planning and Reproductive Health Care at the Royal College of Obstetricians and Gynaecologists recently researched the available evidence and published updated recommendations for clinical practice for emergency contraception in April this year.

Smoking Policy

Mr. Sarwar: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will make a statement on the role of Zyban in the development of the Government's policy on smoking. [128718]

Yvette Cooper: Zyban is now available on National Health Service prescription. Zyban is a non-nicotine based treatment which has been shown to be effective in helping smokers to quit in combination with motivational support. This drug is an entirely new approach to treating nicotine dependence and NHS availability will give general practitioners an effective way to help smokers.

Abortion

Mr. Amess: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what requirements abortion clinics must meet to be licensed by his Department. [129412]

Yvette Cooper: Any independent sector place wishing to carry out termination of pregnancy must first of all be registered with the local health authority under the Registered Homes Act 1984. All units are inspected and must undertake to comply with the Department's Required Standard Operating Principles (RSOP), which cover a variety of topics. The RSOPs can be found in the "Procedures For The Approval Of Independent Sector Places For The Termination Of Pregnancy". Copies are available in the Library.

Approved clinics are subject to regular unannounced inspections. Failure to comply with the RSOPs, or to maintain the standards required by my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State may lead to withdrawal of approval.

Mr. Amess: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will list the private sector clinics and hospitals providing abortions, indicating (a) the number of approved beds they contain and (b) whether they are approved for (i) surgical day care abortions with or without general anaesthetic and (ii) late abortions, indicating the name of the proprietor in each case. [129413]

Yvette Cooper: The number of approved beds is controlled by local health authorities under the Registered Homes Act 1984 and this information is not collated centrally. The independent sector places approved to carry out termination of pregnancy are shown in the table. All of them are approved to undertake surgical day care abortions, subject to their conditions of registration under the above Act. Clinics approved to perform abortions from 20 weeks up to 24 weeks gestation are identified in the table. No independent sector place is approved to carry out termination of pregnancy after 24 weeks gestation.

Bone Marrow Donors

Fiona Mactaggart: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what steps have been taken to increase the proportion of bone marrow donors of Asian ethnic origin. [129268]

Mr. Denham: The National Blood Service recruits bone marrow donors from existing blood donors and ran a campaign last year to recruit more Asian blood donors. The NBS do not collect data on the ethnic origin of donors, but estimate that 2 per cent. of donors on the British Bone Marrow Donor Registry (which covers England, Scotland and Northern Ireland) are of ethnic origin compared with the United Kingdom ethnic minority population of roughly 7 per cent. Cord blood donation is an alternative to bone marrow donation in the treatment of some illnesses, and information from the NBS's cord blood donation programme indicates that over 40 per cent. of donations are from ethnic minority groups. I have asked the National Blood Service to explore what further steps can be taken to recruit more blood and bone marrow donors from the Asian community.

Community Nurses

Dr. Cable: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what is the percentage change in the real value, adjusted for costs, of the mileage allowance awarded to community nurses since 1994; and what plans he has to grade the allowance. [129462]

Mr. Denham: Mileage allowances for staff on national contracts is determined by an agreement of the General Whitley Council. Rates have been set under an agreed formula linked to the Automobile Association schedule of motoring costs which has been reviewed annually by the Council. No increases have been made to these allowances since 1993.

Increases in mileage allowances which take account of higher fuel costs were offered to Staff Side representatives on 17 July. Trade unions are now considering this offer.

Hospital Waiting Times

Mr. Steen: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what the average waiting times are for NHS (a) cancer treatments, (b) cardiology and (c) transplant therapy in (i) the UK, (ii) England and (iii) Devon. [129662]

Mr. Denham [holding answer 7 July 2000]: The information given relates to England only. Waiting time data for Scotland, Wales and Northern Ireland are a matter for the individual Assemblies.

Coronary Deaths

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for Health by how much deaths from heart disease and strokes have been reduced since May 1997; if Government targets for reducing the number of such deaths are being met in these areas; and if he will make a statement. [130384]

Yvette Cooper: Tackling heart disease and stroke is a top Government priority. Our target for reducing deaths in this area was set out in the White Paper "Saving Lives: Our Healthier Nation" published in July 1999. It is to reduce the death rate from heart disease, stroke and related conditions in those aged under 75 years by at least two fifths (40 per cent.) by the year 2010, from a three-year average baseline at 1995/96/97.

The target was set for the year 2010 because it will take time for interventions in this area to translate into outcomes in terms of mortality rates. Latest available data still pre-date the start of the "Our Healthier Nation" strategy, but show that the three-year average age standardised death rate from circulatory diseases in people aged under 75 fell from 139.6 per 100,000 population in 1995/96/97 to 133.8 per 100,000 population in 1996/97/98—a 4 per cent. fall.

The downward trend in death rates and the Government's "Saving Lives: Our Healthier Nation" strategy should be reinforced by the National Service Framework on Coronary Heart Disease. The Framework, which we published in March this year, sets out our plans for the development of services for the prevention and treatment of coronary heart disease over the next ten years. It will be a key strand in our strategy to reduce both mortality and morbidity from heart disease.

Cystic Fibrosis

Mr. Sheerman: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what advice his Department gives to doctors on the process of screening for cystic fibrosis. [130389]

Mr. Denham: The United Kingdom National Screening Committee (NSC) advises the Government on all aspects of screening policy. The NSC does not currently recommend antenatal screening for cystic fibrosis as there are too many gene mutations associated with early cystic fibrosis identification and too little information on their clinical severity to enable counsellors to facilitate informed choice. The UK National Screening Committee will review this approach in the light of any new evidence. As yet, there is insufficient evidence of benefit to recommend national neonatal screening. The NSC is considering how to make progress on this issue.

Prostate Cancer

Mr. Sheerman: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how much was spent on health campaigns aimed at promoting greater awareness of prostate cancer in each of the past 10 years. [130387]

Yvette Cooper: It is not possible to provide information in the form requested. A number of campaigns have covered both prostate cancer awareness and other issues and the sums spent on prostate cancer cannot be disaggregated from the total.

The Department provides information for the public, in leaflets and through health education campaigns. These encourage people to report to their general practitioner or other health professional any persistent or unusual symptoms which may indicate cancer or other disease.

We encourage early detection of prostate cancer and have announced that, by December 2000, all urgent general practitioner referrals of suspected cases should be seen by a consultant within two weeks of referral.

Little research has been carried out worldwide into prevention of prostate cancer and detection. In June, my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State announced an extra £1 million to fund two new research projects. The first of these will be examining the acceptability of the treatment and diagnosis options to men who are randomly offered testing. The second project is looking at innovative new detection and treatment techniques.

We have also invested £200,000 from the Public Health Development Fund to develop, pilot and evaluate an education programme on prostate cancer especially the risks associated with screening and testing. This money will also go towards developing other materials aimed at changing attitudes among men to facilitate early detection and prevention of cancer.

We are in the early stages of developing a prostate cancer action plan which we will consult on. The plan will set out the current position on research, diagnosis and treatment of prostate cancer and will propose recommendations for future action.

Respiratory Diseases

Mr. Blizzard: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what plans he has to produce a national service framework for lung and respiratory diseases. [130729]

Mr. Denham: We are taking forward the National Service Framework (NSF) programme with the development of one new NSF per year. We will consider the proposed service area or care group for the next NSF against the criteria set out in "A First Class Service", as well as the priorities and targets identified in the National Plan.

Mr. Blizzard: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will exempt patients suffering from respiratory diseases from charges for on-going prescriptions for inhalers, steroids and water tablets. [130730]

Ms Stuart: We reviewed the prescription charging arrangements as part of the Comprehensive Spending Review and concluded that the present arrangements should remain for the rest of this Parliament.

HIV

Mr. Borrow: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will estimate the proportion of the total number of HIV transmissions which occurred in the UK through sex between men in the last 12 months. [130474]

Yvette Cooper: Figures are not yet available for the whole of the last 12 months. 42 per cent. of HIV infections diagnosed in the United Kingdom in 1999 and reported to the end of March 2000 were probably acquired through sex between men. When diagnoses of infections probably acquired abroad are excluded, the estimated proportion of infections occurring in the UK through sex between men rises to approximately 70 per cent.

Mr. Borrow: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what proportion of HIV prevention budgets (a) spent by his Department and (b) spent through health authorities are targeted at men who have sex with men. [130473]

Yvette Cooper: In 1999–2000, of the £3 million allocated to national HIV health promotion and prevention, £1.1 million was spent on work targeting men who have sex with men. Health authorities received £53.4 million for local HIV prevention work, of which they were required to spend at least 50 per cent. on groups at increased risk of HIV, including men who have sex with men.

Pharmacies

Mr. Borrow: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what recent representations his Department has received on the regulations governing the provision of pharmacies; and if he will make a statement. [130641]

Ms Stuart: The Department regularly receives representations and suggestions from individuals and organisations about the regulations which govern the provision of National Health Service pharmaceutical services.

Asthma

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what assessment he has made of the impact of the Government's target of reducing admissions to hospitals of people suffering from asthma on the health of asthma sufferers; and if he will make a statement. [130480]

Mr. Denham: The total number of hospital admissions where asthma was the cause has declined over the last seven years. In 1993–94 a total of 92,820 episodes were recorded for asthma, compared with 69,824 admissions in 1998–99. This reduction has taken place during a period when the total number of emergency admissions for other conditions has continued to increase.

Health Care (Suffolk)

Mr. Ruffley: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what estimate he has made of the surplus or deficit in the (a) Suffolk health authority and (b) West Suffolk NHS Trust for health care in each of the financial years (i) 1997–98, (ii) 1998–99 and (iii) 1999–2000. [130742]

Mr. Denham: The surplus and deficit positions for Suffolk health authority and West Suffolk Hospitals National Health Service Trust are shown in the table.

1997–98	178,000 (deficit)	32,000 (deficit)

Dr. Cable: To ask the Secretary of State for Health which district health authorities prescribe clozapine for schizophrenia; and how many schizophrenics receive the drug, broken down by health authority, in the United Kingdom. [130944]

The number of schizophrenic patients receiving clozapine is not available.

Newcastle Hospitals Trust

Mr. Cousins: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he has agreed to the release of conventionally financed capital expenditure to prepare the way for the Newcastle Hospitals Trust Private Finance Initiative scheme. [130829]

Mr. Denham [holding answer 17 July 2000]: The consultation draft of a business case relating to the enabling works was received by the National Health Service Executive on 3 July 2000 and is now under assessment alongside the business cases for the later private finance initiative schemes. The National Health Service Executive needs to undertake a full and proper review of the documents in accordance with established procedure to ensure that appropriate approval standards are met. I cannot of course pre-determine the outcome of that review.

The National Health Service Executive has consistently reported its strong support for this scheme, most notably during the approval of the original strategic outline case during 1998, and when the strategic outline case needed approval reconfirmed in 1999 following the increase in the capital cost of the scheme. The National Health Service Executive is well aware of the Newcastle upon Tyne Hospitals National Health Service Trust's recommendation publicly to fund elements of this scheme, and its justification for that approach. However, final confirmation of public funding will be determined following the assessment of the business cases, and taking into consideration the relative priority of all bids upon the capital programme.

The National Health Service Executive is in dialogue with the trust and the Newcastle and North Tyneside health authority on this scheme, and a great deal of work is being undertaken to bring this phase of the process to a conclusion as soon as possible.

Allergies

Dr. Kumar: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) what the average waiting time was for children requiring tests to determine whether they suffer from nut allergies in the last 12 months; and if he will make a statement; [130999]

(2) how many of those children tested for allergies, expressed in each case as a figure and a percentage of total tested, were referred by (a) GPs, (b) hospitals and (c) parents; and if he will make a statement; [130997]

(3) how many children are waiting to be tested to determine whether they suffer from nut allergies; and if he will make a statement. [131000]

Yvette Cooper [holding answer 17 July 2000]: Patients who are suspected of having a nut allergy are normally referred to a clinical immunology and allergy clinic. The outpatient waiting times data do not differentiate between reasons for referral nor between adults and children. During the year 1999–2000 there were 4,304 referrals from general practitioners and 965 from other sources. At the time of their first outpatient attendance 1,923 patients had waited less than 13 weeks; 1,069 patients waited between 13 and 25 weeks; and 508 patients waited more than 26 weeks.

Dr. Kumar: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) how many children were diagnosed with (a) asthma, (b) nut allergies and (c) other allergies in (i) the UK, (ii) Teesside Region and (iii) the constituency of Middlesbrough, South and Cleveland, East in each year from 1990 to 2000; and if he will make a statement; [131008]

(2) how many children were tested for allergies in (a) the UK, (b) Teesside Region and (c) the constituency of Middlesbrough, South and Cleveland, East in each year between 1990 to 2000; and if he will make a statement. [130998]

Yvette Cooper [holding answer 17 July 2000]: Data are not collected centrally to show the number of people who are tested and diagnosed with an allergy. Patients with suspected allergies are often referred to clinical immunology and allergy outpatient clinics where they are tested for allergy. The figures indicate the number of patients attending a clinic in England for the first time.

These figures do not show all allergy testing as some takes place in other specialities or in primary care. Age groups are not specified. Clinical Immunology and Allergy was only recognised as a medical speciality in June last year. Consequently, detailed statistical information for allergy is only now being collated and is not yet available.Key health statistics for general practice database published in 1996, demonstrated the incidence of diagnosed asthma in children aged 0–15 years per 10,000 population.

Coronary Bypasses

Mr. Swayne: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many coronary bypass graft operations have been carried out on the National Health Service in each of the last five years. [130505]

Yvette Cooper [holding answer 17 July 2000]: The numbers of coronary artery bypass graft operations carried out in National Health Service trusts in England for the past five years for which figures are available are as follows.

Year	Number
1995–96	21,599
1996–97	21,462
1998–99	22,494

Last October, we announced an investment of £50 million, which will enable a further 3,000 bypass operations to be carried out by April 2002. In March this year we also published the National Service Framework for coronary heart disease, a 10-year plan for improving the prevention, treatment and diagnosis of heart disease.

Hip Replacements

Mr. Swayne: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many total hip replacements have been carried out on the National Health Service in each of the last five years; and how many of these were primary hip replacements. [130506]

Mr. Denham [holding answer 17 July 2000]: The information requested is in the table.

Total hip replacement operations—finished consultant episodes (FCE)[1] by selected operation in NHS hospitals, England, 1994–95 to 1998–99

[1] An FCE is defined as a period of patient care under one consultant in one health care provider. The figures therefore represent the number of operations done rather than numbers treated.

Helen Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will list, for each year since 1991, those health authorities that have underwritten liabilities stemming from contracts entered into by another party in receipt of a section 64 grant, indicating in each case the total cost to the NHS. [130511]

Family Planning

Mr. Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what discussions he has had with the Family Planning Association regarding the contents of its information booklet on abortion; and if he will make a statement. [131354]

Yvette Cooper [holding answer 18 July 2000]: The FPA (formerly the Family Planning Association) did not discuss with the Department the contents of their booklet "Abortion—Just so you know". The FPA invited the Department's comments on the final draft to ensure that legal and medical information was accurate.

The booklet should help young people to have a better understanding of abortion. However, any young woman facing an unwanted pregnancy should seek advice from her general practitioner or family planning clinic, in order to explore all options available to her.

Severalls Hospital

Mr. Bob Russell: To ask the Secretary of State for Health when he expects the sale of the former Severalls Hospital at Colchester to be completed. [131115]

Mr. Denham: The Severalls Hospital site is not currently being marketed. My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State is currently seeking planning consent for the site, which is dependent on adjoining land and road access to be discussed with Colchester borough council. Subject to this, it is anticipated that the Severalls Hospital site will be put on the market between autumn 2001 and spring 2002.

Chronic Fatigue Syndrome

Mr. Paul Marsden: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will review the ALAMA guidelines for Occupational Medicine of 1996 regarding ill-health retirement for people suffering from chronic fatigue syndrome; and if he will make a statement. [124472]

Yvette Cooper: My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Health does not have the power to review the "Ill Health Retirement Guidelines for Occupational Physicians". The guidelines were produced by a working party of the Association of Local Authority Medical Advisers (ALAMA) to help doctors arrive at equitable decisions when assessing applications for ill health retirement.

Diabetes

Mr. Singh: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what plans he has for increasing diabetes risk awareness among the Asian and African-Caribbean population. [125956]

Yvette Cooper: We recognise the importance of raising awareness about the risk factors and symptoms of diabetes among both the public and health care professionals, including the Asian and African-Caribbean populations. We announced last year the development of a National Service Framework (NSF) for diabetes in England, to be published in 2001. The aims of the diabetes NSF are to improve health outcomes for people with diabetes by raising the quality of services and reducing variations between them. The scope of the NSF is broad and covers prevention, identification and management of diabetes and its complications, including rehabilitation and continuing care. The diabetes NSF will pay particular heed to the needs of those who are disproportionately affected by diabetes, such as people from minority ethnic groups.

Cancer Treatment Centres

Mr. Cox: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will list the cancer treatment centres available in NHS hospitals in the Greater London area. [127157]

Yvette Cooper: The Calman/Hine Report, "A Policy Framework for Commissioning Cancer Services", recommended that networks of care should be developed encompassing primary care, cancer units and cancer centres. The Report provided a broad service model framework for the development of cancer units and cancer centres, but did not set national standards. The first stage of Calman/Hine has reflected early implementation of the Calman/Hine recommendations, reflected the different starting points across the county, and allowed an evaluation of services by health authorities and regional offices, based on general Calman/Hine principles, to fit local needs.

The London Regional Office has identified five cancer networks in London and the Cancer centres in each network as follows:

South East London

Joint Cancer Centre: Guy's and St. Thomas' Hospital NHS Trust

King's Healthcare NHS Trust (known as GKT)

South West London

Joint Cancer Centre: Royal Marsden NHS Trust (Sutton/Fulham)

St. George's Healthcare NHS Trust

North West London

Hammersmith Hospitals NHS Trust

(Charing Cross and Hammersmith sites)

North Central London

Joint Cancer Centre: University College London Hospitals NHS Trust

Royal Free Hampstead NHS Trust

Linked with North Middlesex Hospital NHS Trust as a radiotherapy provider

North East London

Joint Cancer Centre: St. Bartholomew's and The London NHS Trust

Havering Hospitals NHS Trust (Oldchurch).

In addition, the cancer centre at West Hertfordshire Hospitals NHS Trust, located in the Eastern Region provides cancer centre services to some of the population of the London Region especially Hillingdon Health Authority, Brent and Harrow Health Authority and Barnet Health Authority.

Health and Social Care (Rural Areas)

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what plans he has to address health and social care problems of rural areas in the United Kingdom; and if he will make a statement. [127299]

Mr. Denham: The National Plan for the National Health Service, due to be published later this month, will address the issue of how to improve partnership between health and social care throughout the country. Our plans to improve services across the board in rural areas will be addressed in the forthcoming Rural White Paper.

Children's Services

Mr. Gareth R. Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what assessment he has made of local councils' plans to improve children's services; and if he will make a statement. [131790]

Mr. Hutton: I have today placed in the Library a copy of the report "Tracking Progress in Children's Services: An Evaluation of Local Responses to the Quality Protects Programme Year 2".

When we launched the Quality Protects programme in September 1998, we required local authorities to submit annual Management Action Plans to show how they were intending to improve the management and delivery of children's social services. This report presents the key messages and findings from the second round of Management Actions Plans (MAPs) which were received in January 2000.

Councils have made a good start over the past year in implementing the Quality Protects programme. For example we have seen:

more corporate working across councils and more partnership working with voluntary organisations an increase in the proportion of children looked after in foster care or placed for adoption a reduction in re-registrations on the child protection register more support being given to care leavers an increase in education support being given to looked after children more councils listening to children and young people in their care improvements in the collecting and using of management information.

But if there are to be real and lasting gains for children, these early improvements must be built on and further substantial progress made in 2000–01. The Government's determination to support this change is demonstrated by the significant increase in special grant available for funding this year (from £75 million to £120 million). We will expect progress in 2000–01 to be commensurate with this increase in funding.

Ambulance Services

Mr. Chidgey: To ask the Secretary of State for Health in the consultation on the delivery of modern ambulance services in the South East Region of the NHS, what assessment he has made of the cost to fundholders of reorganisation (a) in total and (b) for each of the eight ambulance service trusts; what provision he has made to meet these costs through additional funding; when the allocations made to these trusts to help reach new standards will be dispensed to them in full from the £21 million allocated for this purpose by his Department; what measures he is proposing to ensure that adequate resources are safeguarded for rural services; and if he will make a statement. [131215]

Ms Stuart: We have invested an extra £21 million to help ambulance services speed up response times. Of this, the South East Region received a total of £4.2 million.

All eight ambulance services in the south east have developed and agreed a vision to ensure that the region's population have speedy access to high quality, modern and dependable ambulance services which are integrated with care provided by local National Health Service partners and other agencies.

Further work is currently being undertaken before final proposals are subject to full public consultation.

Health Action Zones

Mr. Swayne: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will list the budget allocation for each health action zone in each year since their introduction and for next year. [130512]

Mr. Hutton: The information requested for 1998–99 to 2000–01 is given in the table. Decisions on funding for 2001–02 have not yet been made.

HAZ funding comes from a number of sources:

1. The HAZ central budget comprising three elements:

programme funding for joint projects with other agencies (1998–99 to 2000–01); innovations funding (1999–2000 and 2000–01);

central and other innovations (1998–99 to 2000–01).

In 1998–99 a small part of the purchaser development budget was used to provide some start up costs for HAZs;

2. Funding for smoking cessation for 1999–2000 and 2000–01.

3. Funding for drugs prevention services in 1998–99 and 1999–2000. In 1998–99 and 1999–2000 1st wave HAZs received the allocation and in 2000–01 2nd wave HAZs receive the money.

4. Targeted funds for deprived areas. This is allocated to health authorities which include HAZs within their boundaries.

SOCIAL SECURITY

Postal Service (Benefits)

Mr. Willetts: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security (1) how many claims process errors have been identified by local authorities using the "do not re-direct" postal service for benefit-related envelopes; [131355]

(2) how many local authorities using the "do not re-direct" postal service for benefit-related envelopes have received (a) no returned mail and (b) returned mail, indicating the volume returned in each case; [131386]

(3) how many cases of benefit fraud have been discovered by local authorities as a result of the "do not re-direct" postal service for benefit-related envelopes. [131356]

Angela Eagle: The information requested is not available. However, from 2000–01, local authorities are asked to provide details of the number of cases where fraud has been established as a result of using the "do not re-direct" service.

The recent Local Authority Omnibus Survey, published in April 2000, showed that of those authorities surveyed and operating "do not re-direct", around three-quarters said that it had enhanced their ability to protect the system against fraud, and more than half believed that it led to the identification of fraudulent activity. The deterrent effect of the scheme is less easy to quantify.

Mr. Willetts: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security which local authorities have yet to implement fully the "do not re-direct" postal service for benefit-related envelopes; and what reasons they have given for the delays. [131357]

Angela Eagle: According to information we have received from the Royal Mail, there are currently 57 local authorities who have not joined the "do not re-direct" postal service.

The following list shows the authorities that have not joined, or contacted their local Royal Mail sales centre to join, the scheme to date. The Royal Mail, in turn, depends on their local sales centres to keep them informed as authorities join up.

Some of these authorities have in place arrangements with their local sorting office which fall outside of the national scheme. Others are proposing to join.

NIRS2

Mr. Fraser: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how many pensioners from Dorset are suffering a loss of income as a result of the NIRS2 computer problems. [130835]

Mr. Rooker: It is not possible to give an accurate answer to this question. I can, however, confirm that the maximum number of pensioners in Dorset whose Retirement Pension will be subject to review is 1,041. We expect to make benefit adjustments to around 600 of these cases. We expect to complete work on these cases by October 2000.

Lone Parents

Mr. Brady: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how many people have moved to sustained unsubsidised employment from the New Deal for Lone Parents; and what percentage he estimates would have found employment without the New Deal for Lone Parents. [130682]

Angela Eagle: Up to the end of April, 54,241 lone parents had obtained jobs following participation in the New Deal for Lone Parents programme. All NDLP jobs are unsubsidised.

The evaluation of the programme's prototype phase, which ran from July 1997 to October 1998, estimates how many jobs gained were additional to those that would have occurred without the programme. Copies of the evaluation reports are available in the Library. This estimated that NDLP virtually paid for itself.

Comprehensive evaluation of the national phase of the NDLP programme is being conducted and will report in 2002.

Pensioner Benefits

Mr. Nigel Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what estimate he has made of the administration cost of processing applications for (a) winter fuel allowance and (b) concessionary television licences in the (i) last and (ii) current financial year. [130434]

Angela Eagle: In the last financial year (1999–2000), Winter Fuel Payments accounted for around 0.35 per cent. of the total departmental running costs. There were no costs paid in respect of concessionary TV licences for people over 75.

In the current financial year, administering these two important initiatives to improve the income of older people will account for around 1.7 per cent. of the total departmental running costs (0.93 per cent. in respect of the Winter Fuel Payment scheme and 0.75 per cent. for the concessionary television licence scheme).

Notes:

Winter Fuel Payments

For 1999–2000 (as well as the first two years of the scheme) two of the main conditions of entitlement to Winter Fuel Payments were both age and receipt of a qualifying benefit; those who were entitled were identified through the relevant computer benefit systems and paid automatically. Following a ruling by the European Court of Justice in December 1999, the Winter Fuel Payment scheme was extended to men as well as women from age 60 from the beginning of the scheme (1997–98). The majority of people who are now eligible for a Winter Fuel Payment because of the changes to the scheme are not receiving a Social Security benefit and will have to make a claim.

The current year's estimates include the one-off costs of developing a claims process and IT systems to enable the correct amount of payment made to the right person for both future and past winters, as well as the continuation of the automatic payment process.

Concessionary TV licences

The concessionary television licence scheme for over 75s was announced in this year's Budget and will take effect from 1 November 2000. Estimated set-up costs are included in the costs for this financial year.

DEFENCE

HMS Cambridge

Mr. Caplin: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will make a statement on the closure of HMS Cambridge. [132232]

Mr. Spellar: I refer my hon. Friend to the answer I gave on 8 June 2000, Official Report, column 338W, to the hon. Member for Chingford and Woodford Green (Mr. Duncan Smith). The investment appraisal concluded that the establishment's residual training activities could be delivered more cost-effectively elsewhere and the matter was subject to a period of formal consultation with the MOD trade unions. No representations have been received and consultation on this matter is now complete.

I have, therefore, endorsed the proposal that HMS Cambridge should close and that plans for decommissioning and site vacation should proceed accordingly.

Consultation will continue on matters affecting staff.

Duke of York's Royal Military School

To achieve five or more GCSE passes at grades A* to C; 2000–01 target is 88 per cent.

Key Target 3

To achieve 90 per cent. of A level passes at grades A to E.

Key Target 4

To achieve three or more A level passes at grades A to E; 2000–01 target is 84 per cent.

Key Target 5

To achieve 36.5 per cent. of A level passes at Grades A and B.

Defence Estates Agency

Mr. Leslie: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what Key Targets have been set for the Defence Estates Agency for the financial year 2000–01. [132239]

Dr. Moonie: The following key targets have been set for Defence Estates for 2000–01:

Key Target 1

Low Flying

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will make a statement on the pattern of military low flying activity in the United Kingdom during the training year 1999–2000. [132240]

Dr. Moonie: The ability to fly fast and low continues to be an essential skill in our armoury of tactics. Training for aircrew to achieve and maintain these skills is vital.

The amount of low flying training carried out in the UK Low Flying System during the training year April 1999 to March 2000 was the minimum necessary for aircrew to reach and maintain these skills. Hours booked for low flying training during this period amounted to some 15 per cent. less than for 1998. Some of this reduction can be attributed to the number of aircraft and crews committed to overseas deployments. Since detailed records of hours booked began in 1995, the total overall has reduced by 36 per cent. (some 24,200 hours) with fixed-wing activity showing the greatest reduction of 42 per cent. (19,800 hours).

The distribution of low flying training across the UK has not changed significantly. We continue to try and spread it as widely as practicable, but for a variety of operational, geographical and climatic constraints some parts of the country will see more than others.

The paper published for 1998 (see the answer given to my hon. Friend the Member for Brent, North (Mr. Gardiner) 28 April 1999, Official Report, column 147W), made clear that for the future this information would be published on a financial year basis. I have today placed in the Library of the House a paper giving a detailed account of low flying training in the UK Low Flying System. It provides information for the transitional period January 1999 to March 2000.

Further copies of the paper, and the video and leaflet mentioned in the text, can be obtained from the following address:

Gulf Veterans

Mr. Miller: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what are the most recent figures for deaths among (a) Gulf veterans and (b) the comparison group. [132241]

Mr. Spellar: Peer reviewed scientific data comparing the mortality of UK Gulf veterans to an era group of service personnel who did not deploy to the Gulf was published for the first time in "The Lancet" on 1 July 2000. The Ministry of Defence will now continue to monitor the mortality of both Gulf veterans and the era group and will publish updated figures on a regular basis. The figures as at 30 June 2000 are shown in the table. Overall, in the period 1 April 1991 to 30 June 2000 the mortality of UK Gulf veterans was only slightly greater than that of the comparison group. The number of Gulf veterans dying from disease-related causes is rather less than for the comparison group, whereas the number of Gulf veterans dying of external causes is rather higher than for the comparison group.

The Ministry of Defence will conduct a more detailed analysis of road traffic accidents, to establish whether there are any underlying tends that might help explain this excess.

Mrs. Humble: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what data he has collated on the general pattern of chemical warfare agent alerts during the Gulf conflict. [132242]

Mr. Spellar: Our 1997 policy statement "Gulf Veterans' Illnesses: A New Beginning" set out a number of commitments to help address the health concerns of Gulf Veterans. One of these commitments was to review specific incidents of suggested biological or chemical warfare exposures. As part of this commitment I am today publishing the third paper looking at incidents where veterans have suggested they were exposed to chemical warfare agents. This paper is entitled "A Review of UK Forces Chemical Warfare Agent Alerts During the 1990–1991 Gulf Conflict". I am placing a copy in the Library of the House.

This paper looks at the general pattern of chemical alarms during the conflict. The review has shown that there was usually a straightforward explanation given at the time for chemical warfare agent detection equipment alarming. There is no evidence to suggest Iraqi use of chemical weapons, or the presence of chemical weapons in any of the UK alarms.

The paper reviews in detail two specific incidents: Dhahran on the night of 20 January 1991 when a Scud was destroyed by a Patriot missile close to the airfield there, and Al Jubayl on the morning of 16 February 1991 when a Scud landed in the water in the port area. On both occasions there is no evidence to suggest that the Scuds carried anything other than a conventional warhead.

Military Bases (Ministerial Visits)

Mr. Baker: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many of the (a) RAF, (b) Royal Naval, (c) Army and (d) other military bases in the United Kingdom where US personnel outnumber UK personnel have been visited by Ministers from his Department since 1 May 1997; and what percentage this represents of the total number of each such base in the United Kingdom. [131330]

Dr. Moonie: Of the bases, all RAF, in the UK where US personnel outnumber UK personnel, two have been visited by Ministers from this Department since 1 May 1997. These are RAF Fairford and RAF Menwith Hill. This represents 25 per cent. of the total number of such bases.

Chinook Crash

Mr. Key: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence (1) if the simulation undertaken by the Defence Research Agency as part of the Board of Inquiry investigation into the crash of RAF Chinook ZD576 was able to determine the (a) precise indicated airspeed and (b) height of the aircraft 40 seconds prior to impact; [131525]

(2) if DERA at Boscombe Down considered the FADEC system for the Chinook MKII to be flight safety critical at the time of the Mull of Kintyre crash in 1994. [131524]

Mr. Spellar: I will write to the hon. Member, and a copy of my letter will be placed in the Library of the House.

Mr. Key: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if the Air Accident Investigation Branch were given unrestricted access to all personnel and all information during the investigation into the crash of RAF Chinook ZD576. [131526]

Mr. Spellar: Yes.

Royal Irish Regiment

Mr. McNamara: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will describe the deployment of each home unit of the Royal Irish Regiment on each day from 2 to 13 July. [130465]

Mr. Spellar: During the period in question, the six Home Service Battalions of the Royal Irish Regiment were deployed at various locations around the Province on security duties in support of the RUC. Information about the specific deployment of each unit within each Battalion for each day in the period 2–13 July is not held centrally and could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

Mr. McNamara: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many soldiers of the Royal Irish Regiment in each unit (a) applied to take and (b) took leave from their duties on (i) 25 June, (ii) 2 July and (iii) 9 July. [130466]

Mr. Spellar: The dates mentioned fell within a period during which the Royal Irish Regiment were either preparing for, or actually engaged in, operations to support the RUC over the Marching Season. This precludes the taking of leave.

Special Investigations Branch

Mr. McNamara: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence, pursuant to his answer of 12 June 2000, Official Report, column 449W, (a) in what circumstances this photograph was taken, what interpretation he puts on this photo-shoot and what assessment has he made of the impact of this upon community relations in the area, (b) what formal administrative action procedures have been initiated and what stage they are at now, (c) what body or rank of officer was responsible for considering whether to initiate disciplinary action against (i) the major and (ii) the warrant officer who took photographs, (d) what instructions have been issued subsequent to this inquiry concerning soldiers agreeing to pose for photographs with sectarian displays, (e) if the soldiers were under orders to pose for these photographs, (f) how many refused, (g) what attempts have been made to seek the return and destruction of these photographs, (h) if the flag was obtained with the consent of the Loyal Orange Lodge, (i) how the flag was transported to the Royal Irish Regiment barracks, (j) what the cost of printing 40 copies of the photograph was, (k) who paid this bill, (l) who owned the camera with which the photograph was taken, (m) how many companies of the Royal Irish Regiment have posed for regimental photographs with sectarian flags or banners in the current year and (n) if he will place a copy of the Special Investigations report in the Library. [130467]

Mr. Spellar: I will write to my hon. Friend, and a copy of my letter will be placed in the Library of the House.

Loyal Orange Order

Mr. McNamara: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence further to his answer of 15 March 2000, Official Report, column 204W, if he will review his decision not to deem the Loyal Orange Order a secretive organisation within the scope of the Joint Service Defence Council Instruction (JS DCI 75/99) on Membership of Societies such as Freemasons. [130468]

Mr. Spellar: I have no plans to review my decision.

Type 45 Destroyers (Procurement)

Mr. Ben Chapman: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will quantify the amount of work potentially available to yards other than those of BAE Systems and Vosper Thornycroft under the modular procurement system to be used for the purchase of Type 45 destroyers. [130632]

Mr. Hoon: This is a matter for the chief executive of the Defence Procurement Agency. I have asked the chief executive to write to my hon. Friend.

Letter from G. Beaven to Mr. Ben Chapman, dated 20 July 2000:

I am writing in response to your question to the Secretary of State for Defence with regard to the amount of Type 45 work potentially available to yards other than those of BAE SYSTEMS and Vosper Thornycroft. This falls within my area of responsibility as Chief of Defence Procurement and Chief Executive of the Defence Procurement Agency.

Subject to the completion of satisfactory negotiations, the order for the first three Type 45 destroyers is planned for placement later this year with BAE SYSTEMS, the Prime Contractor for the Programme. The first and third ship are planned to be assembled by BAE SYSTEMS Marine and the second by Vosper Thornycroft.

The intended construction method distinguishes between 'assembly' and the 'manufacture' of modules which can be constructed at a number of different locations and brought together at a shipyard for final assembly. We intend that BAE SYSTEMS Marine and Vosper Thornycroft will, between them, undertake as a minimum about 50 per cent. of the manufacture of the first three ships with the remainder being competed widely within UK industry. This provides the opportunity for shipyards around the UK such as Cammell Laird to bid for work in this programme. If they wish to do so, it is important that they contact the Prime Contractor and register their interest.

I expect an order to be placed around 2004 for the second batch of three Type 45 ships and we anticipate that the competition for sub-contracts to manufacture the modules for these vessels will rise to 100 per cent.

INTERNATIONAL DEVELOPMENT

Expenditure

Dr. Tonge: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what amounts were (a) budgeted for by her Department, (b) expended and (c) not spent in (i) 1997–98, (ii) 1998–99 and (iii) 1999–2000; and if the funds not spent in each of those years were carried forward. [130864]

Clare Short: Expenditure compared with Departmental Expenditure Limits (DEL) for the period in question is as follows:

£ million

	Total DEL	Total expenditure	Balance carried forward
1997–98	1,595	1,592	3
1998–99	1,777	1,740	37
1999–2000	1,943	[1]1,938	5

BNFL

Mr. Chaytor: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will request from BNFL copies of technical papers on the subject of the dry storage of previously wet stored magnox fuel and place them in the Library. [131364]

Mrs. Liddell: I understand that BNFL does hold technical papers which deal with this issue. These are the property of either BNFL or other companies. I have, therefore, asked the Chairman of BNFL to write to my hon. Friend directly in response to his request.

Mr. Chaytor: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what assessment he has made of the implications of the agreement at the June 2000 OSPAR conference for BNFL's future business plan. [130866]

Mrs. Liddell: In planning its future business, BNFL will need to take account of the UK's commitments to OSPAR and in particular of the draft National Discharge Strategy published by DETR in June. BNFL has already stated that it welcomes that strategy document and has expressed its commitment to helping to achieve its aims.

Bereavement

Mr. Coaker: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what assistance the Government provide to people who have recently suffered a bereavement or who are considering funeral arrangements. [132231]

Dr. Howells: In conjunction with his ongoing inquires into consumer issues related to at-need funerals, the Director General of the Office of Fair Trading has published online advice to help anyone who is in the daunting position of planning a funeral. The website is at www.oft.gov.uk

E-commerce

Mr. Sawford: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will make a statement on his plans to assist firms to develop e-commerce capacity. [130166]

Ms Hewitt: I refer my hon. Friend to the answer given to my hon. Friend the Member for Morecambe and Lunesdale (Miss Smith) on 27 June 2000, Official Report, column 457W, which described plans to support firms to develop e-commerce capacity.

Parliamentary Questions

Mr. Stunell: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry how many parliamentary questions were tabled to his Department between 19 October 1999 and 20 April which requested information, pursuant to his previous answers. [131227]

Mr. Byers: Of the 1,552 parliamentary questions tabled during the period, 56 requested information pursuant to previous answers.

ENVIRONMENT, TRANSPORT AND THE REGIONS

GM Crops

Mr. Yeo: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions, pursuant to the oral statement by the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food of 8 June 2000, Official Report, column 501, if he will list the (a) dates on which meetings took place between Advanta Seeds and officials from his Department between 17 April and 17 May, (b) names and functions of the officials attending those meetings, (c) subjects discussed, (d) conclusions reached and (e) advice given by his officials to Advanta Seeds. [128467]

Mr. Meacher: Officials from my Department met with representatives from Advanta Seeds Ltd. on 17 April. A note of that meeting, which gives the information requested, is available in the House Library. There were no subsequent meetings.

Genetically Modified Organisms

Jackie Ballard: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what progress has been made on evaluating research commissioned by him on the effect of GMOs in the human and animal food chain; and what representations he has received on such research. [128595]

Mr. Meacher: My Department has not commissioned any research on the effect of the GMOs in the human and animal food chain. Responsibility for this lies with the Food Standards Agency.

MOT Centres

Mr. Win Griffiths: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions if he will list by administrative region for each of the last five years the number of (a) MOT centres that have lost their certification, (b) nominated testers that have lost their accreditation in these centres, (c) nominated testers that have lost their accreditation in centres that have not closed, (d) complaints investigated about MOT centres and the percentage which led to the withdrawal of (i) MOT centre certification and (ii) nominated tester accreditation and (e) routine inspections carried out and the percentage which have led to the withdrawal of (i) MOT centre certification and (ii) nominated tester accreditation. [130021]

Mr. Hill [holding answer 13 July 2000]: The premises at which MOT testing is carried out are known as vehicle testing stations (VTS), operated by an Authorised Examiner (AE), which may be an individual, a partnership or a company. If an examiner's authorisation is withdrawn, the premises can no longer be used as a Vehicle Testing Station and identity as such ceases. Nominated Testers (NT) work under the direction of the Authorised Examiner.

The number of Authorised Examiners that have had their authorisation withdrawn and nominated testers disqualified from testing in the last five years, by region, is shown in the table.

The number of authorisations withdrawn or testers disqualified, following complaint to, or targeted check by the Vehicle Inspectorate, or following a routine check, is not collated by region and could be supplied only at disproportionate cost; the tables show the figures nationally.

The number of nominated testers disqualified from testing at VTS where the authorised examiner's authorisation has not been withdrawn is not held centrally.

Vehicle Ownership (Registration)

Mr. Pollard: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what plans his Department has to (a) strengthen and (b) enforce the legal requirement for changes of vehicle ownership to be registered; and if he will make a statement. [130644]

Mr. Hill: The Vehicle Crime Reduction Action Team (VCRAT) has drawn up a number of proposals, which will strengthen vehicle registration requirements. The Government are seeking a suitable opportunity to introduce the necessary legislation.

Both the buyer and seller are required to tell the Secretary of State of a vehicle transfer. DVLA already takes enforcement action against vehicle keepers who do not comply with the requirements to notify acquisition and disposal. Around 39,000 cases were dealt with last year. In addition, a further 12,000 cases were actioned following failure to undertake Statutory Off-Road Notification (SORN).

Mr. Pollard: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what assistance his Department is giving to councils which, because changes of vehicle ownership have not been registered, are (a) unable to recover the cost of removing abandoned vehicles and (b) cannot take action to prosecute; and if he will make a statement. [130645]

Mr. Hill: No assistance is being given at this time. The existing arrangements with local authorities will be reviewed as we develop proposals for implementing the proposed European End-of-Life Vehicles Directive in the UK.

Former Railway Land

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions if RDAs are notified by the British Railways Board of its intention to dispose of former railway land; if their consent for disposal is needed; and if he will make a statement. [130627]

Mr. Hill: Before the British Railways Board disposes of former railway land, the marketing process requires the Board to notify rail industry parties, local authorities, local transport operators and Passenger Transport Executives of its intention. The British Railways Board has confirmed that it includes Regional Development Agencies (RDAs) in this notification process. The consent of RDAs is not a prerequisite for disposal but their views are taken into account before a final decision is taken.

London Tramways

Mr. Cox: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what plans he has to encourage the development of a tramway system in the Greater London area. [131161]

Mr. Hill: This is a matter for the Mayor of London. However, as the Government's 10 year plan for transport indicates, the Government will provide resources which could deliver at least two new tram/guided bus schemes in London.

Regional Planning Guidance

Mr. Flight: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what his reasons were for delegating to the Government Office of the South East the response to Horsham District Council's letter of 31 May regarding regional planning guidance. [130793]

Ms Beverley Hughes: The Government Office for the South East, who lead on the work on Regional Planning Guidance, have received over 900 responses to consultation on the draft Regional Planning Guidance for the South East (RPG9). In the case of such consultation exercises it is normal practice for the Secretary of State to delegate to officials the task of collating, analysing and acknowledging responses.

Rural Bus Services

Mr. Paul Marsden: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions if he will make a statement on measures to increase rural bus services in Shrewsbury and Atcham. [131158]

Mr. Hill: Shropshire County Council was allocated £630,354 of Rural Bus Subsidy Grant in 1998–99, with the same amount allocated to the Council for 1999–2000 and 2000–01.

In 1999–2000 the Council used its allocation to fund 58 services, of which 28 served Shrewsbury. Of the services serving Shrewsbury, 10 were entirely new and 18 were improvements to existing services. The County Council have also introduced a bike bus between Ellesmere and Shrewsbury, funded through the 1999 Rural Bus Challenge Competition, and on 11 July we invited bids for the 2000 Rural Bus Challenge Competition.

Nuclear Waste

Mr. Llew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what reports he has received on the hearing held by the European Parliament's Transport Committee in June on the transport of nuclear waste and other radioactive materials. [130847]

Mr. Hill: I have not received any reports of the public hearings held by the European Parliament's Committee on Regional policy, Transport and Tourism on 21 June into the Transport of Radioactive Material in the European Union at this time. I understand that information on these hearings, including any reports, will be made available on the internet website http://www.europarl.eu.int/ when they are published.

Ports

Mr. Mackinlay: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions (1) if he will request from the European Commission more time for the European Transport Workers' Federation to consult its members on the Commission's proposals on Access to the Port Service Market; [R] [130858]

(2) what assessment he has made of the implications for the Port of London Authority of the proposals of the European Commissioner for Energy and Transport made on 26 May in respect of state aid and port services; and if he will make a statement; [R] [130860]

(3) if Ministers will meet dock and maritime trade union representatives prior to formulating the United Kingdom response to the proposals of the European Commissioner for Energy and Transport made on 26 May in respect of ports competition and which are now the subject of consultation; and if he will make a statement. [R] [130861]

Mr. Hill [holding answer 18 July 2000]: The European Commission has not yet published formal proposals on port services and state aid, but we understand that proposals are planned for later this year. Officials are continuing to keep in touch with the Commission on these issues. We shall consult widely on any specific proposals that the Commission brings forward, and I would be happy to meet representatives of the dock and maritime trade unions in due course.

Power Stations (Carlisle)

Mr. Martlew: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions when his officials last met representatives of Border Biofuels; and what discussions they had concerning the construction of a power station at Carlisle. [131411]

Ms Beverley Hughes: There have been no meetings between the Secretary of State's officials and Border Biofuels to discuss their planning application, but I understand that the company has been in discussion with the Environment Agency about related (IPPC) authorisations.

Port Waste Reception Facilities

Mrs. Ray Michie: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions if he will list the Scottish port authorities consulted by his Department regarding the inclusion of indirect fees for port waste management facilities into the harbour dues, proposed by the European Parliament in the Draft Directive on Port Waste Reception Facilities; and if he will make a statement. [131013]

Mr. Hill [holding answer 19 July 2000]: Throughout the process of working up the Government's policy on port waste management planning, we developed our proposals through consultation with the Marine Pollution Advisory Group, which includes representatives of central and local government, the ports, shipping and waste industries and environmental non-governmental organisations. Because the provision of adequate port waste reception facilities is an international obligation under the MARPOL Convention, we need a national strategy. That strategy takes account of the interests of ports in all parts of the UK.

The EC Directive substantially mirrors the UK's own port waste management legislation and practice. The UK has been involved at every stage of the Directive, and—while we have not consulted, or received representations from, any individual ports—we have consulted closely with the representative bodies of the UK ports industry on specific issues associated with the Directive.

Building Regulations

Mr. Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions (1) how he monitors the application of building regulations; and if he will make a statement; [131575]

(2) which organisation is responsible for ensuring that building regulations are complied with; and if he will make a statement. [131573]

Ms Beverley Hughes: Under the Building Act 1984, local authorities are responsible for enforcing building regulations in the areas, subject to provisions in the Act for private sector approved inspectors to carry out building control in cases where the person carrying out the work opts for this alternative. Local authorities' building control services are subject to the duty of Best Value, and are periodically inspected by the Audit Commission.

Under the approved inspectors regulations persons or bodies wishing to become approved inspectors must apply to the Construction Industry Council which is the body designated by the Secretary of State for the purpose of approving inspectors. The CIC carefully scrutinises applicants' qualifications and experience. Approved inspectors' terms of approval last for five years, and those wishing to continue must apply to the CIC for re-approval.

OSPAR Conference

Mr. Chaytor: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions if he will make a statement on the outcome of the June 2000 OSPAR conference. [130867]

Mr. Meacher: I refer my hon. Friend to the answer I gave to my hon. Friend the Member for Blaenau Gwent (Mr. Smith) on 10 July 2000, Official Report, columns 397–98W.

Sellafield

Mr. Chaytor: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what written guidance he has given to BNFL on ensuring its commitments under the OSPAR Sintra agreement are met in respect of discharges from Sellafield. [130868]

Mr. Meacher: BNFL is aware of the Government's policy that there should be progressive reductions in radioactive discharges. The Government will shortly publish for consultation a draft of the statutory guidance that it proposes to issue to the Environment Agency on the setting of radioactive discharge authorisations under the Radioactive Substances Act. The draft guidance will reiterate the requirement that there should be progressive reductions in radioactive discharges. The guidance will also ensure that discharge authorisations granted by the Agency are consistent with the Government's radioactive discharges strategy, a draft of which was published for consultation on 21 June. The strategy sets out how the Government are going to meet the commitments entered into at the OSPAR meeting in Sintra in 1998 to reduce radioactive discharges.

Mr. Chaytor: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions if he has received a copy of the resolution passed by the Isle of Man Tynwald on 21 June in respect of the OSPAR convention and Sellafield; and if he will place a copy in the Library. [130869]

Mr. Meacher: Yes. I understand that the text of the resolution can be found in the Tynwald Votes and Proceedings on the Tynwald website www.tynwald.isle-of-man.org.im. I will place a copy in the Library.

Fuel Duty Rebate

Mr. Drew: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions if he will extend the fuel duty rebate to electrically-operated vehicles which perform taxi duties. [131531]

Mr. Hill: Under current legislation operators of local bus services are rebated part of the duty they have paid on the fuel used in providing those services. We have no plans to pay fuel duty rebate to the operators of taxi services or to extend it so that it provides a grant to operators of vehicles to which fuel duty is not applicable.

The Commission for Integrated Transport is currently examining possible changes to the fuel duty rebate scheme as part of its study of all aspects of public funding for bus services. We will carefully consider the Commission's recommendations which are due later this year.

Regional Planning Guidance (South West)

Mr. Steen: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions when the public examination of the draft Regional Planning Guidance for the South West will be completed; when the Inspector's report on the draft Regional Planning Guidance for the South West will be issued; when the final Regional Planning Guidance for the South West will be issued for material consideration by planning authorities; and if he will make a statement. [131580]

Ms Beverley Hughes: The Public Examination of the draft Regional Planning Guidance for the South West took place in March 2000. The report of the Panel for the Public Examination has not yet been received, but is expected shortly. Arrangements will be made for its publication on receipt of it. The Secretary of State's proposals for change to the draft Regional Planning Guidance will be made in the light of the Panel's report and recommendations, and other consultation comments received by the Panel in autumn 1999 but not addressed at the Public Examination. These proposals for change should be available for consultation in the autumn, and the final revised Regional Planning Guidance for the South West published early in 2001.

Birmingham Northern Relief Road

Mr. Matthew Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what the net present cost is of the Birmingham Northern Relief Road project under the Private Finance Initiative; what the value is of the public sector comparators in (a) pre-risk and (b) risk adjusted terms; what risks are identified as having been transferred; and if he will make a statement. [131585]

Mr. Hill: The Birmingham Northern Relief Road is to be built, financed, operated and maintained by the concessionaire Midland Expressway Ltd. at its own cost and risk and without recourse to Government Funds or to Government guarantees. A cost benefit analysis carried out in 1991 showed the scheme proposed by Midland Expressway having a benefit: cost ratio of more than 2:1.

Pollution

Mr. Quinn: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions when the Government Response to the Royal Commission on Environmental Pollution's 21 report (Setting Environmental Standards) will be published. [132371]

Mr. Meacher: The Government's Response to the Commission's Report on Setting Environmental Standards has been published today. I wish to express my thanks to the previous Chairman of the Commission, Sir John Houghton, the current Chairman, Sir Tom Blundell, and their colleagues for their continued commitment to issues which are of equal importance to the public as to the Government.

The Government are responding positively to many of the points made by the Commission in its report on Setting Environmental Standards;

On the significance of environmental standards the Government agree with the Commission that the nature of environmental standards has significantly changed over the last 30 years. There are more numerical standards, more standards set internationally and more formal techniques to aid decision-making. There is also increased recognition that environmental standards need to be seen more broadly, hence the emphasis the Government are putting on sustainable development.

On procedures for setting standards the Government agree with the Commission that policy analysis needs to identify various components, such as scientific assessment, risk and economic appraisal. There is a need for transparency in the decision-making process and public values need to be articulated and considered.

On scientific understanding the Government agree with the Commission that limitations and uncertainties in scientific understanding must be openly acknowledged, and that social and ethical considerations must be accounted for.

On technological options the Government agree with the importance the Commission accords life cycle assessment as a tool for managing environmental impacts, and wishes to point out that they are actively addressing particular concerns on chemicals following the Chemicals Strategy.

On risk and uncertainty the Government recognise the importance of transparent risk assessment and would like to point out that much work is in hand by the HSE and the Environment Agency, among others.

On economic appraisal the Government agree with the Commission that economic appraisal is a part of all policy-making, although this can pose particular challenges as many environmental goods cannot be valued in money terms. As part of the "Modernising Government" work on good policy-making, the Cabinet Office has developed a "Toolkit for Policy-makers". The aim of this Toolkit is to ensure that policy makers take into account the impact of policy proposals on environment, business, charities and the voluntary sector, health, race, gender, the disabled, etc.

On implementing environmental policies the Government agree that different instruments should be used in combination to achieve the best result; economic instruments and voluntary agreements are complementary to direct regulation and not alternatives.

On articulating values the Government recognise that traditional methods of consultation are not always adequate, and are making a real effort to give attention to new, more open, participation methods.

The full Response will be available on the Department website (www.detr.gov.uk) and I am placing copies in the Library.

Road Traffic Offences

Mr. Kidney: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions when he plans to implement the proposal in his White Paper, entitled "Tomorrow's Roads, a Review of Penalties for Road Traffic Offences". [130304]

Mr. Charles Clarke: I have been asked to reply.

The work of the review of penalties for road traffic offences is almost complete. The Government hope to publish a consultation document, setting out the proposals of the review, shortly.

Conservative	30	7	—
Labour[4]	98	2	—
Lib. Dem.	31	0	—

Other	1	—	—

[1] Appointment is taken to mean the date on which a peerage was publicly announced

[2] Includes the right hon. Member for Huntingdon's (Mr. Major) Resignation Honours (10 Conservative, announced on 2 August 1997), but not his Dissolution Honours which were announced before 1 May 1997

From 1979 to 1997 the last Conservative Government created 365 peers (excluding Law Lords). Despite retaining an almost 4 to 1 advantage over Labour in the House of Lords the number of Conservative peers created was nearly double that of Labour peers. The party breakdown of these was as follows: Conservative 173, Labour 96, Liberal/SDP/Liberal Democrats 27 and Independent/Crossbencher 69.

AGRICULTURE, FISHERIES AND FOOD

GM Seeds

Mr. Yeo: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food when Ministers in (a) his Department, (b) the DETR, (c) the Scotland Office, (d) the Wales Office, (e) the Northern Ireland Office and (f) the Cabinet Office were first informed of the contamination of Advanta rapeseed with GM varieties. [126859]

Mr. Yeo: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food when the Government first informed (a) the Food Standards Agency, (b) English Nature, (c) the Scottish Executive, (d) the Welsh Assembly, (e) the Advisory Commission on Releases into the Environment and (f) the Advisory Committee on Novel Foods and Processes that Advanta rapeseed had become contaminated with GM varieties. [126820]

Mr. Yeo: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will make a statement on the administration costs of paying agricultural aid. [128304]

Mr. Nick Brown [holding answer 29 June 2000]: The administration costs of paying agricultural aid was approximately £67.5 million in the last financial year. This figure covers the payment of some £2.2 billion under CAP and agri-environment schemes, and BSE emergency measures, by the Ministry's regional organisation and the Intervention Board. It also includes the cost of support work carried out by the Farming and Rural Conservation Agency and ADAS on the agri-environment schemes.

Fallen Stock

Sir Nicholas Lyell: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what recent estimate he has made of the proportion of the national herds of cattle and national flocks of sheep which die each year and have to be disposed of as fallen stock; what estimates he has made of the costs involved; and to what extent such work is currently performed by hunts. [130264]

Ms Quin: This Department has made no estimates of the proportion of the cattle and sheep populations which have to be disposed of as fallen stock, or of the costs involved. However, the Meat and Livestock Commission estimates that for all livestock production, the proportion is between 2 and 4 per cent. For cattle, the Licensed Animal Slaughterers and Salvage Association has estimated the proportions as 7.5 per cent. (dairy) 3.5 per cent. (beef) and 5.5 per cent. (other cattle). A small-scale and limited survey carried out by this Department suggested that, of these fallen stock, around 40 per cent. of calves, 32 per cent. of adult bovines and 15 per cent. of sheep were disposed of to hunt kennels in 1999.

Food Distribution Industry

Mr. Gareth Thomas: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what representations he has received from the Institute of Grocery Distribution in respect of a code of practice for buyers and sellers in the food chain. [130925]

Ms Quin: We have encouraged the major retailers to draw up a code of good practice covering business relationships throughout the food chain. The Institute of Grocery Distribution is facilitating this exercise and is keeping us informed of progress.

Fisheries

Mr. Gill: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what assessment he has made of the level of quota swap which has occurred between sand eels and Baltic cod. [131252]

Mr. Morley: None. There have been no recent exchanges of quota between member states involving sand eels and Baltic cod.

Mr. Gill: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if the Government support the National Federation of Fishermen's Organisations and the Scottish Fishermen's Federation policy document, "Zonal management; a new vision of Europe's fisheries". [131352]

Mr. Morley: The Government welcome this document which makes a useful and constructive contribution to the debate on how to secure an improved regional dimension to the Common Fisheries Policy and greater involvement by fishermen in fisheries management.

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will make a statement on expenditure in the UK in the past three years from EU budget line B2–903A. [130786]

Mr. Morley: This is a new budget line established in 2000. I would refer the hon. Member to the reply I gave to him on 28 June 2000, Official Report, column 497W, which explained its purpose and that it does not cover funding of national projects.

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food how many vessels, broken down by nationality, fish for sand eels within the six and 12 mile limits. [130789]

Mr. Morley: Only UK vessels are able to fish for sand eels within the six to 12 mile limits. However, our records do not enable us to identify how many do so.

Specified Risk Material

Mr. Yeo: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if any specified risk material has been imported for destruction in this country. [131378]

Mr. Nick Brown [holding answer 18 July 2000]: The Specified Risk Material Order 1997 and the Specified Risk Material (Northern Ireland) Order 1997, in force since 1 January 1998, do not permit the importation of SRM into the UK for destruction.

Mr. Yeo: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will list the applications he has received seeking permission to import specified risk material into this country, indicating in each case the (a) name of the applicant, (b) date of the application and (c) outcome of the application. [131377]

Mr. Nick Brown [holding answer 18 July 2000]: Since the introduction of the Specified Risk Material Order 1997 and the Specified Risk Material (Northern Ireland) Order 1977 on 1 January 1998, eight applications have been received to import SRM into the UK, all of which were approved. Details of the names of the applicants are commercially confidential.

Mr. Ruffley: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food how many applications for resources allocated under the outgoers element of the Pig Industry Restructuring Scheme have been made by pig producers (a) nationally, (b) in the Bury St. Edmunds parliamentary constituency and (c) in Suffolk. [131134]

Ms Quin: None; under state aid rules, we must await European Commission clearance of the Pig Industry Restructuring Scheme before opening the outgoers element for applications.

Mr. Paul Murphy: The only cars used by the Wales Office are provided for ministerial use by the Government Car Service, and no commercial vehicles are used. My Department does not have any agencies, and neither leases nor buys vehicles.

The answer given by my right hon. Friend the Minister for the Cabinet Office on 19 July 2000, Official Report, column 191W, gives details for cars provided for the use of Ministers by the Government Car Service.

Mr. Paul Murphy: To the end of April 2000, 3,030 young people in Wales and 4,100 people aged 25+ entered the New Deal for a second time. Similar information is not available for the 50+ New Deal programme.

Assembly

Mr. Evans: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what procedures are in place to monitor the effectiveness of the concordats between the Government and the Welsh Assembly. [131042]

Mr. Paul Murphy: My Office has responsibility for ensuring that the devolution settlement for Wales continues to be implemented as effectively as possible. This includes monitoring the mechanisms and procedures which have been put in place to deliver devolution.

The concordats are informal and flexible agreements to which both parties commit themselves. The overarching and bilateral concordats provide for a review by the parties to them after one year of operation and thereafter at regular intervals.

The Joint Ministerial Committee also keeps the broad operation of the settlement under review and looks at the effectiveness of concordats and bilateral relations in general.

Parliamentary Questions

Mr. Stunell: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales how many parliamentary questions were tabled to his Department between 19 October 1999 and 20 April which requested information, pursuant to his previous answers. [131226]

Sanctions (Yugoslavia)

Mr. Sarwar: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what action he plans to take following the admission by Romania that it broke United Nations sanctions against Yugoslavia. [130948]

Mr. Hain: The UK has consistently urged all states to comply fully with their obligations to implement and enforce mandatory United Nations sanctions. We understand that the Romanian Government is conducting an inquiry into allegations concerning violations of the UN sanctions against the Federal Republic of Yugoslavia during the previous Romanian Administration.

Middle East

Mr. Sarwar: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on the latest Middle East talks chaired by President Clinton. [130951]

Mr. Hain: We welcome the summit at Camp David between the Israelis and Palestinians, called by President Clinton. It is an important event in the progress towards a Permanent Status Agreement. We encourage all participants to show the courage needed to reach an agreement which is just and lasting.

Indonesia

Mr. Sarwar: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what the Government's policy is on the ethnic conflict in Indonesia. [130953]

Mr. Battle: We have been deeply disturbed by reports of escalating violence in Maluku. Diplomatic efforts are focused on bringing pressure to bear on the Indonesian government to take effective action and bring the perpetrators of violence to justice. I discussed this with the Indonesian Ambassador on 3 July. The head of the Diplomatic Service raised our concerns directly with President Wahid on 4 July and EU Ambassadors reinforced this at a further meeting with the President on 17 July. There is an urgent need to respond to the growing humanitarian crisis. We are pressing the Indonesians to ensure guaranteed safe access and acceptance of a humanitarian response by UN agencies and Indonesian NGOs. The United Nations Development Programme (UNDP) is working closely with the Indonesians on humanitarian co-ordination.

Iran

Mr. Stephen Twigg: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what reports he has received of assassinations of Christian leaders in Iran in the past five years. [130773]

Mr. Hain: None, however I refer my hon. Friend to my answer today to his question UIN 130772, Official Report column 269W.

Mr. Stephen Twigg: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what steps he is taking to encourage religious tolerance in Iran. [130771]

Mr. Hain: Human Rights are a high priority in our dealings with the Iranian Government. We and our EU partners take every appropriate opportunity to press the Iranian authorities over our concerns about their treatment of religious minorities in Iran, particularly the Bahai and Jewish communities. The Iranian authorities are well aware that we and our EU partners view persecution on religious grounds as totally unacceptable.

Mr. Stephen Twigg: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what recent reports he has received concerning religious liberty in Iran. [130792]

Mr. Hain: We receive reports from a number of sources on a wide range of human rights issues in Iran including religious liberty. These sources include among others our Embassy in Tehran, the UK and Iranian media, Amnesty International and the United Nations Commission of Human Rights Special Representative's annual reports. Most of these sources recognise that there have been a number of improvements in Iran since the election of President Khatami in 1997, but that a number of concerns remain. Our policy of engagement allows us to raise our concerns with the Iranian authorities.

Mr. Stephen Twigg: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what reports he has received concerning the activities of the Ministry of Islamic Guidance in Iran. [130790]

Mr. Hain: Our Embassy in Tehran has reported that the Ministry of Culture and Islamic Guidance is responsible for issuing licences and control of all printed material, music, film and other cultural and touristic activities. It also has responsibility for maintaining religious standards.

Mr. Stephen Twigg: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what recent representations he has made to the Iranian authorities concerning the assassination of Christian pastors. [130772]

Mr. Hain: There have recently been a number of calls in Iran for further investigation into the appalling killings of four Christian clerics in 1994. We and our EU partners continue to hope that those responsible for these crimes will be brought to justice.

Mr. Stephen Twigg: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what representations he has made to the Iranian authorities concerning (a) equality of access to education for all religions, (b) freedom of the press and (c) the death sentence for apostasy. [130791]

Mr. Hain: (a) and (c) are most relevant in the context of Iranian treatment of the Baha'i community. We and our EU partners regularly raise our concerns about Iranian treatment of the Baha'is. We do so bilaterally through our Embassy in Tehran, and the Iranian Ambassador to London. We also do so multilaterally through the twice yearly UN resolutions on Human Rights in Iran, which we sponsor in conjunction with our EU partners, the most recent of which was adopted in April.

We also raise our concerns through the EU/Iran dialogue. On (b), at the last meeting in Tehran in June, the EU presidency, on behalf of all EU partners, pressed the Iranian authorities over our concern about the recent suppression of freedom of the press in Iran.

Ministers' Spouses (Hospitality)

Mr. Nicholls: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will list those spouses of Ministers who within the last year have stayed as guests at the British (a) Embassy and (b) Residence in Lisbon when not accompanied by their Minister spouses; and if he will give the duration of the stay in each case. [131260]

Mr. Vaz [holding answer 18 July 2000]: The only unaccompanied ministerial spouse to stay at the Residence in Lisbon during the last year was my wife, Maria Fernandes, who stayed for one night on 26 June before the EU-India Business Summit on 27 June. As Minister for Europe, I had planned to attend the Summit but was forced to cancel owing to other ministerial duties. Ms Fernandes attended the Summit in her own right as a Member of the Council of the Law Society for Ethnic Minorities and met her own travel expenses to and from the Summit.

TV Licence Discounts

Mr. Pike: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what action the Government have taken to ensure that people who are partially sighted claim their entitled discount on their TV licence; and if he will make a statement. [130289]

Janet Anderson: I have been asked to reply.

The 50 per cent. reduction in the television licence fee which the Government introduced on 1 April this year is available to all registered blind people. Statutory responsibility for the administration of the television licensing system, including concessions, rests with the BBC. I understand that the BBC's agent, TV Licensing, is including details of the concession in letters that are being sent to every household about free television licences for the over-75s. Additional leaflets have also been produced, with audio and Braille versions. Other promotional activity includes local radio trails, information on the BBC's Website and liaison with community links and outreach centres. The BBC has liaised with the Royal National Institute for the Blind on the subject of this concession and Post Office Counters staff have been informed of it.

Winter Fuel Payments

Mr. Martlew: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how many pensioners in the Carlisle constituency received Winter Fuel Payments in (a) 1998–99 and (b) 1999–2000; and how much was paid in total in each of those years. [127807]

Angela Eagle: The administration of Winter Fuel Payments is a matter for Alexis Cleveland, the Chief Executive of the Benefits Agency. She will write to my hon. Friend.

Letter from Alexis Cleveland to Mr. Eric Martlew, dated 20 July 2000:

The Secretary of State has asked me to reply to your recent Parliamentary Question asking how many pensioners in the Carlisle constituency received Winter Fuel Payments (WFPs) in (a) 1998–99 and (b) 1999–2000; and how much was paid in total in each of those years.

In 1998/99, there were 13,157 WFPs made in the Carlisle constituency totalling £283,210. In 1999–00, there were 14,938 payments totalling £1,138,350.

I hope this is helpful.

Helen Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what is the total amount spent on Cold Weather Payments and Winter Fuel Payments to pensioners in Warrington, North constituency for each year since 1979. [127316]

Angela Eagle [holding answer 26 June 2000]: The administration of Cold Weather and Winter Fuel Payments is a matter for Alexis Cleveland, the Chief Executive of the Benefits Agency. She will write to my hon. Friend.

Letter from Alexis Cleveland to Helen Jones, dated 20 July 2000:

The Secretary of State has asked me to reply to your recent Parliamentary Question asking for the total amount spent on Cold Weather Payments (CWPs) and Winter Fuel Payments (WFPs) to pensioners in the Warrington North constituency for each year since 1979.

The information requested on CWPs is not available. CWP information is collected on the estimated number of qualifying customers, which include non-pensioners, and by weather station area rather than by Benefits Agency district or MP constituency areas. There are no details held of CWPs before 1995/96. The information that is available is provided in the attached table.

The Warrington North constituency was served by the Manchester Airport (Ringway) weather station until the winter of 1995/96 and by Crosby weather station since 1996. These weather stations also cover postcodes outside of the Warrington North constituency.

WFPs were introduced in the winter of 1997/98. In 1997/98, WFP expenditure for Warrington North constituency was £258,170; in 1998/99 it was £239,780; and in 1999/00 it was £963,700.

I hope this is helpful.

Estimated qualifiers and total expenditure on Cold Weather Payments since the winter of 1995–96 at the weather stations linked to Warrington, North constituency

	Estimated number of qualifiers		Total expenditure (£)
Weather station	1995–96	1996–97	1995–96	1996–97
Ringway	244,000	—	[1]6,213,000	—
Crosby	—	232,000	—	[2]1,971,000

[1] Three periods of cold weather were triggered at Ringway weather station in 1995–96

[2] One period of cold weather triggered at Crosby weather station in 1996–97

Notes:

1. The figures provided are rounded to the nearest £1,000
2. No data are held for periods prior to 1995–96
3. Figures for estimated qualifiers include non-pensioners.
4. An estimate of the number of pensioners among the estimated qualifiers is not available.
5. No periods of cold weather have triggered at either station since 1996–97.
6. All Postcode areas served by the weather stations are detailed in Schedule 1 of the Social Fund Cold Weather payments (General) Regulations.

Mr. Clifton-Brown: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how many valid Winter Fuel Payment claims for the years (a) 1997, (b) 1998 and (c) 1999 are outstanding; and when he expects all these payments to be completed. [130125]

Angela Eagle: Under the original Winter Fuel Payment scheme, before changes in light of the European Court of Justice ruling on 'Taylor', Winter Fuel Payments were made automatically to those entitled. Claims were not required. All payments for last winter were made before Christmas 1999.

However, in light of the changes, those who are now eligible to Winter Fuel Payments must make a claim for payments for any of the past winters if they think they are eligible (1997–98, 1998–99 and 1999–2000).

We are currently processing these claims and payments for past winters are being made just as soon as the claims are determined. The first payments were issued in the week commencing 26 June 2000 and our current plan is that all payments should be issued by the end of September.

Mr. Clifton-Brown: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security, pursuant to his answer of 25 May 2000, Official Report, column 618W, how many people were denied Winter Fuel Payments because they were in temporary respite care from 20 to 26 September 1999; what the cost would be of paying them Winter Fuel Payments; and for what reason the revisions to regulations were not applied in respect of such people. [130126]

Angela Eagle: The information is not available in the format requested. Under the original Winter Fuel Payment scheme people living in residential care or nursing homes who received Income Support or income-based Jobseeker's Allowance were not eligible for a Winter Fuel Payment (unless they were a member of a couple admitted temporarily while their partner remained in the family home). This provision was made on the basis that people in such situations were already receiving public assistance with their care costs—which includes heating.

However, in the light of representations highlighting some difficult cases, we changed the eligibility conditions of the scheme. The new provision means that people getting Income Support or income-based Jobseeker's Allowance and living in residential care or nursing homes for a temporary period[1] are eligible for a Winter Fuel Payment based on their usual household circumstances.

The Social Fund legislation was amended in time to take effect for this coming winter's payments. We have no power to make regulations retrospectively therefore the changes cannot apply to previous winters.

[1] 'temporary' for the purposes of the Winter Fuel Payment scheme is less than 13 weeks by the end of the qualifying week.

Pensioner Incomes

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what, in each European Union country, the (a) average pensioner income and (b) average state pension, is on a comparable basis; and what each of these figures was at the beginning of 1997. [130690]

Mr. Rooker: The information is not available in the format requested. Information in relation to Great Britain pensioner income is set out in The Pensioners' Incomes Series.

PFI Contracts

Mr. Matthew Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what the estimated rate of return on capital is to the contractors under the PFI contracts in his Department. [131348]

Angela Eagle: We currently have only one PFI contract, the Private Sector Resource Initiative for Management of the Estate (PRIME), and this information is commercially confidential to the contractor, Trillium.

Child Support Agency

Mr. Gerald Howarth: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what was the total paid in 1999 by fathers to their children via the CSA; and what was the total unpaid liability. [131108]

Angela Eagle: The administration of the Child Support Agency is a matter for the Chief Executive, Mrs. Faith Boardman. She will write to the hon. Member.

Letter from Mrs. Faith Boardman to Mr. Gerald Howarth, dated 20 July 2000:

I am replying to your Parliamentary Question to the Secretary of State for Social Security about the Child Support Agency.

During 1999/2000, CSA collected and arranged almost £731m in child maintenance. Of this money, over £492m was passed via the Agency's collection service and the remainder arranged by the Agency but passed directly between the Non-resident parent (NRP) and the Parent with Care (PWC). The figure of £731m represents an 11% increase over the previous year and is nearly double the figure (£400m) for 96/97. A small part of the money collected will have represented arrears owed from previous years but paid during 1999/00.

Unfortunately, figures are not available to say exactly how much liability was not met, but the Department's statistical division has estimated that just under £210m was unpaid in 1999/00. This does not include interim assessments set deliberately high in order to encourage non-compliant NRP's to co-operate and provide the details to make a full assessment.

I hope this is helpful.

Minimum Income Guarantee

Mr. Cox: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how many pensioners receive the Minimum Income Guarantee and live in the London Borough of Wandsworth. [131472]

Mr. Rooker: There are around 7,400 pensioners benefiting from the Minimum Income Guarantee in the local authority area of Wandsworth.

Data drawn from Income Support Quarterly Statistical Enquiry, February 2000

Pensions

Mr. Gardiner: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will provide a breakdown of his calculation of the estimated total spending on pensions during the life of this Parliament. [131488]

Mr. Rooker: Information on actual and forecast Social Security expenditure on people aged 60 or over during the life of this Parliament is shown in Table 3 of the Social Security Departmental Report (Cm 4614) as Objective 4, "Support for people over working age".

Households Below Average Income

Mr. Field: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security where the 1998–99 Households Below Average Income Statistics was available to (a) hon. Members and (b) the public on the day it was published. [131523]

Mr. Bayley: On 13 July, copies of "Households Below Average Income" were placed in the library. Copies of all departmental publications are available to hon. Members on request.

Copies were on sale to the public directly from the publisher. Volumes were also available for reference in the library of the Office for National Statistics.

Mr. Webb: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security, pursuant to his oral answer of 17 July 2000, Official Report, column 7–8, if he will identify the specific results from his Department's Households Below Average Income report on which he based his statement that the proportion of pensioners living in poverty was the same in 1998–99 as in the last year of the previous Parliament. [131582]

Mr. Bayley: I refer the hon. Member to the table on Page 135 of "Households Below Average Income 1994–95 to 1998–99". This shows that the proportion of pensioners living below a threshold of 60 per cent. of median income, after housing costs, remained static at 27 per cent. between 1996–97 and 1998–99.

Disability Living Allowance (Multiple Sclerosis)

Mr. Tynan: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will make a statement on the difficulties facing individuals who suffer from relapsing-remitting multiple sclerosis in seeking to qualify for Disability Living Allowance. [131219]

Mr. Bayley: Entitlement to Disability Living Allowance (DLA) is based on a person's needs, and not in recognition of their specific medical condition. People with multiple sclerosis, as with other potentially disabling conditions, are therefore asked to state their care and mobility needs arising from their condition when completing a DLA claim form. Decision makers are given information on the needs arising from disabilities, including multiple sclerosis, in the "Disability Handbook", which is compiled by senior doctors in the Department and approved and monitored by the Disability Living Allowance Advisory Board.

With conditions such as remitting-relapsing multiple sclerosis, decision makers must consider the help required over a period of time. Due to the variable nature of this condition, the Disability Handbook advises decision makers that a medical report may be helpful where a person's needs over a period of time are unclear.

If someone claiming DLA is dissatisfied with the decision on their application (including on the grounds that the decision does not adequately recognise a fluctuating condition), they can ask for it to be looked at again or they can appeal the decision to an independent tribunal.

We are exploring alternatives to the current tests for DLA. Following discussions with groups representing disabled people, we have developed a possible approach based on an assessment of activities involved in managing life. We plan to commence trialling this early next year, to see if it would lead to a better system.

Fraud

Mr. Ruffley: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what discussions his Department has had with the Benefit Fraud Inspectorate in respect of (a) St. Edmundsbury borough council and (b) Mid Suffolk district council; and if he will make a statement. [131133]

Mr. Rooker: None.

Mr. Field: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if his Department has a target to reduce fraud and error in income support and jobseeker's allowance by 10 per cent. by 2002. [131605]

Mr. Rooker: We have now raised our targets with a view to reducing losses from fraud and error in Income Support and Jobseeker's Allowance by 25 per cent. by March 2004 and by 50 per cent. by March 2006. The expectation is that by March 2002 at least 10 per cent. will have been saved.

Parliamentary Questions

Mr. Stunell: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how many of the written parliamentary questions tabled to his Department between 19 October 1999 and 20 April 2000 have not received substantive answers, citing as the reason that the information is (a) not held centrally, (b) not held in the form requested and (c) not available. [131233]

Mr. Rooker: Of the 1,815 questions we received during this period, we answered two questions where the information was not held centrally[1], 108 questions where the information was not available in the form requested and 25 questions where the information was not available.

[1] These were answers where the information was not held centrally and could be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

CULTURE, MEDIA AND SPORT

Tourism

Mr. Peter Ainsworth: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what per capita Government spending on tourism was in (a) England, (b) Scotland, (c) Wales and (d) Northern Ireland in this last financial year; and what the planned figures are for the current year. [129724]

Mr. Chris Smith [holding answer 7 July 2000]: Grant-in-aid to the national tourist boards and per capita spend for the last financial year as well as planned figures for the current year are set out in the table.

Departmental Initiatives

Dr. Lynne Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport if he will list each departmental initiative since May 1997 requiring bids for funding together with the total resources available, the number of successful bids and the proportion this represents of total bids received; and what data he collects on the average expenditure of organisations bidding for funding through each initiative. [131081]

Mr. Chris Smith: New spending plans for the years 2001–02 and 2003–04 were considered in the current Spending Review. The outcome of the Review was announced on 18 July.

Lottery Funding

Mr. Paul Marsden: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport how much Lottery funding has been awarded by (a) the Arts Council of England, (b) the Millennium Commission, (c) the National Lotteries Charities Board, (d) the New Opportunities Fund, (e) Sport England and (f) UK Sport to organisations and individuals in Shrewsbury and Atcham in each year since 1997; and if he will make a statement. [131135]

Kate Hoey: The table shows the amount of Lottery funding, according to my Department's National Lottery Awards Database, for each of the six distributors requested for each year since 1997.

Parliamentary Questions

Mr. Stunell: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport how many parliamentary questions were tabled to his Department between 19 October 1999 and 20 April 2000 which requested information pursuant to his previous answers. [131189]

Mr. Chris Smith [holding answer 18 July 2000]: Thirty four such questions were tabled to my Department.

HEALTH

Acute Hospital Beds

Mr. Luff: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many acute hospital beds there are per 1,000 of local populations in each health authority area of England and Wales; and how many such beds there will be in the Worcestershire health authority area per 1,000 of population after the complete implementation of the authority's Investing in Excellence strategy. [125457]

Yvette Cooper [holding answer 12 June 2000]: We are committed to ensuring more beds in the whole care system. The average daily number of acute beds in 1998–99 by National Health Service trusts in England aggregated to health authority location, per 1,000 population, is given in the table. Figures for Wales are a matter for the devolved administration. There are no acute beds in this health authority because patients are treated within acute trusts in the neighbouring Birmingham health authority area, which, as a result, has a higher than average figure.

The important issue for the health service in Worcestershire is the number of patients who need to be treated and the appropriateness of their care. In line with this, the current estimate is that following hospital reorganisation there will be approximately 1,400 acute and community based beds available across Worcestershire. There will be more high dependency unit and intensive care unit beds in the new acute hospital for Worcester due to the investment the Government have made to modernise services in Worcestershire. The Government have awarded Worcestershire health authority a special allocation over the last two years to help with the re-configuration of their health services, amounting to £3.5 million in 1998–99 and £4.5 million in 1999–2000.

The report of the Government's National Beds Inquiry, set up to review assumptions about the demand for inpatient care and the implications for hospital bed numbers, was published for consultation on 10 February 2000. The consultation, which completed on 15 May, focused on how health services, and specifically hospital beds, should be developed over the next 10–20 years. The aim of the consultation is to enable us to get the right number of the right sort of beds in the right places. Our response to the consultation will be published in the summer.

The figures in the table have been created by aggregating data from NHS trusts to health authorities determined by the location of the NHS Trust's main site. Therefore, where NHS trusts have hospital sites which cross health authority boundaries (e.g. Birmingham Heartlands and Solihull) the figures do not reflect the actual number of beds located within those health authorities.

The latest figures are for 1998–99 and are available in the annual publication 'Bed Availability and Occupancy, England', copies of which are in the Library.

NDPBs (Appointments)

Mr. Allan: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many and what percentage of the (a) paid and (b) unpaid appointments which he has made to non-departmental public bodies since 1 May 1997 were women. [129840]

Ms Stuart [holding answer 11 July 2000]: A total of 429 appointments have been made to non-departmental public bodies since 1 May 1997. 289 of these were paid appointments, of which 105 (36.3 per cent.) were women. 140 were unpaid appointments, of which 51 (36.4 per cent.) were women. In addition, a total of 3,400 appointments have been made to the boards of National Health Service Trusts, health authorities and primary care trusts since 1 May 1997. All these posts are paid, and 1,695 (49.8 per cent.) of those appointed were women.

We are committed to increasing the representation of women in public life. In support of this the Department has drawn up an action plan for increasing the number of women and people from the ethnic minorities holding public appointments. The latest plans, together with the Government's overall plan, were published on 24 May 2000 in "Quangos: Opening up Public Appointments 2000–2003", copies of which are available in the Library.

Ambulance Service (Tees, East and North Yorkshire)

Mr. McNamara: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what proposals he has made to TENYAS for additional funding to enable it to meet the ORCON standards. [130423]

Ms Stuart: On 16 May 2000 we announced an additional £21 million to achieve ORCON standards, of which the Tees, East and North Yorkshire Ambulance Service National Health Service Trust (TENYAS) received £720,390.

Glyphosates

Dr. Kumar: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what the maximum safe level is of glyphosates for daily intake, per kilogram of body weight per day. [131005]

Ms Quin [holding answer 17 July 2000]: I have been asked to reply.

The World Health Organisation has established an Acceptable Daily Intake (ADI) for glyphosate of a maximum of 0.3 milligrams per kilogram of body weight. The ADI is the amount of a chemical which can be consumed every day of an individual's entire lifetime in the practical certainty, on the basis of all known facts, that no harm will result.

E.coli

Sir Teddy Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many persons suffered from the E.coli bacterium during the most recent 12 months for which figures are available; and what assessment he has made of the trends in the frequency of such outbreaks. [131419]

Ms Stuart: Provisional figures indicate there were 1,084 confirmed isolations of verocytotoxin-producing "E.coli" O157 (VTEC O157) from humans in England and Wales in 1999.

There has been a rising trend in laboratory reports of VTEC O157 from humans in England and Wales during the 1990s.

Midwifery

Ms Drown: To ask the Secretary of State for Health when the consultation process for his draft orders on regulation of midwives and other professions will commence. [131313]

Mr. Paul Marsden: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will make a statement on the timescale for consulting with the Stakeholder Reference Group on midwifery regulations. [130817]

Mrs. Spelman: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what progress the Government are making on consultation prior to introducing legislation required for the regulation of midwives and midwifery. [131308]

Mr. Denham: Consultation on the new legislation will begin shortly.

NHS Contracts

Ms Kelly: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will list the NHS contracts, with their annual value, undertaken by private sector companies for the provision of goods and services for the financial years (a) 1998–99 and (b) 1999–2000. [131156]

Mr. Denham: The information requested is not held centrally.

PFI Contracts

Mr. Matthew Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Health, pursuant to his answer to my hon. Friend the Member for North Devon (Mr. Harvey) of 3 July 2000, Official Report, column 46W, which major private finance initiative new hospital scheme has had a penalty clause invoked; what the nature of the breach of contract was; and what the penalty was under that clause. [130840]

Mr. Denham: The only instance to date of a penalty clause being invoked on a new major private finance initiative hospital scheme has been for the failure of the electrical power supply system at South Buckinghamshire National Health Service Trust. The exact value of the penalty has yet to be finalised.

Mr. Matthew Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many (a) acute and (b) immediate case beds are included in hospital projects currently being pursued under the PFI in (i) the outline business case and (ii) the final contract. [131347]

Mr. Denham: Figures for bed numbers are provided for all the major private finance initiative hospital schemes (capital value £25 million or over) which have a signed final contract. 'Acute' beds is interpreted as meaning all staffed in-patient beds excluding day case beds. In addition to providing the indicative requirement as identified in the outline business case and those to be provided under the PFI solution we have also provided the current number of staffed in-patient beds.

New PFI hospital now fully open

All of these schemes apart from UCLH reached financial close before the publication of the National Beds Inquiry (NBI) report. NHS trusts and health authorities were not required to specifically identify intermediate care bed provision as part of their service planning strategies.

UCLH revised its general and acute bed numbers in the light of the NBI report. Also following from the NBI report, all PFI and publicly funded hospital schemes under construction and which involve reductions in bed numbers have been instructed to ensure that parallel plans, for example for expanding intermediate care, should be established as quickly as possible.

Muslim Patients

Mr. Sarwar: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will make a statement on his policy on caring for Muslim patients. [130949]

Yvette Cooper: The Department's strategy for meeting the needs of minority ethnic communities, including Muslims, is to mainstream race equality issues into all aspects of its work, including policy development, NHS and social care service delivery and workforce issues. This approach was set out in the race equality agenda of the Department, published in January, and copies have been placed in the Library.

Primary Care Groups and Trusts

Sir Teddy Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will make a statement on the reasons for setting up (a) primary care groups and (b) primary care trusts; and what estimate he has made of the overall impact of the establishment of groups and trusts on the numbers employed in the administration of the Health Service. [131306]

Mr. Denham: Primary care groups and trusts are already making real differences to the way services are being provided to benefit patients across the country. They have begun to integrate the delivery of primary and community services and have started to build real partnerships with social services.

That is why they are a key part of our programme for improving care, through empowering clinicians to deliver accessible, convenient local services for patients.

In September 1999 the numbers employed in administration and estates in the health service was 204,620 (an increase of 3 per cent.). It is estimated that the real terms savings in year on total National Health Service management costs for the financial year 1998–99 were in excess of £65 million.

Drug Addiction

Mrs. Ann Winterton: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will list the number of places currently available for in-patient treatment for drug addiction in each county in England. [131315]

Ms Stuart: The information requested is not collected centrally. The number of hospital admissions in 1998–99 of National Health Service and private patients for diagnoses relating to drug misuse are shown in the table, by health authority of treatment. The data do not include treatment in private hospitals.

1. The data relate to admissions where the primary condition is shown as belonging to one of the following International Classification Diseases (ICD revision 10) diseases—Mental and behavioural disorders due to use of: opioids (F11); cannabinoids (F12), sedatives or hypnotics (F13); cocaine (F14); other stimulants, including caffeine (F15); hallucinogens (F16); volatile solvents (F18); multiple drug use and use of other psychoactive substances (F19).

2. Data in this table are grossed for both coverage and unknown/ invalid clinical data.

Contractual Liabilities

Helen Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) how many health authorities, NHS trusts or social services departments engaged Mrs. Jenny Upshall as a consultant or trainer or in any other capacity during the time she worked for Integrate Services in Warrington; and if he will estimate the cost of these services to the NHS; [130670]

(2) what advice was given to the North Cheshire Health Authority on the use of NHS funds to underwrite redundancy payments to Mr. T. Upshall and Mrs. J. Upshall of Integrate Services by (a) his Department, (b) the North-west Regional Office and (c) other public bodies; and if he will place copies of that advice in the Library. [130705]

Mr. Hutton [holding answer 18 July 2000]: Full details of Mrs. Upshall's employment history are not held by the Department. North Cheshire Health Authority took legal advice about underwriting redundancy payments; neither the Department centrally or regionally, nor any other public body as far as I can ascertain, were approached for guidance.

Pregnancy and Sexually Transmitted Diseases (Young People in Care)

Mr. Gerald Howarth: To ask the Secretary of State for Health for what reason his Department does not collect data on the incidence of pregnancy and sexually-transmitted diseases among young people who are in the care of the state; and if he will make a statement. [131416]

Yvette Cooper [holding answer 19 July 2000]: The Department does not collect data through social care systems on the incidence of pregnancy and sexually transmitted diseases among young people who are in the care of the state. Young people over 16 and those under 16 who are deemed to be Gillick-competent have the right to seek medical advice for pregnancy or sexually transmitted diseases without the consent or knowledge of parents or carers.

Within the Quality Protects programme, the Department does require councils to draw up proposals for assessing and reducing rates of teenage pregnancy in their areas, especially among those young people for whom they have parenting responsibilities.

CJD

Mr. David Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many of the cases of confirmed or probable new variant CJD in the UK have been individuals who have lived in Leicestershire; what assessment he has made of whether this constitutes a cluster which is unlikely to have occurred by chance; what investigation into this problem in Leicestershire is planned; and if he will make a statement. [131213]

Yvette Cooper [holding answer 19 July 2000]: I refer my hon. Friend to the reply I gave to my hon. Friend the Member for Stockport (Ms Coffey) on 17 July 2000, Official Report, column 78W.

Radiographers

Mr. Allan: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will make it his policy to publish annually the decisions of the Radiographers Board in relation to applications from foreign qualified radiographers to work as diagnostic radiographers in the UK, indicating the number who (a) apply by country, (b) are rejected by country, (c) appeal successfully and (d) after an adaptation period are accepted by the Board, stating the length of adaptation period. [131217]

Mr. Denham: I understand that decisions of the Radiographers Board relating to applications from radiographers qualified in other member states of the European Economic Area are provided biennially to my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry, together with decisions made by all other competent authorities in the member states. The combined figures for all member states are published biennially by the European Commission. The figures for 1997–98 were published on 1 May 2000 and are available from the European Commission Rue de la Loi 200, B, 1049, Brussels, Belgium under reference number MARKT/D4/8550/2-EN. Information about applications from other foreign qualified radiographers is available from the Radiographers Board on request.

Mr. Tynan: To ask the Secretary of State for Health for what reasons German-trained radiographers are not accepted by the Radiographers Board for work in the United Kingdom until they have completed a period of adaptation. [131218]

Mr. Denham: This is a matter for the Radiographers Board of the Council for Professions Supplementary to Medicine. The Board may require applicants from member states of the European Economic Area to complete an adaptation period or take an aptitude test where the education and training they have received differs substantially from those required for registration in the United Kingdom.

Mr. Tynan: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many radiographers qualified in Germany, who applied to the Radiographers Board for registration in the UK as diagnostic radiographers and have been rejected until they have completed a period of adaptation, have successfully appealed against the decision in the last three years. [131220]

Mr. Denham: This is a matter for the Radiographers Board of the Council of Professions Supplementary to Medicine, but I understand that there have been no successful appeals against a Board decision.

Mr. Tynan: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many radiographers who qualified in Germany and have applied for registration as a diagnostic radiographer to the Radiographers Board have been registered in each of the last three years. [131221]

Mr. Denham: The Radiographers Board has informed me that in 1997 there were two applications from German-trained radiographers of whom one was registered and one was given a period of 12 months adaptation; in 1998, there were no applications; and in 1999 there was one application which resulted in a 12 month period of adaptation. Both have successfully completed the period of adaptation and have been registered.

"Protecting Children, Supporting Parents"

Mr. Dawson: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many responses have been received to his Department's consultative paper entitled "Protecting Children, Supporting Parents" which organisations and individuals responded to the consultation; if he will place copies of the responses in the Library; and when he plans to publish the Government's proposals. [131236]

Mr. Hutton: Responses to the consultation document "Protecting Children, Supporting Parents" are still being logged, but over 865 responses had been received by the end of April 2000.

This substantial set of responses is currently being analysed and once this is complete, a summary of the views will be published, together with our proposals. We expect this to be available in the autumn.

It is not normal practice to list the names of all those who have responded, nor to place copies of responses in the Library, and we have no plans to do so. It is of course open to individuals and organisations to make their responses public, should they wish to do so.

HC1 Forms

Mr. Nicholls: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what steps he will take to simplify the HC1 form in order to reduce the number of forms which are incorrectly filled in. [130972]

Ms Stuart: The HC1 claim form has to collect all the information needed to calculate entitlement to help with health costs under the National Health Service Low Income Scheme. The options for making it simpler are therefore limited. It is already written in plain english, set out in sections and is fully "signposted" to guide people through it. It has been amended recently and the effectiveness of the latest version will be monitored closely.

Parliamentary Questions

Mr. Stunell: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many written parliamentary questions were tabled to his Department between 19 October 1999 and 20 April; and how many have not received substantive answers, with disproportionate cost cited as the reason. [131223]

Ms Stuart: Of the 2,797 Questions tabled to the Department in the period between 19 October 1999 and 20 April 2000, we were unable to answer nine questions wholly or partially without incurring disproportionate costs.

"Fit for the Future?"

Helen Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Health when he expects to announce his conclusions based on the responses received to "Fit For The Future?"; and if he will make a statement. [132064]

Mr. Hutton: I am today announcing the conclusions the Government have reached in relation to the physical standards in residential and nursing homes based on the responses to the consultation process on "Fit for the Future?". These are:

the standard for single rooms in existing care homes will be 10 sq m from 2007; the standard for single rooms in new care homes will be 12 sq m from 2002; wheelchair users should have rooms of 12 sq m and door widths of 800 mm for their own accommodation and communal rooms;

each resident should, in addition to the above, have a minimum of 4.1 sq m of communal day space within the care home; shared rooms in existing homes may constitute no more than 20 per cent. of overall resident places from 2002.

To ensure flexibility for existing provision that does not meet all of these standards but is otherwise of good quality, specific criteria will be set out over the standard relating to room sizes to allow some rooms which do not currently meet the 10 sq m standard to remain in use. These criteria will include:

an expectation that no room should fall below 9.3 sq m (equivalent to 100 sq ft) provided compensatory space either in the form of en-suite facilities or additional communal day space which residents can use individually if they wish, is made available; homes which provide spacious individual rooms, but do not currently meet the standard of 4.1 sq m communal space per resident will be allowed to meet a lower minimum of 3.7 sq m.

The net result should be that a total space of 14.1 sq m per resident is provided, with some flexibility about how it is deployed.

The standards for nine out of the 11 topic areas that we consulted upon in "Fit for the Future?" received overwhelming support and these will form the basis for the full set of national minimum standards which the Government will publish later this year.

I have today written to hon. and right hon. Members, as well as to the residential and nursing home organisations and other relevant bodies who have made representations on these issues.

Medicines Control Agency

Ms Moran: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will publish the annual report and accounts of the Medicines Control Agency. [132235]

Yvette Cooper: We have received the report and copies have today been laid before both Houses of Parliament in accordance with the requirements of sections 5(2) and 5(3) of the Exchequer and Audit Departments Act 1921. Copies have also been placed in the Library.

Medical Devices Agency

Ms Buck: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will publish the 1999–2000 annual report and accounts of the Medical Devices Agency. [132233]

Yvette Cooper: We have received the Report and Accounts of the Medical Devices Agency and copies have today been laid before both Houses of Parliament in accordance with the requirements of sections 5(2) and 5(3) of the Exchequer and Audit Departments Act 1921. Copies have also been placed in the Library.

Medicines Commission

Ms Walley: To ask the Secretary of State for Health when he will receive the annual report of the Medicines Commission for 1999; and if he will publish it. [132234]

Yvette Cooper: We have received the report, and copies have been laid before both Houses of Parliament today in accordance with the requirements of section 5(2) of the Medicines Act 1968. Copies have also been placed in the Library.

Bound volumes have been placed in the Library containing the 1999 reports of the Medicines Commission, the Committee on Safety of Medicines, the Advisory Board on the Registration of Homoeopathic Products, the British Pharmacopoeia Commission and the Veterinary Products Committee.

We are glad to acknowledge the valuable work done by the distinguished members of the Medicines Act Advisory Bodies and thank them for the time and effort dedicated in the public interest to this important work.

NORTHERN IRELAND

Drumcree

Mr. Pound: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland when he last met the Parades Commission to discuss the Drumcree marches. [125472]

Mr. Mandelson: The Parades Commission is an independent body responsible for making binding determinations on contentious parades like Drumcree. I have not met them to discuss how they carry out their function.

Departmental Payments

Mr. Chope: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what percentage of correctly presented bills were paid by his Department in (a) 1998–99 and (b) 1999–2000 within 30 days of receipt of (i) goods and services, (ii) a valid invoice and (iii) other agreed payment terms. [130045]

Mr. Mandelson: The information is as follows:

(a) I refer the hon. Member to the answer given to my hon. Friend the Member for Elmet (Mr. Burgon) on 23 July 1999, Official Report, columns 677–78W.

(b) Departments and their Agencies are currently collating this information for 1999–2000 and this will be made available to the House shortly.

Departmental Initiatives

Dr. Lynne Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will list each departmental initiative requiring bids for funding together with the total resources available, the number of successful bids and the proportion this represents of total bids received; and what data he collects on the average expenditure of organisations bidding for funding through each initiative. [131087]

Mr. Mandelson: I refer my hon. Friend to the answer given by the Chief Secretary to the Treasury on 17 July 2000, Official Report, column 93W.

Ulster Freedom Fighters

Mr. McNamara: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many persons participated in protest actions in Portadown on 2 July wearing T-shirts soliciting support for the Ulster Freedom Fighters; how many persons carried the banner with the inscription Shankill Road UFF 2 Battalion C Company; how many photographs were taken of this parade by the police; how many participants have now been identified; what actions against these persons are being taken by the police; how many have been charged with criminal offences; and if police have identified the organisers of the event. [130464]

Mr. Ingram: The investigations into this incident on 3 July are still at an early stage. However, the Royal Ulster Constabulary have advised that approximately 50 persons were dressed wearing the T-shirts referred to. Two persons carried the flag. Video tape has not yet been fully processed and the number of still photographs from it has yet to be quantified. There is an investigatory process relating to the use of video evidence and at 14 July no controlled viewings have taken place because of the demand on resources. When evidence has been fully collated and analysed, and offences and offenders identified, files will be sent to the Director of Public Prosecutions for directions. As a result of this no persons have yet been charged to date and no formal identifications yet made.

SCOTLAND

Secondments

Mr. Don Foster: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland, pursuant to his answer to the hon. Member for Harrogate and Knaresborough (Mr. Willis) of 10 February 2000, Official Report, column 279W, on secondments, if he will give the names, grades and job titles of the staff seconded into his Department from each organisation mentioned, stating in each case the name of the section they were seconded to and a summary of the work that they were involved with. [128245]

Dr. Reid [holding answer 29 June 2000]: Secondments and attachments are part of the Interchange Initiative which promotes the exchange of people and good practice between the civil service and other organisations. Before an Interchange can occur all parties must be satisfied that no conflict of interest arises.

Further information on the inward secondments to the Scotland Office referred to in my previous answer is provided as follows:

New Deal

Mr. Brady: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how many employees of his Department and its agencies have been recruited from the New Deal; and what percentage this represents of total staff. [129092]

Dr. Reid: My Department has one member of staff from the New Deal and this represents 1 per cent. of total staff.

Parliamentary Questions

Mr. Stunell: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland (1) how many of the written parliamentary questions tabled to his Department between 19 October 1999 and 20 April have not received substantive answers, excluding those not answered citing disproportionate cost, stating that the information is (a) not available, (b) not held centrally, (c) not held in the form requested and (d) citing commercial or other confidentiality; [131235]

(2) how many written parliamentary questions tabled to his Department between 19 October 1999 and 20 April did not receive substantive answers, citing as the reason commercial or other confidentiality. [131169]

Dr. Reid: The information requested is set out in the table:

Where answer states that the information is:	In respect of part of the information requested	In respect of all information requested
(a) Not available	1	1
(b) Not held centrally	4	2
(c) Not held in the form requested	0	0
(d) Citing commercial or other confidentiality	0	2

Private Finance Initiative

Mr. Matthew Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what the net present cost is of each project undertaken in his Department under the private finance initiative; what the value is of their public sector comparators in (a) pre-risk and (b) risk-adjusted terms; what risks have been identified as having been transferred; and if he will place information on other relevant costs for each private finance initiative project in the Library. [130251]

Mr. Wicks [holding answer 13 July 2000]: Net present costs of the Department's PFI projects are as follows:

£ million

		PFI contract
	ESCOM	IT Partnership	HR Partnership
Net present cost of contract	5.5	289.0	30.4
Net present cost—public sector comparator (pre risk)	24.6	353.0	38.4
Net present cost—public sector comparator (risk adjusted)	—	392.0	41.4

[1] Not calculated

The ESCOM contractor's major risk relates to the demand for the service. Both the IT Partnership and the HR Partnership contracts have transferred the risks relating to service availability and performance, which are seen as critical in the delivery of services under the contract.

The bids made during the competition to select the successful private finance initiative contractor, in particular any financial information, are commercially confidential as is any subsequent documentation directly referring to the bids. I am therefore unfortunately unable to place information on costs in the Library.

Mr. Matthew Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what estimate he has made of the cost of the Birmingham LEA grouped school refurbishment PFI project at each stage of its development; if he will list the causes of significant change in costs; and if he will make a statement. [131586]

Jacqui Smith: Birmingham local education authority's outline business case for the school rebuilds package PFI scheme was approved by the Treasury-chaired Project Review Group in December 1998 at an estimated cost in net present value (NPV) terms of £61.2 million. A contract was signed in February 2000 on the basis of a final business case which estimated the cost of the scheme, in NPV terms, at £78 million. The main causes of the increase were:

(a) improvements to the output specification—for example, to accommodate children with special needs in mainstream schools and to improve sports facilities;

(b) technical changes to the calculation of the cost of the scheme—for example, the fall in the local authority rate of discount from 8.9 per cent. to 8.4 per cent.;

(c) an underestimate in the outline business case of the cost of operation of the new and refurbished schools over the 30 year life of the contract.

The local authority has confirmed that this PFI scheme provides better value for money than would have been achieved through conventional procurement.

Vocational Training Courses

Mr. Pollard: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what action his Department is taking to provide vocational training courses in building and allied trades for non-academic school leavers; and if he will make a statement. [130643]

Mr. Wicks: The Government have made a substantial investment in vocational training for young people who have decided not to continue in learning through the academic route. Foundation and Advanced Modern Apprenticeships provide young people with a high quality work-based route to learning in over 80 sectors of industry and business. Construction is one of the more popular with some 9,200 Advanced and 4,200 Foundation Modern Apprentices in training. In order to build on the strong foundations that Modern Apprenticeships have developed we are currently consulting on how to introduce further measures which will create an apprenticeship framework which better meets the needs of the individuals and businesses; is broader and more coherent than before; offers even greater opportunities for progression including HE; secures the highest possible standards; and is part of a coherent vocational learning system.

Students in schools and colleges can take Foundation, Intermediate and Advanced GNVQs (to be known as vocational A levels) in subjects such as Art and Design, Business, Construction and the Built Environment, and Health and Social Care. These qualifications can lead on to employment, higher education or further study such as Modern Apprenticeships.

From 2002 "vocational GCSEs" will replace the current Foundation, Intermediate and Part One GNVQs and will be available for 14 to 16-year-olds in schools, as well as students in colleges, to study.

Assaults (Teachers)

Mr. Coaker: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment how many teachers have been assaulted by (a) pupils and (b) others in school in each of the last six years; and if he will make a statement. [130978]

Ms Estelle Morris: This information is not available centrally.

Reports by Her Majesty's Chief Inspector of Schools have shown that most schools are orderly places, and Ofsted inspections show that violent or exceptionally malicious behaviour by pupils is fortunately rare.

My Department's Circular "Social Inclusion: Pupil Support" provides detailed guidance to schools on managing pupil behaviour and we have made clear that we support headteachers who permanently exclude violent pupils. In addition, our Circular on "The use of force to control or restrain pupils" makes clear that teachers have the right to defend themselves against an attack provided they do not use a disproportionate degree of force. We have also issued joint guidance with the Home Office on "School Security: Dealing with Troublemakers", which offers advice about, among other things, dealing with any assaults on teachers.

Teachers (Shrewsbury and Atcham)

Mr. Paul Marsden: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment how many additional teachers have been employed since 1997 in schools in Shrewsbury and Atcham. [131143]

Ms Estelle Morris: Information on the numbers of full-time equivalent qualified teachers[1] employed within maintained primary and secondary schools in the Shrewsbury and Atcham parliamentary constituency is shown in the following table.

There was a growth of 6,900 full-time equivalent regular teachers[2] in service in the maintained sector between January 1998 and January 2000.

[1] Excludes all unqualified teachers and teachers providing short term cover as well as teachers absent for a term or more but including the latter's qualified replacements, if any—Source: Annual Census of schools.

[2] Teachers in service includes both qualified teachers (including those not in school) and teachers without qualified teacher status—Source: 618a. Regular teachers are teachers either on a permanent contract or who have a temporary contract of one month or more.

Full-time equivalent[1,2] number of qualified teachers in maintained Primary and Secondary schools in the parliamentary constituency area of Shrewsbury and Atcham: 1997 to 2000[3]

Position at January each year	Number of full-time equivalent qualified teachers
2000[3]	614
1999	607
1998	607

[1] Excludes all unqualified teachers and teachers providing short term cover.

[2] The Schools Teachers' Pay and Conditions Document has, since 1987, required a full-time teacher to be available to undertake the professional duties assigned to him or her by the headteacher for 1,265 hours allocated reasonably throughout a working year of 195 days. The 'directed' hours per week of part-time teachers are converted to full-time equivalent teacher numbers by dividing by 32.5. This conversion factor is derived by dividing 1,265 (directed hours per year) by 195 (working days per year) and multiplying by 5 (working days per week).

School Statistics

Mr. Willis: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment, pursuant to his answer to the hon. Member for Southwark, North and Bermondsey (Mr. Hughes) of 20 June 2000, Official Report, column 168W, on statistics, if he will list (a) in total and (b) by parliamentary constituency of the school, the number of unauthorised absences for 1998–99. [131190]

Ms Estelle Morris [holding answer 18 July 2000]: The number and percentage of half days missed due to unauthorised absence for 1998–99, analysed by (a) England and (b) by parliamentary constituency is shown in the following table.

Percentage of half days missed due to unauthorised absences—England 1998–99 analysed by parliamentary constituency

Individual Learning Accounts

Dr. Kumar: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment how many people have taken advantage of individual learning accounts in (a) the UK, (b) Teesside Region and (c) the constituency of Middlesbrough, South and Cleveland, East; and if he will make a statement. [131209]

Mr. Wicks [holding answer 18 July 2000]: From April 1999 to the end of April 2000 a total of 125,992 accounts had been opened through Training and Enterprise Councils (TECs). The national framework for Individual Learning Accounts became partly operational on 12 June 2000 since when an additional 8,000 Individual Learning Accounts have been opened with the national Individual Learning Accounts Centre. Tees Valley TEC have opened 4,682 Individual Learning Accounts of which 840 are held by people in the Middlesbrough, South and Cleveland, East constituency.

By April 2001 we aim to have 500,000 Individual Learning Accounts opened rising to a million by April 2002.

Dr. Kumar: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what steps he has taken to promote Individual Learning Accounts; and if he will make a statement. [131208]

Mr. Wicks [holding answer 18 July 2000]: Individual Learning Accounts (ILAs) have been available locally through Training and Enterprise Councils (TECs) in England and Wales since April 1999 and have therefore been promoted locally. A national framework for learning accounts has now been developed and a part service, where individuals and learning providers can register for the initiative, has been available since 12 June 2000. The national framework, operating a full service in England, will replace local accounts with effect from 4 September 2000. A total of 125,992 accounts have been opened through TECs by the end of April 2000 with a further 8,000 under national arrangements.

Since April this year officials from my Department have held more than 30 events with public and private learning providers to promote the introduction of the national framework. In addition, more than 750,000 leaflets setting out details of the national framework have been distributed since the part-service became operational in June. The leaflets have been sent to public and private learning providers, advice centres, partner organisations and members of the public. The Individual Learning Account website also provides our partners with regular updates and marketing information. We will build on this initial promotional work over the coming months by working, for example, with employers and trade unions, to ensure that those people who will benefit most from Individual Learning Accounts get the information they need.

Adult Education (Middlesbrough)

Dr. Kumar: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what funding plans he has made to improve (a) levels of literacy and numeracy and (b) IT skills among the adult population of Middlesbrough, South and Cleveland, East; and if he will make a statement. [131207]

Mr. Wicks [holding answer 18 July 2000]: Government support to improve adult basic skills in Middlesbrough, South and Cleveland, East includes funding for family learning, which supports programmes like 'Story Teller' and 'Computers Together'. Additional funding for family literacy and numeracy announced by my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Education and Employment in May will mean that Middlesbrough LEA will receive funding for an additional 41 'Keeping up with the Children' courses, five 'Family Numeracy' courses, five 'Family Literacy' courses and 13 'Family Numeracy' workshops.

We recognise the importance of ensuring that there are opportunities for people of all ages to develop IT skills in areas such as Middlesbrough, South and Cleveland, East.

That is why we have provided £252 million nationally to fund ICT Learning Centres. Within the Middlesbrough, South and Cleveland, East areas we have received one full application to establish two centres in the Skinningrove area, and three expressions of interest for later phases of the initiative.

The Government have already announced an additional £37 million nationally for improvements in the quality and range of adult basic skills provision, including family literacy and numeracy, over the past year. My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Education and Employment plans to announce later this year the Government's full strategy to help adults with poor basic skills.

Truancy

Mr. Cox: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what recent discussions he has had with London education departments on truancy of school children within their boroughs. [131470]

Jacqui Smith: We are in regular contact with many local education authorities in London about truancy, and the disruption it has on continuity of learning and the wider social and community costs.

We have in place a range of measures to tackle truancy and improve attendance in our schools. Our Social Inclusion: Pupil Support Grant—worth over £500 million in three years—is providing practical support to local education authorities and schools. For 2000–01, London local education authorities will receive just over £26.5 million out of the grant to support local projects. Projects include electronic equipment to monitor attendance, additional staff to chase-up truants and reward schemes for acknowledging regular attendance.

We are also encouraging local education authorities to undertake regular "Truancy Sweeps" in conjunction with the police. During these sweeps, truants are picked up from the streets during school hours and are taken back either to their schools or a designated place. Several effective sweeps have been undertaken in London with our support.

In addition, I recently announced the pilot areas to test the devolvement of Education Welfare Services to secondary schools. The aim is to see whether attendance officers employed directly by schools would make it easier to deal with truancy quickly. Of the 15 local education authorities selected, five are from London—Barnet, Camden, Haringey, Havering and Westminster. I am pleased that the pilot will be fully tested in London, in a variety of boroughs. We will be in regular contact with these authorities as the pilot progresses.

Windfall Tax (New Deal)

Mr. Allan: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what (a) amount and (b) percentage of the proceeds of the Windfall Tax allocated in the 1999 Budget to (i) the New Deal for 18 to 24-year-olds, (ii) the New Deal for the long-term unemployed, (iii) the New Deal for lone parents and (iv) the New Deal for the sick and disabled, for expenditure during the 1999–2000 financial year was (1) spent during that year and (2) carried forward for future years, indicating the reasons for underspend. [131216]

Mr. Blunkett: The following table shows the amount of windfall tax set out in the 1999 Budget Report allocated to the Department for Education and Employment, for the New Deal programmes shown, in 1999–2000 together with provisional expenditure estimates and carry forward.

£ million

Programme	1999–2000 allocation	Provisional expenditure
		Amount	Percentage	Carry forward
New Deal for young people	775	287	37	488
New Deal for long-term unemployed	222	80	36	142
New Deal for lone parents	51	34	67	17
New Deal for disabled	12	9	75	3
Total	1,060	410	38	650

[1] Expenditure figures, while unlikely to change significantly, remain provisional until end year accounts are finalised and exclude a total of £86 million spent out of existing departmental provision

[2] New Deals for lone parents and the disabled are programmes operating jointly between the DfEE and DSS and figures given are those for DfEE only

[3] Underspends are either carried forward to cover anticipated expenditure for respective New Deals into future years or made available to support the Welfare to Work programme

The numbers of people entering New Deal programmes were lower than had earlier been projected on the basis of the Government's unemployment assumption at the time. That is one major reason why expenditure in 1999–2000 was considerably below the level of the original allocation. A second reason is the success of the New Deal for young people itself which also contributed to the level of expenditure being much lower than the original allocations.

The programme aims to help as many people as possible to leave its Gateway for jobs. The original planning assumption was that 60 per cent. would need to move on from the New Deal Gateway into one of the four options. Because of the effective performance of the Gateway in 1998–99, only some 45 per cent. of entrant were in fact moving into an option. The New Deal for young people did better still in 1999–2000, when this figure reduced to some 40 per cent. Fewer young people into options has the effect of reducing expenditure on option provision, allowances and Follow-Through.

Expenditure on the Government's Welfare to Work programme is, of course, planned over the medium term and unspent resources in any single year are available for spending in future years. Revised estimates were calculated at the time of Budget 2000, to reflect our latest assumptions about unemployment and what we have now learned from experience about the way the New Deal operates.

Further Education Funding

Mr. Tony Lloyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what representations he has received about the consistency of the allocation process of funds by the Further Education Funding Council to further education colleges in Manchester, as part of the national settlement; and if he will make a statement. [131415]

Mr. Wicks [holding answer 19 July 2000]: My right hon. Friend has received a number of representations about the allocation of funds by the Further Education Funding Council (FEFC) to further education colleges in Manchester. The representations raise a series of complex technical points which the FEFC is now pursuing urgently. I will write to my hon. Friend when the FEFC has responded to the concerns raised.

Mr. Chidgey: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what assessment he has made of the possibility of legal liability arising from the overruling and reversal of advice given by officers acting for the Further Education Funding Council. [131359]

Mr. Wicks [holding answer 19 July 2000]: Any potential liability arising in the circumstances described in the question would be an issue between the Further Education Funding Council and any colleges affected.

Mr. Chidgey: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment if he will list those colleges of further education which are in dispute with the Further Education Funding Council over the interpretation of the Council's two per cent. tolerance policy based on the 1996–97 funding agreement; and what assessment he has made of the impact on those colleges' financial planning and policies of advice on interpretation of the two per cent. tolerance policy given by the Council's officers. [131358]

Mr. Wicks [holding answer 19 July 2000]: One college, Eastleigh, has lodged a formal complaint with the Further Education Funding Council and others are in discussion with the Council. A college which had assumed it could write off a 2 per cent. shortfall should now aim to make up the difference either by repaying the funds or absorbing some unfunded growth. The Council has offered flexible terms to assist any college in this position.

Performance Tables

Mr. Chaytor: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment if he will make it his policy to include the publication of pupil achievements at entry and foundation level in the annual publication of the school performance league tables. [130870]

Jacqui Smith: The achievements of pupils at foundation level are already included in the annual secondary school performance tables. The first results in Entry Level qualifications are available this year, following accreditation of courses from 1998. We have recently sought advice from the Qualifications and Curriculum Authority on the suitability of Entry Level qualifications for inclusion in the calculation of measures of value added for publication in the performance tables. Doing so would ensure increased coverage of the achievements of pupils with special educational needs in our measurement of pupils' progress in schools from one stage of education to another, in line with our overall policy of inclusion for these pupils.

Mr. Ronnie Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what plans he has to adjust the reporting of data in the school performance tables to provide a more accurate picture of schools which take in pupils from overseas with English language difficulties. [132063]

Jacqui Smith: The Government have considered very carefully the representations they have received from schools which take in significant numbers of pupils form overseas, including refugee and asylum seeker children, who have difficulties with the English language. Until they have had an opportunity to improve their language skills and to become familiar with the English curriculum, such pupils will not do their best in National Curriculum tests and in public examinations.

We have therefore decided that pupils recently arrived from overseas, with English language difficulties, should not be counted as being on school rolls when performance is calculated for the purpose of producing the primary and secondary school performance tables. This change will apply with effect from this year's performance tables, which will be published towards the end of the year. It will apply to all pupils from overseas whose first language is not English and who were admitted to an English school for the first time on or after the start of Year 5 (for the primary school tables) or Year 10 (for the secondary school tables).

Schools will be invited in the autumn to provide officials in the Department for Education and Employment with information about those pupils who fall into the category described above and who should not be counted as being on the school roll for performance tables purposes. Further details will be made available to schools early in the autumn term.

This change will apply only to school and local educational authority level data in the performance tables. National data will continue to be reported on the same basis as in previous years, with overseas pupils included.

TREASURY

National Health Service

10. Ms Drown: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will make a statement on the changes made to the level of NHS spending as a result of his Budget announcements. [130137]

Mr. Andrew Smith: In Budget 2000, the Chancellor of the Exchequer announced the biggest, most sustained growth in funding of any 4-year period in the history of the NHS, with annual average real terms growth of 6.1 per cent. in the UK, over double the rate achieved under the last Government. Table 5.1 in the Economic and Financial Strategy Report gives NHS spending plans.

Children's Tax Credit

15. Mr. Browne: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many families in Scotland will benefit from the Children's Tax Credit when it is introduced next April. [130142]

Dawn Primarolo: We estimate that 400,000 families in Scotland could benefit from the Children's Tax Credit.

24. Mr. Jenkins: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many families in the West Midlands region will benefit from the Children's Tax Credit. [130152]

Dawn Primarolo: We estimate that 450,000 families in the West Midlands region could benefit from the Children's Tax Credit.

30. Mr. Ian Stewart: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many families in the North-west region will benefit from the Children's Tax Credit when it is introduced in April 2001. [130158]

Dawn Primarolo: We estimate that 625,000 families in the North-west region could benefit from the Children's Tax Credit.

Financial Products (Mis-selling)

16. Dr. Cable: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will make a statement on the Financial Services Authority's role in respect of the mis-selling of endowment mortgages. [130143]

Mr. Timms: Where mortgage borrowers have been mis-sold an endowment, the regulators have powers to take disciplinary action which can result in firms being directed to make compensation. Lower inflation has meant that the proceeds of an endowment may be lower than initially hoped for, but that does not necessarily mean that there has been mis-selling. The borrower will also of course have benefited from lower mortgage interest payments.

22. Mr. Flynn: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what proposals he has to reduce the mis-selling of financial products. [130150]

Miss Melanie Johnson: The Financial Services and Markets Act puts in place a single regulator, with statutory objectives to maintain market confidence, protect customers, promote consumer awareness and reduce financial crime.

Single Currency

17. Dr. Julian Lewis: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what steps he has taken to measure public opinion on the question of the United Kingdom joining the single European currency. [130144]

Mr. Timms: The Government receive a large number of letters from members of the public expressing their views about UK membership of the single currency. The Government also have access to independent surveys of public opinion on UK membership, which are in the public domain.

The Government's policy on membership of the single currency remains as set out by the Chancellor of the Exchequer in his statement to the house in October 1997 and restated recently in his speech at the Mansion House.

25. Miss McIntosh: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what recent discussions he has had with the Foreign and Commonwealth Secretary about the UK's eventual membership of a European single currency. [130153]

Miss Melanie Johnson: My right hon. Friend the Chancellor of the Exchequer meets Cabinet colleagues to discuss a range of issues. The Government's policy towards the single currency has not changed and will not change. We will only recommend joining a successful single currency if it is in our national economic interest to do so, and if the economic case for the UK joining is clear and unambiguous. The Treasury will make another assessment of the five economic tests early in the next Parliament.

29. Mr. Brooke: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what recent discussions he has had with ministerial colleagues concerning his policy on the euro. [130157]

Mr. Timms: The Chancellor meets with his colleagues to discuss a range of issues.

35. Tony Wright: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will commission an independent assessment at the appropriate time of whether the five economic tests for entry into the single currency have been met. [130163]

Miss Melanie Johnson: I refer my hon. Friend to the answer I gave him on 5 July 2000, Official Report, column 200W.

36. Mr. Fallon: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what recent representations he has received on his policy on the euro. [130164]

Mr. Timms: I frequently receive representations on a range of Government policies including the Government's policy on the euro.

Business Taxation

18. Mr. Sayeed: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what recent representations he has received concerning business taxes introduced since May 1997. [130146]

Mr. Timms: The Treasury has received a number of representations from business, including comments from the Institute of Directors that the Budget shows that the Government believe in the enterprise culture.

Third-world Debt

19. Mrs. Betty Williams: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will make a statement on the IMF's role in reducing the debts of third-world countries. [130147]

Miss Melanie Johnson: The IMF has committed to providing $2.3 billion of debt relief (in net present value terms) under the enhanced HIPC initiative. In the context of assisting countries to prepare their Poverty Reduction Strategies and ensuring progress on delivering the enhanced debt relief, the IMF will work together with the World bank and the HIPC countries themselves to ensure that the benefits of this debt relief go to reducing poverty.

Education (Investment)

20. Mr. Jim Cunningham: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what the estimated cost is to public funds of his plans for investment in education in each of the next four years. [130148]

Mr. Andrew Smith: Plans for expenditure on education and training were set out by my right hon. Friend the Chancellor of the Exchequer on 18 July in the Spending Review White Paper. Expenditure on education and training in England will rise from £38.8 billion this year to £42.1 billion in 2001–02, £45.6 billion in 2002–03 and £49.2 billion in 2003–04—an average real increase of 5.6 per cent. across the three years.

21. Mr. Pearson: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what assessment he has made of the effect his tax relief on computer and IT investments will have on e-commerce in the UK. [130149]

Mr. Timms: The new 100 per cent. capital allowances on computer and IT investments will encourage small businesses to acquire the means to exploit the opportunities offered by e-commerce. These opportunities include access to markets that were previously inaccessible and potentially lower business transaction costs. Small businesses are targeted because they are less prepared for e-commerce than larger businesses. This measure complements other Government initiatives to encourage e-commerce, including investing £60 million to provide advice and planning to help small and medium-sized businesses get on line.

Tax Changes

23. Mr. Tyrie: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what representations he has received on the tax changes he has made since May 1997. [130151]

Dawn Primarolo: The Government keep all taxes under review and receive representations on a range of issues.

28. Mr. Bercow: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what assessment he has made of the effect on the finances of an average-income family of changes to indirect taxation since May 1997. [130156]

Dawn Primarolo: Information on changes in indirect taxes and the effect on typical amounts can be found in the Financial Statement and Budget Report.

Tax and National Insurance

26. Mr. Baldry: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will make a statement on the percentage of GDP which was accounted for by net taxes and social security contributions in (a) 1996–97 and (b) 1999–2000. [130154]

Mr. Andrew Smith: The Treasury updates its fiscal and economic forecasts, and the ratio of tax receipts to GDP, twice a year in the Budget and Pre-Budget Report, and most recently in the Budget Red Book, where it shows the share falling from 37 per cent. of GDP last year to 36.9 per cent. of GDP this year and 36.7 per cent. of GDP in 2003–04.

As the Chancellor said on Tuesday, the combination of a stronger economy leading to higher revenues and £4.5 billion lower spending meant that the net debt repayment last year was not £11.9 billion, as we said at the time of the Budget, but £18.1 billion.

Small and Medium-sized Enterprises

27. Mr. Casale: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what steps he is taking to promote the competitiveness of small and medium-sized enterprises. [130155]

Mr. Timms: Since 1997, the Government have cut the average corporation tax bill for small companies by nearly 25 per cent., transformed the capital gains tax system and introduced enhanced capital allowances, including 100 per cent. capital allowances for investment by small companies in ICT equipment.

The Spending Review builds on this by substantially increasing the resources available to the Small Business Service and Regional Development Agencies. This represents a comprehensive approach to improving the climate for enterprise and innovation.

Taxpayer Confidentiality

31. Mr. Jack: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will make a statement on the effectiveness of current measures to ensure the security of taxpayers' information. [130159]

Dawn Primarolo: The Inland Revenue issues a range of guidance material to staff which emphasises the need to be extremely vigilant when dealing with people over the telephone. They also issue periodic reminders to reinforce this message.

Employment

32. Angela Smith: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what assessment he has made of the effect his Department's policies have had on levels of employment in the eastern region since May 1997. [130160]

Miss Melanie Johnson: In the east, as in the rest of the UK, we have created a sound and credible platform of economic stability that will help us attain our objective of high and stable levels of growth and employment. Since the election, employment in the east has risen by 134,000 and unemployment has fallen by 59,000.

33. Ms Bridget Prentice: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will make a statement on the policies announced in the Budget to increase employment. [130161]

Miss Melanie Johnson: The Chancellor announced a range of measures in Budget 2000 which build on existing employment programmes. These policies are all set out in Chapter 4 of the Economic and Fiscal Strategy Report, which outlines progress made towards the Government's aim of providing employment opportunity for all—the modern definition of full employment.

Macroeconomic stability is a prerequisite for achieving this aim, and the microeconomic policies announced, reinforced by reforms in the tax and benefits systems, are designed to help people move from welfare into work, and to ensure that employment is rewarding, that there is a secure transition into work, and that there is the chance to gain skills which will help progression up the earnings ladder.

One of the new measures in the Budget was the introduction of Action Teams. These will work to match long term unemployed people in areas with high unemployment to nearby vacancies. As revealed last week, Lewisham is to be an Action Team area.

Married Persons Tax Allowance

34. Mr. Bill O'Brien: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what representations he has received following the abolition of the Married Persons Tax Allowance; and if he will make a statement. [130162]

Dawn Primarolo: Treasury Ministers regularly receive representations about all aspects of the tax system.

The abolition of the Married Couples Allowance for couples aged under 65, and associated reliefs, was part of a package of reforms designed to focus more support on families with children. By April 2001, we will be spending an extra £7 billion a year on support for children. As a result of all our measures, families with children will on average be £850 a year better off.

Inflation Forecasts

37. Mr. Derek Twigg: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will make a statement on the inflation forecasts set out in the Red Book. [130165]

Miss Melanie Johnson: I refer my hon. Friend to the reply I gave to my hon. Friend the Member for Hastings and Rye (Mr. Foster) on 22 June 2000, Official Report, column 286W.

Bank Closures

Mr. Ruane: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer (1) what assessment he has made of the impact of bank closures on financial activities and investment levels in communities that have experienced bank closures; and if he will make a statement; [129663]

(2) what steps he has taken to encourage banks to make social impact assessments before announcing branch closures. [129712]

Miss Melanie Johnson [holding answer 7 July 2000]: The Government have challenged banks to develop new products and delivery channels—including working closely with the Post Office on its plans for a Universal bank—to meet the financial services needs of deprived communities.

Former Civil Servants

Mr. Lansley: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer on what date Mike Burt (a) ceased to be the head of procurement practice and development at HM Treasury and (b) became Chief Executive of Cityjobs.com plc. [130054]

Ms Beverley Hughes: I have been asked to reply.

Mike Burt was an employee of my Department on loan to HM Treasury at the time of his resignation. I understand that he ceased to be the head of procurement practice and development at HM Treasury on 26 May 2000 and became Chief Executive of Cityjobs.com plc on 5 June 2000.

Cross-departmental Initiatives

Mr. Matthew Taylor: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will list the cross-departmental initiatives that his Department leads; and if he will make a statement. [130266]

Mr. Andrew Smith [holding answer 12 July 2000]: The Treasury is involved in a wide range of cross-departmental initiatives. Fifteen cross-departmental reviews were conducted as part of Spending Review 2000 and are listed on page 101 of the Spending Review 2000 White Paper. Each review was conducted by an interdepartmental team, including Treasury officials.

I refer the hon. Member to the statement made by the Chancellor of the Exchequer on the Spending Review 2000 on Tuesday 18 July.

PFI Contracts

Mr. Swayne: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how much has been spent on consultants in respect of private finance initiative projects in each of the last five years. [130504]

Mr. Andrew Smith [holding answer 17 July 2000]: The information sought is not held centrally.

Technical Note No. 3, "How to Appoint and Manage Advisers", issued by the former Treasury taskforce, sets out best practice in this area. It suggests that accounting officers may wish to take the guidance into account in accordance with their responsibilities on value for money.

Procurement Guidance No. 3, "Appointment of Consultants and Contractors", issued by the former procurement group of HM Treasury, provides advice on how to achieve value for money in the appointment of consultants and contractors.

Both publications are now the responsibility of the Office of Government Commerce.

I am today placing copies of both publications in the Library.

Working Families Tax Credit

Mr. Salmond: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what recent discussions he has had with representatives of the small business community in Scotland regarding the additional responsibilities placed on small businesses through Government fiscal policy, with special reference to the Working Families Tax Credit. [130547]

Dawn Primarolo [holding answer 17 July 2000]: The Inland Revenue has been consulting employer representatives, including those from the small business community, since May 1998 with the aim of minimising any additional costs to employers who pay tax credits through the payroll. This consultation process is ongoing.

The regulations relating to employer's involvement in Working Families Tax Credit reflect many of the comments received from the representative bodies and others during the consultation period.

Labour Statistics

Dr. Kumar: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will estimate the number of 16 and 17-year-olds who work full-time (a) in the UK, (b) in Teesside Region and (c) in the constituency of Middlesbrough, South and Cleveland, East. [131011]

Miss Melanie Johnson [holding answer 17 July 2000]: The information requested falls within the responsibility of the National Statistician. I have asked him to reply.

Letter from Len Cook to Dr. Ashok Kumar, dated 17 July 2000:

As National Statistician, I have been asked to reply to your recent question about 16 and 17 year olds in full-time employment in the UK, Teesside and the constituency of Middlesbrough South and East Cleveland.

The latest available non-seasonally adjusted data from the Labour Force Survey (LFS), which is National Statistics' main source of labour market data on individuals, show that there were 182,000 16 and 17 year olds in full-time employment in the UK in the spring (March-May) quarter of 2000.

The LFS is able to provide estimates at local or small area levels but as with any sample survey these are subject to sampling variability. The smaller the estimate, the larger the variability relative to the size of the estimate. Unfortunately, analyses of employment among 16 & 17 year olds for both the Teesside area and the Middlesbrough South and East Cleveland constituency do not provide reliable estimates.

People aged 16 or over are classed as in employment by the LFS if they have done at least one hour of paid work (as an employee or self-employed) in the week prior to their LFS interview or if they have a job that they are temporarily away from. People who do unpaid work in a family business and people on Government-supported training and employment programmes are also included according to the International Labour Organisation convention.

Financial Services and Markets Act 2000

Mr. Love: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will publish the timetable for implementation of the Financial Services and Markets Act 2000; and if he will make a statement. [131530]

Miss Melanie Johnson: I refer my hon. Friend to my answer of 18 July 2000, Official Report, column 109W.

Parliamentary Questions

Mr. Matthew Taylor: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer, pursuant to his answer of 11 July 2000, Official Report, column 508W, concerning targets for answering parliamentary questions, if he will list the performance of his Department in financial year 1999–2000 against each of the targets; and if he will make a statement. [131642]

Mr. Timms: The Treasury's targets for answering parliamentary questions relate to parliamentary sessions not financial years. We are on track to meet our targets in the 1999–2000 session: 62 per cent. of named day questions have been answered on time; 75 per cent. of ordinary written questions; and 93 per cent. of House of Lords written questions.

Economic Growth Rates

Mr. Matthew Taylor: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer, pursuant to his answer of 13 July 2000, Official Report, column 689W, what estimate he has made of the correlation coefficient of the UK against the growth rates of (a) the USA, (b) France and (c) Germany; and if he will make a statement. [131618]

Dawn Primarolo: I refer the hon. Member to the answer the Economic Secretary gave him on 3 February 2000, Official Report, column 685W.

Economic and Financial Strategy Report

Mr. Russell Brown: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will make a statement about Table 2.4 in the Economic and Financial Strategy report of March 2000. [132236]

Mr. Andrew Smith: There were some minor errors in this table affecting the decomposition of changes between projects. A corrected version is printed as follows:

Barnett Formula

Mr. Alasdair Morgan: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if EU funds for transport improvements in Scotland have been (a) paid in addition to or (b) included in, the Barnett Formula settlement in each year since 1997. [129800]

Dr. Reid: I have been asked to reply:

Public expenditure funded by the European Union for transport improvements in Scotland has been provided for in the Scottish Block (now the Scottish Assigned Budget). The level of provision is determined with regard to plans agreed with the Commission and to the submission of claims by project sponsors.

The Barnett Formula is a mechanism for determining aggregate expenditure provision for the Assigned Budget, by providing an increase in total provision over current plans equivalent to a population-based share of increases in England on comparable programmes.

CABINET OFFICE

Government Cars

Mr. Burden: To ask the Minister for the Cabinet Office if she will list by Department the numbers of cars in the Government car fleet, broken down by make of car and country of manufacture. [126550]

Mr. Ian McCartney: Information for cars operated by the Government Car and Despatch Agency, on behalf of the Government as a whole, and the Cabinet Office is set out in the table. Some Departments, such as the Department of Social Security and the Inland Revenue, operate cars in addition to those on the list but details of the make and the country of origin are not held centrally.

Agenda Computer System

Mr. Baker: To ask the Minister for the Cabinet Office, pursuant to her answer of 23 June 2000, Official Report, column 306W, regarding the Agenda computer system, what the non-IT costs were with regard to the Agenda computer system in each year since it became operational in February 1998. [129721]

Mr. Ian McCartney: The non-IT costs incurred by my Department in supporting the Agenda system since it became operational in February 1998 are summarised in the table:

Financial year	£
1997–98	4,750
1998–99	30,636
1999–2000	37,014
2000 to date	9,621

Civil Servants (Television Appearances)

Mr. Redwood: To ask the Minister for the Cabinet Office what rules govern the appearance of civil servants on television programmes about politics. [130720]

Marjorie Mowlam: Civil servants appearing on the radio or on television must comply with the requirements of the Civil Service Code and the Civil Service Management Code.

Mileage Rates

Mr. Efford: To ask the Minister for the Cabinet Office what plans she has to review the mileage rates paid to civil service staff who use their own cars to carry out contractual duties, with particular reference to bringing these rates in line with the Inland Revenue's fixed profit car scheme. [131345]

Mr. Stringer: Motor mileage rates for civil servants who use their own cars on official business are not set centrally. Departments and agencies have delegated authority to reimburse the expenses incurred by their own staff in connection with their employment.

LORD CHANCELLOR'S DEPARTMENT

Gavin Mellor

Mr. Evans: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department how much has been spent on legal aid to date in respect of the case of Gavin Mellor. [131307]

Mr. Lock: Mr. Mellor was granted a legal aid certificate on 1 February 1999, to bring judicial review proceedings against the Home Secretary's decision not to allow him and his wife access to artificial insemination facilities.

In a complex legal matter such as this, it is the practice of the Legal Services Commission to carry out periodic reviews of the case to ensure that the criteria for public funding continue to be met. It would be unusual to fund a case of this type unless a favourable counsel's opinion had been received.

As at 14 July 2000, the total amount that had been paid on the certificate was a disbursement of £277. No other bills have so far been submitted by Mr. Mellor's solicitors.

Nuisance Actions

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department what estimate she has made of the number of actions for nuisance brought in the last 12 months by local authorities for which figures are available where professional witnesses of fact were involved. [131170]

Jane Kennedy: The Court Service does not collect statistics on the reasons for the issue of possession actions such as nuisance, nor the type of witnesses involved in such cases. This information is not held centrally and could be provided only at disproportionate cost to the Department.

Freedom of Information Bill

Maria Eagle: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department when he proposes to publish a draft code of practice on the management of records under the proposals contained in the Freedom of Information Bill. [132305]

Mr. Lock: I am delighted to publish today a working draft of the Code of Practice on the management of records under Freedom of Information. Copies of the draft have been placed in the Libraries of both Houses. The report will also be available on the internet.

The aims of the Code are twofold. The first is to set out practices which bodies subject to the Freedom of Information Act should follow in relation to the creation, keeping, management and destruction of their records. The second is to provide guidance on the review and transfer of public records to the Public Record Office, to places of deposit for public records appointed under the Public Records Act 1958, and to the Public Record Office of Northern Ireland. The Code covers records in all technical or physical formats.

Any freedom of information legislation is only as good as the quality of the records to which it provides access. Such rights are of little use if reliable records are not created in the first place, if they cannot be found when needed or if the arrangements for their eventual archiving or destruction are inadequate. Consequently all public authorities are encouraged to pay heed to the guidance in the Code. Authorities should note that if they fail to comply with the Code, they may be in breach of their statutory obligations.

The Code would satisfy a duty proposed in the Freedom of Information Bill.

Electronic Records

Maria Eagle: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department when he intends to publish a policy statement on electronic records management. [132306]

Mr. Lock: The Government's policy on electronic records management was published in April. It is called the "Framework for Information Age Government: Electronic Records Management, an Annex to e-government, A strategic framework for public services in the Information Age". Copies of the report have been placed in the Libraries of both Houses. The report is also available on the internet.

Effective management of electronic records is essential to the Information Age Government programme. The replacement of manual and paper based processes with electronic processes requires the development of effective records management, covering existing as well as new electronic records. In government such records must be managed so as to retain their integrity, authenticity and accessibility through migrations as hardware and software change and to conform with the relevant Data Protection and Freedom of Information regulations.

Any electronic government record is potentially a public record and for this reason all such records will be subject to additional controls including retention and disposal scheduling and prevention of content alteration.

The development of a common system of electronic records management will facilitate collaboration between Government Departments and agencies.

Parliamentary Questions

Mr. Stunell: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department how many parliamentary questions were tabled to his Department between 19 October 1999 and 20 April which requested information, pursuant to his previous answers. [131225]

Mr. Lock: According to departmental records covering the relevant period, six parliamentary questions were tabled to the Lord Chancellor's Department requesting information pursuant to previous answers.

HOME DEPARTMENT

Mr. Miller: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how he intends to allocate in the current year the money recently agreed for police forces in rural areas. [132066]

Friend the Member for The Wrekin (Mr. Bradley) of 15 June 2000, Official Report, column 714W, announced provision of £15 million, made available in the Budget, for assistance to police forces in rural areas this year.

Leave to Remain Application Forms

Dr. Palmer: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what plans he has to replace the current application forms for foreign nationals wishing to apply for leave to remain in the United Kingdom. [132067]

Mrs. Roche: The current application forms are valid for use only until 14 October 2000. Revised forms will be prescribed before then. It is planned to make them available before the end of September. From the time they are issued until 14 October 2000, applications may be made on either the newly prescribed forms or the present versions. Only the new forms may be used for applications made on or after 15 October 2000. Copies will be placed in the Library as soon as they are available.

Criminal Records Bureau

Ms Coffey: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department when he will announce the outcome of the invitation to tender for the Criminal Records Bureau Information Systems and Services; and if he will make a statement. [132068]

Mr. Charles Clarke: The Criminal Records Bureau issued an invitation to tender on 12 June 2000, for the provision of information systems and services through a public private sector partnership. Three firms had previously been shortlisted, and they provided their submissions in response to the invitation to tender on 28 June.

Following a thorough evaluation against separate qualitative and financial criteria, Bernard Herdan, chief executive of the Criminal Records Bureau, has accepted the recommendation of the tender evaluation board that the tender from Capita should be selected as the one which is the most economically advantageous based on the best combination of technical design, customer service, quality, schedule, risk transfer and cost. The Criminal Records Bureau and Capita will now commence preferred supplier negotiations with a view to awarding a contract in the near future, subject to completion of a satisfactory appraisal and business case.

National Probation Service

Mr. Pond: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how he plans to meet urgent expenditure relating to the new National Probation Service for England and Wales prior to the enactment of the Criminal Justice and Court Service Bill. [132069]

Mr. Boateng: Parliamentary approval for expenditure on the new National Probation Service for England and Wales will be sought in a Supplementary Estimate for the Home Office Vote (Class IV Vote 1). Pending that approval, urgent expenditure estimated at £670,000 will be met by repayable advances from the Contingencies Fund. This expenditure is required to ensure that the National Probation Service would be able to come into effect on 1 April 2001, subject to the successful passage of the Criminal Justice and Court Services Bill.

Reform of the Probation Service is key to the Government's crime reduction and effective punishment strategy. Current plans envisage a vesting date of 1 April 2001 for the new National Probation Service. This date is key for delivering operational effectiveness gains, which would otherwise be lost or significantly delayed. Two critical ingredients of reform are changes in governance and leadership of the new service and it is in these areas that urgent expenditure would be incurred. The critical path for achieving the target date is dependent upon starting the process of selection to the 42 new probation boards, and the recruitment of chief officers for the eight amalgamated services, by July.

New Deal

Mr. Brady: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many employees of his Department and its agencies have been recruited from the New Deal; and what percentage of total staff this represents. [129143]

Mr. Straw: I refer the hon. Member to the reply I gave the hon. Member for Buckingham (Mr. Bercow) on 22 July 1999, Official Report, column 618W, and also the reply given by my right hon. Friend the Minister for the Cabinet Office and Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster (Marjorie Mowlam) to my hon. Friend the Member for Bradford, North (Mr. Rooney) on 6 July 2000, Official Report, column 286W.

Since my reply of 22 July 1999 the number of people recruited to the Home Office and its agencies under New Deal has increased to 25. This represents 0.71 per cent. of the total number of administrative assistants and equivalent grades (the grade at which New Dealers are engaged) in the Home Office.

In addition, a further 39 people on New Deal have secured employment with the Prison Service through normal recruitment channels. This brings the percentage up to 1.83 per cent. of the total number of staff in the grade.

Police Numbers (Suffolk)

Mr. Ruffley: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will list the number of serving police constables in the Suffolk Constabulary in (a) 1996–97, (b) 1997–98, (c) 1998–99 and (d) 1999–2000. [130761]

Mr. Charles Clarke: The number of constables in the Suffolk Constabulary is set out in the table and is for 31 March of each year.

Suffolk Constabulary

Financial year (as at 31 March)	Number of constables[1]

Road Safety (Cyclists)

Mr. Ben Chapman: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many people have been prosecuted under section 30 of the Road Traffic Act 1988 for being drunk in charge of a bicycle. [131244]

Mr. Charles Clarke: Information for 1989 to 1999 taken from the Home Office Court Proceedings Database is given in the table.

Number of defendants prosecuted for the offence of riding a pedal cycle under the influence of drink or drugs, England and Wales, 1989–99

Year	Number of defendants prosecuted

1996	85

1998	98
1999	84

[1] 1999 data are provisional

Mr. Bob Russell: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department when on-the-spot fines for cyclists riding on the pavement were introduced; and how many have been imposed. [131062]

Mr. Charles Clarke: Cycling on the pavement was made a fixed penalty offence on 1 August 1999. The fixed penalty is not an on-the-spot fine: payment is not required on-the-spot and the person receiving it can challenge its issue in court. In the period August to December 1999, 39 police forces in England and Wales issued 570 fixed penalty notices for the offence of cycling on the pavement; figures for the other four are not available.

Asylum Seekers

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department, pursuant to his answer of 4 July 2000, Official Report, column 166W, ref. 128237, how many asylum seekers were supported in 1999–2000. [130841]

Mrs. Roche: In 1999–2000, asylum seekers were supported by either the Department of Social Security or local authorities. The available information shows that in the final quarter of 1999–2000, there were estimated to be 49,660 asylum seeker principal applicants being supported by the Department of Social Security each month. In the week ending 31 March 2000, 35,815 asylum seeker principal applicants were being supported by local authorities in London.

Information on asylum seeker principal applicants supported by local authorities outside of London is not held centrally.

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department, pursuant to his answer of 4 July 2000, Official Report, column 166W, on asylum seekers, for what reason information on average decision times was not available; and if he will make a statement. [130843]

Mrs. Roche: Average times for initial decisions were calculated until the end of 1999. In December 1999 the average time taken to reach initial decisions was 13 months. The Immigration and Nationality Directorate (IND) are setting in place new systems, which will enable average decision times to be calculated and to report the percentage of applications receiving an initial decision within two months.

Details of the time to final resolution, as previously requested, are not available as there is no source from which to obtain this information. IND and the Lord Chancellor's Department are working together to enable such information to be available in future.

Mr. Gordon Marsden: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many staff have been allocated to the performance monitoring inspections team for asylum seeker accommodation providers; how many of these staff will be engaged on personally inspecting accommodation and support arrangements; and what targets have been set for the proportion of asylum seeker accommodation to be inspected by the performance monitoring inspections team. [131424]

Mrs. Roche: It is currently anticipated that the performance monitoring section of the National Asylum Support Service (NASS) will comprise of around 83 staff. About 20 of these will be involved in personally inspecting accommodation. Inspections will also be carried out by the property advisers to the civil estate. The remaining staff in the performance monitoring section will be engaged in carrying out investigations into complaints and allegations of fraud. Final targets have not yet been set but the accommodation inspection team is required to have inspected all NASS contracted houses of multiple occupancy of 20 bed spaces or more by 31 March 2001.

Regulation of Investigatory Powers Bill

Mr. Beith: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if the Regulation of Investigatory Powers Bill implements the recommendation in paragraph 65 of the 1999 report of the Commissioner for the Interception of Communications relating to sections 6 and 7 of the Official Secrets Act 1989. [130945]

Mr. Straw: Clause 18 of the Regulation of Investigatory Powers Bill implements the recommendation in paragraph 65 of the report. It imposes a duty on all those involved in the interception of communications in obedience to a warrant to keep secret the existence and contents of a warrant and anything done in pursuance to it. It also creates a criminal offence where a person makes a disclosure to another of anything that he is required to keep secret, and sets out certain statutory defences.

Football (Disorder)

Sir Nicholas Lyell: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will list the nature of the several offences committed by the 390 UK citizens arrested at Charleroi in Belgium during Euro 2000, indicating how many had committed each such offence. [131401]

Mr. Straw: As I told the House in my Statement on 4 July 2000, Official Report, columns 170–183, 965 England supporters were arrested or detained during Euro 2000. Of these, 391 had previously been convicted of a criminal offence. The National Criminal Intelligence Service advise that these people had between them: 133 convictions for violence, 200 for disorder, 38 for the possession of an offensive weapon, 122 for criminal damage and 250 for other offences. Some supporters will have been convicted of more than one type of offence.

Sir Nicholas Lyell: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will list in relation to each of the past five years the periods which would have been control periods in relation to external tournaments, pursuant to paragraph 14(6) of the Football Spectators Act 1989 as amended by the Football (Disorder) Bill. [131402]

Mr. Straw: The Football (Disorder) Bill defines the term "control period" in respect of an external tournament. It relates to any period beginning five days before the day of the first match of the tournament. If this was applied to external tournaments involving England and Wales within the last five years, the designated control periods would be: Friday 5 June—Friday 17 July 1998 (World Cup—France 98) and Monday 5 June—Friday 7 July 2000 (Euro 2000—Holland/Belgium).

Rape

Mr. Cox: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many cases of alleged rape were reported in England and Wales in 1999 which resulted in charges being brought against the alleged perpetrators. [131164]

Mr. Charles Clarke: The number of cases reported to the police and persons charged for rape offences are not available centrally.

The number of rape offences recorded by the police, and the number of cautions, prosecutions and convictions for rape offences[1] are as follows:

	Number
Rape offences recorded in 1999–2000	8,409
Cautions for offences of rape 1999[2]	33
Prosecutions for offences of rape 1999[2]	2,157
of which:
Convictions	634

[1] Includes offences of rape and attempted rape
[2] Provisional

It should be noted that as the recorded crime figures relate to offences, and the number of cautions, prosecutions and convictions relate to defendants, the two types of data are not directly comparable.

Armed Police Officers

Mr. Cox: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department on how many occasions armed police officers were called to incidents in the Greater London area during the last 12 months. [130766]

Mr. Charles Clarke: Over the period 1 July 1999 to 30 June 2000, armed officers were called to a total of 26,743 incidents in the Greater London area. Of these, armed officers were actually deployed in 1,494 incidents. Deployment is defined as the use of armed officers to resolve the incident.

Departmental Initiatives

Dr. Lynne Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will list each departmental initiative since May 1997 requiring bids for funding together with the total resources available, the number of successful bids and the proportion this represents of total bids received; and what data he collects on the average expenditure of organisations bidding for funding through each initiative. [131089]

Mr. Straw: The information requested for Home Office initiatives for which grants are given, including those subject to a competitive bidding process, for the four financial years from May 1997 to 2000–01 is provided in the table.

[1] Initiatives not subject to a competitive bidding process.

[2] Initiatives for which the bidding process is still in progress, as the total and successful number of bids are not yet known.

[3] The Crime Fighting Fund was set up to enable recruitment of 3,000 police officers over and above current levels. All 43 police authorities bid for funding and all were successful in at least part of their bid.

[4] Grant funding arrangements for NASS arose out of an existing relationship with the refugee voluntary sector. There are no plans to put bids for these initiatives out to competitive tender until after 31 March 2000. The existing organisations receiving funds will be notified of such a move by 31 March 2001.

Note:

1. The figures for 2000–01 are estimates and could be subject to in-year changes. The figures do not take account of any locally funded initiatives undertaken by individual prisons nor all those funded by the Home Office's non-departmental public bodies, as such detail could be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

The figures for "successful bids" and "proportion of total bids" are for 2000–01 only, as figures for the three previous years could also be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

The table does not include specific grants to bodies where these were initiated before May 1997. Nor does the table include the Capital Modernisation Fund and the Invest to Save Budget, which are not Home Office specific initiatives.

The data collected on average expenditure of organisations bidding for funding through each initiative is dependent on the type of grants and size of payment. The minimum requirements are that an organisation provides:

either, a copy of the receipts and payments accounts and Assets and Liabilities Statement (or, if one is produced, an Income and Expenditure account), or, in the case of charities or organisations with a turnover in excess of £1,000,000, a copy of the Income and Expenditure account, balance sheet, external audit report or independent accountants' opinion.

New Year's Eve 2000–01

Mr. Pike: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what steps he plans in respect of extending licensing hours on new year's eve 2000–01. [130946]

Mr. Mike O'Brien: We still hope to have made a deregulation order under the Deregulation and Contracting Out Act 1994 to reduce the present restrictions on Sunday dancing in time to be of benefit for the coming new year's eve. Such an order, as well as removing the statutory ban on commercial dancing, would give licensing justices the power in appropriate cases to extend permitted drinking hours on Sunday nights on licensed premises providing entertainment in the form of music or dancing.

So far as other licensed premises are concerned, any extension of permitted hours nationally would need a separate deregulation order under the 1994 Act. The timescales for statutory public consultation and the subsequent parliamentary process are dictated by the 1994 Act, and it is now unlikely that the process could be completed in time for next new year.

Under existing licensing law, it remains the case that any holder of a justices' on-licence may apply to the licensing justices in his or her area for a special order of exemption extending permitted hours during a special occasion such as new year's eve.

Computer Disasters

Mr. Fabricant: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what estimate he has made of the time it would take to get new computers running in the wake of a major computer disaster in his Department. [130971]

Mr. Straw [holding answer 19 July 2000]: Each computer system used by my Department has contingency arrangements in accordance with its operational needs. The timing of recovery to normal working depends on the nature of the system and the extent of the disaster, but would be planned to be commensurate with importance of the business process concerned.

These arrangements are part of wider business continuity plans, which were reviewed recently as part of preparations for the year 2000 date change.

Parliamentary Questions

Mr. Stunell: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) how many of the written parliamentary questions tabled to his Department between 19 October 1999 and 20 April have not received substantive answers, excluding those not answered citing (a) disproportionate cost, (b) that the information is not available, not held centrally, or not held in the form requested and (c) commercial or other confidentiality; [131124]

(2) how many of the written parliamentary questions tabled to his Department between 19 October 1999 and 20 April have not received substantive answers, excluding those not answered citing (a) disproportionate cost, (b) that the information is not available, not held centrally, or not held in the form requested and (c) commercial confidentiality or other confidentiality. [131122]

Mr. Straw [holding answer 18 July 2000]: My Department answered a total of 2,751 written parliamentary questions between 19 October-20 April 2000. Other than for the reasons set out in my replies to the right hon. Member for Caithness, Sutherland and Easter Ross (Mr. Maclennan) on 23 June 2000, Official Report, columns 339–40W, and on 4 July 2000, Official Report, columns 165–66W respectively, there were no other occasions when I gave non-substantive replies.

Clay Pigeon Shooting

Sir Teddy Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what estimate he has made of the number of persons involved in clay pigeon shooting, both as (a) participants in the sport and (b) employees of the organisations providing the facilities. [131305]

Kate Hoey: I have been asked to reply.

My Department has contacted Sport England, UK Sport and the Clay Pigeon Shooting Association to request the information required, and I will write to the hon. Member as soon as it is available, placing copies of my letter in the Library of the House.

EDUCATION AND EMPLOYMENT

Parliamentary Questions

Mr. Stunell: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment how many of the written parliamentary questions tabled to his Department between 19 October 1999 and 20 April have not received substantive answers, excluding those not answered citing disproportionate cost, stating that the information is (a) not available, (b) not held centrally, (c) not held in the form requested and (d) citing commercial or other confidentiality. [131234]

Mr. Wills [holding answer 20 July 2000]: Of replies to parliamentary questions tabled to the Department during the period citing commercial or other confidentiality, I refer the hon. Member to the reply I gave on 29 June 2000, Official Report, column 575W.

In addition, five replies stated that the information was not available, 27 replies stated that information was not held centrally and 20 replies stated that the information was not held in the form requested.

Holiday Absences

Mr. Pickthall: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what discussions he has had with travel companies about the differential costs of holidays that encourage holiday absences in schools. [131468]

Jacqui Smith [holding answer 20 July 2000]: We are engaged in on-going discussions with the Association of British Travel Agents (ABTA) to see what we can do together to reduce the number of family holidays taken during term time.

As a result of earlier discussions, ABTA wrote to all its members on 15 December 1999, asking them to remind parents of the implications of taking holidays in term time. ABTA members were also requested to remind parents of the importance of discussing their plans with the school before making any firm commitment.

Our recent guidance to all schools, "Social Inclusion: Pupil Support" underlines this approach. The guidance makes clear that while parents should not normally take children out of school for holidays, each request for absence should be considered individually, taking into account factors such as the time of the year proposed for the holiday and the overall attendance pattern of the pupil.

We will continue to talk to ABTA about the issue of family holidays during school term time, and to get the message across to parents that they must consider the impact of absence from school during term time on children's education.

Public-Private Partnership Initiatives

Mr. Steen: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what money has been provided for Public-Private Partnership initiatives to all South West local education authorities in each of the last two years. [131581]

Jacqui Smith: In 1998–99, local education authorities in the South West bid successfully for a total of £4.12 million New Deal for Schools funding to support Public-Private Partnerships. In 1999–2000, South West local education authorities received £3.28 million from the same source for Public-Private Partnerships, plus £14.2 million in PFI credits for a schools Private Finance Initiative scheme.

Mr. Steen: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment if he will list those schools that have received money for Public-Private Partnership initiatives in each of the last two years. [131606]

Jacqui Smith: 120 and twenty schools in 1998–99, and 230 schools in 1999–2000, are benefiting from projects supported by the Private Finance Initiative. In addition, we are supporting a number of Public-Private Partnership schemes through the New Deal for Schools, in which the following schools are benefiting:

1998–99

Canterbury High School
Foxton Primary School, Cambridgeshire
Hartsbourne JMI School, Hertfordshire
Homelands Primary School, Torquay

Teachers' PRP

Mrs. May: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment if he will set out the terms of contract for external assessors under the teachers' performance-related pay scheme, with particular reference to the length of term of such contracts; and what additional costs will be incurred as a result of the High Court judgment of 14 July. [131752]

Ms Estelle Morris: Cambridge Education Associates (CEA) have been contracted by DfEE to recruit, deploy and quality assure external assessors. In turn CEA contract with individuals to work as threshold assessors. The terms of this contract are a matter between the individual and CEA. The length of the contract depends on the individual assessor's availability to work for CEA. It is not yet clear what, if any, additional costs will be incurred as a result of the High Court Judgment of the 14 July.

Mrs. May: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what estimate he has made of the costs which will be incurred if the School Teachers' Pay Review Body recommends changes to the standards set for teachers to meet the threshold requirements under performance-related pay and all applications have to be re-submitted. [131753]

Ms Estelle Morris: The Department has asked the School Teacher Review Body to start the process of consulting formally on the threshold standards. At this time it is not possible to say whether the Review Body will recommend any changes. Therefore the Department cannot estimate the costs that will be incurred at this stage.

Mrs. May: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what advice he received prior to the recent court ruling on teachers' performance-related pay concerning how the (a) determination and (b) imposition of threshold standards under the teachers' performance-related pay scheme should be dealt with, with particular reference to his statutory powers. [131974]

Ms Estelle Morris: My right hon. Friend receives advice as appropriate before he takes decisions.

Sheffield Education Action Zone

Mrs. May: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment if he will publish the HMI report on the Sheffield Education Action Zone. [131754]

Ms Estelle Morris: Ofsted intends to publish reports on those Education Action Zones which are formally inspected. A report on the Education Action Zones in Sheffield will be published if these zones are selected for inspection.

Employment Service

Ms Ryan: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what customer service level for employers target will be set for the Employment Service in 2000–01. [132477]

Mr. Blunkett: In a first for executive agencies, I have set the Employment Service a customer service target for employers. ES is committed to working closely with employers to help them to fill their vacancies and in doing so encourage them to open up more opportunities to disadvantaged jobseekers. The setting of such a target reinforces the ES's commitment to achieving the highest standards of customer service. In addition to the challenging goals that I have already announced, the setting of a stretching but realistic target level for employer service will help the ES to achieve the high level of performance that I expect of it in 2000–01.

I am today announcing the target level that I have set the Employment Service for 2000–01 which relates to customer service for employers.

The new target is contained in Objective C of the annual performance agreement text which follows.

PA Text

Vision and Purpose

"The Employment Service aims to make a major contributions to an efficient and flexible labour market and to the Government's objectives of high and stable employment and growth, equality of opportunity and social inclusion. ES works closely with employers and with its private, voluntary and public sector partners to provide a quality service for all people without a job and to promote employment opportunities for all who can work. It aims to attract a diverse range of vacancies and to fill those vacancies quickly by matching the right people and skills with the right jobs. Its chief priority is to help individuals facing particular difficulty in the labour market to move from welfare and economic inactivity into sustainable employment. It does this through correct application of the JSA regime, delivery of the New Deals and the pilot ONE service, and provision of appropriate information, advice, training and support. The Agency has achieved much over the past three years. The challenge and opportunity now facing it is to sustain continuous improvement in its services to jobseekers and employers and to make those services more accessible and relevant to customer needs, through effective use of modern technology and close working with a wide range of partners".

Aim

To help people without jobs to find work and employers to fill their vacancies.

Objective A

To help all people without jobs, and particularly those on welfare and at a disadvantage in the labour market, to find and keep work by providing appropriate information, advice, training and support and by encouraging employers to open more opportunities to them.

Targets

1. To help 178,000 participants in the New Deals and all Employment Zones into work, directly or in partnership with others.
2. To help 100,000 people with disabilities into work, directly or in partnership with others.
3. To help 295,000 disadvantaged jobseekers into work, directly or in partnership with others.
4. To help 735,000 people from welfare into work, directly or in partnership with others.
5. To help 1,325,000 jobless people into work, directly or in partnership with others.

Objective B

To ensure that the rights and relevant labour market responsibilities of people on JSA and other benefits are fulfilled, while helping to combat fraud and abuse of the benefit system.

Target

To ensure that the relevant labour market responsibilities of people on JSA are fulfilled in 90 per cent. of cases checked.

Objective C

To harness new technology, the pursuit of excellence and continuous improvement to deliver effective, efficient and accessible services to all people without jobs and to employers in Jobcentres and, increasingly through other locations and means of communication.

Targets

1. To achieve a 90 per cent. customer service level for jobseekers.
2. To achieve an 80 per cent. customer service level for employers.

Milestone Targets

1. To introduce the Learning and Work Bank, new Labour Market System, touch-screen kiosks and a single national telephone number for employers by March 2001.

2. To achieve a successful transfer of Work Based Learning for Adults to ES in England by April 2001.

Objective D

To deliver services to all ES customers in a way which respects individual differences, helps to overcome disadvantages due to ethnicity, gender, age or disability and achieves the best possible outcome for each of them.

INTERNATIONAL DEVELOPMENT

South and West Asia Drought

Ms Kingham: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what the humanitarian impact is of the drought affecting south and west Asia; and how the Government are responding. [132627]

Clare Short: The drought is part of a regional system affecting a belt of countries across west and south Asia. Its effect on the population is particularly acute in southern Afghanistan, western India, southern and central Pakistan, and to a lesser extent parts of Iran and Iraq. Water shortages have been exacerbated in many areas by poor management of limited sources. The principal effects of the drought include reduced crop production, sharp drops in household income, death of livestock and weakening of remaining herds, and health problems associated with reduced food intake and scarcity of water.

We have committed over £3.2 million for relief projects in response to the drought regionally. This support has been channelled through the World Food Programme for food distribution and food for work programmes; and through NGOs for schemes that target the more remote and vulnerable communities unlikely to be benefiting from Government schemes. We have also seconded a five-person team of specialists to support the UN in their assessment of the drought in Pakistan. We are monitoring the situation carefully and currently considering what further assistance to provide.

Zimbabwe

Mrs. Gillan: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what reports she has received of delays in the payment of pensions to former civil servants in Zimbabwe; if she will make representations to the Government of Zimbabwe calling for the timely payment of such pensions; and if she will make a statement. [131971]

Mr. Hain: I have been asked to reply.

We are well aware of the delays in the payment of pensions by the Zimbabwe Government. We believe that the main cause for this has been a lack of foreign exchange. The British High Commission in Harare has lobbied the Pensions Department and the Reserve Bank. We will continue to press for timely payment.

DEFENCE

Combat Gloves

Mr. Duncan Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence (1) what complaints have been made by the Defence Clothing and Textiles Agency to Feuchter in relation to the fitness for purpose of the Mark II combat gloves they have delivered; [129727]

(2) what experience Feuchter had in the manufacture of gloves prior to being awarded the contract for manufacture of the Mark II combat glove in 1998; [129726]

(3) how many Mark III combat gloves were manufactured in the UK by Feuchter; and how many Mark II combat gloves manufactured (a) by Feuchter and (b) by other companies have been (i) held to be unusable and (ii) rejected as unfit for their purpose; [129728]

(4) how many gloves were manufactured by Zova before expert glove cutting training was given to its staff; [129730]

(5) pursuant to his answer of 19 June 2000, Official Report, column 30W, on visits to Zova, what capabilities for glove making, as distinct from other leather working, this company demonstrated. [129729]

Mr. Spellar [holding answer 7 July 2000]: The pre-production sample of Mark II Combat Gloves provided by Feuchter was found to be unacceptable. Feuchter took the necessary action to improve their production process and, as a result, all gloves subsequently delivered under the terms of the contract proved to be acceptable. No gloves manufactured by Feuchter were therefore formally rejected under the terms of the contract. Following inspection by DCTA staff, a total of 3,260 pairs of Mark II Combat Gloves manufactured by other companies were, however, rejected as being unfit for purpose.

Feuchter held five other DCTA contracts for the manufacture of mittens (extreme cold weather—inners, outers and liners), prior to the award of the contact for the manufacture of Mark II Combat Gloves in 1998. For the duration of the contract for the manufacture of the Mark II Combat Gloves, Feuchter sub-contracted the manufacturing operation to Zova in Poland; no gloves were manufactured in the UK by Feuchter. During their visits to view the manufacturing operation, DCTA staff were satisfied that Zova possessed the necessary capabilities for the manufacture of leather gloves, although a requirement for some additional training on the table cutting operation was identified. Some 47,000 pairs of gloves had been manufactured by Zova before this additional training was provided. No other leather working was being undertaken at the time of the visits, as Zova's manufacturing capacity was fully committed to fulfilling DCTA contracts.

Army (Clothing Orders)

Mr. Duncan Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence, pursuant to his oral answer of 3 July 2000, Official Report, column 11, concerning the proportion of the Army's clothing orders which go to British firms, what percentage of these orders was made up by clothing manufactured in the United Kingdom. [130441]

Mr. Spellar [holding answer 13 July 2000]: The Defence Clothing and Textiles Agency (DCTA) procures clothing for all three Armed Services, with many items common to all three. To separate the cost of clothing destined specifically for the Army could be provided only at disproportionate cost. However, during the financial year 1999–2000, of the 83 per cent. of clothing contracts placed by the DCTA with British-based companies, and referred to in my answer of 3 July 2000, Official Report, column 11, 48.9 per cent. by value will be manufactured in the United Kingdom.

PFI Contracts

Mr. Alan Williams: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will list the PFI contracts entered into by his Department, indicating (a) their dates of commencement, (b) their value, (c) if they have been subject to refinancing and (d) if his Department has a clawback entitlement to share in savings arising from refinancing. [129046]

Mr. Spellar: Details of the PFI deals signed by the Ministry of Defence up to 10 July 2000 are shown. To date one of these has involved refinancing. Nine of the contracts have provision for sharing benefits shown in the form of clawback. In other contracts, alternative means of protecting the Department's interests are available.

Mr. Spellar: The numbers of foreign military personnel who have been involved in military training in the UK in the year to 31 March 2000 are listed. This is the latest period for which statistics are available. They include all overseas military personnel trained by UK military personnel, or contracted civilian instructors, on UK military establishments or ships (or Royal Fleet Auxiliary ships). They also include some overseas military personnel studying at academic institutions in the UK.

Defence Evaluation and Research Agency

Mr. Alasdair Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence, pursuant to his answer of 29 June 2000, Official Report, column 593W, on the Defence Evaluation and Research Agency Base, West Freugh, if he will specify the employees included under the item 16 others. [131461]

Mr. Hoon: This is a matter for the Chief Executive of the Defence Evaluation and Research Agency. I have asked the Chief Executive to write to the hon. Member.

Letter from John Chisholm to Mr. Alasdair Morgan, dated 21 July 2000:

As Chief Executive of the Defence Evaluation and Research Agency (DERA), I am replying to your further parliamentary question about staff at our site at West Freugh.

In addition to DERA, MOD and SERCO staff, there are 16 contractors employed by SDS Thorn involved in the operation of DERA's satellite reception and control station located at West Freugh. This facility is part of our space department and is not related to the test and evaluation activities conducted on the range.

I hope this is helpful.

Former Yugoslavia

Mr. Robathan: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many reservists in total have served in Former Yugoslavia since 1992. [129933]

Mr. Spellar: The number of Royal Navy and Royal Marines reservists who have served in the Former Yugoslavia since 1992 is 49. In addition, seven officers have served in support of operations in the Former Yugoslavia. They have been employed in the UK, elsewhere in Europe, and at sea.

At least 5,581 Territorial Army and Army Reserve personnel have served in the Former Yugoslavia since 1992. I will write to the hon. Member once the complete data become available and a copy of my letter will be placed in the Library of the House.

The Royal Air Force no longer holds any records relating to reserve personnel called out prior to 1997–98. Since 1997–98, 308 members of the Reserve Air Forces have been mobilised. This figure includes those called out in support of operations in the Former Yugoslavia as well as those who have served in country.

Service Personnel

Mr. Cox: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many (a) men and (b) women who are serving in the armed forces are under the age of 18 years. [130774]

Mr. Spellar: As at 1 June 2000, there were 5,228 men and 569 women under the age of 18 in the armed forces.

Troop Deployment

Dr. Kumar: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many British troops are serving in (a) Kosovo and (b) Sierra Leone; how many of these are from the Teesside region; and if he will make a statement. [130497]

Mr. Spellar [holding answer 17 July 2000]: We currently have some 3,300 troops committed to operations in Kosovo and around 500 committed to operations in Sierra Leone. Information on the geographical origin of individual troops involved in these operations is not held centrally and could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

RAF Boards of Inquiry

Mr. Field: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will list the occasions in the last 10 years when the conclusions of the president of an RAF board of inquiry have been over-ruled by reviewing officers. [131256]

Mr. Spellar [holding answer 18 July 2000]: I will write to my hon. Friend and a copy of my letter will be placed in the Library of the House.

Chinook

Mr. Field: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will preserve all files and papers relating to the procurement and introduction of the FADEC system for the Chinook Mk2. [131257]

Mr. Spellar [holding answer 18 July 2000]: We are not aware that any files or papers relating to the procurement and introduction of the FADEC system for the Chinook Mk2 have been destroyed and have no intention of destroying them while public interest in this matter continues. However work on the FADEC system for the Chinook Mk2 began in 1988 and it is possible that some of the earlier papers have been destroyed.

RAF Pilots

Mr. Martlew: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what the establishment of pilots is in the RAF; how many are in post; and if he will make a statement. [131408]

Mr. Spellar: The position on 1 June 2000 was as follows:

	Requirement[1]	Trained strength	Surplus/ deficit
Pilots-All Ranks	2,338	2,210	−128
Junior Officer Pilot[2]	1,496	1,404	−92

[1] The requirement figure is the usual baseline against which the RAF measures shortfalls or surpluses and includes non-flying posts for which aircrew experience and knowledge are required. The majority of these non-flying posts require senior officers.
[2] Flight Lieutenant (and Squadron Leader specialist aircrew) and below, included in the all ranks total. Junior Officer Pilot is the RAF's most critical manning category.

MOD Police

Mr. Martlew: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what plans he has to review the age of retirement for MOD police. [131406]

Mr. Spellar: My officials are currently reviewing age retirement policy for all departmental employees including the Ministry of Defence Police.

RAF Fairford

Mr. Drew: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will make a statement on proposed future uses for RAF Fairford. [131532]

Mr. Spellar [holding answer 20 July 2000]: There are no plans to change the current status of RAF Fairford.

Mr. Drew: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will make a statement on the proposal to introduce US airforce stealth bombers to RAF Fairford. [131561]

Mr. Spellar [holding answer 20 July 2000]: The US are examining an operational concept in which in a crisis aircraft would be deployed to forward operating locations. This concept would not involve any permanent stationing of aircraft at these locations, but some equipment would be pre-positioned. However, the concept is still being studied and no request to use RAF Fairford, or any other UK base, has yet been made. RAF Fairford has of course been used as a standby operating location in the past, most recently during the Kosovo campaign.

TRADE AND INDUSTRY

Communications White Paper

Angela Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what progress is being made towards preparation of the Communications White Paper. [132481]

Mr. Byers: As announced on 17 May 2000, Official Report, columns 130–31W, we invited a number of experts to prepare papers which they have now presented at a seminar held on 3 July. We asked them to examine a range of policy issues against some guiding objectives for the Communications White Paper. These are:

(i) The creation of the most dynamic market possible for communications services, especially in the light of the growth of the e-economy;

(ii) Ensuring universal access to diverse services of the highest quality;

(iii) Guarding consumer interests—protection, choice and value for money.

A report on the seminar has been prepared by the chair of the event, Sir Quentin Thomas. Copies of all the papers, which represent the personal views of the authors, have been placed in the Library and also on the Communications White Paper website http://www.communicationswhitepaper.gov.uk. They offer an important contribution to the debate.

We have also received 139 submissions, which are also being placed on the website, and are currently analysing those alongside the issues discussed at the seminar, with a view to publication of the White Paper later this year.

Action Plan for Farming

Mr. Breed: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry (1) if he will make a statement on the tendering process for consultants supplying business information to farmers under the Action Plan for Farming; [131806]

(2) if he will estimate how many farmers will benefit from the business advice announced in the Action Plan for Farming; and if he will make a statement; [131804]

(3) if he will estimate the cost per consultant of supplying advice to farmers through the Small Business Service; [131807]

(4) how many consultants will be employed by the Small Business Service to provide advice specifically to farmers as a result of the announcement in the Action Plan for Farming. [131805]

Ms Hewitt: MAFF's budget for the Farm Business Advice Service in 2000–01 should enable up to 5,000 farmers and growers in England to be helped. It will be for Business Links, which will deliver the service, to decide in the light of local circumstances how many consultants to engage, at what rates and by what tendering process.

Small Business Service

Mr. Breed: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry how many rural businesses have received advice from the Small Business Service in the last 12 months. [131902]

Ms Hewitt: The Small Business Service (SBS) provides advice to all SMEs but data collected on users do not differentiate between rural and urban location.

Personal Computers

Dr. Palmer: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if the Office of Fair Trading will publish its research, undertaken last year, into the retail market for home personal computers. [131682]

Dr. Howells: The Office of Fair Trading is currently considering with the providers of the research data the copyright and confidentiality implications of disclosure of some or all of the information to a complainant.

Dr. Palmer: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what plans the Office of Fair Trading has to meet representatives of Dixons, Compaq and Packard Bell in the next three months in relation to the market for home personal computers. [131683]

Dr. Howells: The Office of Fair Trading will meet representatives of Dixons, Compaq and Packard Bell in relation to the market for home personal computers, if and when necessary.

Dr. Palmer: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if the Office of Fair Trading has met representatives of Dixons, Compaq and Packard Bell in the last three months in relation to the market for home personal computers. [131681]

Dr. Howells: The Office of Fair Trading has not met representatives of Dixons, Compaq or Packard Bell in the last three months in relation to the market for home personal computers, but has had correspondence with some of these companies.

Dr. Palmer: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if the Office of Fair Trading will reopen its inquiry into the competitiveness of the retail market for home personal computers. [131684]

Dr. Howells: The Office of Fair Trading is actively considering a complaint in this area.

Coal Industry

Mr. Redwood: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry on what date he expects to start paying the recently announced grants to the coal industry. [131821]

Mr. Byers: As I indicated to the House on 17 April 2000, Official Report, columns 697–712, we expect funds to be made available during the course of this financial year.

Shipbuilding

Mr. Robathan: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will list those who attended the meeting he held on 13 July to discuss shipbuilding. [131192]

TREASURY

Personal Data

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer, pursuant to his answer of 19 April 2000, Official Report, column 582W, how many licence applicants, grant applicants and other data subjects described in his answer the Revenue had obtained personal data about from the London Borough of Waltham Forest; what steps his Department has taken to inform applicants for licences and grants and recipients of payments of this disclosure to the Revenue; and if the arrangements for the London Borough of Waltham Forest apply to all local authorities within London. [129188]

Dawn Primarolo: The personal data supplied by the London Borough of Waltham Forest to the Inland Revenue are supplied under legal obligations. These obligations arise from the issue of statutory notices which require the Borough to make returns. The Inland Revenue does not normally disclose information about the returns made by a person or a body. Whether the London Borough of Waltham Forest is prepared to make this information public in response to a direct request is a matter for the Borough.

The Inland Revenues does not inform data subjects individually about any disclosure of their personal data. It complies with its obligations under the Data Protection Act 1998 to process personal data fairly and lawfully by publishing a Data Protection Act statement which is widely reproduced on its forms and guidance notes.

All London Boroughs are required to produce similar information.

Employment Tax Credit

Mr. Matthew Taylor: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer, pursuant to his answer of 19 April 2000, Official Report, column 588W, what estimate he has made of total expenditure on the Employment Tax Credit under the illustrative system outlined in the Treasury paper, Supporting Work Through an Employment Tax Credit, including that part which is currently included in the Working Families Tax Credit; and if he will make a statement. [130647]

Dawn Primarolo: The illustrative employment tax credit outlined in the Treasury paper "Tackling Poverty and Making Work Pay—Tax Credits for the 21st Century" includes an estimate of around £300 million a year as the cost of extending support to people without children. This is based on extending the adult credit in the Working Families Tax Credit under certain specified assumptions. These assumptions, and the modelling involved, apply only to people without children.

As noted in paragraph 3.22 of the paper, details of eligibility and the relative size of the credits for singles and couples do not have to be the same for parents and non-parents. The precise design parameters are under consideration and will not be finalised until nearer the time of the introduction of the new credits.

Children's Tax Credit

Mr. Sarwar: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will outline the measures taken by his Department to publicise the new Children's Tax Credit in (a) Scotland and (b) the United Kingdom. [130957]

Dawn Primarolo: The campaign to publicise the new Children's Tax Credit began on 19 June 2000 and ran throughout both (a) Scotland and (b) the United Kingdom for a total of four weeks. The measures taken comprised national, ethnic and women's press, local radio, and direct mail.

Working Families Tax Credit

Mr. Sarwar: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what proposals he has to improve the method by which the Working Families Tax Credit is calculated. [130958]

Dawn Primarolo: The findings from the current evaluation of the Working Families Tax Credit and the Disabled Person's Tax Credit will inform the design of the employment tax credit and the integrated child credit which will be introduced from 2003.

Land Settlement Association

Mr. Gummer: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer when (a) he and (b) his Ministers consulted with the Board of Inland Revenue on the Land Settlement Association's compensation arrangements. [131474]

Dawn Primarolo: Treasury Ministers have received representations about the raising of tax changes by the Inland Revenue in respect of out of court compensation paid by MAFF to a number of former tenants of the Land Settlement Association. However, Ministers do not intervene in individual cases. The Inland Revenue's independence from Treasury Ministers in the handling of individuals' tax affairs and the application of the tax law must be scrupulously observed.

Capital Allocations

Mr. Kidney: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what action he intends to take to monitor the spending by Departments of their capital allocations. [130145]

Mr. Andrew Smith [holding answer 20 July 2000]: Capital spending is monitored by monthly returns from Departments to the Treasury. In addition, as part of the 2000 Spending Review, each Department has been asked to prepare Departmental Investment Strategies setting out their plans for allocating and managing future investment. These will be published in the autumn.

PRIME MINISTER

Office Costs

Mr. Baker: To ask the Prime Minister what has been the cost of his Office for each year from 1997 to date; and what is the estimated expenditure for 2000–01. [126504]

The Prime Minister [holding answer 20 June 2000]: Before coming to office the Government clearly set out its aim to have a strong strategic centre of government.

Since May 1997, some of the administrative burdens on my office have greatly increased. For example, extra staff have had to be employed to deal with over 500,000 items of correspondence received by my office in the last year—an 84 per cent. increase over the previous year. This compares with an estimated 25,000 items received annually five years ago.

The actual costs of my office were £6.9 million from 1 May 1997 to 31 March 1998; £8.7 million in 1998–99 and £10.4 million in 1999–2000.

SOCIAL SECURITY

Pensions Ombudsman

Mr. Paul Clark: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he has undertaken a quinquennial review of the Pensions Ombudsman. [132478]

Mr. Rooker: The quinquennial review of the Pensions Ombudsman has been undertaken in accordance with the Government's modernising agenda. Copies of the report have been placed in the Library.

Social Security Leaflets

Mr. Rendel: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what omissions and ambiguities were found during the systematic review of the social security leaflets conducted between 1996 and 1999; and what changes were made to the leaflets in consequence. [131903]

Angela Eagle: We have carried out more than one systematic review of Social Security leaflets since 1996.

Between 1996–99, the Benefits Agency undertook a wholesale review of its customer information leaflets with the aim of making them much more customer focused. This piece of work involved primary research and continuous product testing, as well as consultation with key stakeholders. The leaflets were redesigned and the information within them laid out differently, but the core information was not altered.

In June 1999 a further review was commissioned to identify any erroneous information that needed to be removed or any information which was missing from our leaflets.

This exercise was completed in August 1999 and no major amendments were identified. There were a few minor changes made due to a combination of minor omissions and lack of cross-referencing. Revisions and future changes were also identified around JSA leaflets. These future changes being incorporated later in the year.

The Benefits Agency review resulted in the roll-out of a new suite of leaflets; fewer in number by a third, better targeted to client groups and easier for customers to negotiate their way around. Full evaluation of these new leaflets is in progress; all the early indications are positive.

Insurance Policies (Redemption)

Mr. Miller: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will list the circumstances in which his Department requires insurance companies to divulge redemption values of policies held by claimants. [132022]

Mr. Bayley: A person claiming an income-related benefit may be asked to provide evidence of the value of any capital asset. Depending on the type of asset this may be the face value, the market value or the surrender value. However, evidence would not normally be sought if it was clear that the value would be disregarded. For example, the surrender value of life insurance policies is fully disregarded. No evidence of surrender value would be needed in this case.

ENVIRONMENT, TRANSPORT AND THE REGIONS

West Coast Main Line

Mr. Pollard: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what action his Department is taking to ensure that Railtrack's plans for the West Coast Mainline upgrade provide sufficient train paths to make possible an expansion of existing commuter and freight services; and if he will make a statement. [130232]

Mr. Hill: The Rail Regulator and the Franchising Director are ensuring that the needs of all train operators using the West Coast Main Line (WCML) are met by Railtrack's plans for the provision of train paths. The Rail Regulator has issued an order requiring Railtrack to produce final plans and options for the WCML upgrade. In particular, he is seeking information about the extent to which these plans would meet the capacity commitments which Railtrack gave to the Rail Regulator in April 1998. The Rail Regulator also issued a consultation document on 20 June about reviewing the increased costs associated with the WCML upgrade as part of his periodic review of Railtrack's access charges. He is consulting widely on these costs, which have risen from the original estimate of £2.3 billion to a new figure in the region of £5.85 billion. These figures will be subjected to considerable scrutiny and discussion with the Franchising Director before the Rail Regulator announces his draft conclusions later this month.

Housing Investment

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what projection he has made of the level of housing investment in 2001–02; what the figure was in 1996–97; and if he will make a statement. [130484]

Mr. Mullin: Capital resources for housing investment in 1996–97 were £2.1 billion. Following the 1998 Comprehensive Spending Review, plans for 2001–02 were £3.1 billion and my right hon. Friend the Chancellor of the Exchequer announced on Tuesday that housing investment in 2003–04 will be £1.6 billion higher than now. Full details of the new spending plans for housing in 2001–02 to 2003–04 will be announced in the next few days.

Fuel Taxation

Mr. Brake: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what assessment he has made of the environmental impact of the relative costs of and levels of taxation on fuel products transported by (a) pipeline, (b) rail and (c) road; and if he will make a statement. [130716]

Mr. Hill: The Government have not undertaken a specific assessment of the environmental impacts or cost implications of the transportation of fuel products by different modes of transport. All fuel products are distributed from the refinery to the final consumer in the UK through a combination of pipeline, rail, road or ship, although the exact modes of transport used vary depending on where the fuel is refined and consumed.

Lifecycle environmental analysis indicates that, regardless of the mode of transportation, the distribution of fuel products is only a small element of the overall lifecycle environmental impacts from fuel products, and the extraction, production and especially consumption of the fuel causes far greater environmental damage. The cost of distributing fuel products is also relatively low in comparison with underlying fuel prices, although the cost of distribution increases the further the consumer if away from a major fuel terminal which can be supplied by ship or pipeline.

London Underground

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions, pursuant to his answer of 3 July 2000, Official Report, column 84W, if he will specify the problems with the final trainborne element of the Automatic Train Operation signalling system; and if he will make a statement. [131366]

Mr. Hill: There are two faults which have developed: stopping inaccuracy and overrunning platforms. Almost all station stops are now to specification. Minor stopping inaccuracy no longer causes significant service delay.

The problems with ATO arise from the train failing to register the station properly and overrunning the station platform. Although this creates no safety risk, it causes disruption for customers and the timetable.

The Central Line should be fully ATO operational by the end of the year subject to HMRI approval.

Departmental Initiatives

Dr. Lynne Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions if he will list each departmental initiative since May 1997 requiring bids for funding together with the total resources available, the number of successful bids and the proportion this represents of total bids received; and what data he collects on the average expenditure of organisations bidding for funding through each initiative. [131082]

Ms Beverley Hughes: I refer my hon. Friend to my right hon. Friend the Chief Secretary's reply of 17 July 2000, Official Report, column 93W.

Roadworks

Mr. Kidney: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions if he will introduce legislation to make provision for compensation for loss of business caused by roadworks carried out by highway authorities. [131250]

Mr. Hill: Highway works ultimately benefit the whole community. Occupies of premises may be entitled to compensation if something is done improperly (for example, the blocking of access without authority) but not otherwise. Businesses have no right in law to any given level of passing trade, and may suffer temporary loss owing to disruption of traffic flows. Trade may fluctuate for a variety of reasons, and accurately assessing the losses directly attributable to works in the highway can be difficult. There is, too, an element of 'windfall' profit and loss: often when one trader suffers a rival business in the neighbourhood stands to gain custom as a direct result of the same works. There are therefore no plans to introduce legislation to create legal liability to compensate anyone for loss of trade when a highway authority properly executes road works under its statutory powers.

Roads (PFI Contracts)

Mr. Matthew Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what the estimated rate of return on capital is to the contractors under the PFI contracts for roads. [131351]

Mr. Hill: The internal rates of return for the eight trunk road DBFO projects in England were estimated at the time of contract award to lie between 9.5 and 13.9 per cent.

Departmental Press Office

Mr. Loughton: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions, pursuant to the Cabinet Office memorandum of 16 June 1998 to the Select Committee on Public Administration, published in its report on the Government Information and Communication Service, Session 1997–98, HC 770, and using the same methodology, if he will calculate (a) the total cost of his Department's press office, including salary and running costs, in (i) 1998–99, (ii) 1999–2000 and (iii) 2000–01 and the estimated cost for 2001–02 and (b) the total number of people employed in the press office (excluding staff providing general administrative support) in 1999–2000, and the projected estimates for (1) 2000–01 and (2) 2001–02. [130802]

Ms Beverley Hughes [holding answer 17 July 2000]: The costs of the Department's media centre (formerly press office) from 1995–96 are as shown in the table:

	Staff numbers	Total running costs (£ million)
1995–96	36.0	[1]—
1996–97	26.1	1.09
1997–98	26.3	1.04
1998–99	30.2	1.29
1999–2000	38.3	1.55
2000–01	38.2	1.61
2001–02	37.0	[2]1.61

[1] Costs are not available
[2] Estimate

The costs (staff salaries only) are consistent with those for 1996–97 and 1997–98 given for the Department, and former Departments of Environment and Transport, in the memorandum dated 16 June 1998 to the Select Committee on Public Administration and published in its report on the Government Information and Communication Service (HC 770) in July 1998.

The figures are based on the average staff in post (up to and including 1999–2000) and projected average staff in post for the subsequent years.

The increase in staff from 1998–99 to 1999–2000 reflects the filling of vacancies at that time and the need to respond to the recommendations of the Mountfield report on the Government Information and Communication Service (1997).

Rail Investment

Mr. Paul Marsden: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions if he will make a statement on how the planned increase in rail investment will benefit Shrewsbury and Atcham. [131159]

Mr. Hill: The planned increase in rail investment, provided for in the 10-year Plan for Transport, will enable progress to be made on a number of initiatives of benefit to Shrewsbury and Atcham, for example, modernisation of the West Coast Main Line and the Midland Capacity Study of congestion blackspots in the West Midlands. Improvements in local service patterns will result from changes in franchise boundaries in line with the indicative map of likely franchises published by the Shadow Strategic Rail Authority on 20 June. Improvements in journey quality will result from investment in new rolling stock by Virgin Trains and by operators of local train services. The planned increase in rail investment also involves a continuation of the Rail Passenger Partnership scheme, which provides funding for worthwhile projects put forward by local stakeholders.

Port Waste Reception Facilities

Mr. Salmond: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what representations he has received concerning the indirect fee proposal regarding the EU Draft Directive on port waste reception facilities; if he intends to support the proposal; and if he will make a statement. [130557]

Mr. Hill [holding answer 17 July 2000]: The UK has been involved at every stage of the Directive on port waste reception facilities and strongly supports the principles which it embodies. The European Parliament and the Council, meeting at the Conciliation Committee, agreed the Directive on 28 June.

During the negotiation of the Directive, my Department consulted closely with a range of bodies—including those representing the UK shipping, ports and waste industries and environmental non-governmental organisations—on the practicalities of the proposal that ships calling into a port of an EC member state contribute to the costs of waste reception facilities, irrespective of actual use of the facilities. The consensus was that ease of use and meeting the operational needs of the ships regularly using the ports were the key factors. Latterly, I have received representations from the Kommunenes Internasjonale Miljøorganisasjon (KIMO) supporting the principle of a charge being levied irrespective of use. I have also received representations from the North Sea Commission and the Wadden Sea Cooperation which have focused on the manner in which the charge should be calculated.

The Directive substantially mirrors current UK port waste management legislation and practice (the merits of which have also been recognised by the International Maritime Organization, which agreed guidelines, earlier this year, which are based on the UK model).

M6

Mr. Martlew: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions when he plans to invite tenders for the construction of the M6 between Carlisle and the Scottish border. [131410]

Mr. Hill: As this is an operational matter for the Highways Agency I have asked Peter Nutt, the Acting Chief Executive, to write to my hon. Friend.

Letter from Peter Nutt to Mr. Eric Martlew, dated 22 July 2000:

The Transport Minister, Keith Hill, has asked me to reply to your recent question about the timing of the tender invitations for the construction of the M6 extension to the M74.

We are in the process of appointing design agents with the aim of holding public consultation next year. Progress thereafter will depend on how quickly we can complete the statutory procedures. As with all schemes in the Targeted Programme of Improvements announced in 1998, the aim is to start work within seven years, although we will better that if we can.

Cross-ticketing

Mrs. Anne Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what discussions he has had with the Strategic Rail Authority to ensure that, following the new rail franchises affecting services between Cambridge and London, steps will be taken to ensure the facility exists for cross ticketing across the two train operating companies. [131520]

Mr. Hill: At least one type of ticket between any two points on the network is regulated by the Franchising Director. Regulated tickets must be inter-available, that is for use on the trains of any operator. This does not and will not necessarily apply to unregulated ticket types. Operators may choose to restrict the availability of these tickets in order to offer the passenger the option of a lower fare in return for giving up some flexibility. Where restrictions apply to the use of any tickets, this has to be made clear at the point of sale.

Kelda Group

Mr. Willis: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what representations he has received concerning the proposal by Kelda Group to mutualise the assets of the former Yorkshire Water company. [131464]

Mr. Meacher [holding answer 19 July 2000]: My Department has received several written representations on this proposal from customers and others.

The Director General of Water Services issued a public consultation document on the issues raised, inviting comments by 17 July. The Director General has received written representations in response. The proposals were also discussed at a meeting in Leeds on 6 July, arranged by the Yorkshire Customer Service Committee, to which the public were invited, addressed by representatives of Kelda, the proposed Yorkshire Water Mutual, the Drinking Water Inspectorate, the Environment Agency and Ofwat.

Mr. Willis: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what powers he has to stop the Kelda Group from selling the assets of Yorkshire Water. [131466]

Mr. Meacher [holding answer 19 July 2000]: Under the Water Industry Act 1991 the Director General of Water Services has a duty to act in the manner he considers best calculated to secure that the interests of customers are protected. The Director General has powers to modify the conditions of appointment of Yorkshire Water Services as a statutory undertaker by agreement with the company. If agreement cannot be reached between the Director General and the company he can refer the case to the Competition Commission. The Secretary of State can also require the case to be referred to the Competition Commission, which would consider whether modification of the licence were needed in the public interest.

Mr. Willis: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what plans he has to order Kelda Group to extend the period of consultation over its plans to mutualise the assets of the former Yorkshire Water. [131465]

Mr. Meacher [holding answer 19 July 2000]: The Director General of Water Services has said that he considers that more consultation with customers is necessary before the proposal by Kelda could go ahead. Following receipt of responses to his earlier consultation paper, he intends to publish a position paper on the issues raised by Kelda's proposal before 31 July, including how best such further consultation should be conducted.

Federation of Master Builders

Mr. Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what discussions he has had with the Federation of Master Builders in the last 12 months; and if he will make a statement. [131574]

Ms Beverley Hughes: My Department has regular discussions with the Federation of Master Builders, as with other construction trade associations, on a range of policy issues.

Freightliners

Mr. Jenkin: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions, pursuant to his answer of 11 July 2000, Official Report, column 505W, if the Government are considering applications for grant aid for track access charges from Freightliner's competitors. [132017]

Mr. Hill: The Department's Freight Grants Unit is currently considering applications for track access grant from English Welsh and Scottish Railway, and Mendip Rail.

Inter-tidal Wetlands

Mr. Llew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what steps he has taken to improve the protection of inter-tidal wetlands. [131991]

Mr. Mullin: The Countryside and Rights of Way Bill, currently before Parliament, contains provisions to enhance the protection given to Sites of Special Scientific Interest (SSSIs), including those designated for wetland interests in the inter-tidal area. The Bill will provide for, among other things, for a more structured approach to management advice and a new power to refuse consent for damaging activities, the development of management schemes to help combat neglect, the introduction of management notices, increased penalties for deliberate damage, a new court power to order restoration of the damaged special interest, where this is practicable; and a new general offence to apply to damage by any person.

In addition, public bodies will be under a statutory duty to further the conservation and enhancement of SSSIs, both in carrying out their operations and exercising their decision-making functions.

My Department has also set up a review to evaluate the success of previous statutory and voluntary marine nature conservation measures and to put forward proposals for improving marine nature conservation in England. Among other things, this involves looking at the protection currently afforded to inter-tidal areas. The Review may also inform separate proposals for marine conservation in Wales.

Farmers' Markets

Mr. Breed: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what plans he has to relax the planning regulations with regard to the establishment of farmers' markets. [131811]

Ms Beverley Hughes: Part 4 of the Town and Country Planning (General Permitted Development) Order 1995 (GPDO) SI 1995 No. 418 grants a general planning permission for the temporary use of land for up to 28 days in any calendar year, subject to a number of restrictions and conditions. In the case of markets, the permitted use is limited to a total of 14 days in recognition of the parking, litter and noise problems that often arise from such uses. We have no current plans to relax these provisions.

Air Agreements

Sir Sydney Chapman: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions, pursuant to his answer of 9 May 2000, Official Report, column 360W, concerning fifth freedom rights, for what reason the UK Government have rejected applications from Singapore for fifth freedom transatlantic rights. [131907]

Mr. Mullin: I refer the hon. Member to the reply I gave to the hon. Member for Chesham and Amersham (Mrs. Gillan) on 13 June 2000, Official Report, column 557W.

Planning (South-east)

Mrs. Gillan: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions, pursuant to his answer of 3 July 2000, Official Report, column 83W, if he will provide a breakdown of the cost to date met by his Department and the Government Office for the South-east of distributing copies of draft regional planning guidance for the South-east; and if he will make a statement. [131972]

Ms Beverley Hughes: The costs to date met by my Department were for the initial despatch of draft regional planning guidance for the South-east, from the Department's distribution contractor. The cost incurred by the Government Office for the South-east, covered postal distribution from the Government Office and included a small amount for courier distribution.

Joint Nature Conservative Committee

Mr. Hinchliffe: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions if a quinquennial review of the Joint Nature Conservation Committee is due; and if he will make a statement. [132373]

Mr. Meacher: A review of the Joint Nature Conservation Committee (JNCC) will begin shortly. In accordance with standard practice, the review will begin by examining the functions and structure of JNCC before moving on, if appropriate, to look at performance issues. Detailed terms of reference are being drawn up. I expect the review to be completed by the early summer of 2001.

Queries or comments about the review may be made to Roger Pritchard, head of the European Wildlife Division in DETR at Room 907, Tollgate House, Houlton Street, Bristol, BS2 9DJ.

A339 (Newbury)

Mr. Rendel: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions when the detrunking of the A339 through Newbury will be completed. [131904]

Mr. Hill: I have asked the Chief Executive of the Highways Agency, Mr. Peter Nutt, to write to the hon. Member.

Letter from Peter Nutt to Mr. David Rendel, dated 21 July 2000:

The Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions has asked me to reply to your recent question about when the detrunking of the A339 through Newbury will be completed.

It is not possible to say when detrunking of the A339 through Newbury will be completed but I can assure you that we intend to do this as soon as we can. It is, of course, dependent upon the satisfactory completion of legislative procedures and we are continuing our discussions with West Berkshire Council. We will need to carry out some work to the road prior to detrunking and that work will have to be co-ordinated with other planned work on the local road network to minimise inconvenience to motorists and local residents.

If you would like to discuss this matter further, John Timms, the Highways Agency's Route Manager for the A339 (telephone 01306 878208), would be happy to talk to you.

EU Structural Funds

Sir Teddy Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what assistance will be provided to local councils in England which have had areas classified as having Objective 2 status following the spending review. [131913]

Ms Beverley Hughes: When the guidelines for the Objective 2 programmes were drawn up, it was agreed that any funds provided by the EU would have to be "matched" by corresponding funds drawn from the public and private sector of the member state.

In England it was decided that to emphasise the fact that the drawing up and implementing of these programmes rested with the local partnerships, they should be responsible for securing the match funding.

This approach to match funding is designed to ensure that there is local commitment to pursue the projects that are to be funded and that an innovative approach is taken to securing the funding.

The role of the central Government in the framework of the structural funds is to provide advice, guidance and monitoring. In terms of match funding, its role is to guide partnerships toward the many sources of potential funding, both private and public.

While the Government make no guarantee of direct match funding, the spending review has increased funding available in the regions for those programmes which local partners can look to for match funding. This is obviously good news for those areas with EU Structural Funds.

National Bus Company Pensioners

Ms Rosie Winterton: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions if he will make a statement on progress on the distribution to National Bus Company pensioners of the settlement sum paid over last July. [132479]

Mr. Hill: Distribution of the settlement is the responsibility of the National Bus Company pension trustees. We recognise this is a complex and substantial task but we have made clear to the trustees that we expect it to be completed as quickly as possible.

I am pleased to note that interim payments were made in April to 8,000 pensioners who began receiving their Standard Life pension before April 1986 and that there will be interim payments from 1 August for post-1986 Standard Life pensioners who were members of the NBPF or who are widows of BEST or NBPF members.

I understand that there will be a court hearing next week which the trustees hope will clear the way for further interim payments to be made as soon as possible.

The Government hope that all concerned will do their utmost to remove any remaining obstacles to completion of the distribution without any unnecessary delay. We will remain in close touch with the trustees.

Rent Assessment Panels

Angela Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions when he expects to publish the report on the Financial Management and Policy Review of Rent Assessment Panels in England. [132557]

Mr. Mullin: I have today published a report on a review of Rent Assessment Panels in England, recommending a range of measures for improving the quality and effectiveness of the Panel service.

We want to retain the Rent Assessment Panels as independent and expert bodies to deal with fair rent appeals and resolve disputes between leaseholders and landlords. However, there are a number of areas where the Panels, and the committees and tribunals drawn from them, need to improve their performance and make themselves more accessible to parties who use them.

The report lays the foundation for raising standards of expertise and ensuring best practice across the Panels. A flexible, more simplified process for all parties and changes to the way in which the Panels are managed and organised will reduce the time taken for decisions to be reached by committees and tribunals. We are looking to implement the report recommendations as soon as possible.

Copies of the report have been placed in the Library of the House.

Local Government

Mr. Coaker: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what responses he has received to the consultation papers, "The Local Government Bill 2 Consultative Draft of Proposed Guidance and Regulations on New Constitutions for Councils", and "The Local Government Bill; The Conduct of Referendums and Elections for Directly-Elected Mayors". [132626]

Ms Armstrong: To date we have received 122 written responses to "The Local Government Bill 2nd Consultative Draft of Proposed Guidance and Regulations on New Constitutions for Councils" and 28 responses to "The Local Government Bill; The Conduct of Referendums and Elections for Directly Elected Mayors". The responses, which we are now considering carefully, contain a wide range of helpful comments and suggestions, with clear support for many of the amendments made after the first consultation round.

A list of all the responses has today been placed in the Library of the House and full copies of the responses are available from my Department's library.

CULTURE, MEDIA AND SPORT

Welsh Soccer

Mr. Öpik: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what representations he has made to the BBC calling for increased coverage of Welsh soccer and Welsh soccer league results; and if he will make a statement. [130927]

Janet Anderson: My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State has made no such representations to the BBC.

It is a well established principle of the Government's approach to broadcasting that we do not seek to intervene or comment on detailed issues of programming content or scheduling. These matters are properly for broadcasters' editorial judgment subject to independent regulation.

Millennium Dome

Mr. Llew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what plans he has to allocate the revenue from the sale of the Millennium Dome (a) towards the running costs of the NMEC Exhibition at the Dome and (b) to English Partnerships for regeneration programmes. [130848]

Janet Anderson: I refer my hon. Friend to the answer I gave on 11 July 2000, Official Report, columns 481–82W, to the hon. Member for East Surrey (Mr. Ainsworth).

Mr. Peter Ainsworth: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport if stamp duty will be payable on the disposal of the Dome. [131372]

Janet Anderson [holding answer 18 July 2000]: As in all acquisitions of assets, stamp duty will become payable in accordance with the Stamp Acts.

New Millennium Experience Company

Mr. Peter Ainsworth: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport (1) what the value is of net

VAT payments made by the New Millennium Experience Company (a) prior to and (b) since 31 December 1999; and if he will make a statement; [131375]

(2) what estimate he has made of net VAT (a) payments by and (b) receipts from the New Millennium Experience Company in (a) 1997–98, (b) 1998–99, (c) 1999–2000 and (d) 2000–01; [131374]

(3) what VAT liability applies to payments and receipt of sponsorship funds to the New Millennium Experience Company; [131370]

(4) if he will list by category, the sources of income and expenditure of the New Millennium Experience Company to which VAT applies. [131371]

Janet Anderson [holding answer 18 July 2000]: We have contacted the New Millennium Experience Company (NMEC) to request the information required, and I will write to the hon. Member as soon as it is available, placing copies of my letters in the Library of the House.

Mr. Casale: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport when he will make available to the House the Annual report and financial statement for the period ended 31 December 1999 of the New Millennium Experience Company. [132564]

Mr. Chris Smith: I have today placed copies of the New Millennium Experience Company's Annual Report and Financial Statements for the period ending 31 December 1999 in the Libraries of the House.

Osborne Estate

Mr. Peter Ainsworth: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport when he will reply to the question tabled by the hon. Member for East Surrey on 19 June concerning the Osborne Estate (reference 127308). [131973]

Mr. Chris Smith: I answered the hon. Member's question on 19 July 2000, Official Report, columns 212–13W.

Grace and Favour Accommodation

Mr. Alan Williams: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport (1) what self-contained accommodation in the occupied Royal Palaces is occupied by employees of the Royal Collection Department; what rental is paid; and how the rentable values are calculated; [132021]

(2) if he will update the information provided by the Department of National Heritage to the Committee of Public Accounts in Annexe 1 of its report on Property Services in the English Occupied Royal Palaces, Session 1994–95; which of the officials referred to pay rent; and on what basis rent is calculated. [132023]

Mr. Alan Howarth: We have contacted the Royal Household to request the information required. I shall write to my right hon. Friend as soon as it is available, placing copies of my letter in the Library of the House.

Hospitality

Mr. Wyatt: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what sporting occasions his Permanent Secretary has been invited to this year; how many such invitations he has accepted; and at what cost to the public purse. [131759]

Mr. Chris Smith: My Permanent Secretary has been invited to three sporting occasions which have taken place this year: the London Marathon, the Wimbledon Lawn Tennis championships and the Davis Cup match against Ecuador. He accepted and attended the second only. There was no cost to the public purse.

Communications White Paper

Mr. Woolas: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what progress is being made towards preparation of the Communications White Paper. [132563]

Mr. Chris Smith: As announced on 17 May 2000, Official Report, columns 130–31W, we invited a number of experts to prepare papers which they have now presented at a seminar held on 3 July. We asked them to examine a range of policy issues against some guiding objectives for the Communications White Paper.

These are:

(i) The creation of the most dynamic market possible for communications services, especially in the light of the growth of the e-economy;

(ii) Ensuring universal access to diverse services of the highest quality;

(iii) Guarding consumer interests—protection, choice and value for money.

A report on the seminar has been prepared by the chair of the event, Sir Quentin Thomas. Copies of all the papers, which represent the personal views of the authors, have been placed in the Library and also on the Communications White Paper website http://www.communicationswhitepaper.gov.uk. They offer an important contribution to the debate.

We have also received 139 submissions, which are also being placed on the website, and are currently analysing those alongside the issues discussed at the seminar, with a view to publication of the White Paper later this year.

HOME DEPARTMENT

Asylum Seekers

Mr. Hope: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will make a statement on the current arrangements for asylum claims to be made by post. [132556]

Mrs. Roche: We are at present receiving about 700 postal applications for asylum a month and estimate that about half come from applicants living in London. We take the view that asylum applications should normally be made in person so that the proper checks, including fingerprinting, can be made to establish identity and prevent fraudulent or multiple applications. From 31 July, postal applications received from persons living in any of the London boroughs will be required to attend for screening at Croydon before their claim is recorded and processed. We will be seeking to extend similar arrangements to other parts of the country as soon as possible.

Road Safety (Cyclists)

Mr. Bob Russell: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many pedestrians have been (a) killed and (b) injured as a result of being hit by cyclists riding on the pavement in each of the last three years for which figures are available; and if he will make a statement. [131107]

Mr. Hill: I have been asked to reply.

The information requested is shown in the table:

Pedestrian casualties from accidents between pedal cycles and pedestrians on a footway or verge[1]: Great Britain 1996–98

Severity of casualty	1996	1997	1998
Fatal	—	1	1
Injured	89	111	76
Total	89	112	77

[1] Footway or verge comprises footways for use by pedestrians only, which form part of the highway but are separate from the main carriageway, including grass verges

Criminal Injuries Compensation Authority

Mr. Charles Kennedy: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what the length of time is within which the Criminal Injuries Compensation Authority is under an obligation to (a) respond to and (b) settle claims inquiries; and if he will make a statement. [131476]

Mr. Charles Clarke: The Authority's key performance indicator for dealing with applications is to issue a first decision in 90 per cent. of cases within 12 months of receipt of the application. This target recognises that, because of their complexity, a substantial proportion of cases will unavoidably take longer to settle.

The Authority's service aims include responding within two weeks to any written inquiry about an application and to respond to any formal complaint within one month.

Police Stations

Mr. Kidney: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) what guidance he gives to police forces regarding (a) the provision of services from and (b) the location of, police stations; [130072]

(2) what guidance he gives to police forces on the management of fixed assets (a) generally and (b) relating to police stations. [130071]

Mr. Charles Clarke: The Government are committed to ensuring the police have the resources they need to tackle crime and disorder, but the disposition of police force resources is a matter for each police authority and chief constable.

Welsh Assembly

Mr. Öpik: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department when he plans to introduce legislation to enable the Welsh Assembly to implement the recommendations of the Neill Committee; and if he will make a statement. [131421]

Mr. Mike O'Brien: The Political Parties, Elections and Referendums Bill, which was introduced in the House of Commons on 20 December 1999 and in the House of Lords on 16 March 2000, will implement the recommendations of the Neill Committee's fifth report on the funding of political parties. The funding of political parties is a reserved matter and the controls on political parties' income and expenditure set out in the Bill will apply throughout the United Kingdom. The Bill, however, contains a number of provisions which relate specifically to the National Assembly. In particular, the Bill enables the Electoral Commission, at the request of the Assembly, to prepare a report on the administration of a poll held under section 36 of the Government of Wales Act 1998 (clause 4(3)); empowers the Assembly to transfer the functions of the Local Government Boundary Commission for Wales to the Electoral Commission (clause 18); and amends the Government of Wales Act so as to enable the Assembly to make payments to groups of Assembly members to assist them in performing their functions as Assembly members (Paragraph 10(4) of schedule 20). The Government are giving consideration to a request from the First Minister to expedite the commencement of the last of these provisions once the Bill receives Royal Assent.

Alcohol

Mr. Ben Chapman: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) what plans he has to increase the supervision of off-licences and other alcohol retailers, with particular reference to marketing and shop displays which promote the sale of high percentage volume beers, lagers and ciders; [131897]

(2) what plans he has to encourage the brewing industry, off-licence trade and other alcohol retailers to reduce the attractiveness of high percentage volume beers, lagers and ciders to under-age drinkers. [131934]

Mr. Mike O'Brien: In May 1997, a Ministerial Group, working closely with the Portman Group, was set up to examine problems surrounding the marketing of "alcopops" and other alcoholic drinks to people under 18. A statement of the Group's conclusions was published in July 1997, and placed in the Library. A range of new controls were added to the industry's Code of Practice, and these have had a significant impact on the merchandising and packaging of alcoholic drinks. The additional controls included:

- appropriate names, packaging and promotion of alcoholic products;
- avoiding artificially bright colours in either the product or the packaging;
- ensuring that the taste and texture of products do not mislead about their true alcoholic nature;
- ensuring that steps are taken to remind sales staff of their responsibilities;
- ensuring that alcohol is made less accessible to children in shops;
- ensuring proper staff training;
- including suitable sanctions for breaches of the Code;
- arranging pre-launch clearance of relevant products;
- ensuring swift compliance with decisions of the independent panel; and
- requiring compliance with the spirit as well as the letter of the Code.

We have monitored progress on the industry's approach to protecting young people. The number of complaints made under the new Code has continued to reduce. Where complaints have been made and upheld, swift compliance with the independent panel's decisions has become the norm. We shall continue to monitor progress both in respect of all alcoholic drinks, including those of high strength.

In addition, the White Paper "Time for Reform: Proposals for the Modernisation of Our Licensing Laws" published on 10 April this year, set out proposals for a new positive duty on licensees not to sell to minors, arrangements for test purchasing and tougher sanctions against those who breach these laws.

Mr. Ben Chapman: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what measures (a) are currently in place and (b) his Department is evaluating to prevent adults purchasing alcoholic drinks for consumption by under-18s. [131936]

Mr. Mike O'Brien: It is an offence under section 169(3) of the Licensing Act 1964 for any person to buy, or attempt to buy, intoxicating liquor for consumption in a bar in licensed premises by a person under 18. This offence does not extend to purchases made by adults in off-licences on behalf of minors. The Private Member's Bill introduced by my hon. Friend the Member for Pudsey (Mr. Truswell), the Licensing (Young Persons) Bill, which was successful at Second Reading in the House of Lords on 14 July, would create a new offence of buying alcohol in off-licences on behalf of minors. The Government have given their full support to this Bill. In the White Paper, "Time for Reform: Proposals for the Modernisation of our Licensing Laws" published on 10 April this year, we have made clear that if my hon. Friend's Bill is not successful, we shall introduce this measure in a Bill reforming licensing law generally.

Schengen Agreement

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department, pursuant to his answer of 4 July 2000, Official Report, column 166W, on the Schengen Agreement, if it his practice to assess the requirement to modify legislation resulting from accession to agreements with other countries prior to negotiating such agreements; what timescale is envisaged in the case of the Schengen acquis; and if he will make a statement. [130834]

Mrs. Roche: The Government's approach to agreements is taken on a case-by-case basis. In the case of partial participation in the Schengen acquis, the Government's objective was to benefit as far as possible from European Union co-operation on policing and judicial matters, commensurate with our Frontiers Protocol. We therefore accepted that legislation might be necessary and would be justified if better European Union co-operation was achieved as a result. As indicated in my reply to the hon. Member on 4 July 2000, Official Report, column 166W, the need to legislate was already implicit in the United Kingdom's agreement to a number of European Union instruments providing for judicial co-operation. Work on Schengen implementation has only recently begun and the timescale will be dependent in part on the Government's legislative timetable, in addition to the time which will be required for the practical implementation of other items, such as the Schengen Information System.

Visas (Overseas Teachers)

Mr. Willis: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what plans he has to amend the working holiday visa scheme to allow greater flexibility in respect of the employment of overseas teachers; and if he will make a statement. [130778]

Mrs. Roche: We have no plans to relax the working holidaymakers rules. Flexibility already exists for working holidaymakers in the teaching profession in that they are not precluded from continuing their career in the United Kingdom and may work as supply teachers.

The purpose of the working holidaymaker scheme is not to enable overseas teachers to secure employment. As the title implies, any work is to be incidental to an extended holiday here and participants are not expected to work for the whole of their time. There are already a number of existing mechanisms under the Immigration Rules to facilitate the employment of overseas teachers, including the work permit scheme and the approved exchange scheme for teachers and language assistants.

Mr. Willis: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) how many working holidaymaker visas were issued to overseas teachers in the last three years for which figures are available; [130779]

(2) how many working holidaymaker visas have been issued to overseas teachers and have not yet expired; and how many such teachers are known to be in (a) London and (b) the rest of the United Kingdom [130780]

Mrs. Roche: I regret that the available information—on working holidaymakers admitted to the United Kingdom—does not separately identify those who are teachers nor their place of residence in this country.

HEALTH

Angiograms

Miss Widdecombe: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many and which hospitals in the NHS provide angiogram facilities; and how long the waiting times are in each of them. [129191]

Mr. Denham: 92 National Health Service trusts performed at least one coronary angiogram during 1998–99. The table lists these trusts and gives their related average waiting times.

We recognise that some patients may have to wait some time for this diagnostic procedure and that there is unacceptable variation in access to this service. This is why we have made the prevention and treatment of coronary heart disease one of this Government's priorities.

The National Service Framework for coronary heart disease will address these inequalities over the 10-year period of the strategy. It sets clear long-term targets for waiting times at every stage of the patient journey, including waits for angiography, and progress towards these targets will be monitored by the NHS Executive through performance management and by the Commission for Health Improvement.

[1] Data quality insufficient to calculate median waiting time

Notes:

1. This table is derived from ungrossed HES data.

2. Waiting time statistics from HES are not the same as the published waiting list statistics. HES provides counts and waiting times for all patients admitted to hospital within a given period whereas the published waiting list statistics count those waiting for treatment at a given point in time and how long they have been on the waiting list. Also, HES calculates the waiting time as the difference between the admission and decision to admit dates. Unlike published waiting list statistics, this is not adjusted for self-deferrals or periods of medical/social suspension.

Royal Shrewsbury Hospital

Mr. Paul Marsden: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many nurses were employed at the Royal Shrewsbury Hospital in each year since 1992; and if he will make a statement. [131136]

Mr. Denham: The table illustrates that the number of nursing, midwifery and health visiting staff employed by the Royal Shrewsbury Hospitals National Health Service Trust declined between the years 1994 and 1997. However, numbers remain constant for 1998, and have increased in 1999, demonstrating our commitment to increase the number of nurses working within the NHS. It should be noted that inflated figures for nursing staff in 1994 are not comparable with later years, due to a new classification system introduced in 1995 (see notes).

NHS Hospital and Community Health Services (HCHS): Nursing, Midwifery and hospital visiting staff, employed by Royal Shrewsbury Hospital NHS Trust, as at 30 September of each year

	Whole time equivalents	Number (headcount)
1994	850	1,130
1995	750	950
1996	730	940
1997	710	900
1998	720	900
1999	730	920

Notes:

1. The Royal Shrewsbury NHS Trust came into being on 1 April 1994. Data from earlier years cannot be disaggregated from health authority returns.
2. Figures are rounded to the nearest 10.
3. 1994 figures include agency staff and exclude learners, 1995 to 1999 figures exclude agency staff and learners.
4. A new classification of the non-medical work force was introduced in 1995, therefore information based on this classification is not comparable with earlier years.

Waiting Lists

Mr. Caton: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what assessment he has made of the impact on waiting lists if consultants were contractually required to see NHS patients on three days a week as a minimum. [131462]

Mr. Denham: We are determined to reduce waiting lists and times for all patients. As part of the National Plan for the National Health Service, the Patient Care: Speed of Access Modernisation Action Team has been looking at improving patients' access to NHS services, including the reduction of waiting lists and times.

Any NHS consultant who carries out private work is expected to devote substantially the whole of their professional time to their NHS work. It is for employers and employees to agree the balance between private and NHS work and for employers to take appropriate action if individual consultants do not meet their contractual commitments. Their responsibilities for the clinical care of their NHS patients must come first.

Children Act 1989

Mr. Dismore: To ask the Secretary of State for Health when he will publish updated statistics to fulfil the undertaking given in the Children Act report 1995 to 1999. [132558]

Mr. Hutton: I have today published on the Department of Health internet website a supplementary report entitled "Children Act Report—1999 Supplement" and copies have been placed in the Library.

Long-term Care

Mr. Andrew George: To ask the Secretary of State for Health in how many cases financial responsibility for existing patients (a) in nursing homes and (b) being supported in their own homes, has been assumed by the National Health Service since the appeal decision in R. v. North and East Devon health authority ex parte Coughlan; and if he will make a statement. [131750]

Mr. Hutton: Information is not available in the format requested. Information on numbers of people newly meeting eligibility criteria for continuing National Health Service in-patient care is collected on a quarterly basis. From 1 July 1999 to 31 March 2000, 17,639 people newly met eligibility criteria for continuing in-patient care funded by the NHS. This figure includes an element of forecast data.

Hammersmith Hospital/Imperial College Imaging Department

Mrs. Gillan: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will publish the report on the Hammersmith Hospital/ Imperial College Imaging Department commissioned by the former Secretary of State for Health, the right hon. Member for Holborn and St. Pancras (Mr. Dobson); what plans he has to implement the recommendations contained in this report; and if he will make a statement. [131970]

Mr. Denham: Professor Cameron's report was prepared on the basis that it would be confidential to Ministers. He has, however, provided a comprehensive summary of his findings, conclusions and recommendations and this has been made public.

I announced on 29 June that I had accepted Professor Cameron's recommendations and was instructing the National Health Service Executive to implement them.

Professor Cameron's report draws a line under these events: no further ministerial statement is planned.

Mr. Prior: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many people in the area covered by the Norfolk Health Authority had been waiting over 12 months for elective admission in (a) March 1997, (b) March 1998, (c) March 1999 and (d) March 2000. [132031]

Mr. Denham: Norfolk Health Authority was established on 1 April 1999. Prior to its establishment, the area was covered by East Norfolk Health Authority and by part of North West Anglia Health Authority.

Figures from the period prior to the establishment of Norfolk Health Authority are not directly comparable with those following its establishment.

NORTHERN IRELAND

Forensic Science Northern Ireland

Mr. Leslie: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what key targets were set for Forensic Science Northern Ireland in 2000–01; what further plans have been prepared by Forensic Science Northern Ireland; and what arrangements have been made for the publication of this year's plans. [132555]

Mr. Mandelson: The following key targets were set for Forensic Science Northern Ireland in 2000–01:

Quality of Service

To turnaround 85 per cent. of cases in which a file is required to be submitted to the DPP within the notified scale.

To turnaround 90 per cent. of all reports within the timescale notified to the investigating officer in cases where there is no DPP file.

Quality of Science

Maintain the UKAS accreditation of those scientific processes identified by the Ministerial Advisory Board.

Service Provision

To have obtained the agreement of the RUC User Board that FSNI is effectively meeting the needs of the RUC as defined in the Service Level Agreement for the year ending 31 March 2001.

Financial Performance

Recover from customers the full cash cost of the services delivered to them.

Reduce the Unit Cost by 2 per cent.

Achievement against these key targets will be recorded in the Agency's Annual Report for 2000–01 which will be published in July 2001.

FSNI has published a summary of its Corporate plan 2000–03 and annual Business Plan 2000–01 which explain its business and organisation, describe its key targets for 2000–01 and set out the assumptions about work loads and resources which support its planned activities. Copies of the summary plans have been placed in the Libraries of both Houses of Parliament. Copies will be available to the public from FSNI.

CABINET OFFICE

Disaster Contingency Measures

Mr. Sayeed: To ask the Minister for the Cabinet Office what research she has undertaken into the effects of a major computer failure in central Government; and what contingency measures have been taken to reduce the impact of such an event. [128868]

Mr. Ian McCartney: Individual Government Departments are responsible for research into, and contingency planning against, the risk of a major failure in the computer systems they operate. Government as a whole learnt valuable lessons about business continuity planning from handling the Millennium bug.

FOREIGN AND COMMONWEALTH AFFAIRS

Child Labour

Mr. Sarwar: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on the action taken by the Government to tackle child labour abroad. [130952]

Mr. Hain: We are engaged in a range of activities—at the bilateral and international level—to tackle child labour. In March 2000, the UK ratified the International Labour Organisation (ILO) Convention No. 182. The aim of this important new standard is to prohibit and eliminate the worst forms of child labour. We strongly support the ILO's campaign to encourage the widest possible ratification of ILO 182, and is looking at how best to take action in support of this campaign. In June 2000, the UK also ratified ILO Convention No. 138—one of the core ILO conventions—on the minimum age for entry into employment.

The Government, through the Department for International Development, is supporting practical programmes in a number of countries in South Asia and Africa. Our aim is to reduce child labour, especially the worst forms of child labour. In doing this, we aim to ensure children's protection and survival; to meet children's development needs, particularly in health and education; and to allow them to participate in decisions which affect their lives.

Pakistan

Mr. Gardiner: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if it is his policy to support the suspension of Pakistan from the Commonwealth. [131518]

Mr. Hain: The Commonwealth Heads of Government Meeting (CHOGM) in Durban in November 1999 endorsed the decision of the Commonwealth Ministerial Action Group (CMAG) to suspend Pakistan from the councils of the Commonwealth and called for the restoration of civilian democratic rule. CMAG was tasked with keeping the situation in Pakistan under review and to recommend further measures to be taken by the Commonwealth if progress to democracy was not made speedily. Commonwealth members will consider further action at future meetings of CMAG and CHOGM in the light of developments in Pakistan.

Mr. Gardiner: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what factors led him to lift the arms embargo on Pakistan. [131517]

Mr. Hain: There has been no arms embargo on Pakistan. As stated on 10 July 1998, Official Report, columns 687–88W, we continue to assess export licence applications on a case-by-case basis against our national criteria and those in the EU Code of Conduct for Arms Exports, and in light of the statement made after the Pakistani and Indian nuclear tests.

Last October's coup created many uncertainties. The Government have taken time to consider the situation in Pakistan and the wider region before deciding on outstanding export licence applications. The Government have now reached decisions on a number of these. I refer my hon. Friend to the answer I gave to my hon. Friend the Member for Bury, South (Mr. Lewis) on 5 July 2000, Official Report, columns 221–22W, which explains this in more detail.

Entry Clearance Refusals

Mr. Hope: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs when he plans to publish the 1999 report by Dame Elizabeth Anson, the Independent Monitor, relating to the refusal of entry clearance where there is no right of appeal. [132480]

Mr. Vaz: I have arranged for copies of Dame Elizabeth's Report of 1999 to be placed in the Libraries of the House today. I welcome the report and note Dame Elizabeth's comments and suggestions, which will receive careful consideration.

Strategic Export Controls

Mr. Leslie: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs when the Government will publish its 1999 Annual Report on Strategic Export Controls. [132554]

Mr. Hain: The Annual Report will be published today. Copies will be available in the Libraries of the House and in the Vote Office from 12.00 noon.

The Report is also available on the FCO's website at www.fco.gov.uk/directory/dynpage.asp?Page=355.

EU Flag

Mr. Gill: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs, pursuant to the answer of 10 July 2000, Official Report, column 402W, what guidance he will give regarding the flying of the EU flag in terms of its precedence in relation to national flags. [132028]

Mr. Vaz: The European flag, where flown, should not take precedence over the Union flag. When the European flag is flown from Government buildings, for example on Europe Day 9 May, it is always displayed alongside, not instead of, the Union flag.

Yemen

Mr. Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what discussions he has had with the Yemeni authorities regarding the case of Mohamed Haji; and if he will make a statement. [132006]

Mr. Hain: Our Ambassador in Sana'a raised the case of Mohamed Omar Haji with the Vice Minister of Foreign Affairs, Abdullah al-Sayedi on 9 July and made clear our concerns. I raised Mohamed Haji's plight again on 19 July with the visiting Minister of Health, Dr. Abdullah Nasher. We understand that Mohamed Haji has not been sentenced and that his case has been referred back from the court to the Attorney General who will decide what further action to take. Mohamed Haji has been transferred from the Central Prison to a detention centre for immigrants.

We will keep Mohamed Haji's case under close review and stand ready to raise the matter again with the Yemeni Government.

AGRICULTURE, FISHERIES AND FOOD

Decommissioning Scheme

Mr. Drew: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what plans he has to introduce a decommissioning scheme for fishing vessels. [132560]

Mr. Morley: We had envisaged that a limited fishing vessel decommissioning scheme might have been needed to meet our EU obligations to reduce capacity of fixed gear vessels. However, capacity in the lines and nets segment of the fleet is already within the MAGP IV objectives for end 2001, and the tonnage of shellfish fixed gear vessels is close to the 2001 objectives. We do not therefore plan to hold a decommissioning scheme in present circumstances.

Agriculture Council

Mr. Hood: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what the outcome was of the Agriculture Council held in Brussels on 18 July; and if he will make a statement. [131935]

Mr. Nick Brown: I represented the UK at the Agriculture Council held in Brussels on 17 July, accompanied by my right hon. Friend the Minister of State and by Christine Gwyther, Agriculture Secretary in the National Assembly for Wales.

The council unanimously agreed Commission proposals on CAP prices and aids for the 2000–01 marketing year, reform of the flax and hemp regime and changes to the EU school milk scheme. The flax and hemp reforms will increase the market-orientation of this sector and, following pressure from the UK and others, the agreement includes significantly higher processing aid for the types of flax and hemp produced in this country.

The Council's changes to the school milk scheme represent a major improvement over the Commission's proposal. Following rejection of their proposals originally to abandon this scheme and subsequently for 50 per cent. co-financing, the Council has limited the changed to a reduction of aid from 95 per cent. to 75 per cent. of the milk target price and provision for the dairy sector to contribute to the scheme. Local authorities which wish to do so will thus continue to have the facility to apply the scheme.

The Council also unanimously adopted amendments made by the European Parliament to its common position on Beef Labelling. This will enable the Regulation to come into force on 1 September as planned.

I particularly welcomed the European Parliament's amendments removing the obligation to label beef by category of animal which I know had given rise to considerable concern to our industry.

Under other business I supported other colleagues pressing Commissioner Fischler to reopen access to export refunds for processed foodstuffs provided this could be achieved without breaching budget discipline.

Animal Welfare

Mr. Baker: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food, pursuant to his statement of 14 December 1999, Official Report, columns 250–54, if he will make a statement on the progress that has been made in the establishment of an Interdepartmental Ministerial Group on Animal Welfare. [131756]

Mr. Morley: The Interdepartmental Ministerial Group on Animal Welfare met formally for the first time today. Ministers with animal welfare responsibilities from the Department of the Environment, Transport and the Regions, the Home Office and the Department for Agriculture and Rural Affairs in Northern Ireland joined me for the discussion. Officials from the other devolved Administrations also attended.

Correspondence

Mr. Kaufman: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food when he intends to reply to the letters to him dated 20 March, 12 May and 12 June from the right hon. Member for Manchester, Gorton, with regard to Mr. S. Pennells. [130856]

Mr. Nick Brown: My noble Friend the Minister of State replied to the letters from my right hon. Friend on 19 June 2000.

WALES

Police

Mr. Evans: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will list the number of (a) new police recruits and (b) police retirements in Wales between (i) May 1997 and May 1998, (ii) May 1998 and May 1999 and (iii) May 1999 and May 2000. [130982]

Mr. Charles Clarke [holding answer 17 July 2000]: I have been asked to reply.

Data on the numbers of police officers were not collected for the particular periods requested. The figures for the years ending March 1998, 1999 and 2000 are as follows, and are based on numbers of officers rather than full-time equivalents.

DEFENCE

Welsh Guards

Mr. Key: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence (1) if the 1 Battalion Welsh Guards has REME support for their Saxon vehicles; and how many of them are (a) operational and (b) unserviceable; [128475]

(2) what radio communications below platoon level are available to 1 Battalion Welsh Guards; how many mobile telephones have been purchased to supplement radios; and if he will make a statement. [128476]

Mr. Spellar [holding answer 3 July 2000]: 1 Battalion Welsh Guards has Reme support for its Saxon vehicle holdings. As at 18 July, 23 vehicles were operational and 12 waiting to be repaired. The Regiment is issued with the Clansman combat net radio and although three mobile telephones are held for duty personnel, there is no intention to supplement Clansman holdings with mobile telephones.

Parliamentary Questions

Mr. Gill: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence when he will reply to the questions of the hon. Member for Ludlow tabled on 12 June (refs 126192, 126190, and 126191). [129404]

Dr. Moonie [holding answer 6 July 2000]: I replied to the hon. Member on 17 July 2000, Official Report, column 10W.

Mr. Stunell: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence on how many occasions he deposited papers in the Library in response to parliamentary questions tabled to his Department between 19 October 1999 and 20 April. [131231]

Dr. Moonie [holding answer 20 July 2000]: The Ministry of Defence deposited papers in the Library in response to parliamentary questions on 160 occasions between 19 October 1999 and 20 April 2000.

Departmental Payments

Mr. Chope: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what percentage of correctly presented bills were paid by his Department in (a) 1998–99 and (b) 1999–2000 within 30 days of receipt of (i) goods and services, (ii) a valid invoice and (iii) other agreed payment terms. [130042]

Mr. Spellar [holding answer 11 July 2000]: I refer the hon. Member to the answer given to my hon. Friend the Member for Elmet (Mr. Burgon) on 23 July 1999, Official Report, columns 677–78W.

The Department is currently collating this information for 1999–2000 and this will be made available to the House shortly.

Army (Complaints)

Mr. Peter Bradley: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what is the average length of time for the processing of complaints to the Army Board and Her Majesty the Queen. [130745]

Dr. Moonie: The average time taken from first submission of complaint by the individual to his or her Commanding Officer to promulgation of the Army Board determination of those cases in the system over the last 12 months (from 1 June 1999 to 31 May 2000) is 82 weeks. 72 per cent. of all cases are decided below Army Board level and consequently take far less time to resolve. After the individual has received the Army Board determination and decides to petition the Sovereign, further legal advice is sought and a report prepared for the Army Board and subsequently the Secretary of State for Defence. The Secretary of State is responsible for putting the petition to Her Majesty. The length of time taken for the process varies very significantly from case to case reflecting the relative difficulty and complexity and the need for the Army Board and the Secretary of State to deal personally and carefully with each case. In the six cases submitted to Her Majesty in the 12 months from 1 June 1999 to 31 May 2000 the time taken from the original determination by the Army Board to submission varied from 30 months to eight months.

We recognise the problem delay causes in the processing of Redresses of Complaint. The Chain of Command has been provided with clear guidance explaining that every effort must be made to resolve complaints as swiftly as possible and at the lowest possible level, in the interests of good management, efficiency and justice. The Army General Administrative Instructions dealing with Redresses of Complaint have also been amended to ensure that the message is clearly understood by all involved.

Future Basing Plans (Army)

Mr. Olner: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will make a statement on the future basing plans for the Army. [131152]

Mr. Spellar: I am now able to give details of our plans for the future basing of units following the Strategic Defence Review restructuring. Since my predecessor published outline basing proposals last year, we have discussed the implications of these changes with the local authorities concerned. We have also, as part of our commitment under SDR to put the environment at the heart of decision making, subjected our proposals to a rigorous examination as part of the Strategic Environmental Assessment (SEA) of the whole of the SDR. The SEA has confirmed that the Army's plans for barrack redevelopment, which flow from the relocation and re-roling of units, are unlikely to have major effects on the environment. Where a potential impact has been identified we have either already changed our plans accordingly or plan to take the necessary action to address the problem as part of our detailed development proposals.

The changes from the outline proposals announced last year are not in themselves substantial. However, they do provide the Army with a firm basis on which to plan for changes in the roles of units and their parent formations and for a number of relocations of units, all of which are necessary to bring about a more balance operational and training cycle.

The Headquarters of 12 Mechanised Brigade has formed in Aldershot and that of 16 Air Assault Brigade in Colchester. Aldershot Garrison will house enhancements to 101 Logistic Brigade, including 10 Transport Regiment RLC which will move from Colchester, and the lighter elements of 12 Mechanised Brigade. We intend to keep the overall position in the Garrison under review as Project Connaught, the PPP Project, develops.

Tidworth Garrison will accommodate an additional armoured regiment, armoured infantry battalion and engineer regiment, required for 12 Mechanised Brigade. Sixteen Close Support Medical Squadron will be moved out of Tidworth to be incorporated into three Close Support Medical Regiment, in Catterick. We are still considering the most appropriate location for the additional artillery regiment, which we originally planned to accommodate in Larkhill. Project Allenby, the PPP Project, is currently scoping the potential for this regiment to be based in Tidworth or Bulford Garrison instead, as part of its overall strategic look at the operational requirement.

Catterick Garrison will accommodate a number of additional units and enhancements as follows: an additional field workshop will form part of five Battalion REME. Eight Transport Regiment RLC will be enhanced and its fuel handling capabilities rationalised. Three Close Support Medical Regiment, which provides medical support to three (UK) Division, will also be based in Catterick. It will incorporate 24 Close Support Medical Squadron, which is already based in Catterick, 16 Close Support Medical Squadron, which will move from Tidworth, a new close support medical squadron and an evacuation squadron.

Thirty-eight Engineer Regiment in Claro Barracks, Ripon will be enhanced by the addition of a Close Support Squadron. However the nine very heavy tracked bridge laying vehicles with which the Squadron will be equipped could cause a high environmental risk to the cultural heritage in Ripon town centre, and undesirable traffic congestion. We have therefore decided to locate these vehicles at Cambrai/Megiddo Barracks, Catterick.

Colchester Garrison will be the main garrison for 16 Air Assault Brigade, although the aviation regiments and one of its infantry battalions will be based elsewhere and the engineer regiment will be located at Woodbridge. Two parachute regiments and a parachute artillery regiment will be based in Colchester, replacing the existing airmobile units.

The 4th armoured reconnaissance unit will be based in Stanley Barracks, Bovington. Dalton Barracks, Abingdon will house additional sub-units for both 3 Close Support Regiment RLC and 4 General Support Regiment RLC.

Some moves are already taking place (such as that of two parachute battalions from Aldershot to Colchester with a corresponding move of two infantry battalions from Colchester to form part of the new 12 Mechanised Brigade). Most unit relocations will however have to await the preparation and refurbishment of accommodation, which will be spread over a number of years, and the usual Notice of Proposed Development process. In carrying out this work we shall take every opportunity to provide our military personnel with the sort of modern, efficient, good quality accommodation which they deserve.

Overseas Service Personnel

Mr. Cox: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many United Kingdom service personnel are serving overseas, broken down by country. [130768]

Mr. Spellar: As at 1 April 2000, the latest date figures for which are available, 39,560 armed forces personnel were serving overseas (this does not include Naval personnel afloat). The three Services collate data on location of personnel slightly differently and this has determined the presentation of the breakdown by country, as follows:

Country	Number
Mainland Europe	29,213
Austria	19
Belgium	550
France	33
Germany	20,429
Greece	18

Note:

1. The 'Elsewhere' figure is made up predominantly of Army personnel including Service Attachés and loans and exchange personnel in the following countries: Andaman Islands, Belize, Bermuda, Botswana, Sri Lanka, Kenya, Sierra Leone, Indonesia, South Africa, Egypt, Fiji, Ghana, India, Jamaica, Malawi, Malaysia, Nigeria, Bangladesh, Tongan Islands, Tanzania, Singapore, Pakistan, Zimbabwe, Albania, Brazil, China, Congo, Columbia, French Overseas Territories, Guatemala, Israel, Japan, South Korea, Laos, Lebanon, Lithuania, Thailand, Angola, Mozambique, USSR.
2. In addition to Service Attachés and loan and exchange personnel, 'Miscellaneous' covers small groups deployed in the relevant region.

Departmental Budget (Nuclear Weapons)

Mr. Llew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what proportion of his departmental budget is allocated for expenditure on (a) the verification of nuclear arms agreements, (b) the dismantling of redundant nuclear weapons stocks, (c) research on the safe storage and transport of nuclear weapons and (d) the development of a new nuclear warhead or delivery vehicle for nuclear warheads (i) independently and (ii) in collaboration with the United States, using computer simulation facilities. [130846]

Mr. Hoon: The following sums are recorded as having been expended during 1999–2000:

(a) the verification of nuclear arms agreements—£4.2 million

(b) the dismantling of redundant nuclear weapons—£11.5 million

(c) work on the safe storage and transport of nuclear weapons makes use of information and capabilities gained in the various parts of the wider research programme rather than as a discrete activity. This information could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

(d) There are no current plans for any replacement for Trident, and as published in the Strategic Defence Review, we are maintaining only the minimum capability to design and produce a successor should this prove necessary. There was therefore no expenditure on the development of a new nuclear warhead or delivery vehicle for nuclear warheads, (i) independently or (ii) in collaboration with the United States, using computer simulation facilities.

Territorial Army (Wandsworth)

Mr. Cox: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what financial provision he has made for the training of Territorial Army units in the London Borough of Wandsworth during the coming year. [131469]

Mr. Spellar: For financial year 2000–01, a total of £450,000 has been allocated to cover Man Training Days (MTDs) for Territorial Army units in the London Borough of Wandsworth. This reflects the levels of MTDs requested by the units themselves.

Sierra Leone

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what security measures have been taken by his Department to ensure the safety of the UK military training team in Sierra Leone; and if he will make a statement. [131495]

Mr. Hoon: In view of the unstable security environment, the Short-Term Training Teams we have deployed to Sierra Leone include a contingent specifically tasked with Force Protection. British Forces have been provided with appropriate Rules of Engagement to allow them to defend themselves robustly if attacked.

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what estimate he has made of the cost to the Government of implementing Operation Basilica in Sierra Leone; and if he will make a statement. [131496]

Mr. Hoon: The estimated costs of the two Short-Term Training Teams we have recently deployed to Sierra Leone under Operation Basilica amount to some £1.3 million.

Victoria Cross

Mr. Keetch: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many people have been awarded the Victoria Cross since 1970; how many holders of the Victoria Cross are still living; and if he will make a statement. [131521]

Dr. Moonie [holding answer 20 July 2000]: The Victoria Cross has been awarded to two people since 1970, on both occasions posthumously. There are currently 24 living holders of the Victoria Cross.

Chinook Helicopters

Mr. Key: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence when the contract was signed to fit the RAF Chinook helicopter fleet with flight data recorders; what the original date for completion was; what the current estimate is for date of completion; and if he will make a statement. [131522]

Mr. Spellar [holding answer 20 July 2000]: I refer the hon. Member to the answer I gave him on 18 November 1997, Official Report, columns 151–53W. The programme of work is due to be completed by the end of August 2001.

Warships

Mr. Gill: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence, pursuant to his answer of 14 June 2000, Official Report, column 10W, for what reason he did not provide information on the most recent date on which a new warship was ordered for the Royal Navy. [132029]

Dr. Moonie [holding answer 21 July 2000]: I refer the hon. Member to my answer of 17 July 2000, Official Report, column 10W. This is the most recent order for a new RN warship.

Prior to this announcement the last RN warship order was on 14 March 1997 when an order was placed for the design and build of three ASTUTE class nuclear attack submarines.

Military Hospital, Northallerton

Mr. Menzies Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence when the new Military District Hospital at Northallerton will open; and if he will make a statement. [131023]

Dr. Moonie: The new Ministry of Defence Hospital Unit at Northallerton NHS Health Services Trust opened on 1 July 1999.

Imaging Systems

Mr. Key: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what work his Department has commissioned from DERA on through-the-wall imaging systems; at what cost to his Department; and if he will make a statement. [131768]

Dr. Moonie: The Ministry of Defence is currently conducting research into through wall imaging technology and techniques within both the Corporate and the Applied Research Programmes. In financial year 2000–01 this will amount to £370,000 in total. Work is planned to continue in this area.

Michael John Smith

Mr. Mackinlay: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will list those papers which have been removed by Ministry officials this year from Michael John Smith (PR 3345), in HMP Full Sutton. [132275]

Dr. Moonie: No papers have been removed from the prison cell of Michael John Smith by Ministry officials. Papers containing classified information in connection with the criminal prosecution of Mr. Smith were removed from his cell by the prison authorities, who were advised and assisted by Ministry of Defence officials. A full list of all documents removed was provided to Mr. Smith by the prison authorities. I am withholding this list under Exemption 4c of the Code of Practice on Access to Government Information.

Mr. Mackinlay: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence when his Department will reply to the letter dated 19 June from Michael John Smith (PR 3345), currently in HMP Full Sutton. [132278]

Dr. Moonie: On the advice of the Treasury Solicitor, any correspondence received directly from Mr. Smith to my officials is forwarded to them for attention. Mr. Smith's letter of 19 June has been the subject of subsequent correspondence between the Treasury Solicitor, who acts on behalf of the Ministry, and Messrs A. S. Law, who act on behalf of Mr. Smith.

Mr. Mackinlay: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence on which dates Michael John Smith (PR 3345) in HMP Full Sutton was visited by MOD HQ Sy2 Directorate; for what purpose; and what opportunities were afforded to Mr. Smith to have a legal representative in attendance. [132277]

Dr. Moonie: Searches of Mr. Smith's cell were conducted by the prison authorities on 15 and 23 June 2000. Ministry of Defence officials provided advice and assistance in relation to documents stored in the cell. The purpose of the searches was to remove classified information which Mr. Smith was not entitled to keep in his cell and to arrange for its secure storage within the prison. The documents were examined in a separate room, under the prison Governor's powers of search, which do not require the presence of a prisoner's legal representative. Mr. Smith and a member of the Board of Prison Visitors were present at the search on 15 June. Mr. Smith declined to be present at the search on the 23 June.

Bowman Project

Mr. Key: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence (1) what sum his Department has paid to Archer in respect of the package 'O' contract for the Bowman Project in each month since April 1999; and if he will make a statement; [131627]

(2) what the budget of the Bowman Project was in (a) 1993 at (i) 1993 and (ii) 2000 prices and (b) 2000 at (A) 1993 and (B) 2000 prices; and what added capability has been required since 1993; [131628]

(3) if he will list the funds allocated for supply and support of the Bowman Project in (a) June 1999, (b) June 2000 and (c) June 2001; [131629]

(4) what funding he will provide for the supply and support of the Bowman Project in (a) August and (b) September; and if he will make a statement; [131630]

(5) what (a) legal and (b) financial provision he has made for redundancy following the expiry of the Bowman package 'O' contract at the end of July; and what forecast of redundancy numbers his Department has made in respect of the work force of (i) Archer, (ii) Racal, (iii) ITT and (iv) other contractors. [131631]

Dr. Moonie: I will write to the hon. Member and a copy of my letter will be placed in the Library of the House.

PRESIDENT OF THE COUNCIL

Human Rights

Mr. Gareth Thomas: To ask the President of the Council if she will set out the proposed terms of reference of the Joint Committee on Human Rights. [131597]

Mrs. Beckett: The proposed terms of reference for the Joint Committee on Human Rights will reflect those in the Message brought from the Lords and printed in the Votes and Proceedings for Wednesday 12 July.

Adapted for Commons usage they will be:

The Committee shall consider

(a) matters relating to human rights in the United Kingdom (but excluding consideration of individual cases);

(c) in respect of draft remedial orders and remedial orders, whether the special attention of the House should be drawn to them on any of the grounds specified in Standing Order No. 151 (Statutory Instruments (Joint Committee));

(3) The Committee shall report to the House

(a) in relation to any document containing proposals laid before the House under paragraph 3 of the said Schedule 2, its recommendation whether a draft order in the same terms as the proposals should be laid before the House; or

and the Committee may report to the House on any matter arising from its consideration of the said proposals or draft orders.

The Committee shall report to the House in respect of any original order laid under paragraph 4 of the said Schedule 2, its recommendation whether

(a) the order should be approved in the form in which it was originally laid before Parliament; or

(b) the order should be replaced by a new order modifying the provisions of the original order; or

(c) the order should not be approved.

and the Committee may report to the House on any matter arising from its consideration of the said order or any replacement order.

ENVIRONMENT, TRANSPORT AND THE REGIONS

Crop Contamination

Mr. Drew: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what discussions his Department has had with (a) the Ministry of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food, (b) the Department of Health and (c) the Cabinet Office since the discovery of the possible contamination of the Advanta Seed crop. [123921]

Mr. Meacher [holding answer 5 June 2000]: Officials and Ministers across Government have been in continuous contact since we were notified of the possible contamination of Advanta Seed crop. A joint memorandum prepared by DETR and MAFF was submitted to the Agriculture Committee on 12 July and a copy has been placed in the House Library. This gives full details about the events leading up to Government's announcement about the Advanta seeds issue on 17 May.

Toxic Waste

Mr. Llew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions from which sources the United Kingdom accepts the import of toxic waste for (a) incineration and (b) landfill. [129973]

Mr. Meacher: UK policy on waste imports is set out in the legally binding United Kingdom Management Plan for Exports and Imports of Waste, which came into effect in June 1996.

The policies in the UK Plan prohibit most waste imports for disposal, and are designed to encourage countries to become as self-sufficient as possible in waste disposal. However, where countries cannot reasonably be expected to deal with specific wastes in an environmentally sound manner, the UK is prepared to accept them given that we have the necessary treatment facilities which meet tough environmental standards.

Consistent with this approach the UK currently accepts imports for disposal by high temperature incineration from Brazil, Guernsey, Ireland, the Isle of Man, Jersey, Portugal, South Africa and Thailand. We also have extant agreements to accept waste from Argentina, Chile, Egypt and Pakistan, although there have been no shipments to date from these countries.

We have only accepted waste for landfilling from the British Antarctic Territory, the Falkland Islands and the Isle of Man.

Earlier this year the UK made a bilateral arrangement to accept wastes from the Sovereign Base Areas of Akrotiri and Dhekelia on Cyprus for disposal by either option, although there have been no shipments under the arrangement to date.

The position is different for imports for recovery, which under European law includes incineration where the primary purpose is energy recovery. The UK Plan, consistent with the EC Waste Shipments Regulation and OECD Decision C(92)39/Final, permits movements of wastes for recovery between OECD members on the basis that this trade provides a valuable source of raw materials; and that no country is self-sufficient in waste recovery.

However, while any OECD member country may export hazardous wastes to the UK for incineration with energy recovery, to date we have only received hazardous wastes from Guernsey, Ireland, the Isle of Man, Jersey and the Netherlands.

UK policies and procedures on the acceptance of waste imports are being considered as part of the current review of the UK Plan. I have made it clear that the UK would expect developing countries to develop, as quickly as is feasible, appropriate facilities to deal with their own waste, as far as is compatible with environmentally sound and efficient management.

Road Safety

Mr. Dismore: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions if he will make a statement on the implications for road safety of the House of Lords' case of Goodes v. East Sussex County Council. [131640]

Mr. Hill: The judgment of the House of Lords in this case was that the duty of a highway authority to maintain highways for which it is responsible under section 41 of the Highways Act 1980 does not include a duty to keep these highways free from ice and snow.

We are considering the full implications of this judgment before deciding whether to propose any changes to existing highway legislation.

Local Government Network

Mr. Waterson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions on what occasions (a) he and (b) Ministers in his Department met the New Local Government Network in the last six months; who was present on each occasion; and what was discussed. [131485]

Ms Beverley Hughes: My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for the Environment Transport and the Regions has not met the New Local Government Network during the last six months.

My right hon. Friend the Minister for Local Government and the Regions and I continue to have contact with the New Local Government Network about aspects of our local government modernisation agenda, including, on occasions, addressing conferences organised by them. My next meeting with them is planned for later this month to discuss best value partnership working.

Sustainable Development

Mrs. Brinton: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what steps have been taken to ensure that the principles contained on pages 22 and 23 of the White Paper, "A Better Quality of Life—a Strategy for Sustainable Development for the UK", are applied to policy-making throughout Government. [131967]

Ms Beverley Hughes: The principles are reflected or being taken forward in a range of Government guidance documents and strategies. In particular, the 1999 "Modernising Government" White Paper committed the Government to:

> producing and delivering an integrated system of impact assessment and appraisal tools in support of sustainable development, covering impacts on business, the environment, health and the needs of particular groups in society.

The first stage of this work has been completed—the production of a comprehensive IT database of existing impact assessments and appraisals, and sources of guidance (www.cabinet-office.gov.uk/regulation/1999/checklist/intro.htm) to be made available on Departments' intranets. Building on this, consideration is currently being given to the development of a more streamlined integrated appraisal system to deliver the goal of 'inclusive' policy making set out in the "Modernising Government" White Paper and elaborated in the Cabinet Office report "Professional policy making for the twenty-first century".

Developments in applying the principles in the Strategy will be reported in the Government's first annual review of progress towards sustainable development later this year.

Concessionary Travel

Mr. Browne: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what discussions have taken place with the Scottish Executive about the use of the proposed new universal Scottish concessionary travel card in Clwyd. [131893]

Mr. Hill: A range of issues is discussed between my Department and the Scottish Executive from time to time, including concessionary fares. I understand that the Scottish Executive have no plans to extend the availability of the Scottish concessionary travel card beyond the borders of Scotland.

Radioactive Waste

Mr. Chaytor: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions when he expects to publish his Green Paper on radioactive waste management; and if he will make a statement on the terms of reference of the Green Paper. [130865]

Mr. Meacher [holding answer 20 July 2000]: I expect the consultation paper on the management of radioactive waste to be published in the autumn. It will be the first step of an open and transparent approach that must characterise the radioactive waste management policy debate in the future.

The main aim of the consultation paper will be to explore how to involve the public, and groups that represent the public, in that debate.

The scope of the consultation paper will be as comprehensive as possible and will address issues associated with radioactive materials, such as plutonium, currently outside the scope of existing policy.

Aerodromes (Noise Levels)

Mr. Clappison: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what his timetable is for consultation on schemes for the amelioration of noise from aerodromes; and what assessment he has made of the effectiveness of fitting silencers to light aircraft. [131949]

Mr. Mullin: We published our consultation paper on control of noise from civil aircraft on 20 July. This proposes legislation to strengthen aerodromes' powers to establish and enforce noise amelioration schemes, and to enable the Secretary of State to designate an aerodrome requiring it to agree such a scheme with an appropriate local authority; together with related matters. The consultation paper will shortly be available on the Department's website. We have invited responses by 13 October. We shall study these carefully before making a decision.

To be most effective, engine noise reduction technologies need to be applied at the design stage. The airframe and propellers are also significant sources of noise, and thus the success of retro-fitted silencers depends on the type of aircraft and operating conditions. They may also have an impact on aircraft performance; they would not be appropriate in any case where safety would or could be compromised as a result. The CAA can advise on their appropriateness in specific cases.

Domestic Air Services

Mr. Cox: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what the total number of domestic aircraft landings at Heathrow Airport was in the last 12 months. [131954]

Mr. Mullin: The CAA data available group take-offs and landings together. In the year to end April 2000, there were 69,606 take-offs and landings by domestic services at Heathrow. This figures is for commercial flights, and excludes such things as positional movements.

Rogers Report

Mrs. Ellman: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions, pursuant to his answer of 13 July 2000, Official Report, column 625W, which academic institutions, regeneration practitioners and professional institutions are working together in the North West to develop urban development skills following the Rogers report. [131641]

Ms Beverley Hughes: A steering group led by the University of Salford, including Universities in Liverpool and Manchester, the North West Development Agency, the North West Regional Assembly, Government Office for the North West, major local authorities, the professions and private practitioners has commissioned the Centre for Local and Economic Strategy to undertake a feasibility study on a North West Centre for Excellence for Regeneration.

Timber

Mr. Gummer: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions (1) if he will require house builders to certify the source of the timber used in the construction of their houses; [131696]

(2) if he will introduce regulations requiring house builders to use wood from sustainable sources, certified by the Forest Stewardship Council. [131695]

Mr. Raynsford: The Department has no plans at this time to introduce additional regulation on house builders requiring them to use wood from certified sustainable sources. However, the use of timber from sustainable sources is an integral part of our overall strategy for sustainable construction. Rather than regulate, we are seeking to change attitudes through collaboration and education. Through the Construction Research and Innovation Programme, the Department supports the development of a range of tools and guidance, such as BRE's Environmental Estimating Design software (ENVEST) and Environmental Assessment Methodology (BREEAM). These are aimed at helping clients and designers to identify more sustainable approaches to the supply and use of all construction materials.

Taskforces

Mr. Jenkin: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions if he will list the taskforces for which he is responsible; and if he will estimate the annual cost in each case. [132018]

Ms Beverley Hughes: My Department is responsible for three taskforces as follows:

Shipping Taskforce—Members attend on a voluntary basis. Departmental costs are not separately identifiable.

Taskforce for London Transport—£83,555.

Taskforce on Home Buying—Members attend on a voluntary basis. Departmental costs are not separately identifiable.

Rail Freight

Mr. Jenkin: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions, pursuant to his answer of 12 July 2000, Official Report, column 563W, on rail freight, what the maximum permissible weight will be for a traction unit designed to convey the cement road tankers to which he refers. [132019]

Mr. Hill: In my answer to the hon. Member on 12 July I stated that the cement road tanker designed to be conveyed on the intermodal wagons would have a maximum weight of 40 tonnes. This referred to the combined weight of the load of cement, the road tanker and its trailer. The total on-road weight of road tanker, trailer and traction unit and its load will not exceed 44 tonnes (road tanker—5.1 tonnes; trailer—5 tonnes; traction unit—8.1 tonnes; load of cement—not more than 25.8 tonnes).

Disruptive Airline Passengers

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what guidance he issues to air carriers operating out of UK airports on (a) appropriate staff training for, and (b) ways of dealing with, air rage. [131896]

Mr. Mullin: The Civil Aviation Authority is responsible for the safety regulation of UK-registered aircraft. UK airlines, as a condition for the issue of an Air Operators' Certificate, are required to train cabin staff in all relevant safety procedures and, given the disparate nature of aircraft operations, it is for them to decide the most appropriate type of training in dealing with disruptive passengers.

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions how many carriers operating out of UK airports carry handcuffs and other passenger restraints; and if he will make a statement. [131895]

Mr. Mullin: This is a matter for the airlines. However, I understand that most airlines operating long-haul flights to and from UK airports carry handcuffs or other forms of passenger restraint.

Regional Development Agencies

Mr. Llew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what role Regional Development Agencies play in evaluating single regeneration budget bids; and if he will make a statement on the transparency of the process. [131994]

Ms Beverley Hughes: Regional Development Agencies are responsible for assessing bids for SRB funding against the criteria and priorities set out in the published bidding guidance and regional strategies.

The assessment process requires RDAs to consult with, and take account of the views of, Government Departments and agencies whose interests are covered in the bid proposals. The RDAs then discuss their proposed recommendations for support with either myself or my right hon. Friend for formal approval. RDAs provide detailed feedback to all bidders.

I consider that these arrangements ensure there is transparency at all stages.

Porpoises

Mr. Llew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what measures are in place to protect harbour porpoise in (a) United Kingdom waters and (b) other waters in the European Union. [131990]

Mr. Mullin: Harbour porpoises, like all cetaceans, are protected in Great Britain under the Wildlife and Countryside Act 1981. Section 9 of the 1981 Act makes it an offence to intentionally kill or injure all cetaceans, or to damage, destroy or obstruct access to any place which they use for shelter or protection. Similar provisions apply in Northern Ireland. In addition, the Government have recently proposed an amendment to the Countryside and Rights of Way Bill to increase the protection given to cetaceans. The amendment will make it an offence to intentionally or recklessly disturb a cetacean.

Within the European Union, harbour porpoises are protected under the Council Directive (92/43/EEC) on the Conservation of Natural Habitats and of Wild Fauna and Flora, known as the Habitats Directive. This requires member states to designate appropriate sites of community importance for harbour porpoises as Special Areas of Conservation and prohibit the deliberate killing and disturbance of this species. This Directive is transposed into UK law by the Conservation (Natural Habitats &c.) Regulations 1994.

The Government are currently considering the implications of last autumn's judgment by the High Court that the Habitats Directive extends beyond the limits of the territorial seas. They expect to consult before the end of this year on regulations to transpose the Directive to cover the marine environment within the United Kingdom's jurisdiction outside the territorial seas.

Urban Design

Mr. Llew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions if he will make a statement on the outcome of the skills seminar on urban design held on 13 July; and if he will place in the Library copies of the papers arising. [131992]

Mr. Raynsford: The seminar which I chaired considered how to raise the level of urban design skills in the light of the recommendations of the Urban Taskforce. It drew on findings from two research projects commissioned earlier this year. These reviewed provision of training for urban design and the availability of design skills in local planning authorities in England. Copies of the reports, delegate pack and DETR news release have been placed in the Library of the House.

Participants at the seminar agreed to set up a working party, to be chaired by Sir Stuart Lipton, chair of the Commission for Architecture and the Built Environment, to consider how to train a new generation of urban designers. Its members will be drawn from the key professional institutions and it will promote a new multi-disciplinary approach to training in design.

Ocean Habitats

Mr. Llew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what assessment he has made of the measures needed to protect ocean habitats. [131997]

Mr. Mullin: At its annual meeting in Copenhagen on 26 to 30 June, the OSPAR Commission adopted and launched the Quality Status Report on the whole of the North-East Atlantic, the "QSR 2000", along with reports covering the five regions of the OSPAR maritime area. The UK participated, in particular, in the preparation of the reports on the Greater North Sea (Region II) and the Celtic Seas (Region III). Together, these reports comprise the first detailed assessment of the health of the North-East Atlantic.

The assessment concludes that worsening trends in the pollution of the North-East Atlantic have been reversed, and that many significant sources of pollution have been stopped. Nevertheless, the North-East Atlantic is still under threat. The main fields where action is needed are the sustainable management of fish stocks, the continuing impact of some fisheries on fragile ecosystems, and the elimination of inputs of hazardous substances. Organotin compounds from antifouling treatments of ships and concerns about endocrine disrupters are particularly highlighted as problems.

Other important issues identified by the OSPAR Commission are climate changes resulting from human activities and the consequent effects on the marine environment, the need to protect marine biodiversity and ecosystems from human activities, and the impacts of oil spills and discharges of ballast water from shipping.

The Government consider, in line with the conclusions of the Quality Status Report, that the long-term OSPAR strategies, adopted by the Ministerial Meeting in 1998 at Sintra (in which my right hon. Friend the Deputy Prime Minister played a leading role) and subsequently, provide a sound framework for future action on hazardous substances, radioactive substances, eutrophication, the protection of marine biodiversity and habitats and the offshore oil and gas industry. The Government will also pursue action in other relevant international forums, including the Framework Convention on Climate Change and its Kyoto Protocol, the International Maritime Organisation (particularly on tributyl tin) and the European Community (particularly on the further development of the Common Fisheries Policy).

The assessment also shows that, in spite of major scientific efforts of OSPAR Commission parties over the last 25 years, there are still major gaps in our understanding of the marine environment, and that improvement of our knowledge base remains a priority. The Government will be working, with our OSPAR partners, to develop effective programmes to remedy such gaps.

The Government are also considering the implications of last autumn's judgment by the High Court that the EU Habitats Directive extends beyond the limits of the territorial seas. They expect to consult before the end of this year on regulations to transpose the Directive to cover the marine environment within UK jurisdiction outside the territorial seas and have begun the process of identifying possible candidate Special Areas of Conservation in that area.

Luton Airport Parkway

Mr. Matthew Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what estimate he has made of the net present cost of the Luton Airport Parkway project under the private finance initiative; what the value is of the public sector comparators in (a) pre-risk and (b) risk-adjusted terms; what risks are identified as having been transferred; and if he will make a statement. [131937]

Ms Beverley Hughes: The Luton Airport Parkway Station project was carried out by Railtrack, who took all the design, construction and operational risks. The final cost of the scheme was £23 million and a fixed £2.8 million contribution to the scheme was made through our local transport allocations for the Luton/Dunstable area.

The Station was opened by Her Majesty the Queen in November last year and has been very successful. 23 per cent. of passengers at the rapidly expanding airport are now using public transport, with 16 per cent. using the new station. Railtrack worked very hard to complete the complicated scheme which they took over from the previous promoters. In addition to an intensive service operated by Thameslink, Midland Mainline services started calling at the station in May.

Combined Heat and Power

Mr. Gareth R. Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions when the Government intend to publish their strategy for delivering their target for combined heat and power of at least 10 GWe of CHP by 2010; and if he will make a statement. [131673]

Mr. Meacher: We are currently formulating a strategy to achieve our target. It will include a range of policy, regulatory and fiscal measures, a number of which have already been announced.

A cornerstone of the strategy is the encouragement of Good Quality CHP, which is key to maximising environmental and economic benefits. We are implementing a CHP Quality Assurance programme (CHPQA) to enhance the quality of CHP and determine eligibility to a range of benefits, including exemption from the climate change levy.

We plan to issue a draft CHP strategy for consultation in the autumn when CHPQA is in place.

Fuel Poverty

Mr. Alan Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what the component parts will be of the Government's new definition of fuel poverty, including specific exclusions; and if he will make a statement. [130935]

Mr. Meacher: The information is as follows.

1. The Inter-Ministerial Group on Fuel Poverty, chaired jointly by my right hon. Friend the Minister for Energy and Competitiveness in Europe and my noble Friend the Parliamentary Under-Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions, has reviewed the commonly applied definition of fuel poverty, namely a household that needs to spend more than 10 per cent. of income to achieve a satisfactory heating regime. The Group has taken account of responses to last year's consultation on the new Home Energy Efficiency Scheme (HEES), which sought comments on the definition, and in particular:

whether the use of fuel for non-heating purposes should be included in assessing the amount of fuel needed to achieve a satisfactory heating regime;and whether the calculation of household income should exclude any element of housing costs such as rent or mortgage payments.

Some 60 per cent. of the 252 respondents commented on one or both of the questions.

2. The Group has concluded as a consequence that the 10 per cent. threshold is appropriate for defining fuel poverty. On non-heating fuel, the Group noted that 54 per cent. of respondents to the new HEES consultation had commented that all fuel costs should be taken into account; 6 per cent. had other suggestions; and the other 40 per cent. did not comment. The Group believes that the definition should be based on all fuel use.

3. As regards the treatment of housing costs, the Group noted that 34 per cent. of respondents suggested that they should not be excluded from the calculation of household income; 20 per cent. that some allowance should be made; 6 per cent. offered other suggestions; and 40 per cent. did not comment. The Government's Poverty Strategy has shown income data both with no allowance for housing costs, and excluding costs met by Housing Benefit or Income Support for Mortgage Interest (ISMI). The Group has taken account of responses to the consultation exercise and the difficulty of producing definitive figures, and has concluded that the draft Fuel Poverty Strategy which will be issued in the autumn will focus mainly on the first basis, but will identify the number of fuel poor on both bases. But the Government will consult further and will invite comments on this, when they publish their draft Strategy.

4. Some commentators have argued that all mortgage, rent and other housing costs should be excluded in calculating household income. On this basis, however, more than one in three households in England would have been classed as fuel poor in 1996, based on the English House Condition Survey. Although fuel poverty is unacceptably widespread, this definition would include many households who would not be regarded—or regard themselves—as being in material fuel poverty.

Quarrying

Mr. Rogers: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions which organisations representing the UK quarrying industry have been consulted about the proposed aggregates tax. [132259]

Ms Beverley Hughes: A range of quarry trade organisations has been invited by the Treasury, HM Customs and Excise and the Department of the Environment, Transport and the Regions to participate in the process of researching the environmental impacts of aggregate quarrying, developing the mechanisms of the proposed levy (including two consultations on draft clauses), discussing the content of a voluntary alternative package of measures, and clarifying the implications of the Chancellor's announcement in Budget 2000. Trade organisations recorded as having been involved in one or more of these processes include the British Aggregates Association, the British Cement Association, the Confederation of British Industry, the Quarry Products Association and the Silica and Moulding Sands Association. Views have also been received from representatives of the coal and ceramic clay producers.

Liverpool-Dover Railway

Mr. Blunt: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what assessment the Government have made of (a) the financial viability, (b) the practical viability, (c) the planning aspects, (d) the environmental impact and (e) the contribution to transport policies of the proposals made by Central Railway plc. for a freight-only railway from Liverpool to Dover. [132148]

Mr. Hill: None. I understand that Central Railway plc may intend to submit an application under the Transport and Works Act 1992 but no such application has yet been received.

Park Homes

Mr. Burstow: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what plans he has to ensure that recreational park home owners are included in legislation or other action arising from the report of the Park Homes Working Party. [132139]

Mr. Mullin: Owners of holiday park homes are not covered by the mobile homes legislation and did not fall within the remit of the Park Homes Working Party. We are now consulting on the recommendations of the Working Party, and any responses from interested bodies or individuals on the position of holiday park home owners will be considered. The Director General of Fair Trading has given his support to codes of practice for the letting, selling and siting of holiday park homes.

Social Exclusion

Mrs. Ellman: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions, pursuant to his answer of 13 July 2000, Official Report, column 625W, who has been invited to the consultation meetings on the feasibility study of a recommendation made by the Social Exclusion Unit's Policy Action Team 16 (Learning Lessons); and where these consultation meetings will take place. [131659]

Ms Beverley Hughes: I have placed in the Library of the House a list of those invited to consultation meetings on the National Centre for Neighbourhood Renewal. The meetings will take place in central London.

Ribble Valley

Mr. Evans: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what percentage of all new developments in the Ribble Valley were built on brownfield sites in each year since 1994. [131661]

Ms Beverley Hughes: The information is not available for local authority districts. The latest information for the North West shows that for 1994, 63 per cent. of all new development took place on recycled land.

Mr. Evans: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what levels and type of pollution were measured in the Ribble Valley in each year since 1994. [131647]

Mr. Hill: Ribble Valley Borough Council (RVBC) established an air quality monitoring station in Chatburn in 1997. It is equipped to continuously monitor sulphur dioxide, nitrogen dioxide and PM10 particulates. The following data have been obtained:

Chatburn air quality

	Sulphur dioxide		Nitrogen dioxide		PM10

RVBC has concluded that the air quality in Chatburn already meets the Government's air quality objectives.

The Environment Agency also collects a large amount of monitoring data from the individual industrial sites it regulates. All these data are available on the public registers.

Mr. Evans: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions how many new dwellings were built in the Ribble Valley in each year since 1994. [131657]

Mr. Mullin: The total number of permanent dwellings completed in Ribble Valley are as follows:

Period	Number
1995	343
1996	271

A303 (Stonehenge)

Mr. Key: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what the total amount spent by his Department and its predecessors since 1986 is on (a) design work, (b) public consultation and inquiries and (c) other identifiable cost headings in connection with road improvements on the A303 past Stonehenge, including Countess Roundabout and Winterbourne Stoke. [131533]

Mr. Hill: I have asked the Chief Executive of the Highways Agency, Mr. Peter Nutt, to write to the hon. Member.

Letter from Peter Nutt to Mr. Robert Key, dated 24 July 2000:

The Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions has asked me to reply to your recent question about the total amount spent by his Department and its predecessors on road improvements for the A303 past Stonehenge, including Countess Roundabout and Winterbourne Stoke since 1986.

Prior to 1 April 1996, the only expenditure by the Highways Agency and its predecessors that can be attributed solely to the A303/Amesbury-Berwick Down scheme past Stonehenge relates to a public consultation exhibition held in 1993 costing £32,000 and a conference and exhibition in 1994 costing £78,000. Since then the Agency has spent £909,461 on the design of the A303 Stonehenge scheme, including preliminary work on the improvement of Countess Roundabout. In addition, a public exhibition was held in 1999 at a cost of £48,000.

If you wish to discuss this matter further, Mark Bailey, the Highways Agency's Route Manager for the A303 (telephone 01179 878198) would be happy to talk to you.

Neighbourhood Renewal

Mr. Loughton: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions if he will list the deprived areas which will benefit from the Neighbourhood Renewal Fund. [132110]

Ms Armstrong: We will consult in the autumn on which local authorities should benefit from the Neighbourhood Renewal Fund.

Mr. Loughton: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions who will determine the spending allocations of the Neighbourhood Renewal Fund. [132115]

Ms Armstrong: The Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions will bring before the House a Special Grant Report under section 88B of the Local Government Finance Act 1988.

Mr. Loughton: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what the priorities will be for the Neighbourhood Renewal Fund. [132114]

Ms Armstrong: The Neighbourhood Renewal Fund will make a key contribution to the delivery of the National Strategy for Neighbourhood Renewal—including new targets for education, crime, employment, health and housing in deprived areas—and help to get money to where it is most needed. Authorities will work with new Local Strategic Partnerships to draw up local deprivation strategies which will spell out how the additional funding will help to renew the most deprived communities and promote closer co-operation with the police, health and other local services.

Mr. Loughton: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions (1) who the lead Minister will be for the National Strategy for Neighbourhood Renewal; [132112]

(2) what the role will be of (a) the RDAs and (b) local authorities in the implementation of the National Strategy for Neighbourhood Renewal. [132113]

Ms Armstrong: The Report by the Social Exclusion Unit on a "National Strategy for Neighbourhood Renewal: a framework for consultation", published last April, raised these issues in its key ideas 22, 23 and 24. Decisions on these and other points in the draft Strategy will be announced in the autumn when the National Strategy Action Plan setting out the Government's response to the consultations is published.

Mr. Loughton: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions (1) if he will make a statement on the role of the new National Centre for Neighbourhood Renewal; [132280]

(2) where the National Centre for Neighbourhood Renewal will be based; to whom it will be accountable; and what its budget will be. [132111]

Ms Armstrong: The Social Exclusion Unit's Policy Action Team on "Learning Lessons" (Policy Action Team 16) recommended setting up a National Centre for Neighbourhood Renewal, to play a leadership role in promoting effective, inclusive approaches to neighbourhood renewal. The Government have accepted this recommendation.

The Policy Action Team envisaged that the Centre would promote: quality training and development for neighbourhood renewal among policy makers, professional and practitioner groups and community organisations; better access to "lessons learned" from previous experience; better collaboration between those involved in neighbourhood renewal; better research on the issues; and better leadership.

The Government are currently considering and consulting on the precise scope and functions of the Centre. This will include consideration of the location, budget and accountability arrangements.

Mr. Loughton: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what the relationship will be between local authorities, regional development agencies and the Neighbourhood Renewal Fund. [132116]

Ms Armstrong: In drawing up local deprivation strategies for using the new Neighbourhood Renewal Fund, local authorities will work with new Local Strategic Partnerships. The RDAs should be key members of the partnerships in the areas in which they are investing.

Brownfield Development

Mr. Loughton: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what annual targets he has set for the proportion of new housing to be provided (a) on recycled land and (b) by re-using existing buildings in each of the years to 2008. [132320]

Ms Beverley Hughes: This Government are committed to maximising the re-use of previously-developed land within urban areas, bringing empty homes back into use and converting existing buildings, in preference to the development of greenfield sites. The target for England is that, by 2008, 60 per cent. of additional housing should be provided on previously-developed land and through conversions of existing buildings.

Home Ownership

Mr. Loughton: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions from what base year the press releases accompanying the CSR forecast states that twice as many families will be helped into home ownership by 2004. [132319]

Mr. Mullin: When the press release talks about twice as many families being helped into home ownership, this is compared to the number of families that would have been helped if the previously planned funding level for low-cost ownership in 2001–02 had been maintained until 2004.

Fishguard Harbour

Mr. Sayeed: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions further to his answer of 17 July 2000, Official Report, column 48W, on Fishguard Harbour, if he plans to refuse to ban the use of pleasure craft in Fishguard Harbour, except with the consent of the Harbourmaster, and the use of any craft by anyone under the age of 16 years. [132498]

Mr. Hill: Age limits for the use of craft in Fishguard Harbour are included in the Harbour byelaws proposed by the harbour operator, Stena Line Ports Ltd. There are outstanding objections and we have not yet reached a decision on this issue.

Partnership Investment Programme

Mr. Steen: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions, pursuant to his answer of 6 July 2000, Official Report, column 264W, on what date discussions between his Department and the European Commission about an alternative to the Partnership Investment Programme started; in what form these discussions have taken place; how far such discussions have progressed; and what conclusions have been reached. [131977]

Ms Beverley Hughes: Discussions between the Department and the European Commission about an alternative to the Partnership Investment Programme began on 2 March 2000. Discussions are continuing. My Department is exploring a number of other avenues. Subject to the views of other Government Departments, this is likely to include a fact-finding seminar with other Member States in order to establish their approach to regeneration.

Parliamentary Questions

Mr. Stunell: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions how many written parliamentary questions tabled to his Department between 19 October 1999 and 20 April have not received substantive answers, citing as the reason commercial or other confidentiality. [132133]

Ms Beverley Hughes: For the period in question, 15 out of a total of 2,865 parliamentary questions tabled to my Department did not receive substantive answers, citing as the reason commercial or other confidentiality.

Photocard Driving Licences (Post Offices)

Mr. Wallace: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions if he will list the post offices offering over-the-counter identity document checking facilities for photocard driving licence applicants, during a six month trial period. [132153]

Mr. Hill: The pilot over-the-counter application checking service for those who hold UK passports and are applying for a first photocard driving licence, commenced at 208 selected post offices on 12 June. A list of participating post offices has been placed in the House Libraries.

Buses (Disabled Access)

Mrs. Gordon: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions when he will introduce regulations to ensure that wheelchair users and other disabled people can travel by bus. [132674]

Mr. Hill: I am pleased to announce that I have today laid before the House the Public Service Vehicle Accessibility Regulations 2000 which set technical standards for wheelchair access and a range of other features to enable disabled people to use buses and coaches.

Our Ten Year Transport Plan, Transport 2010, published last week, demonstrated our commitment to creating public transport that is accessible to disabled people. These regulations are the latest move towards achieving that goal.

Buses are at the very heart of public transport and these regulations will mean that, in future, more and more disabled people will be able to use local bus services.

Housing Investment

Mr. Gareth R. Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what his plans are for housing investment in future years; and if he will make a statement. [132683]

Mr. Raynsford: I am pleased to announce that the Government's spending plans for 2001–02 to 2003–04, announced by my right hon. Friend the Chancellor of the Exchequer on 18 July 2000, Official Report, columns 219–29, provide extra investment of £1.6 billion a year for housing by 2003–04 compared to 2000–01. These extra resources confirm our commitment in the Housing Green Paper to ensure that everyone has the opportunity of a decent home. Our full spending plans are set out in the tables.

The settlement includes, over the three years:

an additional £400 million for council housing placed in arm's-length management companies; support for the transfer of up to 200,000 homes each year from local authorities to housing associations; an additional £250 million for our new Starter Home Initiative; an additional £872 million for new social rented housing; an additional £120 million for a new Safer Communities Supported Housing Fund.

Total additional spending over the three years will be just over £1.8 billion. In addition, we will be boosting the Housing Private Finance Initiative, providing for an extra £600 million investment in council housing over the two years 2002–03 to 2003–04. This will bring total additional investment in housing over the three years to nearly £2.5 billion.

By 2003–04, annual capital investment in housing, excluding the Private Finance Initiative, will have risen to more than £4 billion. This compares with the planned capital investment we inherited in 1997 of just £1.5 billion for 1997–98, with further cuts proposed by the last Government for 1998–99 and 1999–2000. We acted swiftly to tackle past and planned under-investment. Our Capital Receipts Initiative provided nearly £800 million extra in 1997–98 and 1998–99. Through our 1998 Comprehensive Spending Review, we provided an additional £3.9 billion for the years 1999–2000 to 2001–02 so that, in 2001–02, capital investment in housing will be double the amount we inherited.

In the 2000 spending review, we have looked closely at our priorities for housing in the context of our Housing Green Paper and the many initial comments we received in response to it. We concluded that, despite the higher levels of investment planned in 2001–02, additional resources would be needed to fulfil the commitments in the Green Paper. The extra resources we are making available over the next three years are on top of the planned funding level for 2001–02 agreed during the 1998 Comprehensive Spending Review.

Our new spending plans will help to ensure that we meet our Green Paper commitment to bring all social housing up to a decent standard within a decade, with a third of homes that currently fail to reach those standards improved by 31 March 2004.

We are providing an extra £400 million for investment in local authority-owned housing. In line with the Green Paper proposals, we are putting that, together with £60 million of existing resources, into a special pot of £460 million, available to authorities which have set up arm's-length management companies and demonstrated excellence in their performance under the new Best Value regime. In this way, we are rewarding good performance as well as encouraging authorities to separate their landlord from their strategic function. We expect that the money available will result in improvements to approaching 100,000 homes by 2003–04.

Within the Housing Revenue Account for local authority housing we are providing a Major Repairs Allowance as part of a new, more business-like financial regime. The Major Repairs Allowance will be £1.6 billion in 2001–02. In future years, the amount per dwelling will be up-rated in line with inflation. We expect the total amount to be £1.5 billion in 2003–04 and £1.4 billion in 2003–04, reflecting the reduction in the number of local authority dwellings as a result of stock transfers and Right to Buy. These amounts will be drawn from the total provision for capital expenditure by local authorities.

We also propose that management allowances will rise by 2 per cent. in real terms in each of the years 2002–03 and 2003–04. Maintenance allowances will be up-rated in line with inflation over the same period.

Taken together, we believe these measures will provide authorities with the resources and the freedom to manage their housing assets more effectively.

As the Green Paper stresses, the transfer of council housing to housing associations will play an important part in bringing social housing up to decent standards, in separating authorities' strategic and landlord functions for housing, and in creating a more diverse range of social landlords. We have made provision in our spending plans to support the transfer of up to 200,000 homes each year from 2001–02, where proposals have the backing of tenants. We are conducting a review of the stock transfer process. We will be setting up a new Community Housing Task Force to assist local authorities and tenants to carry forward transfer as part of a reformed process. The task force will help to ensure that new social landlords created by the transfer process empower tenants and regenerate communities.

The Private Finance Initiative is another important option for improving local authority housing. Currently, there are eight authorities testing this approach through pathfinder schemes. Our new spending plans provide £160 million in 2001–02 to fund the existing pathfinders, with an extra £600 million over the following two years to fund new schemes.

The provision of affordable housing is a vital part of our strategy for ensuring that everyone has the opportunity of a decent home. We believe that local authorities are best placed to assess the need for affordable hosing in their areas and to reflect those assessments in their housing strategies, their investment plans and in the implementation of planning powers for affordable housing.

We have already acted to put that policy in place.

We did so through the 1998 Comprehensive Spending Review, increasing the resources available to local authorities for housing investment, including investment in new affordable housing. We also increased the scope available to them to reflect local priorities in their investment plans, through the creation of a single pot for housing capital expenditure. We were able to halt planned cuts to the Housing Corporation's investment in new affordable housing. We have also encouraged the Corporation to strengthen the links between its investment decisions and the priorities of local authorities at regional and local levels.

Our recently revised planning guidance for housing (PPG3) reinforces the powers available to authorities to seek the provision of affordable housing as a proportion of new private developments, complementing public investment. We will be issuing best practice guidance to help authorities to make more effective use of these powers in future years.

These policies are helping to deliver more affordable housing and to ensure that homes are provided where they are needed most. However, we do not believe that this is sufficient. Local authorities and housing associations in urban and rural areas of high demand have impressed upon us the difficulties they face in improving existing poor condition housing for their tenants, while at the same time providing decent homes for families in need of affordable housing.

We have taken account of these representations in the spending review and will increase funding through the Housing Corporation's Approved Development Programme. Ahead of the spending review period, we are providing an additional £50 million this year. This will be followed by an extra £872 million between 2001–02 and 2003–04. Our new spending plans will result in investment through the Approved Development Programme nearly doubling from planned expenditure of £691 million in 2001–02 to £1,236 million by 2003–04. This will allow increased provision of affordable housing in both urban and rural areas. We expect to see increasing use of modern construction techniques and greater efficiency in line with the Construction Task Force report.

Most people aspire to home ownership, and nearly 70 per cent. of households in England own their own homes already. However, despite relatively low interest rates and a stable economy, high house prices in some areas can act as a barrier to home ownership for people on lower incomes. Our Housing Green Paper recognised the need to expand our existing programme of support for low cost home ownership, particularly to help key workers who need to live close to the communities they support. Through our Green Paper, we are consulting on proposals for a new Starter Home Initiative to help key workers to achieve home ownership in high price, high demand areas. Our spending plans provide an additional £250 million between 2001–02 and 2003–04 to support low cost home ownership. We will announce details of the Starter Home Initiative in the light of responses to the Green Paper.

Increased funding for the Housing Corporation's Approved Development Programme and the new Starter Home Initiative will significantly increase the provision of affordable housing. Local authorities will continue to be able to complement Housing Corporation and Starter Home Initiative investment from their own capital allocations, in line with their own local housing strategies. Their funding decisions will influence the total level of affordable housing provision across England.

The spending review has also underlined the importance of supported housing. Our new Supporting People programme will come into effect in 2003–04, providing an integrated policy and funding framework for support services for vulnerable households. We will be providing revenue funding of £153 million between 2001–02 and 2003–04 to ensure the effective implementation of Supporting People.

In the run-up to implementation, we have also decided, in line with the Government's commitment to reducing crime and protecting the vulnerable, to provide £120 million additional capital funding for a new Safer Communities Supported Housing Fund, together with associated capital funding for a new Safer Communities Supported Housing Fund, together with associated revenue support of £17 million. This will provide new housing and support for young people at risk and other vulnerable people, such as those fleeing domestic violence. It will also provide housing and support for ex-offenders and people with drug or alcohol problems. The fund will be administered by the Housing Corporation, and will be conditional on local authorities providing matching capital funding for housing provided in their areas. Projects must also have the full support of the local crime and disorder partnership. More details of this scheme will be announced in the autumn.

Disabled Facilities Grants fund adaptations to enable disabled people to live with dignity in their own homes. We are providing an extra £39 million over the three years for these grants, increasing funding to £88.8 million by 2003–04.

Home Improvement Agencies play an important role in helping elderly and vulnerable home owners to maintain and improve their homes. We are providing an extra £6 million in grants to local authorities for Home Improvement Agencies over the next three years.

Our new spending plans include a total of over £200 million over the three years to prevent rough sleeping throughout England and to help former rough sleepers rebuild their lives through education, training and employment. These resources will ensure that, having achieved the Government's target of reducing the level of rough sleeping by at least two-thirds, those reductions can be sustained.

Our spending plans will help to improve the quality of housing and the support we provide for the most vulnerable members of society.

In addition to quality, choice is a key theme of the Housing Green Paper. By improving the quality and supply of housing, we will also improve the choices available to people as home owners or tenants.

We are also keen to encourage local authorities to introduce more customer-focused lettings schemes which given tenants a greater choice over where they live. Over the next three years, we will be providing £11 million to support pilot schemes involving local authorities and registered social landlords which test choice-based lettings policies.

We are about to conduct extensive research into the availability and quality of local authority gypsy sites. The results will be considered as part of the next spending review. In the meantime, we are making available £17 million over the next three years to help authorities to improve and refurbish a limited number of sites, as part of the Government's policy to discourage unauthorised camping and all the problems associated with it. We will publish details of the scheme in the autumn.

Our aim is to ensure that everyone has the opportunity of a decent home. Our Housing Green Paper sets out our strategy for meeting that aim. Our new spending plans provide the resources necessary to deliver it. This money, together with the additional resources being made available in other programmes, ensures a major contribution to the renaissance of our cities and countryside, which will be highlighted in our Urban and Rural White Papers.

HEALTH

Levonorgestrel

Mr. Amess: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) if he will publish the medical research and evidence on which the Committee for the Safety of Medicines based their recommendation that levonorgestrel 0.75 mg could be supplied as a pharmacy medication; [129410]

(2) what trials have been conducted in the United Kingdom to test the safety and long-term health effects of levonorgestrel 0.75 mg. [129409]

Yvette Cooper: A product containing levonorgestrel 0.75 mg has been authorised in the United Kingdom as a prescription only medicine. This followed advice from the Committee on Safety of Medicines (CSM) who were satisfied as to the product's quality, safety and efficacy. The evidence considered included two World Health Organisation sponsored pivotal studies. One study involving approximately 3,000 women in 14 countries, including the UK, has been published in the Lancet (1998). The other, published in Human Reproduction (1993), involved 880 women. Copies are available in the Library. Other supporting data not in the public domain are confidential to the application.

Evidence of safety as stated was taken into account when the CSM considered the proposal for levonorgestrel 0.75 mg to be available without prescription. There is also evidence from a study of the effects of self-administering emergency contraception (New England Journal of Medicine, 1998). Levonorgestrel 0.75 mg has been available from pharmacies in France without a doctor's prescription since June 1999. The criteria for prescription control are defined in the legislation. The CSM considered each of these criteria and advised that they did not apply to levonorgestrel 0.75 mg for emergency contraception in women of 16 and over. They considered that all the steps required to supply emergency contraception safely could be successfully completed in a pharmacy.

E.coli

Sir Teddy Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what priority is being given in the Health Service to emphasising (a) the health dangers of bacterium E.coli and (b) ensuring that the disease can be speedily identified. [131420]

Ms Stuart: The bacterium currently of most concern is vero cytotoxin producing E.coli, of which E.coli 0157 is the commonest. In may this year the Chief Medical Officer's Update, which is distributed to all medical practitioners, carried an article "VTEC Guidance" which drew attention to the seasonal increase in infection, the risks from farm visits and the susceptibility of children to developing Haemolytic Uraemic Syndrome following infection with E.coli 0157. A further CMO Update in August will alert medical practitioners to the potential increased release of toxin that can be caused by certain classes of antibiotic in patients with E.coli 0157. The CMO also issued a press release "Health advice issued for farm visits by children" in April alerting the public to the risks of infection associated with farm visits and advising on sensible precautions to be taken to avoid infection. This advice was sent to all directors of public health and consultants in communicable disease control. Information has been given to vulnerable groups such as pregnant women on how to avoid infection. The Pregnancy Book, given to all first time mothers, contains advice on safe eating and how to avoid infection and this advice is repeated in the leaflet "While you are pregnant: safe eating and how to avoid infection" given to all mothers. Guidance was issued by the CMO in July 1998 on the safe cooking of burger meat to prevent foodborne infection.

All Public Health Service Laboratories test all stool samples for E.coli 0157 in accordance with agreed Standard Operating Procedures. The PHLS published its "Guidelines for the control of infection with Vero cytotoxin producing Escherichia coli (VTEC)" dealing with sampling and identification procedures. E.coli 0157 infection that is foodborne, which is the majority, is notifiable as a 'foodborne disease', and all laboratories voluntarily notify all E.coli infections as part of an agreed reporting protocol.

Residential and Nursing Homes

Mr. Field: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what response he has made to the submission by Methodist Homes for the Aged to his consultation paper on Nationally Required Standards for Residential and Nursing Homes for Older People. [130781]

Mr. Hutton: I am aware that the supportive response from Methodist Homes to the consultation document raised a number of concerns including about the staffing and physical environment standards and the timescale for implementing the standards.

I refer my right hon. Friend to the reply I gave to my hon. Friend the Member for Warrington, North (Helen Jones) on 20 July 2000, Official Report, columns 287–88W. This set out the conclusions we have reached in relation to the physical standards in residential and nursing homes based on the responses to the consultation process on "Fit for the Future?".

Regarding staffing, we do not accept that fixed ratios are the best means of specifying the number and qualifications of staff to be employed in a nursing home. For qualified nurses, numbers should relate to the assessed needs of residents at any one time. We are considering what models of assessment should be recognised by the National Care Standards Commission for this purpose and how nursing needs are defined so that nurse staffing levels can be set accurately and realistically. For ancillary staff, levels should take account of the degree of efficiency and effectiveness demonstrated by providers in managing ancillary tasks.

The standards for nine out of the eleven topic areas that we consulted upon in "Fit for the Future?" received overwhelming support and these will form the basis for the full set of national minimum standards which we will publish later this year.

Meat Inspection

Mr. Gill: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many veterinary surgeons were employed on duties associated with abattoirs in each of the past 18 months. [131101]

Ms Stuart: I am advised by the Food Standards Agency (FSA) that the number of veterinary surgeons employed by or on behalf of either the FSA (and previously the Joint Food Safety and Standards Group (JFSSG) of the Department of Health and the Ministry of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food) or its executive agency, the Meat Hygiene Service (MHS), on duties associated with abattoirs in Great Britain for each of the past 18 months is as follows:

1999
January	472	10
February	476	10
March	490	10
April	478	10

February	505	10
March	517	10
April	532	9
May	503	9
June	523	9

[1] FSA since 1 April 2000

MHS veterinary surgeons are employed throughout Great Britain on meat hygiene, inspection and animal welfare duties as well as the enforcement of specified risk materials (SRM) controls. The vast majority of these staff are employed on a contract basis. These contracts relate to individual plants and to a specific number of hours. The above figures therefore do not equate to full-time equivalent figures which are considerably less.

Veterinary Meat Hygiene Advisers have been employed by or on behalf of the Food Standards Agency since its established on 1 April 2000. Prior to this they formed part of the JFSSG. They play a major role in the audit of the MHS, the licensing of meat plants and other activities in England. In Scotland and Wales, these duties are carried out by staff of the State Veterinary Service (SVS).

SVS staff throughout Great Britain may also from time to time visit abattoirs on other official business. The above figures do not include veterinary surgeons employed by the SVS who undertake any of these other duties.

Food Supplements

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what progress has been made on the international regulation of vitamins and minerals at the Codex Alimentarius Commission; and if he will make a statement. [131492]

Ms Stuart: A proposal for draft guidelines for vitamin and mineral supplements was discussed at the meeting of the Codex Committee on Nutrition and Foods for Special Dietary Uses on 19–23 June 2000. The Committee made some progress towards consensus on the text and will discuss it further at its next meeting.

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) when (a) he and (b) his officials last attended European Ministerial Working Group meetings to discuss the Draft European Directive on Food Supplements; what assessment he has made of the extent to which the Directive provides for the continued access by consumers to safe dietary supplements on retail sale; what amendments are being proposed to that Directive by other member state Governments; and if he will make a statement; [131491]

(2) what his policy objectives are in relation to the proposed Food Supplements Directive; what the timetable is for further progress in discussions on the Directive; and if he will make a statement. [131493]

Ms Stuart: There have been no meetings at ministerial level to discuss this proposal. It was discussed by officials at a council expert working group held in July, and the Food Standards Agency has circulated details of the specific issues discussed to interested parties. The timetable for further discussions has not been announced but the next meeting of this group is due in September.

Publications (Sensory-impaired Access)

Mr. Andrew George: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what plans he has to ensure that all future literature which forms part of National Health Service public consultations will be available in a variety of formats to enable accessibility for the sensory-impaired. [131747]

Ms Stuart [holding answer 21 July 2000]: All the Department's publications are available on request in braille, on audio cassette tape, on disk or in large print. Additionally, documents are simultaneously published on the Department's website, which has been designed in line with the Cabinet Office guidelines on accessibility. Braille and large print publications and/or audio tapes are produced as standard for certain categories of information, including major consultation documents produced by the Department.

Mr. Andrew George: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what his Department's policy is in relation to the production of its publications in accessible formats for the sensory-impaired. [131746]

Ms Stuart [holding answer 21 July 2000]: All the Department's publications are available on request in braille, on audio cassette tape, on disk or in large print. Additionally, documents are simultaneously published on the Department's website, which has been designed in line with the Cabinet Office guidelines on accessibility.

Braille and large print publications and/or audio tapes are produced as standard for certain categories of information, including: consultation documents; information specifically aimed at elderly or disabled people; and information about help with costs.

Mr. Andrew George: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many nationally-produced public information leaflets and booklets have also been available since 1990 in (a) Braille, (b) moon, (c) large print, (d) audio-tape and (e) other formats suitable for those with a single or dual sensory impairment. [131781]

Ms Stuart: All the Department's publications are available on request in braille, on audio cassette tape, on disk or in large print. Additionally, documents are simultaneously published on the Department's website, which has been designed in line with the Cabinet Office guidelines on accessibility.

Braille and large print publications and/or audio tapes are produced as standard for certain categories of information, including: consultation documents; information specifically aimed at elderly or disabled people; and information about help with costs. The following table provides information about special format publications in these categories since April 1993.

Format	Number
Braille	51
Moon	1
Large print	43
Audio tape	83

Notes:
1. Before April 1993 responsibility for printing and publishing services rested with Her Majesty's Stationery Office.
2. Table does not show one-off publications/tapes produced in response to individual consumer requests

Guillain-Barré Syndrome

Mr. Andrew George: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what assessment he has made of the availability of Viagra to sufferers of neuropathy due to Guillain-Barré Syndrome; and if he will make a statement. [131748]

Ms Stuart [holding answer 21 July 2000]: We consulted widely before introducing regulations on 1 July 1999 restricting the prescribing by general practitioners of treatments for impotence, including Viagra.

GPs may issue a National Health Service prescription to men for the treatment of impotence only if they have one of a number of listed medical conditions. Neuropathy due to Guillain-Barré Syndrome is not one of these conditions.

Mead Webber Abattoir

Mr. Paterson: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) if he will make a statement on the start and finishing date of the independent public inquiry into the reasons for the closure of the Mead Webber abattoir; [131622]

(2) if he will list the factors underlying the delay in opening the independent public inquiry into the reasons for the closure of the Mead Webber abattoir. [131623]

Ms Stuart [holding answer 21 July 2000]: I understand from the Food Standards Agency that the arrangements for the independent investigation have been agreed but that Mead Webber Ltd. has indicated that it will not specify its complaint against the Meat Hygiene Service until related assault allegations have been resolved. Work on the investigation will begin as soon as a formal complaint has been received. In the circumstances, it is not possible to estimate its finishing date.

Genetic Testing

Mr. Jim Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will respond to the report published in 1999 by the Human Genetics Advisory Commission, "The Implications of Genetic Testing for Employment". [132741]

Yvette Cooper: The Government have given careful consideration to a report on "The Implications of Genetic Testing for Employment", from the Human Genetics Advisory Commission (HGAC). The Government agree with the HGAC that this is an issue which should be kept under close review in future. The Government accept the main findings of the HGAC's report. They have today asked the Human Genetics Commission (HGC), which is the successor to HGAC, to take note of the HGAC's recommendations, have suggested ways of taking them forward and have drawn attention to the measures they have already taken in this area. The Government have also asked the HGC to consider the next steps by including this issue in the Commission's wider study of the uses of genetic information and to provide advice to Ministers in due course.

I am placing a copy of the letter in the Library.

Suicides (NHS)

Mr. Menzies Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) what was the annual suicide rate of NHS (a) hospital nurses, (b) general practice nurses, (c) community nurses, (d) mental health nurses and (e) all nurses in each year since 1989 stating in each case (i) the number of suicides per grade and (ii) the proportion that represents per thousand employed in that category by the NHS; and if he will make a statement; [131014]

(2) what was the annual suicide rate of NHS (a) general practitioners, (b) junior hospital doctors, (c) senior hospital doctors, (d) consultants and (e) all doctors in each year since 1989 stating in each case (i) the number of suicides and (ii) the proportion that represents per thousand employed in that category by the NHS; and if he will make a statement. [131021]

Mr. Hutton: The information requested is not held centrally but may be held locally by individual National Health Service employers.

We take the issue of suicide very seriously. That is why the development of strategies to reduce suicide is a major part of our programme outlined in the White Paper "Saving Lives: Our Healthier Nation."

The Department has commissioned Professor Keith Hawton from Oxford University to carry out research into suicide and stress among a number of occupational groups, including doctors and nurses. His reports will be published in due course.

The table shows statistics presenting the numbers of suicide deaths for doctors and nurses. The data are presented for ages 16–74 and 16–59. It is not possible to identify doctors and nurses who were actually employed at the time of their deaths, or whether they were employed by the NHS.

BUPA

Mr. Cousins: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many discussions his Department has had in the last year with BUPA about future partnerships; and what topics were discussed. [131646]

Ms Stuart: The Department has had no direct discussions with BUPA in the last year.

Internet (Drugs)

Dr. Gibson: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what procedures have been operated to close websites selling drugs via the Internet. [132122]

Ms Stuart: The procedures are identical to those used in any investigation into alleged breaches of medicines regulations. The investigation has to be conducted in accordance with the Police and Criminal Evidence Act 1984 and its Codes of Practice.

Those websites which have been closed have either been closed voluntarily after advice from the Medicines Control Agency or closed following a warning by the Agency that a failure to close may result in a prosecution.

Dr. Gibson: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what drugs (a) licensed and (b) unlicensed by the Medicines Control Agency on sale via the Internet have led to (i) investigations and (ii) prosecutions. [132121]

Ms Stuart: Full information could only be put together at a disproportionate cost. (180 investigations are involved, each of which could cover any number of different medicines). However, investigations by the Medicines Control Agency into the alleged sale of medicines purporting to be licensed on the internet suggest that these medicines are likely to be those indicated for, or believed to possess memory enhancing capabilities (often referred to as "smart" drugs), or impotence (such as Viagra) or the capability to cause a loss of weight ("slimming pills"), or remedy hair loss.

Investigations by the Medicines Control Agency into the alleged sale of unlicensed medicines on the Internet indicate that such medicines are likely to be those claiming the qualities stated in the preceding paragraph, for example, Gamma Hydroxyl Butyrate (GHB), Dehydroepiandrosterone (a steroid type drug).

The medicine involved in the only prosecution to date was GHB, being sole over the Internet.

Dr. Gibson: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what investigations he has made of websites selling drugs (a) nationally and (b) internationally. [132123]

Ms Stuart: The Medicines Control Agency (MCA) has conducted approximately 180 investigations into cases of national Websites allegedly offering medicines for sale. The MCA has no jurisdiction outside United Kingdom territory, although it works with enforcement and regulatory authorities in other countries, particularly the United States of America Food and Drug Administration, to investigate international websites.

Dr. Gibson: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many employees are engaged in the Special Inquiry Unit of the Medicines Control Agency investigating drug sales through the Internet. [132118]

Ms Stuart: Three enforcement offices of the Special Enquiry Unit of the Medicines Control Agency are specifically engaged in investigating alleged illegal sales of medicines on the Internet. In addition investigating officers in other units of the Medicines Control Agency's Enforcement Group undertake investigations into alleged breaches of medicines regulations in which activities on the Internet can be a major or contributory part. All this work may also be done in partnership with other national and international enforcement agencies and the Police Service.

Dr. Gibson: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what training is undergone by employees of the Special Inquiry Unit of the Medicines Control Agency investigating drug sales through the internet. [132119]

Ms Stuart: All enforcement officers in the Medicines Control Agency receive basic training in the use of the internet. Enforcement officers in the Special Inquiry Unit also receive specialist training in advanced search techniques. In addition, some enforcement officers are intelligence analysts, trained to police standards in the analysis and validation of data and information.

The MCA is committed to providing any training found necessary in this area to ensure it continues to effectively discharge its responsibility to enforce medicines legislation.

Dr. Gibson: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what plans he has to seek to amend the law relating to sales of drugs over the internet; and if he will make a statement. [132120]

Ms Stuart: We have no immediate plans to amend the law.

Alcohol and Drugs (Hospitals)

Mr. Hunter: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many (a) admissions to NHS hospitals and (b) persons were treated in NHS accident and emergency units were related to (i) alcohol and (ii) drugs in 1999. [132343]

Ms Stuart: In 1998–99 there were (i) 39,600 hospital admissions to National Health Service hospitals of NHS and private patients with primary diagnosis related to alcohol (based on international classification of diseases codes F10, K70, T51), and (ii) 9,300 for diagnoses mentioning drugs (based on ICD10 codes F11-F16 and F18-F19). Data on the number of persons that were treated in NHS accident and emergency units for these diagnoses are not collected centrally.

Tranquilliser Addiction

Ms Kelly: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will list the successful applicants, and amount of grant aid issued, under the Section 64 Grants Scheme that directly address tranquilliser addiction. [132035]

Mr. Hutton: No grants under the Section 64 scheme are currently being made to organisations directly addressing tranquilliser addiction.

Health Action Zones

Mr. McNamara: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will list those Health Action Zones that underspent on their 1999–2000 budgets, indicating in (a) percentage and (b) real terms the degree of underspend. [131067]

Mr. Hutton: The table shows that all Health Action Zones underspent against the 1999–2000 allocations. Information on how much of this is committed to projects in 2000–01 is not held centrally.

Parliamentary Questions

Mr. Stunell: To ask the Secretary of State for Health on how many occasions he has deposited papers in the Library in response to parliamentary questions tabled to his Department between 19 October 1999 and 20 April. [132127]

Ms Stuart: The information requested could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

CULTURE, MEDIA AND SPORT

Millennium Dome

Mr. Mitchell: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what proposals he has received to use the Millennium Dome to celebrate the Queen's Golden Jubilee; and what response he has made. [125698]

Mr. Chris Smith: I have received one proposal from a member of the public suggesting that the Dome is kept within the public sector and used to celebrate events such as the Queen's Golden Jubilee. My officials responded on 19 July stating that the Government believe that a sale to the private sector is the best way to secure the Government's objectives for future use of the Dome. The selection criteria used to shortlist proposals for the future use of the Dome specifically aim to maximise the public benefit.

Racism (Football)

Mr. Gareth R. Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what action he is taking to eliminate racism in football. [131758]

Kate Hoey [holding answer 21 July 2000]: The Government believe that the Football Task Force's first report provided an effective blueprint for eliminating racism in football. The report's one recommendation for the Government was implemented by means of Section 9 of the Football (Offences and Disorder) Act 1999, which made the chanting of racist material by individual supporters an offence.

The report's other recommendations were intended for the football authorities, and a number of these have already been implemented under the aegis of the Kick it Out campaign. I understand that the sport's governing bodies will shortly announce a review of the implementation of the Task Force's reports on racism, disabled access and community involvement.

Football Investment

Maria Eagle: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what discussions he has had with the Football Association and the FA Premier League about the investment of the proceeds of the funds of their new television contracts in grass roots football; and if he will make a statement. [132676]

Mr. Chris Smith: Following extensive discussions with the Football Association, FA Premier League and other interested parties, the Football Foundation became operational last month. The Foundation is a partnership between the sport and Government. The Foundation will receive funding from the Football Association, the FA Premier League, the Lottery Sports Fund and other Government sources. The primary aim of the Foundation will be to improve facilities for grassroots football.

The Government have nominated my hon. Friend the Member for Stalybridge and Hyde (Mr. Pendry) to be its representative on the board of the Foundation. Sport England has nominated its Chairman, Trevor Brooking, to be its representative on that board to sit alongside those of the Football Association and FA Premier League. The Foundation will be launched tomorrow when full details of its plans will be published.

National Lottery (Ribble Valley)

Mr. Evans: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what proportion of lottery ticket receipts has been spent in the Ribble Valley through the National Lottery Charities Board in each year since 1994. [131658]

Kate Hoey: The proportion of total National Lottery ticket sales awarded by the National Lottery Charities Board (NLCB) in the Ribble Valley constituency is shown in the table. The figures for NLCB awards in the Ribble Valley constituency are taken from my Department's National Lottery Awards Database, based on data provided by the Lottery distribution bodies.

National Athletics Stadium

Mr. Faber: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport if he will make a statement on progress in the development of the national athletics stadium at Pickett's Lock. [132369]

Kate Hoey: I chaired the first meeting of the Lee Valley Stadium Forum on 26 June. The purpose of the Forum is to keep Ministers and interested parties up to date with developments and highlight any emerging difficulties which can then be dealt with through separate discussions. The Forum includes representatives from the Lee Valley Regional Park Authority—the site's owners, UK Athletics, Sport England, the Mayor of London, the London Borough of Enfield, the London Development Agency, the Government Office for London and Transport for London. The British Olympic Association are also represented to ensure that any Olympic issues are addressed. The next meeting of the Lee Valley Stadium Forum will be held on 2 October 2000.

The Lee Valley Regional Park Authority and UK Athletics have appointed consultants to undertake business and technical feasibility studies for this project. Ernst & Young have been appointed to carry out a business feasibility study which will seek to identify long-term revenue options, set out possible models for project delivery and highlight suitable management structures post World Championships. Drivas Jonas have been appointed to conduct the various design and technical studies needed. This will include an assessment of transport issues and environmental impacts. Both studies will be funded jointly by the National Lottery Sports Fund and by the Lee Valley Regional Park Authority.

Mr. Faber: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport, pursuant to the oral statement of the Minister for Sport on 4 May 2000, Official Report, column 156WH, if he will place in the Library a copy of the letter which the Minister for Sport undertook to write to the hon. Member for Ryedale (Mr. Greenway) concerning Pickett's Lock. [132385]

Kate Hoey: I will write to the hon. Member and will place a copy of my reply in the Libraries of the House.

World Cup Bid

Mr. Greenway: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what discussions he has had with the Football Association about the loss of the World Cup 2006 bid since 6 July [132384]

Kate Hoey: My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State discussed FIFA's decision with the Prime Minister's Special Envoy to the bid on 6 July. I have corresponded with the Chief Executive of the Football Association about the costs of the bid since that day.

Football Task Force

Mr. Greenway: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport (1) what plans he has to implement the recommendations of the Football Task Force; [132387]

(2) what plans he has to appoint a Commissioner for Football. [132389]

Kate Hoey: The Football Task Force made a number of recommendations in its final report, "Football: Commercial Issues", including a proposal for a Football Audit Commission. The Government will announce their response to the report shortly.

Parliamentary Questions

Mr. Stunell: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport how many of the written parliamentary questions tabled to his Department between 19 October 1999 and 20 April have not received substantive answers, citing as the reason that the information is (a) not held centrally, (b) not held in the form requested or (c) not available. [132135]

Mr. Chris Smith: Three questions did not receive substantive answers as the information was not held centrally.

Six questions did not receive substantive answers as the information was not held/available in the form requested.

Nine questions did not receive substantive answers as the information was not available.

My Department always aims to provide a substantive reply to hon. Members' questions. Where this is not possible, we would endeavour to provide the information that is available even though it is not precisely what has been requested or in the form requested.

TRADE AND INDUSTRY

Working Time Directive

Mr. Paul Marsden: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry how many workers in Shrewsbury and Atcham received the right to four weeks paid holiday under the Working Time Directive; and if he will make a statement. [131145]

Mr. Alan Johnson: It is estimated that 3.1 million people have gained additional paid leave as a result of the entitlement to four weeks paid leave introduced by the Working Time Regulations. It is not possible to estimate numbers of beneficiaries by parliamentary constituency.

Part-time Workers

Mr. Paul Marsden: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry how many part-time workers from Shrewsbury and Atcham have benefited from the provisions relating to equal pay and conditions in the Part-Time Workers Directive; and if he will make a statement. [131144]

Mr. Alan Johnson: The Regulations introduced on 1 July 2000 provide a guarantee of fair treatment to all 6 million part-time workers in Britain. It is estimated that over 400,000 workers will benefit from the Regulations. No information on numbers of beneficiaries is available below the national level.

Dr. Kumar: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry how many part-time workers will benefit from the Part-Time Workers Directive (a) nationally, (b) in Teesside and (c) in the constituency of Middlesbrough, South and Cleveland, East; and if he will make a statement. [131204]

Mr. Alan Johnson [holding answer 18 July 2000]: The Regulations introduced on 1 July 2000 provide a guarantee of fair treatment to all 6 million part-time workers in Britain. Ms Hewitt: My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry has had no specific discussions with the Particle Physics and Astronomy Research Council (PPARC) about the future of Jodrell Bank. The PPARC is reviewing the future of all its telescopes, including Jodrell Bank, in the context of possible UK membership of the European Southern Observatory. No decisions have been made, and no major changes to the funding of existing telescopes are expected for at least five years. My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry will discuss the future of Jodrell Bank, and other telescopes, at the appropriate time.

Mrs. Ellman: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what assessment he has made of the contribution of Jodrell Bank to the science base in the North West. [131639]

Ms Hewitt: As Jodrell Bank is recognised as a major science facility in the North West it will be examined as part of the activities of the Government-commissioned reviews being carried out by the North West Science and Development Group and the North West Science Review Team, which are looking at economic development and the science base in the region. These reviews are due to report by the 29 December and 30 September respectively.

Post Offices (IT)

Mr. Breed: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry how much it will cost the Government to supply each post office with (a) internet provision and (b) computer terminals for public access. [131901]

Mr. Alan Johnson [holding answer 21 July 2000]: The Government are contributing £480 million towards the capital costs of the Horizon project to equip every post office with a modern on-line IT platform, and will contribute to the cost of a pilot trial of Internet access and learning points in a limited number of post offices, once the Post Office have demonstrated a convincing business case. The scope for extending this facility more widely will depend on the outcome of the trials.

Opinion Research

Mr. Don Foster: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry, pursuant to his answer of 28 June 2000, Official Report, column 518W, on opinion research, if he will list the information held centrally on the results of his Department's market and opinion research, stating in each case which of these results will be placed in the Library. [132008]

Dr. Howells [holding answer 21 July 2000]: No information is held centrally on the results of the Department's market and opinion research.

Employment Rights

Mr. Watts: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what plans he has to improve the employment rights of (a) agency and (b) part-time employees. [132284]

Mr. Alan Johnson: Since the Government came to office, new employment rights such as the National Minimum Wage and those under the Working Time Regulations to entitlements such as paid annual leave, have improved the position of part-time employees and agency temps.

We are currently seeking to improve and clarify the existing regulations governing the conduct of employment agencies. We are placing greater emphasis on the clarity of terms issued and on ensuring workers are paid in full and on time. These proposals form part of a package of measures to ensure appropriate minimum standards for the recruitment industry, which we intend to finalise shortly.

The Part-time Workers Regulations came into force on 1 July and ensure that part-time workers are not treated less favourably in their contractual terms and conditions than comparable full-timers, unless different treatment is justified on objective grounds. The regulations cover all terms and conditions including pay, pensions, holidays and training.

Tobacco Industry

Mr. Hunter: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry when he last met representatives of the United Kingdom tobacco industry to discuss the export trade implications of the European Commission's proposal for a directive concerning the manufacture, production and sale of tobacco products. [132334]

Mr. Alan Johnson: I have received a number of written representations on this issue from UK tobacco manufacturing companies in recent months.

Weights and Measures Legislation (Ribble Valley)

Mr. Evans: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry how many traders in the Ribble Valley have been fined for trading in pounds and ounces; and how many of these fines have been contested. [131766]

Dr. Howells: The responsibility for enforcing weights and measures legislation, including the use of the legal units of measurement, lies with local authorities. According to information supplied to the Department by Lancashire County Council there have been no prosecutions taken against traders in the Ribble Valley for failing to use grams and kilograms alongside ounces and pounds.

EU Structural Funds

Mr. Andrew George: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what assessment he has made of the eligibility of Objective 1 applicants for regional selective assistance. [132051]

Mr. Caborn: Businesses in Objective 1 areas will be eligible to apply for regional selective assistance subject to their meeting the criteria of the scheme.

Mr. Andrew George: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry when the first applications for the UK's four Objective 1 regions will be (a) invited and (b) determined. [132055]

Mr. Caborn: It is for the Objective 1 programme partnerships themselves to decide how and when to call for applications and when to take decisions. However, I expect them to start appraising applications very soon if they have not already done so.

Mr. Andrew George: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what arrangements he has put in place for applying for the EU Objective 1 funds. [132054]

Mr. Caborn: The arrangements for applying for EU structural funds are set out in Council Regulation (EC) No. 1260/1999 laying down general provisions on the Structural Funds (OJ L 161 of 26 June 1999) and in the eligible regions' Single Programming Documents and programme complements. Responsibility for structural funds partnerships rests with the Department of the Environment, Transport and the Regions for England, and with the devolved administrations for Scotland, Wales and Northern Ireland. My Department is responsible for overall co-ordination of the structural funds in the United Kingdom.

Euro

Mr. Matthew Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what assessment he has made of the progress of the United Kingdom retail financial sector towards preparedness for membership of the euro; and if he will make a statement. [131938]

Miss Melanie Johnson: I have been asked to reply.

This information is contained in the Second Outline National Changeover Plan, published in March 2000.

Mr. Matthew Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will list the studies undertaken or being undertaken by the Government which quantify or examine the trade and competition effects that would result from the United Kingdom entering the single currency area. [131940]

Miss Melanie Johnson: I have been asked to reply.

I refer the hon. Member to the answer I gave him on 3 February 2000, Official Report, column 685W.

LORD CHANCELLOR'S DEPARTMENT

Judicial Appointments

Mr. Dismore: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department what assessment he has made of the observations of Lord Steyn on judicial appointment procedures; and if he will make a statement. [132146]

Mr. Lock: The Lord Chancellor is aware of the reports of Lord Steyn's recent remarks at an event at the London School of Economics. The Lord Chancellor has already decided to establish a Commission for Judicial Appointments as recommended by Sir Leonard Peach to provide ongoing, independent monitoring of the appointments process and to provide a further recourse for disappointed candidates. The Lord Chancellor has not ruled out further reform, but he prefers for the present to proceed with and evaluate the implementation of the Peach report recommendations.

Court Dress

Mr. Dismore: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department what assessment he has made of the observations of the Lord Chief Justice on court dress; and if he will make a statement. [132147]

Mr. Lock: The Lord Chancellor has made no assessment of the comments attributed to the Lord Chief Justice. He has indicated in the past that he is willing to consider the issue if there is evidence that the balance of opinion is changing against maintaining court dress in its current form.

Parliamentary Questions

Mr. Stunell: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department on how many occasions he has deposited papers in the Library in response to parliamentary questions tabled to his Department between 19 October 1999 and 20 April. [132128]

Mr. Lock: According to departmental records covering the relevant period, papers were deposited in the Library on 27 occasions in response to parliamentary questions.

FOREIGN AND COMMONWEALTH AFFAIRS

British Council

Mr. Cox: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what new British Council offices have been opened in the last 12 months. [131801]

Mr. Hain: The following new British Council offices have opened in the last 12 months:

Pristina, Kosovo
Brasov, Romania
Ramallah, East Jerusalem
Irkutsk, Russia
Chandigarh, India
Multan, Pakistan.

This list does not include branch offices in towns and cities with pre-existing operations.

Rachel McGee

Mr. Fitzpatrick: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what arrangements were made by the consular staff in Cuba to facilitate payment for private legal assistance to Rachel McGee prior to her trial there in September 1999. [131908]

Mr. Hain [holding answer 21 July 2000]: On 18 March 1999 Consular Division in London contacted Ms McGee's mother, Mrs. Griffen, about the cost of private legal assistance for Rachel. This was estimated by Bufete Internacional, the Cuban law firm that is allowed to represent foreign nationals, to be a minimum of US$2000.

Mrs. Griffen deposited US$2000 with Consular Division on 6 April 1999. The money was made available to our Embassy in Cuba on the same day.

On 23 April 1999 Consular Division told Mrs. Griffen that the costs of the lawyer was now estimated by Bufete Internacional to be US$5000. Mrs. Griffen decided she could not afford that amount.

Mrs. Griffen asked our consular staff in Cuba to use the money deposited with them to fund her visit to Cuba.

Mr. Fitzpatrick: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what financial assistance for the payment of private legal assistance consular staff in Cuba offered to Rachel McGee prior to her trial there in September 1999. [131909]

Mr. Hain [holding answer 21 July 2000]: None. There is no provision for public funds for legal assistance for British Nationals overseas.

Mr. Fitzpatrick: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if the British consular staff in Cuba were acting on the understanding that Rachel McGee had waived her right (a) to give evidence and (b) for a lawyer to represent her, at her trial there in September 1999. [131910]

Mr. Hain [holding answer 21 July 2000]: The information is as follows:

(a) No.

(b) No.

The Consul met with Rachel at court prior to the trial. Up to then she had not said that she did not want to give evidence nor had she indicated that she did not want a lawyer to represent her.

Mr. Fitzpatrick: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs how many times lawyers from the law firm that is allowed to represent foreign nationals in Cuba (a) met Rachel McGee prior to her trial in Cuba in September 1999 and (b) discussed the case with her during or after her trial. [131911]

Mr. Hain [holding answer 21 July 2000]: The information is as follows:

(a) Rachel McGee has stated that she did not see her lawyer prior to her trial.

(b) Rachel said she did not discuss the case with her lawyer during the trial and that she has not seen her lawyer since the trial.

Westminster Foundation for Democracy

Mr. Efford: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs when the annual report of the Westminster Foundation for Democracy will be published. [132739]

Mr. Hain: I have arranged for copies of the Westminster Foundation for Democracy's annual report to be placed in the Libraries of both Houses today.

The Foundation has continued its crucial work in building and strengthening democracy overseas during the last 12 months. In 1999–2000 the Foundation managed 656 projects in almost 60 countries working with political parties, the media, trade unions, local government, legal organisations and human rights, civil society and women's groups.

The Foundation received a grant-in-aid of £4 million from the Foreign and Commonwealth Office, a further £460,734 of earmarked funds for specific projects and £121,669 from corporate supporters and the National Lottery Charities Board.

Most of the Foundation's activities were in its priority areas which are Central and Eastern Europe; the Commonwealth of Independent States and Anglophone Africa. The Foundation has also carried out important projects in Asia and the Middle East.

In addition to its core projects, the Foundation has provided timely and effective responses to the need for technical assistance in the Balkans, especially in Kosovo, Serbia and Bosnia, to take forward work on political and civic development.

Entry Clearance

Mr. Drew: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he plans to publish the report of the 1998 Joint (Foreign and Commonwealth Office/Home Office) Study on entry clearance. [132740]

Mr. Vaz: The Joint Study report on entry clearance has been placed in the Libraries of both Houses. The Study was conducted between January and April 1998, by officials from the Foreign and Commonwealth Office, Home Office, Cabinet Office and Treasury. Its conclusions led to the establishment of the new Joint Entry Clearance Unit (JECU) as part of the Government's wider commitment to providing a 'fairer, faster and firmer' entry clearance process. The study report may be of interest to Members in the context of the Memorandum of Understanding agreed between the Foreign and Commonwealth Office and the Home Office, which was placed in the Libraries on 7 June.

Diego Garcia

Mr. Hilary Benn: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on the position of the former residents of Diego Garcia. [132386]

Mr. Hain: I am aware that some of the former residents (Ilois) of the British Indian Ocean Territory (BIOT) seek a right of return, and to this end proceedings have been brought in the High Court in London which challenge the validity of the BIOT Immigration Ordinance. The matter is still before the Court. The outer islands of the territory have been uninhabited for 30 years so any resettlement would present serious problems both because of the practical feasibility and in relation to our treaty obligations. But a study has been commissioned from independent consultants to consider the former issues in more detail.

Most of the Ilois live in Mauritius where they are Mauritian citizens. Since they left the British Indian Ocean Territory (BIOT) Her Majesty's Government has given over £4 million to the Government of Mauritius to assist with their integration into Mauritian society.

Sandra Gregory

Mr. Malcolm Bruce: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what representations he made to the Thai authorities during his recent visit to Bangkok in support of Sandra Gregory's application for a royal pardon. [131978]

Mr. Hain: My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State did not make any specific representations about any consular cases during his recent visit to Thailand, though the Government of course continues to discuss Consular issues with the Government of Thailand on other occasions.

Mr. Malcolm Bruce: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what assessment he has made of when the request for a Royal Pardon submitted to the King of Thailand on behalf of Sandra Gregory is likely to be responded to. [131979]

Mr. Hain: The hon. Member may already be aware that on 20 July the Thai Foreign Ministry informed our Ambassador in Bangkok that His Majesty the King of Thailand had granted a Royal Pardon to Sandra Gregory. Miss Gregory and her parents were informed of the news the same day by staff in our Consular Division.

United Nations

Mr. Menzies Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs on which days he plans to attend the United Nations Millennium Summit; on which days he will be represented by his Ministers; and if he will make a statement. [131016]

Mr. Hain: My right hon. Friend the Prime Minister will head the UK delegation to the United Nations Millennium Summit. His full programme and the exact composition of the UK delegation have yet to be finalised.

Mr. Menzies Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what objectives the Government seek to achieve at the United Nations Millennium Summit; what specific reforms the Government will be seeking; and if he will make a statement. [131017]

Mr. Hain: The UK wants the Millennium Summit, through wide-ranging discussion on the role of the UN in the 21st Century, to result in an action-oriented concluding document which sets the UN forward-looking objectives on a range of key issues, as outlined by the UN Secretary-General in his Millennium Report.

Mr. Menzies Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs which of the Core Group of Multilateral Treaties and Optional Protocols deposited with the Secretary-General which are representative of the United Nations key objectives for the Millennium Summit the UK has not signed and ratified, stating in each case (a) the reasons for non-signature and ratification and (b) when the Government plans to give UK assent; and if he will make a statement. [131019]

Mr. Hain: This Government remain dedicated to the international rule of law. Of the 25 treaties listed by the UN Secretary-General as representative of the United Nations' key objectives, the United Kingdom is a Party to 16 and has also ratified the Comprehensive Nuclear-Test-Ban Treaty, which has yet to come into effect.

My right hon. Friend the Prime Minister expects to be able to sign the First Optional Protocol to the Convention on the Rights of the Child, on the sale of children, child prostitution and child pornography, at the Millennium Summit in September. The UK is looking closely at the implications for the UK armed forces of the Second Optional Protocol, on the involvement of children in armed conflict, and intends to sign in the near future.

Legislation is currently in preparation to enable the United Kingdom to ratify two more of the treaties on the list which it has already signed. The Government intend to make the United Kingdom one of the first 60 states to ratify the Rome Statute of the International Criminal Court. The Terrorism Bill contains provisions which will enable us to ratify early next year the International Convention for the Suppression of Terrorist Bombings and the International Convention for the Suppression of the Financing of Terrorism. The Government attach great importance to universal adherence to both these Conventions.

The Government expect to begin the ratification procedure for the Kyoto Protocol after the Conference of the Parties to the Protocol in The Hague in November, assuming it has a satisfactory outcome. This would coincide with the ratification by other EU member states.

After a thorough review of our obligations under international human rights treaties in 1999, we concluded that accession to the First Optional Protocol to !CCPR and the Optional Protocol to CEDAW, which call for the right of individual petition, would affect the major work under way in preparing for and implementing the Human Rights Act 1998 which will incorporate the European Convention on Human Rights into domestic law. The Act will come fully into force on 2 October 2000. We will review our position on these Optional Protocols again once the Act has bedded down.

The International Covenant on the Protection of the Rights of all Migrant Workers goes far beyond the scope of the UK's existing immigration laws. Most of the 12 existing signatories are countries of origin of migrant workers. No EU states are signatories. The Government consider they have already struck the right balance between the need for immigration control and the protection of the interests and rights of migrant workers, who already have the protection of our existing commitments under international law.

Mr. Menzies Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs which reservations, lodged by the UK to United Nations treaties, the Government plans to lift; when they plan to lift them; and if he will make a statement. [131018]

Mr. Hain: We are committed to the international rule of law and to the United Kingdom's obligations under international law. We keep those commitments and the terms in which they are entered into under review. We have no specific plans at the present time to lift any reservations to United Nations treaties.

Belarus

Mr. Mackinlay: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what reports his Department has received concerning the whereabouts of, and the circumstance relating to the disappearance of, (a) the First Deputy Chairman of the Belarus Supreme Council, (b) Yuri Zakhavenko, (c) Anatol Kvasovski and (d) Dmitri Zaradski; and what representations have been made by (i) the United Kingdom Government and (ii) the European Union on their behalf to the Government of Belarus. [130725]

Mr. Vaz: Her Majesty's Government, in concert with our EU partners, has repeatedly asked the Belarusian authorities to investigate the disappearances of Mr. Gonchar, Deputy Chairman of the 13th Supreme Soviet, his associate Mr. Krasovski, and Mr. Zakharenko, a former Interior Minister. The European Union maintains pressure on the Belarusian authorities to pursue their inquiries into these disappearances and keep us informed of progress. In a formal EU representation in April 2000, EU Heads of Mission in Minsk, once again requested information on all cases involving the disappearances of political figures. The whereabouts of these men are still not known. The Belarusian Government argue that there is no evidence to suggest that State agencies were in any way responsible for the disappearances. They claim to have done everything possible to find the missing men.

There is much speculation concerning the disappearance of Mr. Zavadsky, a cameraman working for Russian ORT, on 8 July. We are aware that the Belarusian opposition suspect official involvement but we have not seen any evidence to support this. The Belarusian Government have said that they are searching for Zavadsky. Our Embassy in Minsk are monitoring the situation.

Official Visits

Mr. Mackinlay: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will list the projected (a) State Visits and (b) other categories of official visit by heads of Government, and heads of state to the United Kingdom. [131833]

Mr. Battle: At the invitation of Her Majesty The Queen, His Majesty The King of Jordan, accompanied by Her Majesty Queen Rania, will pay a State Visit to the United Kingdom from 7 to 10 November. There are no other visits by Heads of State or Government confirmed at present.

Parliamentary Questions

Mr. Stunell: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs how many parliamentary questions were tabled to his Department between 19 October 1999 and 20 April which requested information, pursuant to his previous answers. [132134]

Mr. Robin Cook: Figures supplied by the House of Commons Library indicate that there were 53 such questions. However, because of the way that information is recorded on the POLIS database, it is not possible to guarantee the complete accuracy of this figure.

SOCIAL SECURITY

Child Poverty

Mr. Webb: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will estimate the number of children living in poverty in the United Kingdom; and if he will provide a breakdown for children aged (a) 0 to four years, (b) five to 10 years, (c) 11 to 15 years and (d) 16 years and above, providing in each case the numbers affected and the proportion of the relevant age group. [127859]

Mr. Bayley: Poverty is a multi-dimensional problem which cannot be defined solely on the basis of a particular level of income. One indicator which may be used, however, is whether the income of households is below 60 per cent. of median. The following table provides this information for the proportion of children living in households below 60 per cent. of median equivalised income in 1998–99 in the age bands requested.

Proportion of children below 60 per cent. of median equivalised income in 1998–99, including the self-employed

Age bands	Before housing costs		After housing costs		Total children in group
	Number (million)	Proportion	Number (million)	Proportion	Number (million)
Children aged 0–4	0.7	21	1.2	34	3.5
Children aged 5–10	1.2	27	1.6	36	4.5
Children aged 11–15	0.9	26	1.1	32	3.6
Children aged 16 and above	0.3	23	0.3	25	1.3
All children	3.1	24	4.2	33	12.8

Notes:

1. The source is Households Below Average Income (HBAI). Estimates are derived from the Family Resources Survey.
2. All figures are subject to sampling error and response biases. Results may be sensitive to the precise way in which household incomes are adjusted for household size and composition.
3. Estimates are presented on household income both Before Housing Costs (BHC) and After Housing Costs (AHC) in line with HBAI conventions.
4. HBAI defines a child as an individual aged under 16, or an unmarried 16 to 18-year-old on a course up to and including 'A' level standard (or up to and including "highers" in Scotland).

Housing Benefit

Mr. Tynan: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will list the local authorities in Great Britain which (a) have already embarked on the housing benefit verification framework, stating their respective commencement dates, (b) are planning to do so, stating their proposed starting dates and (c) have still to commit themselves to the scheme. [130759]

Angela Eagle [holding answer 18 July, 2000]: We do not hold information in the format requested. Information provided by local authorities shows that at 17 July 2000, 173 had certified they are fully complying with all the requirements of the Verification Framework. A further 78 authorities had either already received or accepted the offer of set-up funds to implement the Framework fully and are at various stages of their implementation.

The table which lists these authorities and, where appropriate, includes the commencement date certified by the authority has been placed in the Library.

Pensioners

Mr. Gareth Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will list the number of pensioners expressed as a percentage of the total number of pensioners who are entirely dependent upon the state old age pension and means tested benefits (a) for the UK and (b) for Wales. [131601]

Mr. Rooker: Estimates for Great Britain and Wales for 1997–98 (the latest year for which information is available) are as follows:

In 1997–98, 9 per cent. of pensioners in Great Britain were entirely dependent on State Retirement Pension and/or means-tested benefits for their income. In Wales, the proportion was 12 per cent.

Free Television Licences

Mr. Willetts: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if the value of the free television licence for pensioners aged over 75 years is taken into account in assessing entitlement to (a) Housing Benefit, (b) Council Tax Benefit, (c) Income Support and (d) other means-tested assistance. [131654]

Mr. Rooker: No.

Parliamentary Questions

Mr. Stunell: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how many written parliamentary questions were tabled to his Department between 19 October 1999 and 20 April 2000; and how many have not received substantive answers citing disproportionate cost as the reason. [132132]

Mr. Rooker: We received 1,815 written parliamentary questions during the period 19 October 1999 to 20 April 2000. Fifteen of those Questions did not receive substantive answers owing to disproportionate cost.

Disability Benefits

Mr. Andrew George: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how many requests for permission to make late appeals in respect of Disability Living Allowance and Attendance Allowance were (a) made and (b) granted in each year since 1996–97. [132056]

Mr. Bayley: The information is not available in the format requested.

Mr. Andrew George: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how many claimants of Incapacity Benefit or Severe Disablement Allowance receive both a child dependant's addition and an adult dependant's addition. [132059]

Mr. Bayley: The number of Incapacity Benefit recipients where both a child dependant's addition and an adult dependant's addition is payable is 47,200.

The number of Severe Disablement Allowance recipients where both a child dependant's and an adult dependant's addition is payable is 1,300.

These figures are taken from a 5 per cent. sample of the benefit computer system at 29 February 2000 and will exclude a small number of clerically held cases.

Mr. Andrew George: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how many claimants of Incapacity Benefit or Severe Disablement Allowance with dependent children also receive Income Support. [132060]

Mr. Bayley: At November 1999, there were 231,000 claimants of Incapacity Benefit or Severe Disablement Allowance of working age with dependent children who also receive Income Support in Great Britain.

Of the 231,000 claimants of Incapacity Benefit/Severe Disablement Allowance with dependent children who also receive Income Support, 132,000 are not receiving an Incapacity Benefit payment but are receiving National Insurance credits only due to failing the contribution condition.

Mr. Andrew George: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how many people who have been assessed as disabled under the Industrial Injuries Disablement Scheme he estimates will benefit from decision CI 1698/97 of the Social Security Commissioners on aggregation of disablement assessments. [132057]

Mr. Bayley: Work is in hand to identify the people affected.

Mr. Andrew George: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how many children, by age group, live in households where a parent is in receipt of Incapacity Benefit, Severe Disablement Allowance or Income Support with a disability premium. [132058]

EDUCATION AND EMPLOYMENT

New Deal (Disabled People)

Dr. Kumar: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment how much has been allocated in the current financial year on developing the New Deal for Disabled People; how many people will benefit from the scheme (a) nationally, (b) on Teesside and (c) in the constituency of Middlesbrough, South and Cleveland, East; and if he will make a statement. [128637]

Ms Hodge: For 2000–01, £640,000 has been allocated to my Department to develop the New Deal for Disabled People. To date the pilot phase has consisted of 24 Innovative Schemes and a Personal Adviser Service in 12 areas, covering around a quarter of a million people on Incapacity Benefit, and including South Tyneside in the North-East. Since autumn 1998 (when the pilots began) to the end of March 2000, the latest figures available, nearly £3 million had been spent on the Innovative Schemes and over £10 million on the 12 Personal Adviser pilot areas. During the same period 2,755 people had found jobs as a result of the pilots (3,454 to the end of May 2000). Together with colleagues at the Department of Social Security we are currently considering lessons learned from the pilot and hope to make an announcement in the near future about our plans for national extension.

Mr. Allan: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment how many people with more than one disability have joined the New Deal for the Disabled scheme. [131519]

Ms Hodge: The information is not available in the precise form requested. We have been piloting the New Deal for Disabled People (NDDP) since autumn 1998. People coming forward to date have a wide range of disabilities: many have more than one disability. The extra help and support provided takes account of the individual needs of each person who volunteers to take part in the NDDP pilots. The latest figures, to the end of May, show that 12,199 disabled people on Incapacity Benefits have joined the programme so far by participating in the 24 innovative schemes or by drawing up an agreed work-focused action plan with a personal adviser in 12 NDDP pilot areas. I am pleased to say that 3,454 people have found jobs as a result.

After-school Clubs

Mr. Gareth R. Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what funding is available to support the training of play workers in after-school clubs. [128745]

Ms Hodge: It is not possible to identify funding which is specifically available for the training of play workers. However, we have allocated £18 million in England to Training and Enterprise Councils between 1998–99 and 2000–01 to support the training needs of the child care workforce, including playworkers. Early Years Development and Childcare Partnerships also spend a proportion of their budget on training. Further Education Colleges also spent £93.32 million on child care related training in 1998–99. This is in addition to the New Opportunities Fund (NOF) budget for the UK of £220 million from 1999–2003 to fund a significant expansion in out of school provision. Training is an acceptable element in bids made to NOF for support under the programme.

Nursery Nurses

Sir Teddy Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment how many nursery nurses are employed in schools in England and Wales; and if he will make a statement on their future role. [129508]

Ms Hodge: The information is not available in the form requested. Figures are not collected for schools—other than nursery and primary schools—or private and voluntary providers. Information on the overall numbers of full-time equivalent nursery nurses employed in maintained nursery and primary schools is shown in the table, which shows that the number of full-time equivalent nursery nurses has increased by more than 3,000, or 16 per cent., since January 1997.

Number of full-time equivalent Nursery Nurses[1] in Maintained Nursery and Primary Schools in England: 1997 to 2000[2]

Position as at January	Number
2000[2]	21,862
1999	20,266
1998	19,973

Annual Schools' Census

We fully recognise the tremendous contribution that well-managed and well-trained support staff, such as qualified nursery nurses, can make. That is why we are implementing a range of measures to increase the availability of such support. Our programme includes:

additional recruitment—increasing by 20,000 the number of full-time equivalent support staff working in primary and secondary schools in England by 2002;

effective induction training—with the forthcoming publication of high quality training materials for schools and local authorities; greater clarity over role and qualifications pathways—to be set out in a new national framework published by the Local Government National Training Organisation; good practice guidance—advice to heads and teachers on ways to support the effective involvement of support staff in schools.

For information on teaching assistants in Wales, I refer the hon. Member to the Secretary of State for Wales.

Sex Education

Mr. Pike: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what action the Government have taken to encourage sexual education for young people outside secondary schools. [130288]

Jacqui Smith: Across Whitehall there are a number of programmes which address health education for young people outside secondary schools. My Department, for instance, supports the work of some 80 national voluntary youth organisations through a scheme of grants worth £12 million over the three years 1999–2002. These grants promote the provision of planned programmes of informal personal and social education for young people through a diverse range of projects, many of which address health education issues.

For those young people in secondary schools, we recently published our Sex and Relationship Education guidance which sets out how schools can work in partnership with members of the wider community when planning and delivering sex and relationship education. The Department of Health will be issuing guidance to health authorities to make it clear that any materials they develop for use in schools must be in line with the DfEE guidance.

Computers for Teachers

Mr. Willis: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment how many and what proportion of the teachers who applied for the Computers for Teachers scheme (a) received repayments within one month of the application, (b) are awaiting partial repayments and (c) are awaiting full repayments. [130775]

Mr. Wills: Owing to the popularity of the scheme, a backlog in making payments developed. This meant that 1,232 teachers received their computer subsidies within one month of the application. All but 217 valid claims have now been settled in full, and a further 346 incomplete applications have been received. Those involved have been contacted for further details.

In recognition of inconvenience that may have been caused, a payment of £15 will be made to individual teachers where more than 30 days has elapsed between receipt of a valid application and payment or investigation of the claim.

Mr. Willis: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what preparations his Department has made to ensure that data protection regulations are adhered to in the administration of the Computers for Teachers scheme; and if he will make a statement. [130776]

Mr. Wills: Teachers' information is stored on a secure database designed solely for the purpose of recording eligibility information and calculating Computers for Teachers subsidies and associated audit activities. All personal information relating to teachers' applications will be removed from the database, when the administration of the scheme is concluded.

Economic Activity Rates

Mr. Cousins: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment if he will estimate, on the basis of the Labour Force Survey, the economic activity rates for (a) men and (b) women in each region and nation with (i) no long-term health problems, (ii) long-term health problems, (iii) long-term musculo-skeletal problems, (iv) chest problems, (v) heart problems, (vi) mental illnesses and (vii) learning difficulties. [130801]

[1] The labour force survey does not have a classification for musculo-skeletal problems. This category presented covers problems or disabilities connected with arms or hands, legs or feet, back or neck (including arthritis and rheumatism).
[2] Number of cases is too few to be reliable so the estimate is not shown.

Figures for the incidence of mental illness and learning difficulties, when broken down by region are mainly less than 10,000 cases, which is below the publication threshold for data from the Labour Force Survey. Figures below this level are unreliable; therefore, only national estimates can be given, and these are presented in Table 3.

Mr. Paul Marsden: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment how many lone parents have secured jobs through the New Deal for Lone Parents in Shrewsbury and Atcham; and if he will make a statement. [131146]

Ms Hodge: This information is not available in the form requested, as New Deal for Lone Parents is delivered on an Employment Service District basis. The table contains the information for the Shropshire district.

Equal Treatment Directive

Mr. Leigh: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment (1) if the proposed Council Directive Establishing a General Framework for Equal Treatment in Employment and Occupation, as currently drafted, would require a parish church not to refuse to employ an atheist in the post of verger; [131166]

(2) what the effect will be of the proposed Council Directive Establishing a General Framework for Equal Treatment in Employment and Occupation, as currently drafted, on the employment policy of the Board of Social Responsibility of the Church of Scotland which requires that all its staff should be committed Christians; [131167]

(3) if the proposed Council Directive Establishing a General Framework for Equal Treatment in Employment and Occupation, as currently drafted, will require the repeal of section 60 of the School Standards and Framework Act 1998. [131168]

Ms Jowell: The proposed Council Directive Establishing a General Framework for Equal Treatment in Employment and Occupation is currently in negotiation. Until a text has been finally agreed it is not possible to assess the precise effect it will have on existing legislation such as that mentioned in the question. However, the Government are negotiating on the basis that the text finally agreed should be clear and workable in practice and should preserve, where appropriate, existing arrangements which allow religious bodies to protect their ethos. We are seeking to negotiate an agreement which will protect the existing rights of church schools under section 60 of the Schools Standards and Framework Act 1998.

Mr. Gareth Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment if he will seek to amend the proposed EU directive on equal treatment in employment so as to reflect the concerns of religious groups in the UK. [131579]

Ms Jowell: The proposed Council Directive Establishing a General Framework for Equal Treatment in Employment and Occupation is currently in negotiation. The Government are negotiating on the basis that the text finally agreed should be clear and workable in practice and should preserve, where appropriate, existing arrangements which allow religious bodies to protect their ethos. We have been consulting a range of religious groups on the implications of the proposals throughout the negotiations.

Teachers (Performance-related Pay)

Mr. Clappison: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what assessment he has made of the average amount of time spent in training the external assessors of performance-related pay. [131712]

Ms Estelle Morris: The External Assessors who will visit schools to verify Headteachers' decisions about which teachers meet threshold standards must attend a three day training event, and successfully pass a formal independent accreditation process.

Mr. Clappison: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment if he received legal advice as to whether the standards for the performance-related pay threshold should be referred to the School Teachers Review Body; and when he received such advice. [131799]

Ms Estelle Morris: My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State receives advice as appropriate before he takes decisions.

Mr. Jim Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment for how long schools will be compensated for the additional salary costs of teachers they recruit who are already in receipt of performance-related pay. [131536]

Ms Estelle Morris: A new Special Grant in England will target funds to support the additional pay costs of the new performance threshold for teachers separately from schools' delegated budgets until March 2002. The funding arrangements beyond that point will be decided in the light of the Government spending review and the early experience of the teachers' pay reforms.

Mr. Jim Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment if the standards for teachers' threshold assessment for performance related pay for 2001–02 will be the same as for the current year. [131537]

Ms Estelle Morris: The standards for teachers' threshold assessment were quashed in the Judicial Review brought by the NUT. At this time it is not possible to say what they will be for the current year or for 2001–02.

Computers (Access)

Mr. Alasdair Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment how much funding is available from (a) Government and (b) other sources for (i) the Computers Within Reach Scheme and (ii) other schemes designed to assist people on low incomes participate in the information age. [131792]

Mr. Wills: The Government are making £15 million available for a pilot scheme in England—"Computers Within Reach"—to enable those who cannot afford new computers to acquire reconditioned computers for use in the home for the purpose of improving their employment prospects, for lifelong learning, and potentially for their children's homework. We are currently assessing which locations will be included in the pilot projects and details will be announced later this year. £252 million of funding from the Capital Modernisation Fund (CMF) is being used to set up around 700 ICT Learning Centres across England. This will be complemented by £77.5 million of New Opportunities Fund money to provide revenue support and develop Community Grids for Learning. Scotland, Wales and Northern Ireland received £70 million of CMF funding in the March 1999 Budget for use in similar schemes.

In autumn 2000, the University for Industry (UfI) will become operational using the brand name 'learndirect' for its products and services. It will develop a network of some 1,000 'learndirect' centres by spring 2001. The DfEE has allocated £84 million in 2000–01 to support UfI's development and implementation plans and the development and management of the 'learndirect' information and advice line.

We do not have available figures on the funding from other sources.

Judicial Review (NUT)

Mr. Clappison: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment if he will list the court hearings which took place in connection with the action by the National Union of Teachers resulting in the decision of Mr. Justice Jackson on 14 July; if his Department was entitled to have legal representatives (a) attend and (b) make legal representations at those hearings; and whether his Department was represented at the hearings. [131798]

Ms Estelle Morris: The application for permission for judicial review was held on 19 April 2000. My Department was entitled to attend and make representations, but in accordance with common practice decided not to do so in all the circumstances of the case. The judicial review hearing took place between 11 and 14 July. My Department was entitled to and did attend and make representations.

Child Care

Mr. Letwin: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment if he will estimate the net cost of (a) making grants available to all playgroups and nurseries for three-year-olds and (b) reducing the coverage of grants in respect of three-year-olds to two days a week. [131527]

Ms Hodge [holding answer 20 July 2000]: Since this Government came to office, 120,000 new, free, early education places have been created for three and four-year-olds nationally. All four-year-olds already have free access to early education. Two thirds of three-year-olds will be able to access a free place by 2002. The priority is to reach those three-year-olds in social need who would most benefit from a free nursery place. The estimated annual cost of achieving universal provision is approximately £450 million.

If three-year-old entitlement was to be reduced from five sessions to two, the estimated cost of universal provision would be approximately £180 million.

East Lancashire University

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what plans he has to establish a university in East Lancashire; and if he will make a statement. [131890]

Mr. Wicks: The Government do not determine the siting of higher education institutions. It is a matter for the interested bodies in the region to consider with the Higher Education Funding Council for England.

School Capital Grants (Northampton)

Ms Keeble: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment if he will list (a) the schools in Northampton, North which have received capital grants and (b) the value of grant in each case. [131947]

Jacqui Smith: The table shows the schools in Northampton, North constituency which have benefited from allocations of New Deal for Schools grant. All schools in the constituency will have benefited from Devolved Formula Capital in 2000–01, which is allocated by the local education authority.

School Inspections (Racial Equality)

Dr. Starkey: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment (1) how many Ofsted school inspection reports, since the publication of the report of the Stephen Lawrence Inquiry, have included (a) consideration of the school's effectiveness in preventing and addressing racism, (b) highlighted racial equality issues among the key action points and (c) identified improvements in the school's practice in promoting racial equality; [131961]

(2) how many schools placed under special measures since the publication of the report of the Stephen Lawrence Inquiry have had failure to address issues of racial equality identified among their weaknesses; [131962]

(3) how many schools which have been identified by Ofsted as having serious weaknesses have, since the publication of the report of the Stephen Lawrence Inquiry, had failure to address racial equality as one of the identified weaknesses; [131963]

(4) if he will request Her Majesty's Chief Inspector of Schools to respond in writing to the recommendations of the report of the Commission for Racial Equality, "Inspecting Schools for Race Equality: Ofsted's Strengths and Weaknesses". [131964]

Ms Estelle Morris: These are matters for HM Chief Inspector of Schools, Chris Woodhead. I have asked him to write to my hon. Friend and to place a copy of his letter in the Library. Post-inspection action plans are prepared by schools' governing bodies to address the key issues for action identified by inspectors, which could include the need better to address issues of racial equality. In the case of schools requiring special measures or with serious weaknesses, HM Inspectors judge whether action plans adequately address the key issues and monitor improvement on subsequent visits. My Department checks on the progress made by each school and, in cases where progress is limited, works with the local education authority to ensure that urgent action is taken to improve the quality of education provided for pupils.

Dr. Starkey: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment when he will respond to the recommendations of the report of the Commission for Racial Equality, Inspecting Schools for Race Equality: Ofsted's Strengths and Weaknesses. [131965]

Ms Estelle Morris: This Government are committed to ensuring high standards and equal opportunities for every child in every school and Ofsted has an important role in achieving that aim. Most of the recommendations in the CRE's report are matters for Ofsted. We will respond to the other recommendations after we have completed our consideration of the report.

Class Sizes

Mr. Willis: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what the average class size was for classes taught by one teacher in (a) Great Britain and (b) each local education authority, for (i) primary and (ii) secondary schools, in (A) 1979, (B) 1992 and (C) each year since 1996; and what the figure was for (x) Key Stage 1 and (y) Key Stage 2 in each year since 1996. [132026]

Ms Estelle Morris: Information is not available in the form requested. The available information is contained in tables, copies of which have been placed in the Library.

For information on classes in Scotland, Wales and Northern Ireland, I refer the hon. Member to the Secretaries of State for Wales, Scotland and Northern Ireland respectively.

Youth Unemployment (Greater London)

Mr. Cox: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment if he will make a statement on the impact of the New Deal on reducing youth unemployment in the Greater London area. [132073]

Ms Jowell: The New Deal for Young People is aimed at people aged 18–24 who have been claiming unemployment benefits for six months or more.

Claimant unemployment among this group has fallen by 70 per cent. in the three years since April 1997 and by 56 per cent. since April 1998 when the New Deal was introduced. Part of this fall is due to the delivery of a strong and stable economy, but the New Deal for Young People has helped unemployment to fall even faster. The fall of 56 per cent. since the New Deal was introduced compares with a fall of 18 per cent. in total unemployment, 23 per cent. in total youth (18–24) unemployment and 26 per cent. in the total number unemployed for six months or more. The effect of the New Deal is confirmed by independent research from the National Institute of Economic and Social Research.

It is not possible to measure the New Deal effect exactly in each part of the country. However, in Greater London the fall in unemployment among the New Deal client group has also been substantially faster than for other groups. In Greater London, in the two years since April 1998, claimant unemployment among those aged 18–24, unemployed for six months or more, has fallen by 56 per cent., from 19,346 to 8,552. This compares with a fall of 21 per cent. in total unemployment, 29 per cent. in total youth (18–24) unemployment, and 26 per cent. in the total number unemployed for six months or more.

Rural School Closures

Mr. Breed: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment how many schools and colleges in rural areas have closed in each of the last five years. [131900]

Ms Estelle Morris [holding answer 21 July 2000]: The table shows the number of schools in rural areas approved for closure in each of the last five years.

	Number
1996	21
1997	4
1998	5
1999	2
2000	2

Although a number of governing bodies of further education colleges in rural areas have been dissolved, in each case the educational provision has continued by arrangement with another institution in the further or higher education sector.

Hendon Schools

Mr. Dismore: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment how much extra has been and will be awarded in direct cash payments to each school, by name, in Hendon as a result of (a) the budget and (b) the Comprehensive Spending Review. [131905]

Ms Estelle Morris [holding answer 24 July 2000]: A table was placed in the Library of the House on 3 June giving details, by constituency, of the allocation of the extra budget funding for schools—the School Standards Grant. This information is not normally published for individual schools. The amount of School Standards Grant paid to schools in Hendon is £615,000.

I will place a similar table in the Libraries, with estimates of the grant payable to schools by constituency, as a result of the 2000 Spending Review, as soon as possible.

Access to Work Scheme

Mr. Allan: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what research his Department has carried out on the level of awareness of the Access to Work scheme among (a) employers and (b) disabled people. [131820]

Ms Hodge [holding answer 21 July 2000]: Responsibility for the subject of the question has been delegated to the Employment Service agency under its Chief Executive. I have asked him to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from Leigh Lewis to Mr. Richard Allan, dated 24 July 2000:

As the Employment Service is an Executive Agency, the Secretary of State has asked me to reply to your question about research on the level of awareness of the Access to Work programme among employers and disabled people. This is something that falls within the responsibilities delegated to me as Chief Executive of the Agency.

We have not undertaken any specific research into the level of awareness of Access to Work. However, in 1998 the Institute of Employment Studies carried out an independent evaluation of Access to Work for the Employment Service. They found that recipients had learnt about Access to Work from a wide range of sources, indicating that knowledge of Access to Work is widespread among agencies helping disabled people, including family doctors, social services departments, health services, hospitals, employment agencies, employers and organisations and support groups for disabled people.

We have recently contracted for an independent survey of Access to Work recipients to be undertaken later this year. The survey will ask how recipients found out about the Access to Work programme and about their knowledge of what it can provide for disabled people.

I hope this is helpful.

NORTHERN IRELAND

Parliamentary Questions

Mr. Maclennan: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland on how many occasions he has deposited papers in the Library in response to parliamentary questions tabled to his Department between 19 October 1999 and 20 April 2000. [127338]

Mr. Mandelson: Between 19 October 1999 and 20 April 2000, papers were deposited in the Library on 22 occasions.

Mr. Maclennan: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many written parliamentary questions tabled to his Department between 19 October 1999 and 20 April 2000 have not received substantive answers, with commercial or other confidentiality cited as the reason. [127676]

Mr. Mandelson: Of the 564 written parliamentary questions tabled in this period, four did not receive a substantive answer with confidentiality cited as the reason, and one further received only a partial answer.

Mr. Stunell: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many of the written parliamentary questions tabled to his Department between 19 October 1999 and 20 April 2000 have not received substantive answers, excluding those not answered citing (a) disproportionate cost, (b) that the information is not available, not held centrally, or not held in the form requested and (c) commercial confidentiality or other confidentiality. [131123]

Mr. Mandelson: Of the 564 written parliamentary questions tabled to my Department between 19 October 1999 and 20 April 2000 there were no occasions where a substantive answer was not given other than the reasons set out in the hon. Member's question.

Registrable Associations

Mr. McNamara: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland, pursuant to his answer to the hon. Member for Hull, North of 17 July 2000, Official Report, column 18W, (1) what definition he uses of public concern; and how he was informed of those public concerns; [132036]

(2) what representations he has received from members of the public who are concerned about police membership of Opus Dei; and if he will place copies of them in the Library; [132034]

(3) if he will list the religious organisations he consulted when drafting clause 49 (registration of associations) of the Police (Northern Ireland) Bill; [132033]

(4) if he will make a statement on his policy in respect of the inclusion of (a) the Legion of Mary, (b) St. Vincent de Paul, (c) Guild of Catholic Mothers, (d) St. Joseph Young Priests Society, (e) Society of St. Gregory, (f) Thomas Merton Society, (g) Catholic Women's League, (h) the Irish National Foresters and (i) the Jesuits from clause 49 (Registration of associations) of the Police (Northern Ireland) Bill; [132070]

(5) what criteria he applied in selecting the registrable associations listed in Clause 49 of Police (Northern Ireland) Bill; [132124]

(6) if he will require members of internal organisations of (a) the Church of Ireland, (b) Presbyterian, (c) Methodist, (d) Free Presbyterian and (e) other churches to declare their membership of such organisations when applying to the Police Service of Northern Ireland. [132125]

Mr. Ingram: The Government's decisions on registrable associations were made in the light of the recommendation and principles set out in chapter 15 of the Patten Report, and the list of organisations given in the NI Affairs Committee Report of 8 July 1998. As I said in Standing Committee B on the Police (NI) Bill, 29 June 2000, Official Report, column 336, the issue is not about membership per se but is "largely one of perception". For example, as reflected in submissions to the Commission and Government and by the amendment tabled by Members of Parliament in Committee.

We have not been made aware of public concern surrounding organisations other than those listed, but the clause contains a provision that would enable the Secretary of State to amend the list.

The Government have met representatives of Opus Dei and are considering the points put to it about their inclusion.

PRIME MINISTER

Lord Birt

Mr. Baker: To ask the Prime Minister (1) what factors underlay his decision to appoint Lord Birt as his adviser on crime; whom he consulted before making that appointment; and for what period the appointment has been made; [130317]

(2) if he will list the qualifications held by Lord Birt relevant to his role as adviser on crime; [130318]

(3) what remuneration was offered to Lord Birt in respect of his role as crime adviser; [130319]

(4) what areas Lord Birt will focus on in his role of adviser on crime; [130320]

(5) what (a) expenses, (b) transport arrangements and (c) office facilities Lord Birt will be eligible to claim in his role as adviser on crime; [130321]

(6) how he will ensure the accountability to Parliament of Lord Birt in his role as crime adviser; and to what categories of information in respect of crime Lord Birt will be allowed access. [130398]

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Prime Minister what considerations led him to appoint Lord Birt to investigate the reasons for the growth in crime; and if he will make a statement. [130305]

The Prime Minister [holding answer 13 June 2000]: I have asked Lord Birt to take a long-term, strategic look at criminality and long-run social trends. We have a strategy in place for tackling crime and its causes which is starting to show results in key areas such as burglary and car crime. But crime remains a serious and deep-seated problem and we must continue to look to the future and be open to new ideas. Lord Birt brings a strategic outlook and an understanding of social trends gained from a long and distinguished career in broadcasting. He will be reporting to me and to my right hon. Friend the Home Secretary as well as working closely with my right hon. and learned Friends the Lord Chancellor and the Attorney-General and they will ensure that any new policies on crime are shared with Parliament.

Lord Birt has been appointed as a part-time unpaid adviser. The duration of the appointment is yet to be determined. As an adviser to the Government he will be entitled to claim out-of-pocket expenses, to have appropriate use of Government office accommodation and to have access to relevant Government papers. He will not be entitled to use official Government transport.

Attorney-General (Appointment)

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Prime Minister what the most recent occasion was, prior to the present appointment, when the Attorney-General was appointed from the House of Lords. [130833]

The Prime Minister: As far as I am aware there have been no previous appointments from the House of Lords. There is no reason why either the Attorney-General or the Solicitor-General should not be members of the House of Lords. Previously attendance by the Attorney-General in the House of Lords was similar to that of a Temporal Assistant whose attendance was commanded by writ in order to give advice. I refer the hon. Member to an exchange reported in the Other Place on 19 November 1957, Official Report, House of Lords, columns 377–82, for further details on this aspect.

Parliamentary Questions

Mr. Stunell: To ask the Prime Minister how many of the written parliamentary questions tabled to him between 19 October 1999 and 20 April did not receive substantive answers, citing as the reason that the information was (a) not held centrally, (b) not held in the form requested and (c) not available. [131199]

The Prime Minister [holding answer 18 July 2000]: Of the 454 written answers I provided in the specified period I was unable to provide information on four occasions because it was either not held centrally or not held in the format requested or not available.

Mr. Stunell: To ask the Prime Minister how many written parliamentary questions were tabled to his Department between 19 October 1999 and 20 April; and how many have not received substantive answers, with disproportionate cost cited as the reason. [131224]

The Prime Minister [holding answer 20 July 2000]: I provided 454 written answers within the specified period. I was asked on one occasion to provide information which could be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

Sellafield

Mr. Llew Smith: To ask the Prime Minister if he will make a statement on the matters discussed at, and the outcome of, his recent meeting with the Save our Sellafield campaign. [131995]

The Prime Minister: The group briefed me and my right hon. Friend the Minister for Energy and Competitiveness in Europe (Mrs. Liddell) on a range of issues facing the west Cumbrian economy, including the need to attract new inward investment, and emphasised the importance to that economy of Sellafield.

United Nations

Mr. Menzies Campbell: To ask the Prime Minister on which days he plans to attend the United Nations Millennium Summit; and if he will make a statement. [131015]

The Prime Minister: The UN Millennium Summit in New York will take place over three days from 6–8 September. I plan to attend for at least part of the time.

Computer Security

Dr. Gibson: To ask the Prime Minister what steps he takes to ensure the security of information held on, or transmitted via, the Downing street computer system. [132144]

The Prime Minister: Information security remains a high priority and its effectiveness is kept under continuous review.

Lords Lieutenant

Mr. Baker: To ask the Prime Minister, pursuant to the answer of 13 July 2000, Official Report, column 663W, on lords lieutenant, what recent assessment he has made of the system for appointing deputy lords lieutenant. [132331]

Mr. Mike O'Brien: I have been asked to reply.

Under section 2 of the Lieutenancies Act 1997, the lord lieutenant of a county or area shall appoint such persons as he thinks fit to be his deputy lieutenants, subject to the non-disapprobation of the Queen. The Act, which was granted Royal Assent on 19 March 1997, repealed parts of the Reserve Forces Act 1980, including those relating to lord lieutenants and deputy lieutenants. There are at present no plans to change the system of appointing deputy lieutenants.

SOLICITOR-GENERAL

Government Property Lawyers

Siobhain McDonagh: To ask the Solicitor-General when the Government Property Lawyers 1997–98 Annual Report and Accounts will be published. [132500]

The Solicitor-General: I can confirm that I have today placed copies of the Annual Report in the Libraries of the House.

INTERNATIONAL DEVELOPMENT

Liberia

Mr. Streeter: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what development assistance has been given to Liberia since 1997; and if she will make a statement. [126416]

Clare Short: Development assistance for the period 1997 to 1999 totalled 3.55 million.

Full details are included in the respective "British Aid Statistics" which is available in the Library of the House.

Oxfam Report

Dr. Tonge: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what assessment she has made of the recent Oxfam report, "Missing the Target: the price of empty promises"; and if she will make a statement. [128715]

Clare Short: The UK Government have taken the lead in seeking to mobilise the international development system including development NGOs to focus on the achievement of the 2015 targets. We have always made clear that the 2015 targets are extremely challenging, but very substantial progress has been made and more is possible. Some targets are nearer to achievement than others. It is also possible that some of the targets will be achieved overall but not achieved in some countries. The purpose of the targets is to seek to galvanise a greater effort in each country and by all parties.

At last year's Summit in Cologne, the G8 called for an annual poverty report from the international financial institutions as a means of focusing the international effort toward the targets. The first report has been prepared for this year's Summit in Okinawa. The report draws attention to the concerted and sustained commitment that will be needed if the 2015 targets are to be met. However its conclusion is that achieving the targets is still possible overall, though it will be more difficult in some parts of the world than in others. The report proposes a comprehensive range of measures for dealing with this: these include improving the global environment faced by developing countries; increasing aid flows and improving the effectiveness of aid; accelerating the implementation of the enhanced heavily indebted poor countries initiative; harnessing new information and communication technologies for increased productivity and economic growth; and working to reduce conflict.

Amazon Basin (Logging)

Mr. McGrady: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what assessment she has made of the logging activities in the Amazon by the Brazilian Environment Agency; and if she will make a statement. [131153]

Clare Short: The role of the Brazilian Environment Agency (IBAMA) is to monitor and control logging rather than actively engage in it. Our assessment is that environmental management capacity in Brazil needs to be developed in order to implement policies that have already been formally adopted. We believe that IBAMA are currently under-resourced and there are many weaknesses in the enforcement of existing forestry legislation owing to lack of incentives and capacity. We, and other donors, are contributing to institutional strengthening of IBAMA through the Pilot Programme to Conserve the Brazilian Rainforest.

Mr. McGrady: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what action she proposes to take to discourage logging activities in the Amazon by the Brazilian Environment Agency. [131154]

Clare Short: We are contributing to the international efforts to encourage sustainable logging practices in Brazil. Our contribution is mainly being channelled through the Pilot Programme to Conserve the Brazilian Rainforest.

Financial Contributions

Mr. Streeter: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what are the policy aims underlying her Department's contribution to (a) the Asian Development Bank, (b) the African Development Bank, (c) the International Monetary Fund, (d) the International Finance Corporation, (e) the Multilateral Investment Guarantee Agency, (f) the International Development Association, (g) Trade and Investment Research Activities, (h) UNAIDS, (i) the UN Fund for Population Acts, (j) the African Development Fund, (k) the WHO, (l) the UN Centre for Human Settlements, (m) the European Commission Attribution, (n) EU research, (o) the Desertification Convention, (p) the International Trade and Timber Organisation and (q) the World Food Programme; what assessment she has made of the value for money of these contributions; and if she will make a statement. [131620]

Clare Short: The policy aims underlying our contribution to (a), (b), (d), (e), (f), (j), (l), (m) and (n) are set out in the relevant Institutional Strategy Papers, which have been deposited in the Library of the House. Strategy Papers for (h), (k), (l) and (q) will be published shortly and will be deposited in the Library of the House, with the exception of the International Monetary Fund which is a Treasury lead.

Our policy aims on (g), (o) and (p), are outlined in chapters 3, 4 and 5 in DFID's 2000 Departmental Report.

HIV/AIDS

Mr. Streeter: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what proportion of the current multilateral budget funding HIV/AIDS programmes will be principally directed towards Africa. [131619]

Clare Short: It is not possible to identify statistically how our contributions to the core funding of multilateral organisations involved in tackling HIV/AIDS is allocated. Obviously the major effort of most international organisations working on HIV/AIDS is being devoted to Africa.

Mr. Streeter: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development if she will list the total amounts spent by her Department on HIV/AIDS in each year since 1992. [131616]

Clare Short [holding answer 20 July 2000]: DFID's total expenditure on HIV/AIDS from 1992–93 to 1999–2000 was as follows:

	£ million
1992–93	15
1993–94	30
1994–95	35
1995–96	34
1996–97	41
1997–98	41
1998–99	43
1999–2000	55

The statistical system used excludes activities costing less than £100,000 and multilateral expenditure.

Bangladesh

Mr. Cousins: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development for what reasons Bangladesh has been excluded from the HIPC initiative; and what representations the UK Government have made on this matter. [131624]

Clare Short: According to the World bank and IMF, Bangladesh's debt sustainability ratios are below the minimum thresholds used by the enhanced Heavily Indebted Poor Countries (HIPC) Initiative. This means that it would not qualify for debt relief.

For a country to receive HIPC debt relief, it requires not only unsustainable levels of debt, but also a commitment to poverty reduction and reform. In the case of Bangladesh, any consideration of debt relief would be likely to require further progress in areas such as public expenditure allocations on essential services for poor people, measures to improve the quality of public services, improving revenue administration, and a serious start on structural measures such as financial sector and public enterprise reform.

Our substantial aid programme to Bangladesh—£65 million in 1999–2000—focuses on promoting the reduction of poverty both directly and by addressing constraints on faster pro-poor growth and improved governance.

Mozambique

Mr. Cousins: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what debt is owed by Mozambique to the (a) UK Government and (b) UK private sector; what are the debt service payments relating to that debt; and by how much that debt service will be reduced by debt cancellation and other national and international debt relief initiatives. [131625]

Clare Short: Mozambique's aid debts of £21.8 million to the UK were cancelled in 1983. Under the Government's policy on 100 per cent. debt relief for countries eligible under the enhanced Heavily Indebted Poor Countries (HIPC) Initiative, debt service payments on Mozambique's remaining debt of £9.5 million to the Export Credits Guarantee Department (ECGD) ceased. The enhanced HIPC Initiative both removes the unpayable portion of Mozambique's debt and halves the debt service that it was previously paying to official creditors.

We do not have figures for Mozambique's debt to the private sector. However, since we estimate its worldwide private sector debt to be less than one per cent. of its total debt, the amount owed to the UK is presumed to be minimal.

CABINET OFFICE

Official Meetings

Mr. Matthew Taylor: To ask the Minister for the Cabinet Office from which sections of the US Departments of Justice, Defense and State officials were drawn attending each of the meetings which took place since 1 January 1998 between her departmental representatives and Ambassador David Aaron. [130514]

Marjorie Mowlam: The information is not held centrally and can be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

SCOTLAND

Astute Submarines

Mr. Sarwar: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will make a statement on the impact on the Scottish economy of the decision to place the mast order for the Royal Navy's Astute submarines with Pilkington Optronics in Govan. [127715]

Dr. Reid: The contract for optronic masts for Astute submarines was awarded by BAe Systems, the prime contractor, to Pilkington Optronics. The order is worth over £20 million and will support the jobs of the 600-strong workforce. Pilkington Optronics won this order in open competition demonstrating their excellent capability to provide leading-edge technology in this field.

Saudi Arabia (Trade)

Mr. Sarwar: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will make a statement on the recent Scottish trade mission to Saudi Arabia. [129932]

Mr. Wilson: Trade missions organised by Scottish Trade International are the responsibility of the Scottish Executive. However, the recent trade mission from 16–26 June was STI's third trade mission to Saudi Arabia.

Nine companies participated in the mission from a range of sectors. The mission covered three centres in Saudi Arabia: the Eastern Province, Riyadh and Jeddah. It is too early to estimate the likely success of the mission, but both the British Embassy in Saudi Arabia and STI report extremely positive responses from the business community.

Lords Lieutenant

Mr. Baker: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how many of Scotland's Lords Lieutenant are (a) women and (b) members of an ethnic minority. [132141]

Dr. Reid: Four Lords Lieutenant are women (including two ex-officio); none are members of an ethnic minority.

HOME DEPARTMENT

Firearms

6. Mr. Paice: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department when he plans to respond to the second report of Session 1999–2000 from the Home Affairs Committee on controls over firearms (HC 95). [130327]

Mr. Charles Clarke: The Government are currently considering the Select Committee's report and hope to publish their response shortly.

Police (Racism)

18. Helen Jackson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what progress he has made in his campaign to eliminate racism from the police force. [130339]

Mr. Straw: In February, I published my first annual report on progress of the implementation of my Action Plan to take forward the recommendations of the report of the Stephen Lawrence Inquiry, a copy of which is in the Library. I was able to report that over half of the report's 70 recommendations had already been implemented and that work was under way on the others. The Bill to extend the Race Relations Act 1976 to the police and other public authorities was introduced in December 1999. I have set targets for forces on recruitment, retention and progression of ethnic minority officers. In addition, a nationally co-ordinated and funded programme of community and race relations training is now under way in police forces. I have made increasing trust and confidence in policing among ethnic minority communities one of just two Ministerial Priorities for the current year.

Asylum Seekers

20. Mr. Russell Brown: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what assessment he has made of the effect of the employment concession on the total number of applicants for asylum in the United Kingdom. [130341]

Mrs. Roche: We believe that the concession, which has operated since 1986, acts as a pull factor for applicants wishing to find work in this country but who do not qualify for asylum. A number of other European countries have no such concession allowing asylum seekers to work. We are keeping the need for the concession under review, particularly in the light of the substantial progress we are making to speed up asylum decisions.

22. Dr. Ladyman: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what discussions he has had with the London boroughs about the dispersal of asylum seekers by those boroughs to other local authority areas. [130343]

Mrs. Roche: We have had general discussions with the Association of London Government about the dispersal of asylum seekers. We recently announced the further roll-out from today of the national asylum support scheme to include new in-country asylum applicants in London. This should, over time, reduce the number of cases where the London boroughs are proposing dispersal under the voluntary scheme.

39. Sir Teddy Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will make a statement on his policy towards asylum seekers. [130360]

Mrs. Roche: We remain committed to a fairer, faster and firmer approach to immigration and asylum, and aim to achieve most asylum decisions within two months and most appeals within a further four months from April 2001. We are already meeting the two month target for family cases. We will continue to provide protection to those in real need of it, while taking the strongest possible measures to deter unfounded claims. In particular, a new civil penalty has been introduced for bringing clandestine entrants into the United Kingdom in lorries and other vehicles.

Mr. Lidington: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what his estimate is of his Department's spending on asylum seeker support for (a) 2000–01, (b) 2001–02, (c) 2002–03 and (d) 2003–04. [132355]

Mrs. Roche: The Immigration and Nationality Directorate (IND) budget for 2000–01 has been increased by £609 million to £1,198 million. This includes a cash estimate for spending on asylum seeker support for 2000–01 of £604 million.

Following the Spending Review, the total budget for IND has been increased by £409 million to £952 million in 2001–02, by £446 million to £990 million in 2002–03 and £501 million to £990 million in 2003–04. The provisional estimates for asylum seeker support in those years are £403 million for 2001–01, £434 million for 2002–03 and £491 million for 2003–04. The asylum support estimates for 2001–04 have been calculated on a resource basis and are not directly comparable with those for 2000–01.

Burglary

23. Ms Rosie Winterton: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will make a statement on progress with the reducing burglary initiative. [130344]

Mr. Charles Clarke: Sixty-three strategic development projects approved in April last year are underway and another 161 projects have been approved in the last three months. In total these have been granted nearly £16 million and they cover over 800,000 households that suffered more than 60,000 burglaries in a year.

In April, we launched the third round, inviting bids from crime and disorder partnerships for a share of the remaining funding—over £30 million.

Police Recruitment

24. Mr. St. Aubyn: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will make a statement on police recruitment. [130345]

Mr. Charles Clarke: Taking account of their Crime Fighting Fund bids, forces currently estimate that they will recruit about 7,600 officers this financial year.

I understand from Her Majesty's Inspectorate of Constabulary and other sources that most forces are experiencing no difficulties in recruiting. The Metropolitan Police Service and the City of London Police are, however, finding it difficult to recruit, as are other forces, including Essex, Hampshire, Hertfordshire and Thames Valley.

The Government are doing all they can to help all forces maximise recruitment, including funding a national recruitment campaign to be launched later this Summer. This will focus particularly on London and the South East. It is designed to improve the image of the police and encourage quality applicants.

My right hon. Friend the Home Secretary announced on 23 June an increase of £3,327 in the London Allowance for those Metropolitan and City officers who joined on or after 1 September 1994 and who are not in receipt of housing allowance. The increase is intended to make the starting pay of new officers in those forces, more attractive and so boost recruitment.

34. Mr. Salter: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what reports he has received indicating which police forces find it most difficult to (a) recruit and (b) retain police officers; and what plans he has to seek to address these difficulties. [130355]

Mr. Charles Clarke: I understand from Her Majesty's Inspectorate of Constabulary and other sources that most forces are having no difficulty in recruiting. The Metropolitan Police Service and the City of London police are however finding it difficult to recruit and retain new police officers. A few others, including Essex, Hampshire, Hertfordshire and Thames Valley have reported some recruitment problems.

We are doing all we can to help all forces maximise recruitment and minimise wastage, including funding a national recruitment campaign to be launched later in the summer. This will focus particularly on London and the South-east. It is designed to improve the image of the police and encourage quality applicants.

To help address the recruitment and retention problems in London my right hon. Friend the Home Secretary announced in the policing of London debate, on 23 June 2000, Official Report, column 562, a £3,327 increase in London Allowance for those Metropolitan or City Officers who joined on or after 1 September 1994 and who are not in receipt of housing allowance.

Anti-social Behaviour

25. Mr. Goggins: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what advice he has given to registered social landlords with regard to the making of anti-social behaviour orders. [130346]

Mr. Charles Clarke: The new guidance booklet, "Anti-Social Behaviour Orders: Guidance on drawing up Local ASBO Protocols", which my right hon. Friend the Home Secretary launched on 28 June, gives advice on partnership working which should assist registered social landlords and other bodies in the consultation process leading up to an ASBO application. A copy of the guidance is in the Library.

29. Mr. Andy King: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what proposals he has for on-the-spot fines to curb anti-social behaviour. [130350]

Mr. Charles Clarke: On-the-spot fines are not currently available as a penalty for a criminal offence in England and Wales. The Government take the problems posed by anti-social behaviour very seriously and are considering what new means of dealing with this type of behaviour are necessary.

Marsham Street

26. Sir Michael Spicer: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will make a statement on the future of the three tower blocks in Marsham street. [130347]

Mr. Straw: The future of the Marsham street site rests on the outcome of a public private partnership project to provide modern offices for Home Office and Prison Service staff. Bids from two private sector consortia are being evaluated and I expect to announce the outcome shortly.

Police Manpower

27. Mr. Watts: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what recent assessment he has made of the correlation between the number of police officers in a police area and the level of crime. [130348]

30. Mrs. Organ: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what recent assessment he has made of the correlation between the number of police officers in a police area and the level of crime. [130351]

Mr. Charles Clarke: I refer my hon. Friends to the reply I gave to my hon. Friend the Member for Great Yarmouth (Mr. Wright) on 13 July 2000, Official Report, columns 668–74W. This presented an assessment by my Department of the relationship between changes in police numbers and crime rates at police force level over the last few years. It showed that at level of individual forces, there seems little obvious link between performance and police numbers.

28. Mr. David Heath: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what reports he has received about the adequacy of police numbers in rural areas. [130349]

Mr. Charles Clarke: I have received a number of reports expressing concern about police numbers or the adequacy of police services in rural areas.

Under the Police Act 1996, it is for Chief Constables to determine the number of police officers in their force from within their available resources, but the Government recognise the importance of ensuring that forces have the funding for sufficient officers to provide an effective service.

Rural areas will benefit from the Crime Fighting Fund, which will provide for an additional 9,000 officers over and above those whom forces planned to recruit in the three years 2000–01, 2001–02 and 2002–03.

In addition, £15 million was made available through the Budget, for assistance specifically to police forces in rural areas this year. I refer the hon. Member to the reply I gave my hon. Friend the Member for Ellesmere Port and Neston (Mr. Miller) on 20 July 2000, Official Report, columns 320–21W.

Racially Aggravated Offences

31. Mr. Bradshaw: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what assessment he has made of the impact of the racially aggravated offences introduced by the Crime and Disorder Act 1998; and if he will make a statement. [130352]

Mr. Charles Clarke: This is the subject of a research project commissioned by the Home Office. Results are expected towards the end of this year and a report will be published early next year. The research is designed to look in detail at the operation of the legislation and the extent to which it is being used. It includes questionnaire surveys of key personnel in the police, Crown Prosecution Service and courts, in-depth interviews in five local areas and a thorough analysis of the available statistics.

Rural Policing

32. Dr. George Turner: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what plans he has to help improve the effectiveness of police forces serving rural communities. [130353]

Mr. Charles Clarke: Rural areas will benefit from the Crime Fighting Fund, part of which will be used to provide funding for 9,000 officers over and above the number forces in England and Wales have already planned to recruit in the period 2000–03.

In addition, £15 million was made available through the Budget for assistance specifically to police forces in rural areas this year. I refer my hon. Friend to the reply I gave my hon. Friend, the Member for Ellesmere Port and Neston, (Mr. Miller), on 20 July 2000, Official Report columns 320–21W.

Public Safety Radio Communications

33. Miss McIntosh: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what representations he has received from police forces about the public safety radio Communications project. [130354]

Mr. Charles Clarke: My right hon. Friend the Home Secretary and I have discussed the Public Safety Radio Communications Project with representatives of the Association of Chief Police Officers and with individual chief officers on several occasions. A number of forces have raised the question of affordability of the project. I refer the hon. Member, to my right hon. Friend the Home Secretary's Statement on 19 July 2000, Official Report, columns 376–91.

Referendum Campaigns

35. Mr. Day: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what his policy is on the Government's role during referendum campaigns. [130356]

Mr. Mike O'Brien: I refer the hon. Member to the reply I gave to the right hon. Member for Maidstone and The Weald (Miss Widdecombe) on 12 May 2000, Official Report, column 520W.

Home Detention Curfew Scheme

36. Mr. Fabricant: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many offenders have been released from prison on the Home Detention Curfew Scheme; and if he will make a statement. [130357]

Mr. Boateng: As of 30 June, a total of 23,052 prisoners had been placed on the Home Detention Curfew Scheme since the scheme began on 28 January 1999.

Victim Support

37. Mr. Heppell: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how much financial support from central Government has been made available to victim support in each of the last five financial years. [130358]

Mr. Charles Clarke: I refer my hon. Friend to the reply I gave to my hon. Friend the Member for Hemel Hempstead (Mr. McWalter) on 26 June 2000, Official Report, columns 383–84W.

Licensing Laws

38. Mr. Ben Chapman: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what representations he has received about his proposals to amend the licensing laws. [130359]

Mr. Mike O'Brien: On launching the White Paper on 10 April this year, my right hon. Friend the Home Secretary told the House that it would be helpful to have responses to the White Paper proposals by 31 July. Since then, up to 12 July, hon. Members had written 143 times on behalf of constituents. In addition, representations had been received from 271 members of the public; 65 licensing justices; 55 local authorities; 19 petrol stations; 11 businesses within the hospitality and leisure industry; nine residents associations; eight passenger boat companies; seven church organisations; six non-profit making registered clubs; two solicitors; one police authority; and one fire authority. A full analysis of these replies and any others received after 12 July will not be completed until after the closing date of 31 July.

Land (Illegal Occupation)

40. Mr. Hoyle: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will make a statement on his proposals for amending the laws relating to illegal occupation of land. [130361]

Mr. Charles Clarke: There are no plans for changes to legislation at present. We are considering, in consultation with the Department for the Environment, Transport and the Regions, what changes are necessary to the current joint guidance on unauthorised camping, to clarify it and ensure there are no misconceptions arising from the use of the term "toleration". We expect to make an announcement shortly.

Association of Chief Police Officers

Miss Kirkbride: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department when he last met the chairman of the Association of Chief Police Officers to discuss measures to combat crime. [130340]

Mr. Charles Clarke: My right hon. Friend the Home Secretary had a bilateral meeting with Sir John Evans, Chairman of the Association of Chief Police Officers on 21 June.

Sussex Police

Mr. Waterson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) how many police officers there were in Sussex in May 1997; and how many there are now; [130634]

(2) what the establishment of the East Downs Division of Sussex Police was in May 1997; and what it is now. [130516]

Mr. Charles Clarke: I understand from the Chief Constable of the Sussex Police that on 31 May 1997 the force had 3,038 police officers and that on 13 July this year there were 2,891 officers. I have been told that recruitment in the Sussex Police is on course to reach its target of 228 new constables for this year and this number includes the 69 constables to be recruited under the force's Crime Fighting Fund allocation.

I have been informed by the Chief Constable that it is not possible to provide information on the number of officers in the East Downs Division for 1997. But there were 269 officers in the East Downs Division on 13 July this year. I understand that the East Downs will benefit from the extra constables being recruited by the force.

Essex Police

Mr. Hurst: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what the size of the police grant to Essex was in (a) 1970, (b) 1980 and (c) 1990. [130937]

Mr. Charles Clarke: The information available is set out in the table.

Mr. Hurst: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many (a) police officers and (b) civilian staff were employed by the Essex Police Authority and its predecessor bodies in (i) 1970, (ii) 1980, (iii) 1990 and (iv) 1999. [130938]

Mr. Charles Clarke: The available information is set out in the table. Information for civilian support staff numbers, on a force by force basis is only available from 1974. Data for the previous years have not been retained by the Department.

Animal Experiments

Dr. Ladyman: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many licences to conduct animal experiments were granted to (a) commercial organisations and (b) non-profit organisations; and what the mean time was between the application for a licence being submitted and its being granted, in each of the last 10 years. [130936]

Mr. Mike O'Brien: Table 19 of the Statistics of Scientific Procedures on Living Animals 1998, and the corresponding tables in the equivalent publications for 1989 to 1997, provide a breakdown of the total number of project licence holders and scientific procedures by type of designated establishment in 1998. Information on the number of project licences granted during the year is not collated separately by type of establishment.

The Home Office does not hold historical data on the time taken to process project licence applications. However, figures collected for the early part of this year show an average processing time for a project licence of just under 40 working days from receipt of the application to issue of the licence.

The Home Office is committed to processing project licence applications as expeditiously as possible, but no targets have been, or indeed can be, set for the time needed to consider any particular application. This depends greatly on the nature of the application. A well-drafted application for a replacement licence to continue existing work or for a minor amendment to an existing licence may be assessed quickly. One for a new study could take a considerable time to examine—indeed, some may take months where complex scientific issues are involved. There are usually negotiations between the Animals (Scientific Procedures) Inspectorate and the applicant to ensure that the 3Rs (the Refinement of scientific procedures; Reduction in numbers of animals used; and their Replacement wherever possible) are rigorously applied in every case. Applicants may also take time preparing supplementary or revised material for consideration. The situation is further complicated when advice is needed from experts outside the Home Office, or if the application needs to be referred to the Animal Procedures Committee.

I am aware of the concerns among scientists about the length of time that appears to be taken in some cases from the initial conception of a project to the issue of a project licence, including the requirements of the ethical review process that need to be met locally before the application reaches the Home Office. I have, therefore, asked my officials to work with the Department of Trade and Industry, to review the operation of these arrangements to ensure that the processes are as efficient and effective as possible without compromising animal welfare.

Mr. Fitzpatrick: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department when he will publish the figures relating to scientific procedures performed on living animals in Great Britain in 1999. [132680]

Mr. Mike O'Brien: The information requested will be published as a Command Paper Statistics of Scientific Procedures on Living Animals, Great Britain 1999 on 17 August.

In the meantime, I can report that:

the number of procedures started in 1999 was about 2.66 million, almost exactly the same as in 1998. 83 per cent. of these were performed using mice and rats;

the number of animals used in 1999 was 2.57 million about 24,000 fewer than in 1998; and the number of procedures involving the use of genetically modified animals rose by 63,000 to 511,000 in 1999, but this was almost exactly offset by a decrease to 1,894,000 in the use of animals with a normal genetic constitution.

Local Exchange Trading Schemes

Jean Corston: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many local exchange trading schemes projects are operating in the UK; and whether he will make a statement on local exchange trading schemes and their relationship with the economy. [131106]

Mr. Boateng: Research carried out in 1999 indicated that there were approximately 303 Local Exchange and Trading Schemes in the United Kingdom with about 22,000 members and a turnover equivalent to some £1.4 million. Their effect on the economy is therefore minor, although for the individuals and communities involved they are significant in helping to rebuild a sense of community and community involvement.

Neighbourhood Warden Schemes

Mr. Coaker: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) what support is available to local authorities which wish to set up neighbourhood warden schemes; and if he will make a statement; [131578]

(2) what recent discussions he has had with the police about neighbourhood warden schemes; [131598]

(3) what discussions he has had with local authorities about neighbourhood warden schemes; [131577]

(4) what assessment he has made of the effectiveness of neighbourhood warden schemes run by local authorities. [131576]

Mr. Charles Clarke: In 1999, the Home Office conducted a study with the aim of collecting information on the types of neighbourhood warden schemes operating in Britain and where possible to examine the effectiveness of such schemes. Fifty existing and recent neighbourhood wardens projects were examined, a good proportion of which were funded at least in part by local authorities. Partnership proved to be a crucial aspect of a large number of the initiatives. It was concluded that further research was needed to establish the impact of neighbourhood wardens schemes on levels of crime and disorder and quality of life in local areas and to identify elements of good practice. The Home Office subsequently commissioned further research which is examining eight neighbourhood warden schemes in detail. The report of this research will be available later this year.

The Home Office study of neighbourhood warden schemes was conducted in support of Policy Action Team (PAT) 6 on Neighbourhood Wardens set up by the Social Exclusion Unit. Following the report of PAT 6, a Neighbourhood Wardens Unit was established jointly funded by the Home Office and the Department for the Environment, Transport and the Regions (DETR). An Advisory Committee was set up to advise the Unit on a broad range of issues on neighbourhood wardens. The Advisory Committee meet quarterly and consist of representatives who have a key interest in neighbourhood wardens, including the police and local authorities. More specifically, the advisory committee includes members from:

Association of Police Authorities

National Black Police Association

Association of Chief Police Officers

Association of Town Centre Managers.

There is also a Practitioners Group consisting of existing neighbourhood warden scheme managers which includes members from local authorities.

Some £13.5 million of Government funding has been made available over three years until March 2003 for the funding of new or expanded neighbourhood warden schemes and for evaluation of those schemes. The Neighbourhood Wardens Fund is being administered by the Neighbourhood Wardens Unit in the DETR. Local authorities and others have been eligible to apply for this funding.

Identity Cards

Mr. Gummer: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what plans he has to consult on the introduction of identity cards; and if he will make a statement. [131473]

Mr. Mike O'Brien: We are not persuaded of the case for introducing compulsory identity cards and have no present plans to consult on the issue.

Abandoned Vehicles

Mr. Love: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department, pursuant to his answer of 7 July 2000, Official Report, column 315W, on abandoned vehicles, when he will next review the forward work programme. [131569]

Mr. Charles Clarke: The Home Office Research, Development and Statistics Directorate forward work programme will go up for discussion with policy units in November 2000. Ministerial approval for the forward work programme is scheduled for April 2001.

West Mercia Constabulary

Mr. Keetch: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will meet representatives of the West Mercia Constabulary to offer them more funding to offset increases in fuel costs; and if he will make a statement. [131529]

Mr. Charles Clarke [holding answer 20 July 2000]: Rising costs, including those of fuel, have to be handled as part of normal budget management. In the case of price increases for any commodity, a force may have to reconsider internal budgets and re-allocate resources away from one area towards another.

I have no plans to meet with representatives of the West Mercia Constabulary to discuss this particular subject.

Ministerial Prison Visits

Mr. Clappison: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many prisons (a) he and (b) other Ministers in his Department plan to visit between 28 July and 23 October. [131697]

Mr. Boateng: My right hon. Friend the Home Secretary is planning to undertake at least one prison visit in this period and I expect to make at least eight visits, some of which may be unannounced. However, final arrangements have not yet been made and alterations or additions to the programme are possible.

Crime (Chelmsford)

Mr. Burns: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will make a statement on changes in the level of reported crime in Chelmsford in each of the last five years. [130566]

Mr. Charles Clarke: The latest available data for notifiable offences recorded by the police in Chelmsford over the last five years are given in the table.

	Number of crimes recorded	Percentage change compared to the previous year
Old rules
1995–96	10,238	—
1996–97	9,991	–2
1997–98	9,110	–9
1998–99	9,460	4
New rules
1998–99	10,396	—
1999–2000	10,738	3

The rules for recording crimes changed in April 1998 which led to a large increase in the number recorded. Essex collected data based on the old rules and the new rules in 1998–99.

Prison Officers

Mr. Burns: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) if he will make a statement of the rights of prison officers, as constituents, to contact their Member of Parliament for help on issues relevant to them; and what assessment he has made of the compatability of the relevant Prison Service rules with the right of a constituent to contact their Member of Parliament; [132151]

(2) if he will publish the paragraphs of the staff hand book for prison officers at Chelmsford prison which relate to them contacting their Member of Parliament. [132150]

Mr. Boateng: The rights of prison officers to contact their Member of Parliament are set out in the Prison Service Staff Handbook. This reminds staff that civil servants should not attempt to bring political or other outside influence to support any personal claims as a civil servant. It makes it clear that this does not restrict staff's right to approach their Member of Parliament. A copy of the Prison Staff Handbook is available in the Library. The relevant paragraph is paragraph 19.84.

Suicide Rates

Mr. Menzies Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what was the annual suicide rate of police officers in each year since 1989, in each police force and in total, stating in each case (a) the number of suicides classified by rank and (b) the proportion per thousand police officers; and if he will make a statement. [131020]

Mr. Charles Clarke: The information requested is not held centrally and could be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

Mr. Keetch: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what the annual suicide rate of prison service personnel was in each year since 1989 in each category of prison and in total, stating in each year (a) the number of suicides per thousand prison service personnel and (b) the number of suicides classified by grade; and if he will make a statement. [131832]

Mr. Boateng: The statistics for the number of self-inflicted deaths among staff are set out in the table. Statistics on staff suicides are not collected centrally and so these have been collated from a number of sources (some of which may have been compiled on different bases).

These figures include those deaths where the coroner has recorded a verdict of suicide and, in some cases (generally the most recent), other deaths where the inquest is still pending or the verdict has not been notified to the Prison Service, but the circumstances in which the body was found suggest that the death was self-inflicted. The figures may underestimate the number of self-inflicted deaths, in that they record those deaths whose circumstances are known to the Service. If family members choose not to report the circumstances of the death, the death may not be recorded here.

Records of the cause of staff deaths before 1990 are not held centrally and could be obtained only at disproportionate cost. A full breakdown of the figures according to grade and location could likewise be obtained only at disproportionate cost. An analysis carried out in 1998 indicated that, of 34 staff who had committed suicide since 1990, 18 were prison officers, five were senior officers and one was a principal officer. The other staff were drawn from a number of different grades within the Service.

In 1994, the Prison Service was greatly concerned to note the increased number of staff suicides. The causes of each suicide were examined. In all cases, the principal cause appeared to be the member of staff's private life rather than their work with the Prison Service. A workshop was held that year, to examine issues relating to staff suicide. A number of ideas emerged from that and the Service has continued to keep this issue under very careful review, to see whether there are any additional steps which could usefully be taken.

The Prison Service's Staff Care and Welfare Service offers confidential support and assistance to staff for a range of personal and emotional problems. The Staff Care and Welfare Service co-ordinates the provision of post-incident care and also provides a welfare service which all staff can use at any time. Part of that service is provided via trained Care Teams, drawn from a cross-section of grades, which are based in prisons and provide an on-site support network. While this is primarily geared towards post-incident work, increasingly these teams do offer a greater range of support to staff. In 1999, welfare officers dealt with more than 7,000 cases, most of which related to transfers, physical illness, work-related stress and debt.

Welfare officers, who are based in five geographical areas, provide a comprehensive support and referral service for staff. They deal with a multitude of problems and can call upon specialist services—both internal and external—as necessary to meet the client's needs. Given the operational duties which the majority of Prison Service staff perform, they are often referred to external counselling services so that they may discuss in confidence the personal and emotional problems which may be generated by working with prisoners.

HM Prison Service: self-inflicted deaths among staff

Year	Total staff employed	Self-inflicted deaths
1990	31,629	4
1991	33,149	2
1992	35,172	5
1993	37,942	4
1994	38,607	11
1995	40,266	10
1996	38,212	4
1997	40,098	1
1998	41,244	3
1999	42,683	7
2000	43,683	[1]

Figures for 1990–93 do not include administrative staff in Prison Service Headquarters. Figures from 1994 onwards are drawn from Prison Service Annual Reports.

[1] To end June

Mr. Keetch: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what the annual suicide rate of Probation Service personnel was in each year since 1989, in each probation service and in total, stating in each case (a) the number of suicides per thousand Probation Service personnel and (b) the number of suicides classified by grade; and if he will make a statement. [131831]

Mr. Boateng: The information is not held centrally, and could be obtained only at a disproportionate cost from the 54 probation committees who are the employers of probation staff.

Mr. Keetch: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what the annual suicide rate of fire officers was in each year since 1989 in each authority area and in total stating in each case (a) the proportion per thousand fire officers and (b) the number of suicides classified by grade; and if he will make a statement. [131830]

Mr. Mike O'Brien: There is no centrally held information on the suicide rate of fire service personnel in each fire authority.

All fire brigades in England and Wales are required to provide annually to Her Majesty's Inspectorate statistical information about fire service fatalities. The information is provided on the following basis:

Brigade fatalities during operational incidents;

Brigade fatalities during training for operational incidents;

Brigade fatalities during routine activities on and off brigade premises; and

Number of brigade personnel killed involving brigade vehicle accidents.

On the basis on which the data are collected, brigades are not asked or required to submit information about suicides.

We could now write out to all brigades seeking this information but it may mean a manual check of their records for the last 11 years, and this would only be done at disproportionate cost.

Police and Scientific Development Branch

Mr. Key: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) if he will list for each civil service grade the academic and professional qualifications of the officials at his Department's Police and Scientific Development Branch; [131765]

(2) if he will list the number of officials, by civil service grade, employed at his Department's Police and Scientific Development Branch. [131776]

Mr. Straw: The numbers and grades of staff employed at the Police and Scientific Development Branch (PSDB) are given in the table.

Grade	Number
SCS	2
Grade 6	3
Grade 7	11
SSO/SPTO	21
HSO/HPTO/HEO	22
SO/PTO/EO	21
SPS/PS	4
AO	6
AA	3
Typist	1
SGB1	2

Staff recruited to PSDB at SO level or above will have a minimum of a good honours degree in an appropriate scientific or technological subject. Many staff also possess further degrees and are members of the appropriate professional body.

Mr. Key: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department when the Police and Scientific Development Branch received their first prototype of the AVID hand-held radar system. [131773]

Mr. Charles Clarke: The Police and Scientific Development Branch procured an AVID system, known at that time as VADAR, on behalf of the Prison Service in April 1999.

Mr. Key: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many (a) referrals for trials and assessment and (b) reports of completed trials were made in respect of his Police and Scientific Development Branch in each year since 1997; and if he will make a statement. [131775]

Mr. Straw: The Police and Scientific Development Branch (PSDB) has published 78 reports since 1997, the majority dealing with trials and assessments conducted on behalf of the police service or other PSDB customers. PSDB does not have a central record of requests for trials and assessments.

Mr. Key: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will list the budget of his Department's Police and Scientific Development Branch in (a) 1997, (b) 1998, (c) 1999, (d) 2000 and (e) 2001. [131763]

Mr. Straw: The budget for the Police and Scientific Development Branch is shown in the table, the figures are in £000.

	1997–98	1998–99	1999–2000	2000–01
Pay	2.462	2.512	2.667	3.145

Life Signs Monitoring Systems

Mr. Key: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what alternatives (a) exist and (b) he has trialled to (i) the life signs monitoring system and (ii) the AVID hand-held radar detection system; and if he will make a statement. [131764]

Mr. Charles Clarke: The Police Scientific Development Branch (PSDB) has evaluated two alternative systems, AVIAN and MICROSEARCH for the detection of life signs in vehicles. PSDB has also conducted trials on the Mandec UK life signs monitoring system for use in calls. Some work has also been conducted on alternative methods of life signs monitoring in cells based on Closed Circuit Television and optical systems, audio systems or microwave radiation.

PSDB has not trialled AVID or other hand held radar detection systems for detection of people or animals in freight.

Mr. Key: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will place in the Library the search protocols agreed with the passenger and freight transport industry on the searching of vehicles seeking entry into the UK in (a) France and (b) the UK. [131774]

Mrs. Roche: A draft copy of the Civil Penalty Codes of Practice was placed in the Library on 3 March this year. I will arrange for the final version of the Codes of Practice to be placed in the Library next week.

Mr. Key: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what is the unit cost of (a) an AVID hand-held radar system and (b) a static X-ray system, for the detection of people and animals in freight trucks; and if he will make a statement. [131772]

Mr. Charles Clarke: The cost of the AVID system is not known. Static X-ray systems are not designed to detect people and animals. The cost of a static X-ray system for detecting drugs, explosives, weapons and other contraband ranges from £190,000 to £4,118,000.

Mr. Key: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what trials have been held at (a) Dover and (b) Portsmouth into the use of hand-held radar systems for the detection of people and animals in freight trucks; on what dates; and if he will make a statement. [131771]

Mrs. Roche: An inconclusive trial of a radar system was held at Dover on 25 August 1999. A trial of a hand-held radar device will begin at Portsmouth on 26 July. A trial of some other equipment will begin as soon as the supplier receives the upgraded hardware from the manufacturer.

The Immigration Service is holding discussions with other companies who are pursuing a range of solutions and further trials are a possibility.

If the initial trials of the radar and heartbeat devices at Portsmouth prove promising, the trials will be transferred to Dover.

Mr. Key: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will make a statement about the role of Status 3 in Harlington in respect of hand-held radar systems for truck searches at ports. [131779]

Mrs. Roche: The Immigration Service at Status Park has for some years been seeking low cost, portable and effective devices to detect the presence of human beings hidden inside vehicles and freight containers. The search has included small handheld devices. The Immigration Service at Status Park has conducted trials of such equipment within the last few years and will continue to consult with the industry to find a workable solution.

Mr. Key: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what trials have been conducted at Belmarsh Prison into life signs monitoring systems; with what results; and if he will make a statement. [131769]

Mr. Boateng: A trial of the Life Signs monitoring system was conducted during 1999 at Belmarsh Prison in an unoccupied room in the Health Care Centre. Unfortunately the equipment failed and the trial was aborted. The Prison Service are currently considering how best to proceed with this project in order to test out the feasibility of this system.

Departmental Expenditure Plans

Mr. Lidington: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will publish revised estimates for the analyses of expenditure presented on pages 72 to 85 of his Department's Annual report 1999–2000 in respect of the financial years (a) 1999–2000, (b) 2000–01 and (c) 2001–02, together with equivalent analyses of his expenditure plans for (i) 2002–03 and (ii) 2003–04; and if he will make a statement. [132356]

Mr. Straw: These analyses will be published in the Department's Annual Report for 2000–01 in April 2001.

Departmental Staff

Mr. Lidington: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will publish revised estimates of staff numbers as analysed on page 86 of the Home Office Annual report 1999–2000 in respect of the financial years (a) 2000–01 and (b) 2001–02, together with equivalent analyses for (c) 2002–03 and (d) 2003–04; and if he will make a statement. [132349]

Mr. Straw: The data in the Annual Report are the latest available. Consideration is being given to the staff implications arising from the outcome of the 2000 Spending Review announced on 18 July. Revised plans will be published in the next Home Office Annual Report.

Departmental Financial Estimates

Mr. Lidington: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what figure he assumes for inflation when making his financial estimates for the financial years (a) 1999–2000, (b) 2000–01, (c) 2001–02, (d) 2002–03 and (e) 2003–04. [132350]

Mr. Straw: Inflation assumptions reflect the Gross Domestic Product (GDP) deflators produced by the Treasury, and are used in calculating real terms increases in expenditure. The factors for the financial years 1999–2000 to 2003–04 are:

Year	Percentage
1999–2000	2.5
2000–01	2.25
2001–02	2.5
2002–03	2.5
2003–04	2.5

Departmental Public Service Agreements

Mr. Lidington: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will publish a revised list of his Department's public service agreements taking account of the conclusions of the Comprehensive Spending Review. [132352]

Mr. Charles Clarke: My right hon. Friend the Chancellor of the Exchequer will in the context of the Spending Review 2000 shortly publish a comprehensive list of public service agreements for all Government Departments.

Immigration and Nationality Directorate

Mr. Lidington: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will publish a revised table of the Immigration and Nationality Directorate's objectives and annual targets as set out on pages 32 and 33 of the IND Annual report 1999 to take account of the conclusions of, and the period covered by, the Comprehensive Spending Review. [132353]

Mrs. Roche: The table at pages 32 and 33 of the Immigration and Nationality Directorate (IND) Annual Report 1999 lists the 21 business objectives and targets agreed for IND following the last Comprehensive Spending Review in 1998. They cover the three year period from April 1999 to March 2002. Following the announcement of the outcome of the 2000 Spending Review on 18 July, IND will work to develop similar objectives and targets for the next three years through to March 2004, supplementing those to be published in the Public Service Agreement and the Service Delivery Agreement.

Eighteen updated objectives and targets for this year are listed in the table. More details will be available in the IND Business Plan for 2000–01 which is to be published shortly. A copy will be placed in the Library. Details of IND's objectives and targets for the next three years will be published in future business plans.

The target for initial asylum decisions for this year has been revised upwards to 130,000–150,000 from the 65,000 in the last IND Business Plan. This will substantially clear the backlog. Funding for the increase is being provided as part of the £609 million extra for IND in the current financial year. That funding will also enable IND to increase the number of detention places. This is an essential element in the strategy to meet our target of removing 12,000 failed asylum seekers this year and at least 30,000 a year in the next three years.

These figures reflect the important changes introduced by the Immigration and Asylum Act 1999. All entitlement of new asylum applicants to cash social security benefits ended on 3 April 2000. Public expenditure overall would be significantly higher if such entitlements continued.

Performance Targets

Mr. Lidington: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will publish revised tables of objectives and targets as set out in the Home Office Annual report 1999–2000, taking account of the outcome of the Comprehensive Spending Review. [132351]

Mr. Charles Clarke: Revised objectives and targets for the Home Office relating to the outcome of the Spending Review 2000 will be published in 2001 in the Home Office Business Plan for 2001–02.

Mr. Loughton: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department against what benchmark the achievement of targets for the local authority area reduction in crime set out in section 23 of the Comprehensive Spending Review will be judged. [132279]

Mr. Charles Clarke: Achievement of the target will be assessed against the national average domestic burglary rate for Crime and Disorder Partnerships which are published as part of the crime statistics every six months.

Convicted Prisoners (Possessions)

Mr. Mackinlay: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will make a statement on the procedures applicable to the removal of property and papers from convicted prisoners while serving their sentences. [132282]

Mr. Boateng: The Prison Rules 43(5) and the Young Offender Institution Rules 45(4) allow Governors to confiscate any unauthorised article found in the possession of prisoners after their reception into prison, or concealed or deposited anywhere within a prison. Chapters 17 and 18 of the Security Manual, PSO 1000, contain procedural guidance on conducting searches and preserving evidence arising therefrom, and are available in the Library.

Mr. Mackinlay: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if an inventory is maintained of property and papers removed from convicted prisoners while serving their sentences. [132281]

Mr. Boateng: While no central inventory exists for property and papers removed from prisoners, confiscated items are recorded on the individual searching sheets returns. Items of especial value are recorded in the local Heads of Management Services' offices.

Parliamentary Questions

Mr. Stunell: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many written parliamentary questions were tabled to his Department between 19 October 1999 and 20 April 2000 which requested information, pursuant to his previous answers. [132138]

Mr. Straw: My Department received 130 questions between 19 October and 20 April 2000 which requested information pursuant to previous replies.

Sentencing

Mr. Fitzpatrick: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what steps he is taking to fulfil the Government's commitment to extend the Attorney-General's powers to refer unduly lenient sentences to the Court of Appeal for review. [132678]

Mr. Charles Clarke: An Order extending the Attorney-General's powers in relation to unduly lenient sentences is being laid before Parliament today. This will enable the Attorney to refer sentences imposed for offences of illegal trafficking in drugs and pornographic material involving children and offences specifically against children (unlawful sexual intercourse with a girl under 16, inciting a girl under 16 to have incestuous intercourse and indecent conduct towards a young child). The Order comes into effect on 21 August 2000 and will apply to any sentence imposed after that date. The Government will keep under review whether further extensions should be made in future.

R18 Videos

Mr. Fitzpatrick: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department when he will publish the consultation paper on the regulation of R18 videos; and if he will make a statement. [132679]

Mr. Straw: I have today placed in the Library copies of a Consultation Paper on the Regulation of R18 videos. As hon. Members will be aware, I was extremely disappointed with the High Court decision, on 16 may, which dismissed the British Board of Film Classification's application for Judicial Review in respect of appeals against their decision not to classify seven sexually explicit videos in the R (restricted) 18 category—which are available only in licensed sex shops. The Government maintain a firm commitment to the protection of children from unsuitable sexually explicit material and, in the light of the recent judgment, are publishing a consultation paper which examines a number of options to improve the safeguards for children from possible exposure to videos classified in the R (restricted) 18 category. The paper also suggests measures for modernising and strengthening the recruitment and appointment procedures of the Video Appeals Committee.

Prison Service

Mr. Fitzpatrick: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will make a statement about the performance of Her Majesty's Prison Service in 1999–2000. [132681]

Mr. Boateng: I have today laid before Parliament on behalf of the Director General of Her Majesty's Prison Service, the Annual Report and Accounts for the Service for 1999–2000. Copies have been placed in the Library.

AGRICULTURE, FISHERIES AND FOOD

Expenditure Plans

Mr. Drew: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what his Ministry's spending plans are for the three years following the 2000 Spending Review; and if he will make a statement. [132561]

Mr. Nick Brown: The results of the Spending Review for MAFF are summarised in Chapter 16 of the White Paper on "Spending Review 2000: New Public Spending Plans 2001–2004" (Cm 4807). The key figures are as follows:

£ million

	2000–01	2000–02	2002–03	2003–04
Total DEL[1] of which:	804	963	1,048	1,081
Resource Budget	638	780	795	846
Capital Budget	166	183	253	235
Total AME[2]	1,488	1,582	1,529	1,536

[1] Departmental Expenditure Limit
[2] Annually Managed Expenditure

MAFF's aim has been amended to give a clearer and more focused picture of what the Department wants to achieve: good quality food which meets consumers' requirements; modern, sustainable, competitive farming and fisheries businesses; protection of the rural and marine environment and a thriving rural economy.

I should like to explain how the Spending Review settlement will impact on MAFF's programmes over the next three years and assist the Department in pursuing its aims and objectives.

Safe, good quality food

MAFF's responsibility for handling food safety transferred in April with the creation of the new Food Standards Agency (FSA). But MAFF will continue to play a key role in ensuring there is good quality, safe food meeting consumer requirements. As well as its wider commitment to sponsoring all the industries in the food chain, MAFF will retain as a key priority tackling the threat from animal diseases that are transmissible to humans and threats to the health and welfare of farm animals.

Over the next three years we will: continue to work towards the eradication of BSE, with a target by 2004 of being on track for fewer than 30 cases by 2006. We will introduce a scrapie control programme. This will comprise a ram genotyping programme, designed to encourage the use of scrapie resistant rams, and new testing and control measures. Consultation documents on the first stage of this programme, involving ram genotyping, will be issued on 28 July and copies will be placed in the Library of the House. We will pursue our strategy for controlling TB in cattle. There will be additional funding to increase testing in response to the spread of the disease, in line with EU requirements and veterinary advice. And we will complete the field trial of badger culling in 10 areas of high cattle TB incidence, as recommended by the Krebs review. We will also examine possible ways of enhancing other strands of the TB strategy in consultation with the TB Forum. We will complete work on extending the coverage of the Cattle Tracing System database from 40 per cent. of the GB herd to 100 per cent.

Rural development and restructuring

The Government set out on 7 December 1999, Official Report, columns 701–12, their long-term strategy for the future development of an agriculture industry that must be competitive, diverse and flexible, that must respond better to consumer demands (including those of the food industry), that must be more environmentally responsible and that must play an integral part in the wider rural economy.

The £1.6 billion, seven-year England Rural Development Plan (ERDP) is a key component in the delivery of this strategy. Over the next three years we will spend a total of £600 million under the ERDP. This will be funded in part by redirecting (or modulating) CAP payments and matching them with further Government funding on a pound for pound basis. There will be extra money for the agri-environment schemes, allowing more farmland to be protected and enhanced under the Countryside Stewardship Scheme and approved for conversion to organic farming. And there will be a substantial increase in funding over the three years for measures to encourage diversification and restructuring. We will replace Hill Livestock Compensatory Allowances with a new area-based scheme of support for hill farmers.

We will also provide funding over the next three years for agricultural measures in the Objective 1 areas of Cornwall and the Scilly Isles, South Yorkshire and Merseyside. And there will be funding for rural regeneration projects under the new LEADER+ programme.

The other major plank of the Government's strategy for agriculture is the Action Plan which was announced on 30 March 2000. We will carry forward the measures announced in that Action Plan by: providing an additional £40 million up to March 2003 for the Pig Industry Restructuring Scheme; maintaining the increased rate of grant under the Farm Waste Grant Scheme; continuing the new programme of business advice to farmers through the Business Link Partnership; providing additional funding for the applications currently being considered under the Agricultural Development Scheme; and making additional funding available for the development of an electronic portal for farming, providing access from a single source to information and interactive advice for farmers.

Research and development

We will maintain a strong and varied programme of research to support, inform and facilitate the implementation of MAFF's policies and its regulatory and environmental activities. Over the next three years we will: increase spending on research and surveillance on TSEs in sheep by a total of £26.2 million. There will also be an additional £10.5 million to invest in the facilities in which to carry out this research; invest in new and improved facilities at the Veterinary Laboratories Agency which will contribute to MAFF's programme of research on TSEs and research, diagnosis and surveillance in respect of other major animal diseases, including those transmissible to humans; and complete the procurement of a new marine research vessel to be used by MAFF's Centre for Environment, Fisheries and Aquaculture Science in support of the Department's objectives on the conservation of fish stocks and sustaining the marine environment.

We will shortly be conducting a major consultation on our Research Strategy for 2001–05. I shall consider the overall priorities for the whole research programme on the basis of that consultation, taking the advice of my new MAFF Science Committee, which will be launched soon.

Improving services

A key objective for MAFF over the next three years is to modernise the Department and make real and lasting improvements in the efficiency with which we deliver services to our stakeholders. The major initiative in this area will be the creation of a new CAP Payments Agency, for which there is additional provision of £130 million over the Spending Review period. The Agency will merge the paying agency functions of the Intervention Board and MAFF's Regional Service Centres to provide top quality customer service using modern electronic systems. I am making a separate announcement today on this exciting and challenging project.

CAP reform

We will continue to work with our European partners to secure further reform of the CAP which will increase the competitiveness of the whole food chain. To that end there will be additional funding to improve our policy analysis and enhance our capability to model the economic impact of CAP reform.

Flood and coastal defence

An additional £10 million in 2002–03 and £20 million in 2003–04 will be made available to local flood and coastal defence operating authorities for investment in maintaining and improving defences. There will also be additional funds for improving storm tide forecasting and warning systems.

An in-depth review of the current arrangements for the funding and provision of flood and coastal defences will be completed in 2001.

Fisheries

Securing a sustainable future for the sea fishing industry remains a priority for MAFF. A total of £11 million will be made available for a three year programme of structural measures under the EU's Agenda 2000, including provision for safety training, encouragement of environmentally sustainable fishing, improvement in the quality of fish and support for regional fisheries management initiatives.

Charging

We will waive cattle passport charges for a further two years until March 2004. This waiver is worth around £18 million a year to the industry.

As Minister responsible for co-ordinating the implementation of the Government's Action Plan for farming, I am considering with colleagues the recommendations of the task force which was set up to examine alternative approaches to charging for meat hygiene inspection, in response to concerns expressed by small and medium sized abattoirs.

Conclusion

Spending by MAFF in 2003–04 will be almost £280 million higher than in 2000–01, an average annual increase in real terms of more than 6 per cent. This fulfils the Government's pledge to introduce a significant programme of measures to help the environment, agricultural restructuring and the wider rural economy. And it reflects the continuing commitment to protecting public health, encouraging sustainable development and modernising service delivery.

Mr. Drew: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what the Intervention Board's spending plans are for the three years following the 2000 Spending Review; and if he will make a statement. [132562]

Mr. Nick Brown: The results of the 2000 Spending Review for the Intervention Board (IB) and the spending plans that have resulted from it were summarised in Chapter 16 of the White Paper on "Spending Review 2000: New Public Spending Plans 2001–2004" (CM 4807). The key figures are:

£ million

	2000–01	2001–02	2002–03	2003–04
Departmental expenditure limit	179	222	201	189
of which:
Resource budget	175	198	197	185
Capital budget	4	4	4	4
Annually managed expenditure	635	714	697	709

The settlement for the next three years will allow IB to make progress on all its objectives and its targets to be set out in its Service Delivery Agreement. It will underpin its operations and ongoing efficiency plans and facilitate change including achievement of the Modernising Government agenda.

The settlement recognises the resource cost of implementing the new Slaughter Premium Scheme and the ongoing but falling cost of operating the Over Thirty Months Scheme. The short-term increase in MBM disposal costs reflects the successful letting of MBM disposal contracts and the commencement of full-scale incineration of MBM stock.

It will also contribute to the PSA target for MBM disposal and enable the early reimbursement of up to £170 million of EAGGF funding.

IB's CAP expenditure is non-discretionary and demand-led. It is treated as Annually Managed Expenditure (including OTMS compensation) and is subject to review and adjustment in order to meet changes in scheme operations, anticipated levels of activity and EU rates of aid.

IB will be reviewing its asset utilisation plans in order to dispose of any surplus assets.

Departmental Restructuring

Mr. Drew: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what progress is being made regarding the restructuring of his Department's regional activities; and if he will make a statement. [132559]

Mr. Nick Brown: I have decided to make a number of important changes to the way MAFF operates in the regions, in order to improve the services we offer to farmers and to strengthen the contribution we make to the wider rural economy. We will participate fully in the Government Offices for the Regions, strengthening MAFF's regional policy capability; we will set up new organisational structures to enhance the delivery of rural development policies; and we will invest up to £130 million over the next spending period to modernise the way we administer CAP schemes, taking full advantage of the benefits of electronic services delivery.

I have given careful consideration to the findings of a detailed study of methods of delivering CAP payments, submitted at the beginning of this year by PricewaterhouseCoopers. I have concluded that the interests of farmers, traders and taxpayers would best be served by the creation of a new CAP Payments Agency, merging the paying agency functions of MAFF's nine Regional Service Centres and the Intervention Board to provide top quality customer service using modern electronic systems. Farmers and traders will benefit from a reduction in "red tape" and more efficient and rapid processing of payments, with the achievement of 95 per cent. electronic service delivery capability by March 2004. There will be significant benefits for taxpayers, with a 10 per cent. cut by March 2004 in unit costs of administering payments and further savings in subsequent years after the new Agency is fully established.

I have written today to the main organisations representing farmers and traders to explain how the Agency will work, and to seek their views on the best ways of ensuring a smooth transition to the new arrangements. We will work very closely with our customers to help them reap the benefits which electronic service delivery offers. However we recognise that many farmers are apprehensive about changes in the way their claims are handled and will maintain arrangements for face-to-face local contacts with farmers, at least until the new IT systems are fully operational and everyone has easy local access to the internet.

The Agency will be constituted as an executive agency of the Ministry of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food and will therefore be answerable to me. It will continue to administer the schemes currently operated by the Intervention Board in all parts of the UK and the devolved administrations will therefore be represented on its Ownership Board. It will operate from five sites, with its headquarters at Reading and other sites at Carlisle, Exeter, Newcastle and Northallerton. The work that will transfer to the new Agency currently accounts for some 80 per cent. of the 2,000 staff in the Regional Service Centres and nearly all the Intervention Board's 1,350 staff. By the time the new systems are fully operational (2004) we estimate that the total number of staff required will fall to around 1,950. We will make every effort to find suitable alternative employment for staff who are no longer required as a result of the modernisation programme.

I have also been reviewing other aspects of MAFF's organisation in the regions in the light of the Modernising Government initiative and the recent PIU reports "Rural Economies" and "Reaching Out". It is now right to establish greater integration of MAFF's strategic and policy activities in the regions with Government Offices. I am therefore preparing to provide a senior member of MAFF staff, with appropriate support, to join each Government Office. This will help strengthen the rural capability of the Government Offices and improve their links with my Department. And it will foster closer relationships with regional stakeholders, including the agriculture, fisheries and food industries, and their representatives, regional institutions such as the Regional Development Agencies, and representatives of rural and environmental interests.

Parallel to the integration with Government Offices, I have decided to restructure the work currently carried out in the Farming and Rural Conservation Agency (FRCA) and the non-CAP payment functions of the Regional Service Centres. We will create a single, nationally managed but largely regionally based service to carry out this work. The service will be set up so that it relates effectively to Government Offices. Its staff will be located throughout England and will continue to provide a local service on the ERDP schemes.

We will build on the considerable skills of staff in FRCA and the Regional Service Centres to create the new service as a centre of excellence for the delivery of rural development polices and programmes, particularly one of MAFF's flagship policies—the England Rural Development Programme (ERDP). It will provide continuing employment opportunities for some of the staff at the RSCs which are not in CAPPA locations (Bristol, Cambridge, Crewe, Nottingham and Worcester) as well as for FRCA staff.

I would expect to review these organisational arrangements in 2003 at the end of the mid-term evaluation of the ERDP, and to consider at that stage whether full integration with the Government Offices would be sensible.

The decision to implement this comprehensive programme of changes is a further element in my Department's commitment to delivering efficient and responsive modern public services. The new CAP Payments Agency will ensure that service standards to farmers and traders are second to none. And agriculture and the wider rural economy will benefit through the strengthening of MAFF's regional policy presence.

I recognise that these decisions will create considerable uncertainty for staff in my Department's Regional Service Centres and at the Intervention board who have worked hard to provide good services to their customers. I have met the Trade Unions to discuss the position, and to assure them that I am committed to ensuring that everyone is treated fairly and sensitively as we take the change programme forward.

Lindane

Angela Smith: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what research his Department has (a) undertaken and (b) evaluated into the health risks associated with lindane. [127816]

Ms Quin: Under both UK and EU pesticides legislation the responsibility for undertaking research into the health risks lies with the companies who market the pesticides. Lindane is presently under review in both the UK and EU programmes. Both reviews have required the submission of data and research studies by companies wishing to support the compound.

In the EU review, 562 studies were submitted on, among other things, the compound's identity; physical and chemical properties; classification; methods of analysis; toxicology and metabolism; and residues data. I have arranged for a copy of the EU's list of tests and studies to be placed in the House Libraries.

Much of the data submitted for the EU review of lindane have also been submitted under the UK review along with a further 30 studies relating to operator exposure to lindane when treating seed. These are listed in our evaluation on the review of lindane which I have also placed in the Libraries.

Until recently the UK and EU reviews of lindane have been running in tandem. Under the UK review the Government have moved swiftly to ban those uses of lindane in this country which posed an unacceptable risk. At EU level the Commission has just produced a proposal to withdraw the agricultural uses of lindane as insufficient data have been submitted to support its continued use for these purposes. The Government have supported and welcome this development.

Rockall Fishery

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what assessment his Department has made of the possibility of unregulated fishing by new vessels in deciding policy on relinquishing sovereignty over Rockall waters; and if he will make a statement. [130784]

Mr. Morley: The Rockall fisheries zone (RFZ) was relinquished in 1997 as a result of the previous UK Government acceding to the UN Convention on the Law of the Sea (UNCLOS). Article 121(3) of UNCLOS prevents > rocks which cannot sustain human habitation or economic life of their own being used to generate exclusive economic zones. Maintenance of the RFZ would not therefore have been compatible with UNCLOS and so would have been open to legal challenge.

It was recognised that third countries would have access to the new area of international waters, which falls within the regulatory area of the North East Atlantic Fisheries commission (NEAFC). I would refer the hon. Member to the reply I gave him on 3 July 2000, Official Report, column 9W, which explains the action being taken by the Government to secure specific NEAFC management measures to regulate fishing in the Rockall area.

Labelling Directive

Mr. Gill: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will make it his policy within the Council of Ministers to support the resolution of the European Parliament to debate the reference to animal category in the proposed labelling directive. [131248]

Ms Quin: On 17 July the Agriculture Council, with the strong support of the UK, decided unanimously to accept the amendments to the new rules on beef labelling proposed by the European Parliament. This means that beef will not have to be labelled with the category of animal from which it is derived.

Fisheries (Grant Aid)

Mr. Paul Marsden: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will assess the impact on the fishing industry of the reduction in the Environment Agency's fisheries budget for 2001–02; and if he will make a statement. [130818]

Mr. Morley: The reduction in grant in aid to the Environment Agency in England in 2001–02 is unlikely to have any significant impact on the fishing industry. I would also refer my hon. Friend to the replies given to the hon. Member for New Forest, West (Mr. Swayne) on 27 October 1999, Official Report, column 922W.

Hill Livestock Compensatory Allowance

Mr. Gareth Thomas: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what assessment he has made of the effect of reform of the Hill Livestock Compensatory Allowance Scheme on farm incomes in (a) England, (b) Scotland, (c) Northern Ireland and (d) Wales. [131600]

Ms Quin: There will be some redistribution of support between producers but the impact will vary according to their individual circumstances. We are pressing the EC Commission to allow a safety net mechanism that will give producers time to adjust.

Land Settlement Association

Mr. Gummer: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food when (a) he and (b) his Ministers consulted with the Board of Inland Revenue on the Land Settlement Association's compensation arrangements. [131475]

Mr. Morley: Neither my fellow Ministers nor I have consulted the Board of the Inland Revenue about the taxation arrangements for the payment made in 1991 to settle the litigation brought against the Ministry by former members of the Land Settlement Association.

Veterinary Products

Mr. Gareth Thomas: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what plans he has to regulate the pricing of veterinary products in the UK. [131602]

Ms Quin: There are no controls in either UK or European Community law on the pricing of veterinary medicinal products. Decisions on pricing are a matter for the companies manufacturing the products, taking into account commercial factors such as development and production costs and anticipated volume of sales. Similarly, the cost of veterinary treatment is not controlled by legislation but is a matter for negotiation between veterinary surgeon and client.

However, we have received representations about comparatively high prices of veterinary medicinal products in the UK and the issue is being investigated by the Office of Fair Trading (OFT) who are currently conducting an inquiry into the pricing of veterinary medicines in the UK. It will consider whether there is any evidence of anti-competitive practices. In addition, my right hon. Friend the Minister announced on 30 March an independent review of dispensing of medicines by veterinary surgeons as part of the Government's Strategy for Agriculture. This review will examine current dispensing practices and their impact on the supply, availability and costs of veterinary medicines. An announcement of the membership of the Review Group and its terms of reference will be made shortly. The review will be completed by the end of March 2001.

European Regulations

Mr. Breed: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what discussions he has had with his European counterparts about ensuring uniform and simultaneous implementation of European regulations; and if he will make a statement. [131817]

Ms Quin [holding answer 21 July 2000]: I refer to my answer given to the hon. Member on 2 May 2000, Official Report, column 99W.

Abattoirs

Mr. Breed: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food which British regions currently have no abattoir licensed to slaughter cattle under the over-30-months scheme. [131912]

Ms Quin [holding answer 21 July 2000]: Tenders for over-30-months scheme abattoir services were considered and contracts awarded on a regional basis. The only region without its own abattoir is East Anglia, which was grouped with the South East of England as a single region in view of the small number of cattle coming forward for slaughter from these areas, as compared with the rest of Great Britain. I will be placing in the Library of the House a copy of a map locating the OTMS abattoirs.

Dairy Farmers

Mr. Breed: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what assessment he has made of the effects of a removal of the quota system on British dairy farmers. [131819]

Ms Quin [holding answer 21 July 2000]: In the run up to the Agenda 2000 CAP negotiations the Ministry commissioned The University of Manchester to carry out a study on the milk quota system. In its report 'An Economic Evaluation of the UK Milk Quota System' it concluded that despite the fact that conditions in the UK are well suited to milk production, the imposition of milk quotas is a source of economic inefficiency.

In addition to this, the UK, together with Italy, Sweden and Denmark, produced a paper that concluded that the abolition of the milk quota system would provide greater flexibility in the dairy market, encourage investment in the UK dairy industry and leave it free to compete for a share of the growing world markets.

Livestock Farmers

Mr. Gray: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what assistance the Government have given to Britain's livestock farmers in the last year. [127045]

Ms Quin [pursuant to her reply of 29 June 2000, c.609W]: The amount of money paid to Livestock farmers contained some inaccuracies and underestimated the support paid.

Since August 1999, the Government have announced two significant packages of assistance for the livestock sector delivering in total £419 million. Livestock farmers also receive around £1 billion each year in payments under the CAP to which this £149 million is an addition (CAP payments for beef producers are also set to rise this year by £130 million as a result of the reform of the beef regime). Beef and dairy farmers also benefit from the Over-thirty-months Scheme which itself costs around £400 million each year to run.

WALES

New Deal

Mr. Evans: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what the average length of time is for which participants in the New Deal in Wales are subsidised. [131036]

Mr. Paul Murphy [holding answer 24 July 2000]: To April 2000, the average period of subsidy was five months.

Mr. Evans: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what proportion of New Deal participants in Wales have become unemployed afterwards. [131039]

Mr. Paul Murphy [holding answer 17 July 2000]: To the end of April 2000, 32 per cent. of New Deal leavers in Wales have subsequently claimed Jobseeker's Allowance.

Mr. Evans: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales how many people in Wales who took part in the New Deal remained in their New Deal job for more than one year. [131051]

Mr. Paul Murphy [holding answer 17 July 2000]: The period of subsidised employment lasts a maximum of six months. Information on those who continue with the same employer on leaving the New Deal is not available.

Mr. Evans: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales how many people who participated in the New Deal in Wales had previously been unemployed for 12 months or more in (a) 1997, (b) 1998 and (c) 1999. [131038]

Mr. Paul Murphy [holding answer 24 July 2000]: This information could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

Mr. Evans: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what percentage of those leaving the New Deal for Young People in Wales for jobs lasting less than 13 weeks have found jobs lasting less than (a) one week, (b) two weeks, (c) four weeks and (d) eight weeks. [131052]

Mr. Paul Murphy [holding answer 17 July 2000]: This information is not available. Young people who do leave for a job lasting less than 13 weeks return to New Deal at the point at which they left, and are no longer classified as leavers.

Mr. Evans: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what estimate he has made of the number of people who have left the New Deal for Young People in Wales and returned to state benefits within 12 months. [131054]

Mr. Paul Murphy [holding answer 17 July 2000]: None. To April 2000, 2,940 young people transferred to state benefits on leaving the New Deal. Information on those who return to state benefits at a later stage is not available.

Parliamentary Questions

Mr. Stunell: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales how many written parliamentary questions were tabled to his Department between 19 October 1999 and 20 April; and how many have not received substantive answers citing disproportionate cost as the reason. [132131]

Mr. Paul Murphy: 186 written questions were tabled to my Department between 19 October 1999 and 20 April 2000. Of these, one parliamentary question did not receive a substantive answer and a further five questions were not answered fully for reasons of disproportionate cost.

Local Government

Mr. Evans: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what discussions he has had, with which bodies, in respect of the year 2000 Spending Review on local government; and if he will publish the minutes of meetings relating to this. [131767]

Mr. Paul Murphy: The Spending Review is internal to Government; there are no formal consultations with outside bodies. However, over the last year I have discussed the needs of local government in Wales with a number of organisations including the Welsh Local Government Association, and my hon. Friend the Under-Secretary has met with representatives of 20 of the 22 local authorities in Wales. These meetings have given me a sound understanding of the funding needs for local government ahead of the 2000 Spending Review. It is of course a matter for the National Assembly for Wales to decide how it spends the settlement it has received.

Council Tax

Mr. Evans: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will list the Band D Council Tax in each of the local authorities in Wales in each financial year since 1994. [131656]

Mr. Hanson: The information requested from 1994–95 to 1999–2000 is as follows.

The figures for 2000–01 are a matter for the National Assembly for Wales.

Cardiff County Council

Mr. Evans: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will list the assets transferred to Cardiff county council included within the Memorandum of Understanding between the Welsh Office and Cardiff county council on 1 April 1999 indicating what each related to and which minister was responsible for negotiating the transfer. [131670]

Mr. Paul Murphy: This is a matter for the National Assembly for Wales, since implementation of the Memorandum of Understanding took place after the transfer of functions to the Assembly.

Mr. Evans: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what plans there are to develop the land, to Ferry Road, included within the memorandum of understanding between his Department and Cardiff county council of 1 April 1999; what estimates were made of the cost of this land at the time of the transfer; and what is the estimated current cost of this land. [131660]

Mr. Paul Murphy: This is a matter for the National Assembly for Wales. The relevant functions transferred to the Assembly on 1 July 1999.

Nolan Rules

Mr. Stunell: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will list each group that is responsible to his Department, with significant and plural membership from outside the Civil Service, and to which the Nolan rules on non-departmental public bodies do not apply and for each such group, if it (a) is a company limited by guarantee, (b) is a charity, (c) has no formal legal basis, and (d) has some other legal basis giving details. [131239]

Mr. Paul Murphy: There are no such groups responsible to my Department.

Working Families Tax Credit

Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what discussions he has had with the First Secretary about the implementation of working families tax credit; and if he will make a statement. [132378]

Mr. Hanson: My right hon. Friend and I have regular discussions with the First Secretary about a range of UK Government policies including the Working Families Tax Credit (WFTC).

Progress with the implementation of WFTC has been very encouraging. At the end of April, it is estimated that 62,000 families in Wales were receiving WFTC—12,000 more than were receiving Family Credit at its peak.

Investment

Mr. Evans: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will make a statement on the level of investment in Wales in each year since 1994. [131662]

Mr. Paul Murphy: Government expenditure which can be identified as having been incurred for the benefit of Wales since 1994 is as follows:

Year	£ million
1994–95	12,756
1995–96	13,329
1996–97	13,803
1997–98	13,988
1998–99	14,398

This includes expenditure by the Welsh Office as well as expenditure for the benefit of Wales by Whitehall departments. Figures for the total identifiable expenditure in Wales for 1999–2000 and for the current year have not yet been complied by the Treasury.

TREASURY

Taxation

Mr. Matthew Taylor: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer, pursuant to the answer of 22 February 2000, Official Report, column 998W, to the hon. Member for Northavon (Mr. Webb), if he will recalculate the figures using data from the 1998–99 Family Expenditure Survey. [129806]

Miss Melanie Johnson: The information requested falls within the responsibility of the National Statistician. I have asked him to reply.

Letter from Len Cook to Mr. Matthew Taylor, dated 24 July 2000:

As National Statistician, I have been asked to reply to your recent question asking, pursuant to our answer of 22 February 2000, for corresponding estimates for 1998–99 of the percentage of the income of each quintile group of the population using data from the Family Expenditure Survey.

The information requested is set out in the table attached. The analyses in the article are based on data from the Family Expenditure Survey and are therefore subject to a margin of error due to sampling variation. The changes in the figures from 1997–98 are too small to draw conclusions about changes in the tax burden over this two year period. These figures are derived from Table 2A in Appendix 1 of the article 'The effects of taxes and benefits on household income, 1998–99' published in the April 2000 edition of Economic Trends.

Ministerial Directions

Mr. Matthew Taylor: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many times in each year since 1994 his Department has been notified of a ministerial direction as provided for in the procedures set out in paragraphs 12 to 15 of the Treasury document, entitled "The Responsibilities of an Accounting Officer"; and if he will make a statement. [130312]

Mr. Andrew Smith [holding answer 13 July 2000]: The Treasury has been notified of the following number of directions, under the procedures set out in paragraphs 12 to 15 of the Treasury document entitled "The Responsibilities of an Accounting Officer".

Jobs (Shrewsbury and Atcham)

Mr. Paul Marsden: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer (1) what estimate he has made of the number of new jobs which will be created in Shrewsbury and Atcham in 2000–01; [131140]

(2) how many new jobs have been created in Shrewsbury and Atcham in each year since 1997. [131141]

Miss Melanie Johnson: The information requested falls within the responsibility of the National Statistician. I have asked him to reply.

Letter from John Pullinger to Mr. Paul Marsden, dated 24 July 2000:

The National Statistician has been asked to reply to your recent questions about jobs created in Shrewsbury and Atcham since 1997, and future projections for 2000–01 (131140/1). I am replying in the absence of the National Statistician.

The Annual Employment Survey (AES) gives an estimate of the number of employee jobs in September of each year. Between September 1997 and September 1998 (the latest year for which figures are available), the AES shows that the number of employee jobs in Shrewsbury & Atcham increased from 39,000 to 41,000. Forecasts for future years are not made.

Heavily Indebted Poor Countries

Mr. Blizzard: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer (1) how much debt owed by poor countries has been cancelled by the United Kingdom since May 1997; [130813]

(2) how much debt has been cancelled to date under the HIPC initiative. [130812]

Miss Melanie Johnson: The total amount of debt relief agreed to date under the HIPC Initiative is in excess of $16 billion. Since May 1997, the UK has provided in the region of £250 million of debt relief to the heavily indebted poor countries. With the additional 11 countries expected to qualify under the HIPC initiative by the end of the year, the UK will have provided approximately £660 million in debt forgiveness. This is in addition to the £400 million of relief provided prior to May 1997 in the context of multilateral rescheduling agreements.

Pensions

Mr. Cousins: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what plans he has to change the tax rules on compulsory annuitisation of money purchase pensions. [130824]

Miss Melanie Johnson [holding answer 17 July 2000]: I refer my hon. Friend to the answer I gave to the hon. Member for Northavon (Mr. Webb) on 29 November 1999, Official Report, column 78W.

Aggregates Tax

Mr. Blizzard: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer (1) what assessment he has made of the effect on employment in rural areas of the introduction of the proposed aggregates tax; [131609]

(2) what assessment he has made of the effect on employment in the aggregates and construction industry of the proposed aggregates tax; [131610]

(3) how the proposed aggregates tax will differentiate between quarrying operations with good and bad environmental performance; [131613]

(4) what assessment he has made of the benefits of linking the taxation of aggregates to environmental performance of quarrying operators; [131611]

(5) if he will exempt some quarrying operations from the proposed aggregates tax on the basis of defined environmental targets. [131612]

Mr. Timms: The aggregates levy is based on independent research which verified that there are significant environmental costs associated with quarrying, including noise, dust, visual intrusion, loss of amenity and damage to biodiversity. The Government decided to address these costs through the introduction of the aggregates levy. It will be introduced at a uniform rate in order to keep it simple and to give a clear signal to purchasers of primary aggregates to use more sustainable materials. It will reward quarry operators who invest in equipment for recycling, and ensure that all users of aggregates are taking responsibility for the costs that the production of their inputs imposes on the rest of society. This is consistent with the polluter pays principle.

There would be a number of practical difficulties with a levy which attempted to differentiate between quarries with different environmental performance. These relate to assessing compliance, defining environmental performance, the treatment of imports, EU state aids rules and UK competition policy. A uniform levy was therefore considered to be the most viable option.

All the revenues raised from the levy will be recycled back to business through a cut in employer National Insurance Contributions (NICs) and a new 'Sustainability Fund' aimed at delivering local environmental benefits. It is not possible to say precisely what the effect of the levy, the cut in employer NICs and the Sustainability Fund will be on the aggregates and construction industries, since this will depend, among other things, on future employment trends and the degree to which firms switch to recycled materials.

Pleasure Yachts

Mr. Denzil Davies: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many owners of pleasure yachts have been prosecuted in the last 12 months for which figures are available for the unlawful use of rebated heavy oil. [131608]

Mr. Timms: Private pleasure craft (including yachts) are not road going vehicles and as such qualify to use rebated heavy oil as motor fuel.

Burning oil which is fully rebated is not allowed for use as motor fuel. I am not aware of any prosecutions of pleasure yacht owners for such misuse in the past 12 months.

Fuel and Tobacco Smuggling (Northern Ireland)

Mr. Beggs: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many seizures there have been of smuggled fuel and tobacco products in Northern Ireland in the last 12 months; and if he will make a statement. [129861]

Dawn Primarolo [holding answer 19 July 2000]: I refer the hon. Gentleman to the answer given to the hon. Member for East Londonderry (Mr. Ross) on 5 July 2000, Official Report, column 201W.

18,585,438 cigarettes have been seized.

Household Incomes

Mr. Berry: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer (1) what the average annual net disposable income was, at 2000 prices, calculated on the basis of Table 8.2 in the annual reports of the Family Expenditure Survey, in the lowest and highest quintiles in each year from 1990 to 1999, only for households with children in those quintiles; and how many and what proportion of the population households in each quintile represented; [131960]

(2) what the average annual (a) net disposable and (b) gross income was of the lowest and highest quintiles in each of the years from 1990 to 1999, calculated on the basis of Table 8.2 in the annual report of the Family Expenditure Survey, but for Great Britain only, and showing, for the two quintiles, the percentage gain or loss over the preceding year. [131959]

Miss Melanie Johnson: The information requested falls within the responsibility of the National Statistician. I have asked him to reply.

Letter from John Pullinger to Mr. Roger Berry, dated 24 July 2000:

The National Statistician has been asked to reply to your recent questions concerning net disposable and gross income. The first question concerned average annual net disposable and gross income for 1990 to 1999 for Britain only in the highest and lowest quintile groups on the basis of Table 8.2 in the annual report of the Family Expenditure Survey (131959). The second question concerned annual net disposable income over the same period at 2000 prices in respect of households with children, for the same quintiles (131960).

In answer to your first question the information readily available relates to the United Kingdom, from Table 8.3 in the ONS annual publication "Family Spending 1998–99" and equivalent tables in the reports for earlier years. They are shown in the attached table at figure 1.

The United Kingdom is England, Wales, Scotland and Northern Ireland, while Great Britain does not include Northern Ireland. The equivalent information for Great Britain for the complete run of years could be obtained only at disproportionate cost. However the figures for Great Britain for 1998–99 are very close to those for the UK. They are shown in the attached table at figure 2.

Like all estimates from sample surveys, the figures in this answer are subject to sampling variability. For the lowest quintile this is generally about plus or minus 1.6% and for the highest quintile about plus or minus 3.5%. Estimates of percentage change from one year to another are subject to higher sampling error: plus or minus 2 percentage points for the lowest quintile and plus or minus 5 percentage points for the highest. For the highest quintile, for example, an estimated change of 7% indicates that the true change is unlikely to be outside the range 2% to 12%. The sampling variability quoted is in the 90% confidence interval.

In answer to your second question the information requested requires a special computing run for each year and could be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

Tax Credits (Northampton)

Ms Keeble: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many families in Northampton North have received the Working Families Tax Credit. [131941]

Dawn Primarolo: The number of families in receipt of Working Families Tax Credit at the end of May 2000 is provisionally estimated at 1,056,000. Available figures by constituency are given in tables which have been deposited in the Library.

Ms Keeble: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many families in Northampton North have received the Children's Tax Credit. [131942]

Dawn Primarolo: The Children's Tax Credit will be announced from 6 April 2001. I am afraid an estimate of the number of families in Northampton, North who could benefit from it is not available, but an estimated 400,000 families in the East Midlands could do so.

Public Sector

Mr. Matthew Taylor: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer, pursuant to his answer of 17 July 2000, Official Report, column 98W, when he will next publish estimates of (a) public net worth and (b) public gross worth; and if he will make a statement. [131950]

Mr. Andrew Smith: Updated forecasts of public sector net worth will be published in the Pre-Budget Report in the autumn.

Alcohol-related Crime

Mr. Ben Chapman: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what plans he has to increase the taxes on high percentage volume beers, lagers and ciders as a means of reducing alcohol-related crime. [131898]

Dawn Primarolo: Any change to the level of UK alcohol duties is a matter for the Chancellor's Budget deliberations.

Self-employment

Mr. Matthew Taylor: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what assessment he has made of the reasons for the fall in self-employment since 1997; and if he will make a statement. [131966]

Miss Melanie Johnson: It seems likely that the strong expansion in employee job opportunities since 1997 has encouraged some of the self-employed to switch to employee jobs. Total employment has increased by over one million since the General Election in 1997.

Drake Insurance Plc

Mr. Sheerman: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what steps he is taking to protect consumers who insured their motor vehicles with Drake Insurance plc and who have now had their policies cancelled. [132087]

Miss Melanie Johnson: The courts have sanctioned the appointment of a provisional liquidator to manage the affairs of Drake Insurance plc. There is also statutory provision for the protection of certain policyholders under the Policyholders Protection Act 1975.

The provisional liquidator and the Policyholders Protection Board, together with some commercial interests, are working to secure the best outcome for policyholders.

Consultation

Mr. Rogers: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what criteria he uses to determine whether a trade body is representative of an industry and should be consulted in the formulation of a policy decision. [132260]

Miss Melanie Johnson: The Cabinet Office Consultation Code of Practice says that consultation documents should be made widely available and effectively drawn to the attention of all interested groups.

Electronic Service Delivery

Mr. Matthew Taylor: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how capability for electronic service delivery is defined in his document entitled "Prudent for a Purpose". [132268]

Mr. Andrew Smith: Substantial new investment is being provided to ensure that all Government services are on-line by 2005. The definition of capability for electronic service delivery, and the arrangements for monitoring the number of services that are enabled for electronic transactions, are set out in the periodic reports published on the Central Information Technology Unit's website (http://www.citu.gov.uk).

EU Structural Funds

Mr. Andrew George: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what recent arrangements he has made to ensure that Government match funds are efficiently delivered through each Government Department, in the UK's four EU Objective 1 regions. [132052]

Mr. Andrew Smith: Resources for public sector match funding for Objective 1 projects have been provided for within Departments' total spending review settlements. The new PSA targets in Spending Review 2000 set tough targets on improving value for money and efficiency across the public sector.

Mr. Andrew George: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what recent assessment he has made of the public funds available to (a) the DTI, (b) the DETR, (c) MAFF, (d) DCMS, (e) DfEE and (f) the Welsh Assembly to match the funds available to the UK's four EU Objective One regions. [132053]

Mr. Andrew Smith: It remains the responsibility of grant applicants to secure match funding from a wide range of Government programmes. The identity of match funding sources will depend on the nature of the projects brought forward under the Objective 1 programmes.

Parliamentary Questions

Mr. Stunell: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many of the written parliamentary questions tabled to his Department between 19 October 1999 and 20 April have not received substantive answers, excluding those not answered (a) citing disproportionate costs, (b) stating that the information is not available, not held centrally, or not held in the form requested or (c) citing commercial or other confidentiality. [132129]

Mr. Timms: Very few Parliamentary questions will not have been answered substantively, either in their entirety or in part, for reasons other than those specified in the hon. Member's question. But determining exactly how many would entail scrutinising individually the answers to the 1,676 questions tabled in the period concerned. This is an undertaking which could be completed only at disproportionate cost.

Mr. Maclennan: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many written parliamentary questions tabled to his Department between 19 October 1999 and 20 April have not received substantive answers, citing as the reason (a) commercial and (b) other confidentiality. [128015]

Mr. Timms [pursuant to his replies, 26 June 2000, c. 428, and 29 June 2000, c. 591]: The number of questions tabled between 19 October and 20 April 2000 was 1,676 and not 1,479, a figure which relates to the 1999–2000 session up to 20 April.

Departmental Vehicles

Mr. Pearson: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will list for his Department and its agencies the approved list of manufacturers of (a) cars and (b) commercial vehicles; and if he will make a statement on his Department's leasing and purchasing policy. [128982]

Miss Melanie Johnson: The Treasury does not use any cars or commercial vehicles, other than those provided under contract with the Government Car and Despatch Agency. Information about the cars provided was contained in the answer given by my right hon. Friend the Minister of State, Cabinet Office on 19 July 2000, Official Report, column 191W.

European Single Currency

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what assessment he has made of the extent to which the euroland economies have merged in accordance with the economic criteria set out in the five tests for UK membership; and if he will make a statement. [130787]

Miss Melanie Johnson: The five economic tests set out by the Chancellor are to judge the economic case for UK membership of the single currency only.

National Savings

Mrs. Lawrence: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what the outcome is of the Treasury's five-yearly review of National Savings. [132685]

Miss Melanie Johnson: Government's quinquennial review of National Savings was announced on 11 January. The review took a fundamental look at the strategic purpose of the functions carried out by the agency in the light of developing circumstances and Government policy. It then considered what organisational structure might best deliver the Government's policy objectives. In doing so, it looked at all the options on their merits, with the aim of identifying whether National Savings remains the most suitable way of delivering policy.

The review recognised the importance of recent innovations in National Savings to making the agency more efficient and more flexible. This includes the role played by outsourcing its operations. It is now better placed than ever to build on this achievement to modernise and adapt to the changing market in which it operates. It now has the potential to match the best in the financial services market, providing choice and good value products for savers and investors in the very competitive savings market.

The review sees these developments as central to National Savings continuing to make a valuable contribution to the cost-effectiveness of the national debt by offering attractive products and services to members of the public. It will set a clear and overarching objective to achieve cost-effective Government debt management. National Savings, which will remain a Government agency, funds a significant amount—over £62 billion—of the national debt. Taxpayers will continue to see the benefit of National Savings' contribution, which is more cost-effective than comparable gilt-edged securities.

This is also good news for existing National Savings savers and for future customers. National Savings will be working to give its current and new customers more attractive, more up to date products and services. People will also get more choice on how they access those products. In addition to being able to get National Savings products through the Post Office and by post as they do now, customers will in future be able to choose from a wide range of channels.

In taking forward the review's recommendations, National Savings will continue to modernise its activities to make and keep it relevant, efficient and cost-effective. This will involve focusing on developing those aspects of the business that can operate competitively and cost-effectively, and continuing to develop new products as well as embracing innovations and new ideas.

The outcome of the review will be taken forward in a new business strategy, and reflected in the framework document which governs the relationship between the Agency, the Treasury and Ministers.

SOCIAL SECURITY

Next Steps Agencies

Mr. Goggins: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security when he will publish the 1999–2000 annual reports and accounts for each of his Next Steps agencies. [133026]

Mr. Darling: The 1999–2000 annual reports and accounts for the Benefits Agency (HC 640), Child Support Agency (HC 658), Information Technology Services Agency (HC 680) and War Pensions Agency (HC 615) have been laid before Parliament today.

Fraud

Mr. Willetts: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if the anti-fraud targets announced in the Comprehensive Spending Review are (a) in addition to or (b) instead of, the existing Benefits Agency Security Control Programme. [132400]

Mr. Rooker: The Benefits Agency Security Control Programme ceased in April 1999.

Mr. Willetts: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how he plans to measure the success of the anti-fraud measures announced in the Comprehensive Spending Review. [132398]

Mr. Rooker: We are now measuring the level of fraud and error by means of a monthly rolling programme of reviews in each Benefits Agency area. A regular, random sample of cases is investigated thoroughly to establish how much fraud and error they contain.

Public Service Agreements

Mr. Willetts: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security when he will publish his new public service agreements. [132395]

Mr. Rooker: Shortly.

Departmental Staff

Mr. Burstow: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how many unfilled vacancies for permanent staff his Department has; what percentage of staff positions in his Department are vacant; what the monthly cost would be to his Department of employing civil servants in these positions; how many and what percentage of staff his Department employs on a temporary basis through employment agencies; how much his Department paid employment agencies to supply temporary staff in each of the last 12 months; and how much he expects to pay employment agencies to supply temporary staff in each of the next 12 months. [131427]

Mr. Rooker: The information is in the tables.

Vacancies

	Number
Number of unfilled vacancies	1,187
Percentage of total staff	1.39
Monthly cost of employing civil servants in these positions	1,370,070.00

The numbers of staff the Department employs on a temporary basis through Employment Agencies can vary from day to day. For example, during May 2000, the equivalent of 22 staff were employed, which represents 0.03 per cent. of the Department's staff.

Total payments made to employment agencies for temporary staff for each of the last twelve months

Month	Total payments to employment agencies
July 1999	39,481.90
August 1999	22,238.50
September 1999	15,480.35
October 1999	42,162.88
November 1999	34,874.99
December 1999	24,012.67
January 2000	14,412.46
February 2000	24,863.32
March 2000	21,950.25
April 2000	28,498.11
May 2000	26,279.97
June 2000	25,333.14

It is not possible to predict with any certainty what payments will be made to Employment Agencies for each of the next twelve months. It is expected that the amounts and numbers of staff involved will be similar to those detailed above.

Single Currency

Mr. Willetts: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how much his Department is planning to spend on preparing for the euro in the period to March 2004, broken down between years. [132396]

Angela Eagle: The Second Outline National Changeover Plan said that this Department will expect to spend up to £5 million on euro preparation in this financial year.

Household Income Statistics

Mr. Webb: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will assess which statistics from the Households Below Average Income series could robustly be produced on a quarterly basis. [132097]

Mr. Bayley: The Department's statisticians have not made a detailed assessment of whether any Households Below Average Income (HBAI) statistics could be robustly produced on a quarterly basis. However, past experience raises doubts as to whether any robust results could be produced on a quarterly basis.

Child Poverty

Mr. Paul Marsden: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how many children in Shrewsbury and Atcham he estimates will be taken out of poverty by the end of the present year. [131138]

Mr. Bayley: It is not possible to make estimates at a local level of the numbers of children who will be taken out of poverty. However, children in Shrewsbury and Atcham will benefit from the range of measures we have announced which will lift 1.2 million children out of poverty by the end of this Parliament.

SOLICITOR-GENERAL

Extradition

Mr. Chope: To ask the Solicitor-General how many court days have been occupied in hearing extradition cases in 2000. [130603]

The Solicitor-General: No records are kept of how many court days are occupied in hearing extradition cases, although applications for judicial review in such cases have occupied the Queen's Bench Division of the High Court for 13 whole or part days this year.

HEALTH

Flour (Folic Acid)

Mrs. Brinton: To ask the Secretary of State for Health when she plans to issue the consultation document on the implementation of the COMA recommendations on the addition of folic acid to flour. [132646]

Yvette Cooper: The United Kingdom Health Departments and the Food Standards Agency have today published a joint public consultation document on the report from the Committee on Medical Aspects of Food and Nutrition Policy which concluded that all flour should be fortified with folic acid to prevent neural tube defects. The consultation period runs until 31 October 2000. The document is available in the Library and on the internet at www.doh.gov.uk/folicacid.

Meat Hygiene Service

Mr. Drew: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what performance targets have been set for the Meat Hygiene Service in 2000–01. [133030]

Ms Stuart: Following consultation with interested organisations, the board of the Food Standards Agency (FSA) approved at its meeting on 20 July the following performance targets for the Meat Hygiene Service (MHS) for 2000–01:

1. Public Health Protection

(a) Reduction of microbiological hazards in meat:

Fully apply MHS Clean Livestock Policy.

Not to apply the health mark stamp to any meat showing visible faecal or alimentary tract contents contamination.

(b) Removal of Specified Risk Material (SRM) from the human and animal food chain:

Strictly enforce SRM controls in abattoirs.

2. Animal Welfare

To implement those recommendations in the external efficiency review accepted, and within the timetable laid down, by the FSA Board.

6. Financial Performance

To operate within the cash allocations as agreed with the FSA.

To recover from government departments, agencies and the Intervention Board Executive Agency (IBEA) the full economic costs (calculated in accordance with the relevant charging legislation and accruals accounting) of providing agreed services or other work undertaken on their behalf.

A copy of the consultation package, summary of responses and details of the assessment of these targets have been placed in the Library. They are also available on the FSA website at www.foodstandards.gov.uk.

Departmental Staff

Mr. Burstow: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many unfilled vacancies for permanent staff his Department has; what percentage of staff positions in his Department are vacant; what the monthly cost would be to his Department of employing civil servants in these positions; how many and what percentage of staff his Department employs on a temporary basis through employment agencies; how much his Department paid employment agencies to supply temporary staff in each of the last 12 months; and how much he expects to pay employment agencies to supply temporary staff in each of the next 12 months. [131433]

Ms Stuart: Responsibility for staffing and recruitment issues has been substantially delegated to individual business units. As a result, the information requested is not held centrally. To collect it would incur disproportionate costs.

Clinical Errors

Mr. Jim Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what plans he has to introduce an early warning system for clinical errors. [131505]

Ms Stuart: "An Organisation with a Memory", the report of an expert group chaired by the Chief Medical Officer, was published on 13 June 2000. The group examined the extent to which the National Health Service and its constituent organisations had the capability to learn from untoward incidents and service failures so that similar occurrences are avoided in future. The report's main recommendation is the introduction of a mandatory reporting system for adverse health care events and specified near misses. We are taking steps to implement such a system and expect to have made significant progress before the end of the year.

National Plan

Mr. Jim Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what progress he is making on the National Plan for Health; and if he will make a statement. [131503]

Mr. Denham: Over 220,000 members of the public and staff and around 100 national and local organisations responded to our consultation exercise. Their comments and ideas have now been analysed, together with the detailed work of the modernisation action teams and the more in-depth public involvement strategy. All this has culminated in the National Health Service National Plan which will be presented to the House later this week.

Operations

Mr. Jim Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many hernia operations were carried out by the NHS last year (a) in Coventry, South, (b) in the West Midlands and (c) nationally. [131506]

Mr. Denham: The number of hernia operations carried out by the National Health Service in Coventry Health Authority, the West Midlands and England during the financial year 1998–99 are shown in the table.

Notes:

1. The figures do not represent the number of patients, as one person may have several operations within the year.
2. Finished Consultant Episodes (FCEs) where OPCS4R operation codes T19 to T27 appeared as the main operation.
3. For 1998–99, no adjustments have as yet been made for shortfalls in the data.

Mr. Jim Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many (a) hip replacement and (b) cataract operations were carried out by the NHS last year (i) in Coventry South, (ii) in the West Midlands and (c) nationally. [131538]

Mr. Denham: The information requested is given in the table.

Hip replacements and cataract operations. NHS hospitals England, 1998–99

Operation	Coventry[1]	West Midlands	England
Primary total hip replacements[2]	275	4,704	37,189

[4] Count of FCEs where OPCS4R codes C71, C72, C74 or C75 occurred in any of the four (main and three secondary) operation codes.

Notes:

1. The figures do not represent the number of patients, as one person may have several operations within the year.
2. For 1998–99, no adjustments have as yet been made for shortfalls in the data.
3. These figures were provided by Hospital Episode Statistics (HES), Department of Health.

Health Provision Variations

Mr. Jim Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what steps he is taking to reduce variation in health provision between the poorest and the best-off areas across the UK. [131504]

Yvette Cooper: We are setting standards through the National Institute for Clinical Excellence and the national service frameworks. We are ensuring local delivery through clinical governance and monitoring delivery through the performance assessment framework and the Commission for Health Improvement. On 14 July we published a second set of performance indicators which will enable the local health service to identify where their performance falls below that of the best and we expect measures to be taken to improve poorly performing services. We are working with relevant parties, utilising the record increases in National Health Service funding to improve NHS performance and tackle health inequalities.

GM Food

Joan Ruddock: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what the nature is of the feeding trials in which animals are being fed GM herbicide-tolerant forage maize treated with glufosinate ammonium. [132649]

Ms Stuart: The Food Standards Agency knows of no current feeding trials, but is aware that the developers of the crop variety intend to use the maize in an animal feeding study in the future. The company has undertaken to seek our agreement to the protocol for such work.

Neonatal Hearing Screening

Mrs. Spelman: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) how much his Department has invested in neonatal hearing screening for each of the last five years; [131332]

(2) how much his Department plans to spend on (a) the launch and (b) the national roll-out of the neonatal hearing screening pilot project in each of the next three years; [131333]

(3) what cost benefit analysis his Department has carried out of introducing universal neonatal hearing screening; [131334]

(4) what studies his Department has carried out into the benefits of neonatal hearing screening; [131335]

(5) what his Department's timetable is for the national roll-out of the neonatal hearing screening pilot project; when an announcement about a timetable will be made; and what factors will inform the timing of an announcement of the timetable; [131336]

(6) if he will review the findings of the Colorado research project on neonatal hearing screening; [131337]

(7) what consultations his Department has had with disability organisations of and for deaf and hard of hearing people about the launch of the neonatal hearing screening pilot project; [131338]

(8) when his Department will establish an advisory group to advise on the launch and national roll-out of its pilot project for neonatal hearing screening; and when it will announce the composition of the group; [131339]

(9) by what process his Department will establish (a) the criteria, (b) the selection procedure and (c) the timetable for the establishment of the 20 neonatal hearing screening pilot sites; [131340]

(10) what discussions his Department has had with the Department for Education and Employment about developing the provision of language and education support for children from zero to two years in preparation for (a) the launch and (b) the national roll-out of its pilot project for neonatal hearing screening; [131341]

(11) what discussions his Department (a) has had and (b) plans to have with (i) health authorities and NHS trusts, (ii) paediatric audiologists, (iii) ENT consultants, (iv) speech and language therapists and (v) cochlear implant centres about (A) the launch and (B) the national roll-out of the neonatal hearing screening pilot project. [131342]

Yvette Cooper: Investment in neonatal hearing screening over the last five years is estimated to be in the region of £18 million per annum: that is £3 million per annum on targeted neonatal hearing screening and £15 million per annum on health visitors performing the infant distraction test.

The United Kingdom National Screening Committee (NSC) has recommended that a universal neonatal hearing screening (UNHS) programme should replace the infant distraction test to screen for hearing impairment. This was based on a report by the health technology assessment programme 'A critical review of the role of neonatal screening in the detection of congenital hearing impairment'.

An expert group, which included representatives of professional groups, National Health Service bodies, voluntary organisations, Government Departments and other interested bodies, was convened by the NSC and undertook further detailed work on the benefits, cost-benefits and feasibility and service issues of developing a UNHS programme. The committee took existing and emerging research findings into account in making its recommendations.

We have recently agreed to conduct a pilot programme to evaluate the optimum way in which this change in service delivery might be achieved. The pilot programme will run for 12 months at a cost of £750,000. The pilot will help us gain a better understanding of the operational implications of running a national programme, including its potential cost.

Project and steering groups will be established shortly to oversee the development of the pilot programme. Key professional, voluntary, NHS and policy stakeholders will be appropriately involved. The Department will be writing to the NHS about participating in the pilot project and the timescales later in the autumn.

Correspondence

Mr. Winnick: To ask the Secretary of State for Health when the hon. Member for Walsall, North will receive a reply to his letter of 23 May concerning lock purchasing. [132447]

Mr. Hutton: The letter of 23 May was a copy of a letter dated 17 April, to which I replied to my hon. Friend on 22 May.

Back Book

Mr. Burstow: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will make it his policy to provide the Back Book free of charge to patients; [128485]

(2) how many copies of the Back Book have been sold in each year since its publication. [128486]

Mr. Denham [holding answer 3 July 2000]: The Back Book was published by The Stationery Office in 1996. I understand that, to date, 115,157 packs of 10 copies have been sold. We do not have information on how that figure breaks down year by year.

We have no plans to provide the Back Book free of charge to patients.

Departmental Inquiries

Mr. Harvey: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will list the inquiries his Department has established in each of last two years, indicating for each the form the inquiry was to take, and an estimate of the number of patients it covered. [129022]

Ms Stuart: The inquiries commissioned by the Department in the last two years are as follows. It is not possible to provide a meaningful estimate of the number of patients affected by the matters under inquiry. In most cases that is for the inquiry to establish.

The BSE Inquiry

Established in December 1997 to review the history of BSE (Bovine Spongiform Encephalopathy) and new variant CJD (Creutzfeldt-Jakob disease) and the action taken in response to it. Independent chair. Hearings held in public.

NHS Trusts

Mr. Alan Keen: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what financial assistance he gives to NHS trusts that are undertaking reconfiguration of patient services, approved by him, towards the cost of (a) redundancy and retirement and (b) capital building costs. [130167]

Mr. Denham: A central special assistance fund has existed since 1996–97. It provides financial assistance to some health authorities to facilitate strategic change, such as reconfiguring patient services at NHS trusts. Special assistance helps fund some of the short-term non-recurrent costs of change, for example double running or redundancy costs. Within London, the London Fund also provides non-recurrent transitional funding to support strategic changes.

Capital funding is approved on the basis of information contained in a business case which is considered by regional offices. Access to funding is dependent on competing investment priorities in the region.

St. George's Hospital, Tooting

Mr. Cox: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what recent assessment he has made of the services provided by St. George's Hospital, Tooting, London. [130524]

Mr. Denham: All National Health Service trusts are subject to a formal annual assessment of their progress and future plans by the relevant regional office of the NHS Executive, and this assessment process was carried out with St. George's Healthcare NHS Trust earlier this year by London Regional Office.

NHS Trust Directorships

Mr. Rowe: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if it remains his policy to ban the spouses of hon. Members from non-executive directorships in National Health Service trusts. [130534]

Ms Stuart: The Department is currently considering the preparation of new guidance on conflict of interest issues for National Health Service boards and other public bodies for which we are responsible. The issue of appointing the spouses of hon. Members to National Health Service boards will be re-considered as part of this process.

Fertility Treatment

Mr. Paul Marsden: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will list, for each health authority, the number of patients on a waiting list for infertility treatment; and if he will make a statement. [130820]

Mr. Denham: Waiting list information is not collected centrally for specific procedures.

Royal Shrewsbury Hospital

Mr. Paul Marsden: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will make a statement about refurbishment of the accident and emergency unit at the Royal Shrewsbury Hospital. [131139]

Ms Stuart: Royal Shrewsbury Hospital was allocated £600,000 from the accident and emergency modernisation fund to develop a scheme to improve facilities in the casualty department. Work is due for completion by 31 March 2001 with specific aims to improve security for staff, access for the disabled, facilities for paediatric assessment and environmental conditions.

Mr. Paul Marsden: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what proposals he has received from the Royal Shrewsbury Hospital for a new medical assessment unit to be funded from the A&E Modernisation Fund; and if he will make a statement. [131702]

Ms Stuart: Royal Shrewsbury Hospitals National Health Service Trust was allocated £600,000 in the first tranche of accident and emergency modernisation moneys in June 1999. The approved proposals included the development of an assessment unit, decontamination facilities and improved security. Further bids have been invited in June of this year to be funded from an additional £35 million made available nationally, and the trust have applied for funding totalling £2.2 million for an emergency assessment unit, which incorporates a medical assessment unit

NHS Executive regional offices are in the process of assessing the applications received. As yet, no decisions have been made nationally on the allocation of this latest tranche of accident and emergency modernisation moneys.

Fluoridation

Mr. Baker: To ask the Secretary of State for Health pursuant to his answer of 7 July 2000, Official Report, columns 334–35W, regarding fluoridation, what bodies other than the National Health Service Centre for Reviews and Dissemination at the University of York were invited to apply for the commission to report into the safety and efficacy of fluoride in drinking water. [131360]

Ms Stuart [holding answer 20 July 2000]: No other bodies were invited to tender for the systematic review on fluoridation. The National Health Service Centre for Reviews and Dissemination was itself established by competitive tender to provide the Department with an expert facility for systematic research reviews.

Mr. Baker: To ask the Secretary of State for Health, pursuant to his answer of 7 July 2000, Official Report, column 335W, regarding fluoridation, what conditions apply to the moneys given by his Department to the British Fluoridation Society. [131331]

Yvette Cooper [holding answer 20 July 2000]: Since 1975 successive Governments have funded the British Fluoridation Society to help promote and implement their policies on oral health by providing evidence based advice to all interested parties. The Society is required to maintain accounts which show the use to which funds have been put for inspection by the Department's auditors.

Speech and Language Therapists

Mr. Gordon Marsden: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what recent representations his Department has received regarding the pay scales of speech and language therapists relative to other professional groups in the NHS. [131738]

Mr. Denham: Following extensive negotiations with staff side representatives, on 19 May a revised grading structure for speech and language therapists was introduced extending the existing pay spine to match that of clinical psychologists. Since then no representations have been received.

Grant Aid

Mr. Bob Russell: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will (a) list the successful applicants for grant aid under section 64 of the Health Services and Public Health Act 1968 for the last year for which figures are available, (b) the value of each grant and (c) what the grant was for. [131732]

Mr. Hutton: The information requested has been placed in the Library.

Mr. Bob Russell: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many applications for grant aid under section 64 of the Health Services and Public Health Act 1968 were (a) submitted and (b) approved in each of the last five years for which figures are available; what the total value of such grants was in each year; and if he will make a statement. [131733]

Mr. Hutton: The information requested is contained in the table.

Section 64 General Scheme applications submitted and approved in the last five years

Financial year (1)	Number of new applications received (2)	Number of new applications approved (3)	Value of new grants approved (£) (4)	Value of continuing grants approved from previous years (£) (5)	Annual total value of approved grants (£) (6)
1996–97	629	Figure not available	Figure not available	Figure not available	21,000,000
1997–98	627	268	9,034,144	12,405,068	21,439,212
1998–99	784	280	10,065,828	10,545,871	20,611,699
1999–2000	717	284	11,834,839	10,536,731	22,371,570
2000–01	671	216	8,388,848	14,204,905	22,593,753

A new database was set up in 1996. Figures for columns (3)-(5) for that year are not available because the database was still being tested.

The amounts approved were not necessarily the amounts paid as some grants, especially project grants, may have started late and payments were therefore made pro-rata.

Private Finance Initiatives

Mr. Matthew Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Health, pursuant to his answer of 13 July 2000, Official Report, column 684W, what the values of the public sector comparator and PFI alternatives are in (a) pre-risk and (b) risk-adjusted terms at full business case and financial close stage for the (i) Rochdale, (ii) Royal Berkshire, (iii) Central Sheffield and (iv) Guys and St. Thomas's hospital projects. [131614]

Mr. Denham [holding answer 20 July 2000]: Private finance initiative was considered in all four schemes, and in each case did not produce a suitable solution. For the schemes at Rochdale and Central Sheffield PFI was identified as unsuitable early in the procurement process and not pursued further. Comparative figures are therefore unavailable. The figures for the schemes at Royal Berkshire and Guys and St. Thomas's are shown in the tables.

SCOPE

Mrs. Curtis-Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will establish an inquiry into the role of SCOPE under section 81 of the Children Act 1989. [131969]

Mr. Hutton: I have no plans to establish an inquiry into the role of SCOPE under section 81 of the Children Act. I understand that allegations concerning a school run by SCOPE near Leeds were thoroughly investigated by the police and child protection services in 1995. They concluded that there was not sufficient evidence for criminal prosecution. The Department for Education and Employment subsequently considered the allegations and, as a result one former care worker was barred from working in relevant employment and placed on List 99.

The school closed in 1998.

Waiting Lists

Mr. Tyrie: To ask the Secretary of State for Health, pursuant to his answer of 17 July 2000 to the right hon. Member for South-West Surrey (Mrs. Bottomley), Official Report, columns 69–70W, concerning the numbers of patients waiting over 12 months for elective admission between March 1997 and March 2000, if he will provide the figures for West Sussex for each of those dates. [131829]

Mr. Denham [holding answer 21 July 2000]: We are determined to reduce waiting lists and times for all patients from the rising numbers we inherited. As waiting lists have fallen, so have waiting times. The number of over-12-month waiters is almost a third lower than the peak at June 1998 and the average waiting time of patients on the list is 13 weeks—Two weeks lower than at June 1998.

The numbers of patients waiting over 12 months for elective admission in West Sussex at March 1997, March 1998 and March 2000 are shown in the table.

Mr. Chope: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many Dorset Health Authority patients had been waiting for over 12 months for elective admission in (a) March 1997, (b) March 1998, (c) March 1999 and (d) March 2000. [132333]

Mr. Denham [holding answer 24 July 2000]: The information requested is shown in the table.

In March 1997 there were 56 patients waiting over six months, in March 2000 there were no patients waiting over six months for treatment in Dorset but there were 28 Dorset patients waiting for treatment outside the county.

MRSA

Mr. Cousins: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many MRSA incidents have been voluntarily reported in each NHS region since 1996 (a) in total and (b) as a ratio to the population in that region. [131648]

Mr. Denham [holding answer 24 July 2000]: The Public Health Laboratory Service compiles aggregate data on numbers of incidents of MRSA which are voluntarily submitted by National Health Service trusts for specialist microbiological tests. These are given in the table. Also shown is the rate per 100,000 population.

Notes:
1. Population estimates are mid-year estimates based on 1991 census data
2. For 1996 and the first half of 1997 data have been amalgamated to the approximate boundaries of the new Regional Office areas. This allows for comparison with subsequent years
3. Data for 2000 are incomplete, therefore the rate per 100,000 cannot be calculated
4. An incident is three or more patients infected or colonised by the same strain of MRSA in the same month from the same hospital
5. The criteria for submission of isolates of MRSA (and other isolates of staphylococcus aureus) to the PHLS for specialist tests have been revised twice since 1996 (in January 1998 and in January 2000).

Shipman Inquiry

Mr. Darvill: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will make a statement on the judgment on the Shipman Inquiry. [132643]

Mr. Denham: Families who have been victims of Dr. Shipman have suffered enormously and we have great sympathy for them.

From the outset, we have wanted to make sure we learn the lessons from the Shipman case as quickly and effectively as possible so that we can take all the necessary measures to protect patients. We are considering the judgment in full.

Hepatitis C

Dr. Gibson: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he has plans to carry out routine screening for hepatitis C. [132429]

Ms Stuart: There are currently no plans to carry out routine screening for hepatitis C.

PRIME MINISTER

Appointments (Historians)

Mr. Baker: To ask the Prime Minister, pursuant to his answer of 10 July 2000, Official Report, column 425W, on appointments, if he will list the official historians he has appointed since 1 May 1997; and if he will make a statement on each. [132329]

The Prime Minister [holding answer 24 July 2000]: Since 1 May 1997 I have appointed two official historians: Professor Lawrence Freedman and Professor Alexander Kemp.

G8 Summit

Mr. Llew Smith: To ask the Prime Minister if he will make a statement on the matters discussed at and the outcome of the G8 Summit in Okinawa. [132025]

The Prime Minister: I refer my hon. Friend to the Statement I gave to the House on 24 July 2000, Official Report, columns 763–65.

Kosovo

Mr. Dalyell: To ask the Prime Minister if he will make a statement on the situation in Kosovo. [132514]

The Prime Minister: I refer my hon. Friend to the answer given by the Minister of State, Foreign and Commonwealth Office, my hon. Friend the Member for Leicester, East (Mr. Vaz) on 18 July 2000, Official Report, columns 140–41W, to our hon. Friend the Member for Gedling (Mr. Coaker).

AGRICULTURE, FISHERIES AND FOOD

Veterinary Medicines Directorate

Mr. Campbell-Savours: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food when he will publish the 1999–2000 annual report for the Veterinary Medicines Directorate. [132879]

Mr. Nick Brown: The 1999–2000 annual report and accounts for the Veterinary Medicines Directorate have been laid before Parliament. Copies are available in the Library of the House.

Centre for Environment, Fisheries and Aquaculture Science

Mr. Campbell-Savours: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food when he will publish the 1999–2000 annual report for the Centre for Environment, Fisheries and Aquaculture Science. [132880]

Mr. Nick Brown: The 1999–2000 annual report and accounts for the Centre for Environment, Fisheries and Aquaculture Science were laid before Parliament today. Copies are available in the Library of the House.

Veterinary Laboratory Agency

Mr. Campbell-Savours: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food when he will publish the 1999–2000 annual report for the Veterinary Laboratory Agency. [132881]

Mr. Nick Brown: The 1999–2000 annual report and accounts for the Veterinary Laboratory Agency were laid before Parliament today. Copies are available in the Library of the House.

Solway Fishery

Mr. Martlew: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what advice he has received from the Environment Agency on the possible earlier opening of the Haf net fishing season on the Solway in 2001. [131405]

Mr. Morley: We have not received any advice from the Environment Agency on the possible earlier opening of the Haf net fishing season on the Solway in 2001.

Fertilisers

Mr. Breed: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what regulations deal with fertilisers and soil improvers; and what plans he has to decrease regulation in this area. [131809]

Mr. Morley [holding answer 21 July 2000]: Fertilisers and soil improvers are regulated in Great Britain by the Fertilisers Regulations 1991, SI 1991/2197 (as amended by SI 1995/16, SI 1997/1543 and SI 1998/2024). The regulations implement EU Directives 76/116/EEC, 80/876/EEC, 88/183/EEC, 89/284/EEC, 89/530 and 93/69/EEC. A Commission-led working group is examining consolidation of the existing Directives into a single Directive, but it is unlikely to propose any decrease in regulation in this area.

Farm Diversification

Mr. Breed: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will list the publicly-funded organisations which provide advice to farmers about diversification; and if he will make a statement. [131803]

Mr. Morley [holding answer 21 July 2000]: MAFF will be publishing a free advisory booklet on farm diversification in the autumn as part of the Prime Minister's Action Plan for Farming. The booklet will contain a comprehensive list of organisations which can provide advice to farmers on diversification. The action plan also included a new programme of business advice for farmers through the Small Business Service.

Pollution Controls

Mr. Breed: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what discussions he has had with his European counterparts about ensuring (a) uniform implementation of integrated pollution prevention and controls and (b) that disproportionate burdens are not placed on British farmers as a result of these controls; and if he will make a statement. [131899]

Mr. Morley [holding answer 21 July 2000]: Discussions about the Directive on Integrated Pollution Prevention and Control (IPPC) have taken place between EU Environment Ministers. Measures to comply with the requirements of the IPPC Directive will be based on Best Available Techniques reference (BREF) documents, which will be agreed at Community level. These documents aim to ensure all member states adopt measures that offer equivalent environmental protection.

Under the Action Plan for Farming, announced by the Prime Minister following the Agriculture Summit on 30 March, the Government are committed to implementing environmental legislation that impacts on the farming industry in the least bureaucratic and burdensome way. Farmers with existing installations in England and Wales will not be required to implement these measures until 2007. Some other member states already apply environmental controls similar to those required to be implemented under IPPC.

Mr. Paul Marsden: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will list the changes to be applied to the poultry industry under the Integrated Pollution Prevention and Control regulations for (a) England and Wales and (b) each EU country; and if he will make a statement. [131710]

Mr. Morley: The measures that we expect will apply to most of the poultry industry in England under the IPPC Directive will be set out in general binding rules. These are currently under discussion between the Environment Agency, the Government and representatives of the poultry sector and will be put out for public consultation shortly. Poultry farmers with existing installations will not be required to implement these measures until 2007.

Some member states already impose environmental controls similar to those required to be put in place under IPPC. Others plan to implement IPPC for the poultry sector before 2007. The EU-wide Best Available Techniques reference (BREF) document for the intensive livestock sector is expected to be in place in 2001 and will set out measures to control emissions which all EU member states will be expected to apply.

Rural Enterprise Schemes

Mr. Breed: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what estimate he has made of the costs of administering rural enterprise schemes through (a) his Department and (b) regional development agencies. [131816]

Mr. Morley [holding answer 21 July 2000]: My Department will be running the new Rural Enterprise Scheme as part of the England Rural Development Programme.

The cost of its administration will depend in part upon the level of demand, but in 2001–02, its first full year of operation, we estimate the cost to be £1.375 million; this includes £0.628 million for technical support by the Farming and Rural Conservation Agency. This is additional to the programme cost for the scheme.

The cost of schemes run by the Regional Development Agencies is a matter for my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions.

Countryside Stewardship Scheme

Mr. Breed: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what estimate he has made of the costs of increasing the proportion of less favoured areas covered by the Countryside Stewardship Scheme from 3 per cent. to 10 per cent. [131814]

Mr. Morley [holding answer 21 July 2000]: It is estimated that the cost of increasing the proportion of less favoured areas covered by the Countryside Stewardship Scheme from 3 per cent. to 10 per cent. would be approximately £5 million per annum.

HOME DEPARTMENT

Science Service

Mr. Hope: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will lay before Parliament the annual report for the Forensic Science Service. [132883]

Mr. Straw: Copies of the Forensic Science Service's annual report and accounts for 1999–2000 have today been laid before Parliament.

The Forensic Science Service (FSS) met and exceeded its financial target to achieve a three per cent. return on capital employed and maintained accreditation through external bodies. However, it did fail to achieve the stretching efficiency gain target and service delivery targets. This was a challenging year for the FSS—further expanding its work force, absorbing the associated recruitment and training costs and devoting large human resources to the DNA expansion project. It was also the organisation's first year as a Trading Fund. The targets and plans agreed for 1999–2000 were ambitious, and while the FSS failed to achieve targets in two key areas, it demonstrated a significant improvement in both turnaround times and delivery dates met.

The targets for 2000–01 are set out in the table, alongside those for 1999–2000.

FSS Agency Targets:	1999–2000	2000–01
Financial indicators:
Return on Capital Employed	Minimum 3 per cent.	10 per cent.
Efficiency Gain (three year rolling)	Minimum 10 per cent.	Minimum 10 per cent.
Quality of service indicators:

Exceed 99 per cent. of urgent and critical classified cases	N/A	Pilot
Achieve 90 per cent. agreed delivery dates	Yes	Yes
Put in place service level agreements with police forces (BVAs)	Yes	Yes
Put in place routine and robust customer satisfaction measurement processes (milestone 1999–2000 only)	Yes	n/a
Demonstrate year on year improvements in police (customer) satisfaction	—	Yes
Quality indicators:

Police Complaints Authority

Mr. Ivan Henderson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he has made further appointments to the Police Complaints Authority. [133024]

Mr. Charles Clarke: I have invited Mr. Duncan Gear, Mrs. Anne Boustred and Mrs. Alison McDougall to serve as Members of the Police Complaints Authority. Mr. Gear took up his appointment on 1 June and Mrs. Boustred on 5 June. Mrs. McDougall will take up her appointment on 18 September. All appointments are for a three year period initially.

Mr. Gear was previously a Senior Inspector with the Magistrates Courts Service Inspectorate. Mrs. Boustred joins the Authority after serving as Principal Advocate in the Legal Services Directorate of Essex County Council and Mrs. McDougall was previously the Deputy Head of Equity Research, Europe for Lehman Brothers.

Entrepreneurs

Mr. Coaker: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what plans he has to attract to the United Kingdom entrepreneurs offering exceptional economic benefit but who do not meet the current criteria under the immigration rules. [133025]

Mrs. Roche: There are already specific categories in the Immigration Rules designed specially for entrepreneurs. These ensure that those who wish to make significant personal investments in creating employment can enter to engage in business. There are also clear routes for corporations wishing to establish branches and subsidiaries here. But the Government's Competitiveness White Paper signalled the economic importance of a dynamic approach to building a knowledge driven economy and the need to attract people with scarce skills and those willing to set up businesses which create jobs. That paper included a specific commitment to examine the scope for further encouraging certain entrepreneurs to consider migrating to the United Kingdom.

In the light of that commitment, we have assessed the current Immigration Rules for business and entrepreneurs and have concluded they may not always fit well with a knowledge driven economy since they require minimum levels of investment and do not focus on innovation. Moreover, the current routes for entrepreneurs do not enable us to focus on those applications with the greatest potential of economic benefit.

We have, therefore, decided to introduce a scheme, which will be piloted as a concessionary arrangement outside the Immigration Rules in the first instance, aimed at attracting entrepreneurial innovators to the United Kingdom.

This pilot scheme will come into force on 4 September this year.

The key features of the innovators entry route are: it is intended to attract and select outstanding entrepreneurs whose business proposals will result in exceptional economic benefits for the United Kingdom; selection will take place on a rigorous and demanding basis but one that is designed to be flexible to accommodate a wide variety of applications with different strengths and weaknesses; no minimum investment is required; and there is no requirement for personal funds to be invested, but third party funding will be permitted.

Applicants will need to submit a business plan and a curriculum vitae with supporting documents.

Initial information about the scheme will be made available on the Immigration and Nationality Directorate website. I will place copies of guidance for applicants and information leaflets in the Library as soon as they are available.

Entry Clearance

Mr. Tony Lloyd: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department when a decision will be made in the case of Ms A. (Reference 1013112) whose appeal was allowed by the adjudicator on 22 February. [131571]

Mrs. Roche: Authorisation to issue an entry clearance was sent to the entry clearance officer on 19 July.

Non-conviction Information

Mr. Gorrie: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he plans to remove non-conviction information from the requirements in the checks on volunteers and staff dealing with young people. [132245]

Mr. Charles Clarke: We attach particular importance to protecting young persons from those who would do them harm. This underpins the arrangements which we are putting in place to implement Part V of the Police Act 1997, under which information about criminal convictions will be more readily available to employers and voluntary organisations. The highest level of certificate that will be available under these arrangements will relate principally to those regularly caring for, training, supervising or being in sole charge of persons under the age of 18. In such cases, in addition to information about criminal convictions, police forces will be required to disclose any other information which, in the chief officer's opinion, might be relevant, and, under a "one-stop shop" arrangement, checks will also be made of a Department for Education and Employment list of persons who are barred from employment in the education service, and a Department of Health list of persons who are considered unsuitable to work with children.

Curfews (Cumbria)

Mr. Maclean: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many prisoners have been released to date under the home detention curfew scheme in Cumbria; and how many have re-offended. [132254]

Mr. Boateng: This information is not available centrally. Data on releases under the Home Detention Curfew scheme are broken down by contract region but not by country.

However, I will make further inquiries of the electronic monitoring contractor for the Northern region and write to the right hon. Gentleman with this information as soon as it is available. A copy of my letter will be placed in the Library.

Xenotransplantation

Mr. Baker: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) if he will list the (a) date, (b) nature and (c) action he has taken as a result, of each infringement of the Animals (Scientific Procedures) Act 1986 since 1 January 1995 relating to xenotransplantation research; and if he will make a statement; [130708]

(2) what (a) benefits and (b) objectives were outlined in the first applications for clinical trials of xenotransplantation procedures; and how many of the pig-primate procedures failed to achieve such objectives and benefits. [130709]

Mr. Mike O'Brien: Xenotransplanatation includes the transplantation of organs, such as hearts and kidneys, between different animal species and from animals into humans. Organ transplantation is a hugely successful medical procedure—one that has transformed the lives of tens of thousands of people across the world. The critical shortage of human donor organs has led scientists to investigate xenotransplantation as an alternative potential source of organs. This is a policy on which the Department of Health leads.

It is not Home Office policy to provide detailed information in respect of infringements relating to specific establishments or programmes of work. Summary information on the total numbers of infringements reported in all establishments for the years 1995 to 1998, inclusive, is provided in the relevant Animal Procedures Committee report. Similar summary information for 1999 will be reported in the Statistics of Scientific Procedures on Living Animals Great Britain 1999, which will be published in August 2000.

As to applications for authorities for xenotransplantation research granted under the Animals (Scientific Procedures) Act 1986, Section 24 of the 1986 Act prevents disclosure of detailed information about specific programmes of work where this has been given in confidence.

Mr. Baker: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) what research his Department has undertaken concerning the fate of the wild-caught baboons imported from Kenya to the UK in May 1999; and if he will make a statement; [130710]

(2) what measures his Department has taken to ensure that imported primates for use in xenotransplantation procedures are used for the purposes stated in applications for such procedures; and if he will make a statement; [130711]

(3) what his Department's policy is regarding the killing of imported primates not subjected to xenotransplantation procedures; and if he will make a statement. [130712]

Mr. Mike O'Brien: All but a small number of primates used in scientific procedures in the United Kingdom are captive-bred and not taken from the wild. Under measures introduced in 1996, authority to use wild-caught primates will be given only if the applicant can establish exceptional and specific justification. Such cases are rare.

The Animals (Scientific Procedures) Inspectorate has maintained a close interest in the condition of the wild-caught baboons imported into the United Kingdom from Kenya in May 1999 and has been kept informed by the relevant designated establishment of its plans for their use and disposal.

Inspectors appointed under the Animals (Scientific Procedures) Act 1986 regularly visit all designated establishments to monitor standards and compliance with licence and certificate authorities.

If primates imported for use in xenotransplantation procedures are killed, but have never been used in the programme of work, it must be by a method listed in Schedule 1 of the Animals (Scientific Procedures) Act 1986 or as defined in a condition attached to the relevant Certificate of Designation.

Animals (Scientific Procedures) Act 1986

Jackie Ballard: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) what factors are taken into consideration when making the cost benefit analysis under the Animals (Scientific Procedures) Act 1986; and to what extent these include (a) healthcare costs, (b) corporate profitability and (c) status of the individuals carrying out the procedures; [132576]

(2) what plans he has to revise the operation of the cost/benefit test contained in section 5(4) of the Animals (Scientific Procedures) Act 1986; and if he will make a statement. [132577]

Mr. Mike O'Brien: To meet section 5(4) of the 1986 Act, any application to use protected animals in research must be subjected to a detailed cost/benefit assessment by Home Office Inspectors. The likely adverse effects on the animal concerned must be weighed against the benefits likely to accrue as a result of the proposed programme of work. In making this assessment, the general categories of potential benefits that are currently considered are: human, animal and ecological benefits: improved health or welfare, plant protection, food hygiene, safeguarding of the environment; scientific benefits: resolution of controversies, increasing scientific knowledge; educational benefits: meeting educational objectives which cannot be satisfied using non-animal methods; and other benefits: including forensic inquiries.

Cheaper health care for everyone can be considered a benefit, but not the profitability of a company which sets out to provide cheaper health care nor the implications for employment arising from the programme of work in the project licence application. The technical expertise of the project licence holder and the personal licence holders may affect the outcome of the cost/benefit assessment. This can be relevant either to the cost (in terms of the standard to which work can be done) or the benefit, when the likelihood of success may be affected. But the involvement of individuals is regulated by the controls applying to personal licences.

Following its review of the operation of the 1986 Act, the Animal Procedures Committee concluded that the cost/benefit assessment provided a workable and flexible framework in which to decide whether the use of animals is justified (Chapter 2 of Appendix F of the Committee's Annual Report for 1997). However, the Committee felt that there were some areas where further discussion and consideration were needed and it has set up a working group to take this forward. The group plans to issue a public consultation paper later this year and to produce an authoritative statement on how the present cost/benefit system can be improved. The Government will consider what changes are necessary to the operation of the arrangements in the light of the Committee's report.

Magistrates Courts (Staffordshire)

Mr. Fabricant: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will make a statement regarding the rate of successful convictions obtained in magistrates courts in Staffordshire in the last 12 months. [130597]

Mr. Charles Clarke: The number of defendants convicted in magistrates courts in Staffordshire was 31,891 in 1998 and 22,372 in 1999 (provisional figure for January-September only). In both periods, convictions represented 76 per cent. of the total number of defendants prosecuted for all offences.

European Convention on Human Rights

Mr. Mackinlay: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will make a statement on measures to bring existing statute law into compliance with the European Convention on Human Rights. [130604]

Mr. Straw: I refer to the reply I gave to the right hon. Member for Maidstone and The Weald (Miss Widdecombe) on 19 July 2000, Official Report, column 180W.

Personal Privacy

Mr. David Stewart: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will make a statement on the safeguards his Department plans to introduce to protect personal privacy following the enactment of the Regulation of Investigatory Powers Bill. [132525]

Mr. Straw: Privacy and personal information is now well protected by the provision of the Data Protection Act 1998; more generally, the right to a private life is a convention right contained within the Human Rights Act 1998. The Regulation of Investigatory Powers Bill contains within it all the protections necessary in the event of the use of these vital powers.

Truck Searches

Mr. Key: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what additional funds have been made available to his Department in the past month to develop systems for the detection of people and animals in freight vehicles; and if he will make a statement. [131778]

Mrs. Roche [holding answer 24 July 2000]: No funds have been received, or set aside by the Immigration and Nationality Directorate, for research and development of systems for purposes mentioned by the hon. Member in this financial year. However, one Chief Immigration Officer is tasked with the evaluation of such technology, including conducting trials of equipment which is commercially available.

PFI Contracts

Mr. Matthew Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what the estimated rate of return on capital is to the contractors under the PFI contracts in his Department. [131349]

Mr. Straw: I am unable to give precise detail of rates of return on capital due to the commercial sensitivity of the information required. However, I can tell the hon. Member that for the following contracts the rate of return varies between 12 per cent. and 20 per cent.

Police National Computer

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what powers are available to him to allow the police on-line access, via the Police National Computer, to databases held by private sector insurance companies; and what plans he has to introduce legislation on this issue. [129139]

Mr. Hill: I have been asked to reply.

Provisions in Regulations made under the Road Traffic Act 1988 require insurers to keep records of their policyholders and the policies they have issued. Information from those records must be provided without charge on request to the police. Legal advice is that these powers are sufficient to allow the information to be collected on a database and to allow the police access, subject to safeguards, on a case-by-case basis. The insurance industry are setting up an electronic database in order to help the police enforcement effort.

I have accepted, however, the Data Protection Commissioner's advice that Parliament should have the opportunity to consider the matter and we will be laying an Order later this year to allow the keeping of information electronically and to provide access to the insurance information for the police on a case-by case-basis. Safeguards to prevent misuse of the information, agreed with the Data Protection Commissioner, will be included.

Bus Lanes

Mr. Barnes: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (a) how many bus lane cameras were established in the last year and (b) how many there are in total in (i) the Metropolitan police area and (ii) in England and Wales; and how many (A) successful and (B) unsuccessful prosecutions there were in (1) the last 12 months and (2) since the introduction of bus lanes. [132285]

Mr. Hill [holding answer 24 July 2000]: I have been asked to reply.

The London Bus Lane Enforcement Camera Project (introduced by the Traffic Director for London and now transferred to Transport for London in partnership with the Metropolitan police) uses video cameras, mounted either on buses or at the roadside, to enforce bus lane regulations in the Metropolitan police area. The project has reached the halfway stage with some 300 bus lanes being enforced by camera. 90 bus mounted and 19 fixed cameras had been installed by 1999, rising to 151 and 29 respectively by 31 March 2000. There are no bus lane enforcement cameras outside the Metropolitan police area.

Six thousand one hundred and seventy-five notices of intended prosecution were issued in the year to 30 June 2000, and 9,543 have been issued since this project started in December 1998. To date only one prosecution has been successfully challenged in a Magistrates court.

In addition, five London boroughs have been piloting a scheme using CCTV cameras, to enforce bus lane contraventions. In the financial year 1999–2000, the authorities issued approximately 57,000 penalty charge notices and warning letters. Of these, there were 314 appeals for adjudication, all of which were upheld.

Figures are not available for the number of prosecutions or fixed penalty notice offences issued by the police for bus lane offences outside London, nor for the 30 years that bus lanes have been operating.

Cyclists

Mr. Ben Chapman: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what assessment he has made of the number of accidents caused by cyclists bumping into pedestrians on (a) pavements and (b) public carriageways in the last year for which figures are available. [132096]

Mr. Hill: I have been asked to reply.

Information on the causes of accidents is not available. The table gives the number of single vehicle accidents which involved a pedal cyclist and an injury to a pedestrian, by vehicle location.

Accidents involving cyclists and pedestrians on footways and verges[1] and carriageways[2]: Great Britain 1999

Vehicle location	Accidents
Footways and verges[1]	79
On main carriageway[2]	217

[1] Footway or verge comprises footways for use by pedestrians only, which form part of the highway but are separated from the main carriageway, including grass verges

[2] Main carriageway includes bus/cycle lane and other restricted lanes within the carriageway itself

TRADE AND INDUSTRY

Newspapers and Magazines (Distribution)

Mr. Baldry: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what estimate he has made of the market share of retail magazines carried by WH Smith, Tesco, Sainsbury, Asda and Safeway. [132486]

Dr. Howells: None. Under UK competition legislation, responsibility for monitoring markets and investigating complaints of anti-competitive behaviour lies with the Office of Fair Trading. The Office of Fair Trading would look at market share figures if they were relevant in any particular case.

Mr. Baldry: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will refer the proposed agreement between W. H. Smith News and Tesco over the supply of magazines to the Office of Fair Trading. [132483]

Dr. Howells: The Office of Fair Trading is aware of the proposed supply arrangements between Tescos and W. H. Smith News. The Director General considers it premature to speculate on the outcome of these or other proposals. However, he will continue to monitor developments in the industry.

Mr. Baldry: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if the Competition Commission inquiry into supermarkets will look at the distribution and supply arrangements of newspapers and magazines to Tesco, Sainsbury, Asda and Safeway. [132482]

Dr. Howells: The Scope of the inquiry into supermarkets is a matter for the Competition Commission. The Commission is due to deliver its report to the Secretary of State on 31 July.

Holocaust Payments

Mr. Blunt: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what action the Government are taking to extend the scheme he announced on 20 June 2000, Official Report, column 137W, for banks to waive charges relating to holocaust payments from Germany to Austria. [132152]

Mr. Byers [holding answer 24 July 2000]: I am pursuing this matter with the banking industry and will make an announcement about the outcome.

BNFL

Mr. Chaytor: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what performance targets he has agreed with BNFL in the last three months; and when he expects the company to publish its new corporate plan. [130873]

Mrs. Liddell [holding answer 24 July 2000]: No new targets have been agreed for BNFL within the last three months. The company's corporate plan is a management tool which contains commercially confidential information, and is not published.

Mr. Chaytor: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what assessment he has made of the cost and effectiveness of (a) retrofitting dry store facilities to magnox reactors and (b) using dry store canisters in his consideration of the closure process of the magnox reprocessing line at Sellafield. [130872]

Mrs. Liddell [holding answer 24 July 2000]: None. These are commercial matters for BNFL.

Export Licences

Mr. Chope: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry, pursuant to his answer of 18 July 2000, Official Report, column 106–07W, on export licences, how many of the standard individual export licence applications and open individual export licence applications outstanding for over a year were made by small firms. [132359]

Dr. Howells [holding answer 24 July 2000]: The Export Control Organisation of the Department of Trade and Industry does not request details of the size of a company when it makes an application for an individual export licence.

Mr. Chope: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry, pursuant to his answer of 18 July 2000, Official Report, column 106–07W, on export licences, what the approximate value is of the potential exports subject to decisions on standard and open individual export licences which have been awaiting a decision for more than a year. [132358]

Dr. Howells [holding answer 24 July 2000]: Applicants for Standard Individual Export Licences are required to record on the application form the value of the goods for which a licence is sought. The approximate total value of the goods as stated on the applications for a Standard Individual Export Licence which have been awaiting a decision since before 7 July 1999 is £10,700,000. The actual value of exports made under a licence is often less than the value stated on the corresponding application.

Open Individual Export Licences allow the exporters concerned to make multiple shipments of the specified goods to the specified destinations in accordance with the licence conditions. Such licences do not normally impose any limit on the volume of exports that may be made under the licence.

Industrial Diseases

Mr. Crausby: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry how many ex-employees of British Coal have (a) made claims and (b) been paid under the Government's scheme for respiratory disease litigation. [131745]

Mrs. Liddell: The Department's claims handlers have registered over 110,000 claims for chronic bronchitis and emphysema from former miners and their families. To date, we have made nearly 23,000 payments in full and final, and part settlements, totalling £65 million.

Mr. Stevenson: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry how many compensation claims to date there have been by former miners for (a) chronic bronchitis and emphysema and (b) vibration white finger in the North Staffordshire Area; and how many have been settled since 1995. [131800]

Mrs. Liddell: The Department's claims handlers have registered 2,679 claims for chronic bronchitis and emphysema and 1,007 claims for Vibration White Finger (VWF) from former miners and their families in the North Staffordshire area. To date, in the North Staffordshire Area, we have made 916 payments in full and final, and part settlements to respiratory disease claimants, and 277 payments to VWF claimants, totalling £3.7 million.

Dounreay

Mr. Llew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry when he received the report of the Euratom Safety Assessment and Radiological Protection Mission team visit to Dounreay; and what actions he plans to take arising from the report's conclusions. [131996]

Mrs. Liddell: The Scottish Executive has devolved responsibility for environmental issues relating to licensed nuclear sites in Scotland. I understand that the final text of the Main Findings and Technical Report documents was submitted by the European Commission to the Scottish Executive on 31 May 2000. The publication of these documents, together with the schedule of follow-up action taken or ongoing in response to the Commission's conclusions, was announced by Written Answer in the Scottish Parliament on 6 July.

Copies of these documents, incorporated into an overall report, have been placed in the Libraries of the House and in the Scottish Parliament Information Centre. The report can also be accessed through the Scottish Executive web-site at:http://www.scotland.gov.uk/library3/environment/art35. asp

ECGD

Mrs. McKenna: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will make a statement about the outcome of the review of the ECGD's risk management systems, the Terms of Reference for which he announced on 26 May. [133099]

Mr. Byers: Following a competitive tendering process, KPMG Management Consultants were appointed to carry out the review.

KPMG's main findings were as follows:

"For risk management to be effective there are four primary and critical requirements

Risk identification

Risk measurement

Risk reporting, and

Pro-active risk management.

ECGD generally achieves good results in identifying and measuring risks accurately. Reporting of risks has been flagged as an area which needs attention.

KPMG's report presents recommendations which will enhance the identification, measurement and reporting of risk.

If the recommendations are successfully implemented, HM Treasury will be able to return to a more strategic role and provide added value oversight of ECGD.

At present ECGD is constrained from truly managing risk by its competitive position and operating framework. In particular it is set up to price long-term transactions upfront in highly volatile markets with very limited opportunities to influence their risk/return balance once risk positions are accepted. Making the step forward necessary to accommodate the final element of pro-active risk management requires fundamental change to the business strategy and operating framework. ECGD and HM Treasury have been jointly considering a capital based approach through the development of PMS III; continuation of this initiative should be a priority."

My hon. Friend the Financial Secretary to the Treasury and I welcome the conclusions made by KPMG. We have drawn up an Action Plan to address all the recommendations made in their report. A copy of KPMG's report and the Action Plan Summary (Cm 4792) have today been placed in the Libraries of both Houses.

Mr. Ian Stewart: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what progress has been made on various reviews of the ECGD; and if he will make a statement. [133100]

Mr. Byers: I am pleased to announce the Review of ECGD's Mission and Status, which I announced to the House on 27 July 1999, Official Report, columns 305–06, is now complete and the Government have accepted its conclusions.

When I announced this Review, I referred to a number of other concurrent reviews of ECGD's activities. These are also complete and I refer my hon. Friend in particular to a separate announcement on the outcome of the Risk Management Review, in answer to a question from my hon. Friend the Member for Cumbernauld and Kilsyth (Mrs. McKenna) today, Official Report, columns 519-20W. The Report of ECGD's Mission and Status (Cm 4790), and all other Reports connected with this fundamental scrutiny of ECGD's role, have today been placed in the Library of the House, including the Report of a study by National Economic Research Associates (NERA) on the Economic Rationale for the Public Provision of Export Credit Insurance by ECGD (Cm 4791) and a Report on the provision of ECGD's Reinsurance for Exports Sold on Short Terms of payment (Cm 4793). This now means that all the Government's current reviews of ECGD's activities are at an end.

The Mission and Status Review was informed by a wide-ranging public consultation exercise and Reports by the Trade and Industry Committee, in its Third Report on ECGD: "The Future of the Export Credits Guarantee Department" published by the Committee on 20 January this year (Third Report, HC 52) and the International Development Committee's Report: "ECGD—Development Issues" published 20 December 1999 (First Report, HC73).

While strongly reaffirming ECGD's role in bringing economic benefit to the UK, and maintaining jobs, by supporting UK exporters and investors in overseas markets—and proposing greater freedom to provide this support in the future—the conclusions of the Review published this afternoon set out a new direction for ECGD. It says ECGD should:

> Introduce greater openness and transparency to its operations. This includes greater consultation with customers and interested parties together with the appointment of outside Directors to ECGD's Management Board. The Export Guarantees Advisory Council's remit and membership should also be changed to advise on policy and principles, not individual risk decisions.
> Seek to attract more medium-sized exporters and investors as direct customers; offering a package of products geared to light capital goods and services and smaller projects. ECGD should work with the Small Business Service, Regional Development Agencies and British Trade International to increase understanding of ECGD services amongst smaller exporters.
> Support the Government's objectives of promoting sustainable development, human rights, good governance and trade throughout the world, by ensuring its activities are consistent with these wider international policies. ECGD will publish further details of how it plans to assess project impacts by the end of 2000.

We need to ensure that UK firms remain able to compete effectively against exporters and investors supported by Government-backed Export Credit Agencies in other countries. The changes will ensure speedier decision making, giving greater certainty to firms and new efforts to attract smaller exporters who may be looking to export to unfamiliar areas of the world.

The Report recommends that ECGD should be reformed and strengthened to ensure it is able to meet the challenges of the years ahead. From today ECGD will be working to a new Mission Statement.

ECGD's financial targets will be maintained, as will its overall risk appetite. It will be strengthening its risk management systems and establishing a capitalised framework and a Trading Fund, this should lead to ECGD having complete operational autonomy.

Further development of its systems for assessing sensitive projects and publication of more information on these, together with a statement of Business Principles to guide and inform its business policies and practice will help increase transparency and understanding.

The Reinsurance Review, which is also published today, concludes that, without withdrawing its present reinsurance arrangements, ECGD should work to transfer 100 per cent. of its short-term credit insurance risk to the private sector.

The Report sets out an ambitious reform agenda for ECGD which it needs to take forward in consultation with its customers and other interested parties. I am confident that ECGD will be able to continue to give first-class support to UK firms to compete for business opportunities abroad—thereby bringing economic benefit to the UK and countries in which it is supporting projects.

Company Auditors

Mr. Pollard: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he has received the 1999 annual reports of the recognised supervisory bodies for company auditors under Part II of the Companies Act 1989; and if he will make a statement. [133101]

Dr. Howells: I have received the 1999 annual reports of the five recognised supervisory bodies for company auditors: a combined report from the Institutes of Chartered Accountants in England and Wales, Scotland and Ireland, and one each from the Association of Certified Chartered Accountants and the Association of Authorised Public Accountants. Copies of the reports have been placed in the Libraries of both Houses.

Departmental Staff

Mr. Burstow: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry how many unfilled vacancies for permanent staff his Department has; what percentage of staff positions in his Department are vacant; what the monthly cost would be to his Department of employing civil servants in these positions; how many and what percentage of staff his Department employs on a temporary basis through employment agencies; how much his Department paid employment agencies to supply temporary staff in each of the last 12 months; and how much he expects to pay employment agencies to supply temporary staff in each of the next 12 months. [131441]

Dr. Howells: On 1 June 2000, some 240 temporary workers were engaged within DTI headquarters. This is equivalent to 5.7 per cent. of the number of staff in post. Information on vacant posts is not collected centrally.

In 1999–2000, around £6 million was spent on the hiring of temporary workers. It is not possible to estimate the difference in cost between permanent and temporary staff, given the wide variation in the cost of the latter. The cost of temporary workers is carried on salary cost budgets: it is not, therefore, possible to anticipate the likely expenditure on the hiring of temporary workers during the current financial year.

Post Office Network

Dr. Cable: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what the size is of the major package for the Post Office network provided for in the 2000 Spending Review, paragraph 15.12. [132456]

Mr. Alan Johnson: The 2000 Spending Review includes a provision for ring-fenced funding of £270 million as the first stage of the investment in a range of measures to modernise the post office network. The Government have also made clear that they are prepared to add significantly to this investment over the next few years. The amount of further financial support will be determined once viable proposals have been drawn up and approved.

Motor Industry

Sir Sydney Chapman: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what proposals in the report of the UK Competition Commission on car pricing in the UK published on 10 April (a) have been and (b) will be implemented. [132515]

Dr. Howells: My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry made clear in his announcements of 10 April 2000, Official Report, columns 39–41W, and 12 June what action he was taking in response to the Competition Commission report on the supply of new cars. The order under the Fair Trading Act 1973 implementing the remedies will be made when the responses to the public consultation, which closed on 14 July, have been considered.

Dunstaffnage Marine Laboratory

Mrs. Ray Michie: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what share of the Government's programme of capital investment for science will be allocated to the National Environment Research Council to fund programmes which were developed by the Scottish Association for Marine Science at the Dunstaffnage Marine Laboratory. [132362]

Ms Hewitt: My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry expects to announce the allocations of the Science Budget to individual Research Councils, including the Natural Environment Research Council, in the autumn, after taking advice from the Director General of Research Councils. It will then be for NERC to determine the balance of its priorities for funding including the funding of programmes at the Dunstaffnage Marine Laboratory.

Mrs. Ray Michie: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what assessment he has made of the implications for marine science in Scotland of the closure of the Centre for Coastal and Marine Sciences at Dunstaffnage. [132361]

Ms Hewitt: NERC has decided to disband the overarching Centre for Coastal and Marine Science (CCMS), not to close the CCMS laboratories themselves. The crucial role of the Dunstaffnage Marine Laboratory, in delivering core strategic and applied marine science for NERC and other customers, will continue in different ways involving local and regional collaboration.

Public Holidays

Mr. Bob Russell: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry, pursuant to his answer of 20 June 2000, Official Report, column 145W, on public holidays, when he will announce the date of the bank holiday in 2002 to celebrate the Queen's Golden Jubilee. [132314]

Mr. Alan Johnson: Appropriate consultation is being undertaken with regard to the proposed bank holiday to celebrate the Queen's Golden Jubilee. As soon as the consultation is complete and a final decision has been taken, I shall make a formal announcement to the House.

US-EU Dispute (Farmers)

Sir Richard Body: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what plans he has to give assistance to those industries affected by the US-EU dispute over farmers; and if he will make a statement. [132372]

Mr. Caborn: There are currently two high profile disputes between the EU and US involving agricultural products—bananas and hormone-treated beef. A number of sectors are currently affected by US retaliation over the banana dispute, with further sectors threatened by the US move to carousel retaliation. The only way to alleviate the burden being borne by the companies facing US sanctions is to find a solution to the banana dispute that is satisfactory to all parties. UK companies are not affected by the hormone-treated beef dispute. I have no plans to make a statement on this issue.

Miners Pension Scheme

Mr. Trickett: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what the current status is of the Miners Pension Scheme Actuarial Review; for what reason it has been delayed; and when he expects it to be completed. [132437]

Mrs. Liddell: These are matters for the Trustees of the pension scheme. I have asked them to write to my hon. Friend.

PRESIDENT OF THE COUNCIL

Westminster Hall

41. Mrs. Ellman: To ask the President of the Council when she plans to review the Westminster Hall experiment. [130612]

Mr. Tipping: The Select Committee on Modernisation of the House of Commons is currently reviewing the experiment and hopes to report before the end of the Session.

House of Lords

44. Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the President of the Council if it will be a condition of appointment to the House of Lords by the Appointments Commission to attend the House on at least a specified number of sitting days per year. [130615]

Mr. Tipping: The Appointments Commission is an independent body. I have no doubt that attendance is one of the criteria they will take into account.

Modernisation Committee

47. Mr. Ian Bruce: To ask the President of the Council what proposals she has made to the Select Committee on Modernisation of the House of Commons regarding the use of computers by hon. Members during Committee proceedings. [130621]

Mr. Tipping: The Chairmen's Panel is currently being consulted about this matter.

48. Mrs. Anne Campbell: To ask the President of the Council if she will make a statement on the implementation of the recommendations of the Committee on Modernisation of the House of Commons since 1997. [130622]

Mrs. Beckett: Details of implementation up to April this year will be found in the First Special Report from the Committee of this session "Work of the Committee: Second Progress Report" (HC865). Since then the Committee has successfully worked with the Administration Committee to ease restrictions on the work of journalists and has reported on programming legislation and the timing of votes. The House will have an opportunity to debate this report in the normal way.

50. Mr. Bercow: To ask the President of the Council if she will make a statement on the recent proposals by the Select Committee on Modernisation of the House of Commons concerning programming of business. [130624]

Mrs. Beckett: The House will have the opportunity to debate the proposals of the Select Committee on Modernisation of the House of Commons in due course.

Scottish Members (Voting Rights)

51. Mr. Clifton-Brown: To ask the President of the Council if she will make a statement on Government policy relating to amending the law on the rights of Scottish hon. Members to vote on legislation affecting England. [130625]

Mr. Tipping: Government policy on the matter is well known. No legislation has ever been identified which affects only England.

Parliamentary Scrutiny

Mr. Swayne: To ask the President of the Council what proposals she has to increase parliamentary scrutiny of legislation. [130619]

Mrs. Beckett: We have already implemented the proposals of the Select Committee on Modernisation of the House of Commons for better explanatory material to be published with Bills, increased pre-legislative scrutiny and more freedom for standing committees. The House will have the opportunity to debate the Modernisation Committee's proposals for programming legislation in due course.

FOREIGN AND COMMONWEALTH AFFAIRS

West Bank

Mr. Sarwar: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what his policy is on the visit to the United Kingdom of Professor Moshe Arens to raise funds for a college in the West Bank settlement of Ariel. [130947]

Mr. Hain: Settlement activity in the West Bank and Gaza Strip is illegal under international law and an obstacle to peace. We have repeatedly raised our concerns and objections with the Israeli Government.

We were not associated with Mr. Arens's visit in any way.

Cyprus

Mr. Cox: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on the setting up of a checkpoint by Turkish troops at Strovilia in the Republic of Cyprus; and what discussions he has had about this with the Secretary-General of the United Nations. [131955]

Mr. Vaz: The UK regrets the setting up of a checkpoint in Strovilia and has made this clear to the Turkish Cypriots. This action is one of the measures taken by the Turkish Cypriots against UNFICYP, which we consider to be unjustified. But the matter is fundamentally for the UN to resolve, and we have given them our full support in their efforts to do so. We understand that despite the restrictions UNFICYP are still able to carry out their mandate and the people of Strovilia are able to travel freely.

Belize and Guatemala

Mr. Robathan: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on Her Majesty's Government's position regarding the dispute between Belize and Guatemala. [132266]

Mr. Battle: The UK fully supports Belize's sovereignty and territorial integrity. We welcome the talks currently taking place between Belize and Guatemala under the auspices of the Organisation of American States. We welcome the agreement at their most recent meeting on 17–20 July to hold further talks on the dispute, to implement confidence building measures and to establish military to military contacts.

Western Sahara

Mr. Simon Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on the Government's policy towards the UN Settlement Plan for Western Sahara and the proposed referendum. [132050]

Mr. Hain: We support fully the efforts of the United Nations to bring about a just, durable and agreed resolution to the Western Sahara dispute. The UN Secretary-General and his Personal Envoy, James Baker, have reported fundamental differences between the two parties to the dispute—Morocco and the Polisario Front—on the provisions of the UN Settlement Plan and referendum. They are working to resolve these differences including the possibility of the parties agreeing a mutually acceptable political solution.

Ambassadors and Commissioners

Mr. Baker: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs, pursuant to his answer of 13 July 2000, Official Report, column 652W, on diplomatic representation, in which countries (a) female ambassadors and high commissioners and (b) the female heads of subordinate posts represent the United Kingdom. [132499]

Mr. Hain: The answer is as follows:

(a) The United Kingdom is represented by women ambassadors and high commissioners in the following places:

The Hague
Luanda
Ulaanbaatar
Cape Town
Helsinki
Colombo
Maseru

(b) The United Kingdom is also represented by women in the following subordinate posts:

Lille
Nagoya
Chongqing
St. Petersburg
New York (Joint Management Office)
St. Johns
Hong Kong (Joint Liaison Group).

Sino-British Joint Declaration

Mr. Love: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs when he will publish the next report to Parliament on Hong Kong and the Sino-British Joint Declaration. [132834]

Mr. Battle: The seventh report in this series, covering the period January-June 2000, was published today and copies have been placed in the Libraries of the House. A copy of the report is also available on the Foreign and Commonwealth Office website (www.fco.gov.uk). The report includes a foreword by my right hon. Friend the Foreign Secretary. I commend the report to the House.

International Organisations (Non-Domestic Rates)

Mr. Casale: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will list the names of the diplomatic missions and international organisations in the United Kingdom which have outstanding balances of over £10,000 as at 4 April, in respect of National Non-Domestic Rates. [133028]

Mr. Battle: Most diplomatic missions and International Organisations in the United Kingdom meet their obligations and pay the National Non-Domestic Rates requested from them. However, at 4 April 2000 the following missions owed over £10,000 in respect of National Non-Domestic Rates (NNDR):

Country	Amount
Algeria	37,025.01
Angola	19,855.30
Cameroon	23,849.51
Iran	84,348.90
Jordan	30,674.95
Senegal	10,927.33
Yemen	29,903.16
Total	236,584.16

Seven additional Diplomatic Missions who owe £10,000 or more in respect of National Non-Domestic Rates have made arrangements with the Valuation Office Agency to clear the outstanding debts or who are awaiting instructions from their Governments have not been included in this list. The total amount outstanding from all Missions, including these exceptions, is £1,074,469.

OSCE

Mr. Casale: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what steps the OSCE has taken to ensure that it is able to respond rapidly in the event of a crisis. [133027]

Mr. Vaz: On 30 June, the OSCE adopted measures to improve its capability to respond more quickly and effectively to crises through the despatch of Rapid Expert Assistance and Co-operation Teams (REACT). The aim is for the OSCE to be able to deploy civilian personnel, with a range of conflict prevention and resolution skills tailored to the requirements of a particular crisis, anywhere in the OSCE area, when required. As part of this, the OSCE is to create an Operations Centre to plan and co-ordinate the rapid, as well as regular, deployment of international staff to OSCE missions. The success of this initiative, agreed at the Istanbul Summit, will depend on the commitment and will of OSCE participating states to provide the necessary personnel within the requisite timescale. In line with our current policy, the UK aims to provide about 10 per cent. of the OSCE's overall deployment of personnel in the field.

Departmental Staff

Mr. Burstow: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs how many unfilled vacancies for permanent staff his Department has; what percentage of staff positions in his Department are vacant; what the monthly cost would be to his Department of employing civil servants in these positions; how many and what percentage of staff his Department employs on a temporary basis through employment agencies; how much his Department paid employment agencies to supply temporary staff in each of the last 12 months; and how much he expects to pay employment agencies to supply temporary staff in each of the next 12 months. [131434]

Mr. Hain: There are currently around 150 unfilled vacancies within the Department. This is 2.7 per cent. of the total number of staff positions in the Department. The monthly cost of filling these positions by civil servants would be £241,000. There are currently around 20 temporary staff employed throughout the Department, less than 0.5 per cent. of the total number of staff. The Department paid £971,657 to employment agencies in the year 1999–2000. In the financial year to date the Department has spent £221,146 out of a total allocation for the financial year of £838,096. Monthly figures for expenditure on temporary staff could be provided only at disproportionate costs.

Police (Northern Ireland) Bill

Mr. McNamara: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will discuss with the Papal Nuncio the inclusion of the Pope's Personal Prelature of the Holy Cross and Opus Dei in Clause 49 of the Police (Northern Ireland) Bill. [132391]

Mr. Hain: The Foreign and Commonwealth Office is in regular contact with the Papal Nuncio on a range of issues. Any points he wished to raise concerning the Police (Northern Ireland) Bill, or any other matter, would be carefully noted, and, where appropriate, passed on to the relevant authorities.

HOUSE OF COMMONS

Child Care Facilities

49. Mr. Casale: To ask the President of the Council to ask the hon. Member for Roxburgh and Berwickshire, representing the House of Commons Commission, what plans the Commission has to improve child care facilities in the House. [130623]

Mr. Kirkwood: None at present, but we will continue to keep the facilities provided for Members and staff under constant review.

CABINET OFFICE

Staff Secondments

Mr. Rendel: To ask the Minister for the Cabinet Office how many staff have been seconded from British Nuclear Fuels Ltd. to work within the civil service (a) during 1999–2000 and (b) currently; and to which Departments they were seconded. [131914]

Mr. Stringer: Due to the amount of interchange activity undertaken, details on organisations are not held centrally and could be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

Red Boxes

Mr. Gray: To ask the Minister for the Cabinet Office, pursuant to her answer of 11 July 2000, Official Report, column 485W, on ministerial red boxes, if she left her ministerial red box unattended on the GWR express from Bristol to Paddington. [131120]

Mr. Stringer: I refer the hon. Member to the answer I gave on 11 July 2000, Official Report, column 485W.

Northern Ireland Executive Committee

Mr. Nigel Griffiths: To ask the Minister for the Cabinet Office if the Northern Ireland Executive Committee intends to become a party to the Memorandum of Understanding between the UK Government and the devolved executives. [132833]

Marjorie Mowlam: The Northern Ireland Executive Committee has recently decided to become a party to the Memorandum of Understanding originally agreed by the UK Government, Scottish Ministers and the Cabinet of the National Assembly of Wales last year. My right hon. and learned Friend the Lord Chancellor is, therefore, publishing today (as CM4806) the text of the Memorandum of Understanding and the supplementary agreements as agreed by all four administrations. The paper will also be made available on the Cabinet Office internet site shortly.

INTERNATIONAL DEVELOPMENT

Colombian Earthquake

Mr. David Heath: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what assistance is being provided from (a) the United Kingdom, (b) the EU and (c) UN sources, to assist with rehousing victims of the earthquake in the Quindio region of Colombia on 25 January 1999. [131919]

Clare Short: My Department contributed over £850,000 for immediate emergency relief and rehabilitation assistance—including shelter. But like the United Nations, we have looked to the International Financial Institutions to support longer term reconstruction and rehousing efforts. For example, the World bank provided a loan of nearly £150 million for reconstruction. This is administered by the Colombian authorities and is targeted at supporting the poorest people.

The European Commission also provided over £2 million for emergency relief and longer term rehabilitation assistance—of which the UK share was approximately £300,000.

HIV/AIDS

Mr. Pickthall: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what action she is taking to tackle the HIV/AIDS crisis in Zimbabwe. [133097]

Clare Short: The scale of the HIV/AIDS crisis in Zimbabwe is enormously serious. Twenty five per cent. of adults are HIV positive. Fifteen-year-olds have a one in two risk of dying from HIV/AIDS in their lifetimes. It is sinking countless families further into poverty.

We have worked with others to tackle HIV/AIDS in Zimbabwe for a number of years. I have recently agreed to continue and expand this work with a new commitment of over £20 million over five years. This will maintain condom supplies to the poor, provide drugs for sexually transmitted infections, and promote behaviour change, particularly among young people.

Dr. Tonge: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what recent discussions she has had with members of the (a) Foreign and Commonwealth Office (b) Ministry of Defence and (c) Department of Trade and Industry concerning the AIDS epidemic in Africa; and how often she had discussed AIDS with them. [132287]

Clare Short: The HIV/AIDS crisis in Africa is a major development policy priority for the UK Government. I myself hold regular discussions with other Whitehall Departments on a wide range of development issues, including HIV/AIDS. My Department has an on-going dialogue with FCO and other Whitehall Departments concerning HIV/AIDS policy both at the international level and within the African region. Recent examples include co-ordination with FCO for the UN Security Council Resolution on HIV/AIDS, the EU-Africa summit in April and on preparation of briefing for last week's G8 summit. My Department, with DTI and FCO, is also involved in developing UK policy on the Trade Related Aspects of Intellectual Property Rights (TRIPS) Agreement, this has been raised as one issue in the debate surrounding access to essential drugs for HIV/AIDS.

At a regional and country level in Africa, DFID and the FCO work closely on the implementation of our country strategies, each of which have HIV/AIDS prevention and care as a major priority. HIV/AIDS is increasingly recognised as a potential threat to security in Africa. The new cross-Whitehall forum and shared budget for conflict in Africa (MOD, FCO, DFID, CO, Treasury) will provide an important means for developing a shared policy and priorities on HIV/AIDS and conflict.

Debt

Dr. Tonge: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what proportion of her Department's increased expenditure for 2000–2003 is earmarked for (a) unilateral debt cancellation and (b) the Heavily Indebted Poor Countries Trust Fund. [132288]

Clare Short: This information is as follows:

(a) For 2000–01 and 2001–02 the extra costs incurred for unilateral debt cancellation will be met by access to the Reserve in 2001–02. For 2002–03 and 2003–04 an amount of £6.5 million per year has been included in the addition to the DFID baseline announced by the Chancellor of the Exchequer last week. This is additional to other payments in respect of debt relief for HIPC countries on a multilateral basis.

(b) During the spending period, DFID will continue to contribute to the international costs of HIPC by making payments to the HIPC Trust Fund. We expect to contribute £35 million in each of 2001–02 and 2002–03.

Departmental Staff

Mr. Burstow: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development how many unfilled vacancies for permanent staff her Department has; what percentage of staff positions in her Department are vacant; what the monthly cost would be to her Department of employing civil servants in these positions; how many and what percentage of staff her Department employs on a temporary basis through employment agencies; how much her Department paid employment agencies to supply temporary staff in each of the last 12 months; and how much she expects to pay employment agencies to supply temporary staff in each of the next 12 months. [131431]

Clare Short: The figures requested are as follows:

Unfilled vacancies for permanent staff—13

Percentage of staff positions currently vacant—0.95 per cent.

Monthly cost of employing civil servants in these positions—£22,000

Number of staff employed on a temporary basis through employment agencies, on average, in the last 12 months—23, and

Percentage of total staff so employed—1.6 per cent.

Amount paid to employment agencies in the last 12 months to 30 June 2000—£328,710.

As far as the next 12 months are concerned it is not possible to anticipate precise needs but we shall be undertaking a number of external recruitment exercises and would expect to see a reduction in the need to use employment agencies.

Parliamentary Questions

Mr. Stunell: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development how many written parliamentary questions tabled to her Department between 19 October 1999 and 20 April 2000, have not received substantive answers, citing as the reason commercial or other confidentiality. [132126]

Clare Short: Of the 574 written parliamentary questions tabled to my Department between 19 October 1999 and 20 April 2000, three did not receive substantive answers due to reasons of confidentiality.

St. Helena

Mr. Streeter: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what financial support for St. Helena has been provided by the British Government in each of the last five years; and if she will make a statement. [131757]

Clare Short [holding answer 21 July 2000]: Expenditure figures for UK assistance are published in Statistics on International Development which is in the Library of the House.

In January of this year, my Department agreed a new £29 million programme of assistance to the St. Helena Government (SHG) for the three year period 2000–01 to 2002–03. A DFID team is currently en route to the island to discuss the public sector investment programme in more detail. DFID has recently recommended to SHG consultants to carry out the comparative costs study of air and sea access to the island. We expect the consultants to start work within the next month.

SCOTLAND

Ports

4. Mrs. Ray Michie: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what plans he has for the use of reception facilities for ship-generated waste and cargo residues in all Scottish ports; and if he will make a statement. [130570]

Mr. Wilson: Since January 1998, the Merchant Shipping (Port Waste Reception Facilities) Regulations 1997 have required all UK ports to report to the Government on how they plan their waste reception facilities. Through consultation with their regular users, ports are seeking to provide tailor-made reception facilities in a manner which should encourage greater use.

Parliamentary Representation

5. Mr. Gray: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will make a statement on the Government's plans for the level of parliamentary representation at Westminster from Scotland. [130571]

Dr. Reid: Section 86 of the Scotland Act removed the statutory minimum of 71 Scottish MPs. It is now a matter for the Boundary Commission for Scotland to propose the future number of constituencies in Scotland.

Paper Industry

6. Mr. Dalyell: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland pursuant to his oral answer of 27 June 2000, Official Report, column 703, what assessment he has made of the impact of the climate change levy on the paper industry in Scotland. [130572]

Mr. Wilson: The Government recognise the need for special consideration to be given to the position of energy-intensive industries, of which the paper industry is one. Consequently, the Government intend to provide an 80 per cent. discount from the levy for those sectors that can agree challenging targets for improving their energy efficiency or reducing carbon emissions.

Climate Change Levy

8. Mr. Swinney: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what representations he has made to the Chancellor of the Exchequer regarding regulations to implement the climate change levy. [130574]

Dr. Reid: The Government are committed to getting the design of the climate change levy right and have been following Lord Marshall's recommendation that industry must have full involvement in the development of the levy through extensive consultation exercises. Hence HM Customs consultation exercises, pan-industry meetings with Ministers, full consideration of representations from companies and trade associations, and input from relevant Government Departments have helped to refine the design of the levy.

New Deal

9. Mr. Worthington: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what plans he has for improving the employment opportunities of the disabled in Scotland through (a) the New Deal and (b) other means. [130575]

Mr. Wilson: The Chancellor announced in the Budget the first stage in developing nationwide services to help disabled people find work, building on the experience of the pilots and innovative schemes in the New Deal for Disabled People. Other recent measures to improve employment opportunities for disabled people include: the establishment of the Disability Rights Commission, the Disabled Person's Tax Credit and the modernisations of Remploy and of the Supported Employment Programme.

11. Mr. Brady: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what discussions he has had with the First Minister on the implementation of the New Deal in Scotland. [130577]

16. Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what discussions he has had with the First Minister about the operation of the New Deal in Scotland. [130583]

Mr. Wilson: My right hon. Friend has frequent discussions with Scottish Ministers on a wide range of issues, including the implementation of the New Deal. The New Deal has been an outstanding success. It has placed 25,000 young people into jobs in Scotland since it began two years ago. In April, 1,000 young people found work through the New Deal. And 3,600 people in Scotland have found work under the New Deal 25+.

My right hon. Friend the Chancellor of the Exchequer announced last week that because of the success of the New Deal there is an underspend which will enable us to fund it well into the next Parliament.

Work-life Balance Challenge Fund

10. Mr. Chisholm: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how many applications from Scotland have been made to the work-life balance challenge fund. [130576]

Mr. Wilson: To date, there have been five applications from Scotland. There have been a further 45 applications from England.

Poverty

12. Mr. David Marshall: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will make a statement on poverty in Scotland. [130578]

Dr. Reid: The Government welcome the recent report by the Scottish Affairs Committee, chaired by my hon. Friend, on Poverty in Scotland, and will publish a full response. We are working in partnership with the Scottish Executive to combat poverty through, for example, the work carried out by the Joint Ministerial Committee.

The Government have taken major steps to eradicate poverty. Measures taken include: the Minimum Income Guarantee, which benefits poorer pensioners; the Working Families Tax Credit, which could benefit around 130,000 families in Scotland; the 36 per cent. increase in Child Benefit for the first child when comparing April 2000 with the amounts in 1997; the National Minimum Wage, which benefits around 100,000 employees in Scotland; and the New Deal, through which 25,000 young people in Scotland have found employment.

Ferry Services (Northern Ireland)

13. Dr. Godman: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what recent discussions he has held with the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland, the Northern Ireland Executive and the Scottish Executive concerning ferry services between Scotland and Northern Ireland. [130579]

Mr. Wilson: The Scotland Office is in contact with all relevant parties, including devolved Administrations and other Government Departments, concerning ferry services between Scotland and Northern Ireland. I chaired a meeting in Glasgow on 10 July on a strategy for the resumption of ferry services between Campbeltown and Ballycastle. Attendees included the local Member of the Scottish Parliament and representatives of both Scottish and Northern Irish local authorities, the local enterprise company and the Scottish Executive.

Since then I have had informal discussions with Sir Reg Empey, Minister for Enterprise, Trade and Investment, who reiterated the support of the Northern Ireland Executive for the Campbeltown-Ballycastle service.

Manufacturing Jobs

14. Mr. Tynan: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what estimate he has made of the number of manufacturing jobs transferred to countries of central and eastern Europe from Scotland in each of the last two years. [130580]

Dr. Reid: No information is held centrally to allow such an estimate to be made. Clearly it is regrettable when companies take decisions to relocate manufacturing operations from Scotland, as in the recent case of Philips Lighting Hamilton. The Government are committed to continuing the work of providing a sound and stable economic environment for business and making a long-term investment in skills. As a result, Scotland remains attractive for inward investment. Indeed the latest figures released by Locate In Scotland show that in the year to March 2000 Scotland successfully attracted a total of 91 projects involving planned investment of £650 million and planned creation or safeguarding of over 19,000 jobs.

Textiles Industry

15. Mr. Eric Clarke: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what steps the Government have taken to avoid the Scottish textiles industry being adversely affected by the trade dispute between the USA and the European Union. [130582]

Mr. Wilson: The Government have been lobbying the United States hard to push the message that the retaliation faced by the United Kingdom should be reduced in view of our constructive approach to trying to find a solution to the banana dispute. The Government are also playing a major role within the European Community to reach a World Trade Organisation-compatible resolution to this dispute.

I shall continue to have discussions with the Department of Trade and Industry and the Scottish Executive on how we can best help the cashmere industry should it remain in the retaliation list.

Tourist Industry

17. Mr. Peter Atkinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will make a statement about the impact of the current level of fuel prices on the Scottish tourist industry. [130584]

Mr. Wilson: The level of fuel prices is one of many factors which is relevant to the performance of the Scottish tourist industry.

European Union

18. Mrs. McKenna: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what assessment he has made of the benefits to Scotland of the United Kingdom's membership of the European Union. [130585]

Dr. Reid: The United Kingdom's membership of the European Union has delivered to Scotland tangible economic benefits through such measures as the Common Agricultural Policy, delivering direct funding in 1999 of £475.9 million, and structural funds worth £1 billion in 1994–96 and £1.1 billion for 2000–06. Membership of the European Union also delivers to Scotland access to the biggest market in the world with some 375 million consumers—63 per cent. of Scottish manufacturing exports in 1998 went to Europe. These tangible benefits are in addition to the benefits Scotland enjoys from the peace and security brought about through the collaboration of member states in the Union. UK membership of the Union also affords Scotland a role and position of influence on the European and global stages that could not be achieved by Scotland acting on its own.

Rail Services

19. Mr. Donohoe: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what recent measures the Government have taken to improve rail services in Scotland. [130586]

Dr. Reid: The Government plan to improve rail services through their 10-year transport plan. This is based on a long-term investment by Government and business to modernise the country's transport system and includes £60 billion to improve the national rail network with new track, signalling, stations and rolling stock. This is the biggest investment in railways for generations which will undoubtedly benefit Scotland by delivering better quality for the travelling public as well as lower regulated fares.

Quarrying Industry

20. Mr. Alasdair Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what discussions he has had with the Chancellor of the Exchequer on the consequences of the aggregates levy for the Scottish quarrying industry. [130587]

Mr. Wilson: My right hon. Friend has regular contact with the Chancellor of the Exchequer to discuss a wide range of matters. The aggregates levy will bring about environmental benefits by making the price of aggregates better reflect their true environmental costs. This will provide an incentive for all business to use more recycled aggregates and to use all aggregates more efficiently.

Single Currency

21. Mr. Nicholas Winterton: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what recent representations he has made to the Chancellor of the Exchequer regarding the impact of a single European currency on the Scottish economy. [130588]

Dr. Reid: I have regular discussions with my right hon. Friend the Chancellor of the Exchequer on a wide range of issues, including the healthy state of the Scottish economy. The Government's policy on membership of the single currency remains as set out by the Chancellor of the Exchequer in October 1997, and restated by the Prime Minister in February 1999. The determining factor underpinning any Government decision is whether the economic benefits from the UK joining are clear and unambiguous.

Mr. Swayne: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what discussions he has had with the Chancellor regarding the future of Scottish bank notes if the UK joins the euro zone. [130581]

Dr. Reid: I refer the hon. Gentleman to the answer I gave to the hon. Member for Epping Forest (Mrs. Laing) today, Official Report, column 881.

Rural Post Offices

22. Ms Roseanna Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what discussions he has had with the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry regarding the future of rural post offices. [130589]

Mr. Wilson: I have discussions with the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry over a range of issues.

We are in full agreement that post offices in rural areas make a vital contribution to the local community. That is why the package of post office reforms announced by my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry on 28 June included a commitment to ensuring that the Post Office prevents all avoidable closures of rural post offices, with Government support being provided where needed.

Regional Selective Assistance

23. Mr. Kirkwood: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what proposals he has to stimulate economic activity in those areas in Scotland ineligible for regional selective assistance; and if he will make a statement. [130590]

Dr. Reid: Proposals for the assisted areas map, which defines areas of the UK eligible for regional selective assistance, balance needs and opportunities and represent a very fair deal for Scotland. All areas of Scotland will benefit from the strong performance of the economy and its prospects for future growth. Responsibility for particular measures to stimulate economic activity is a matter for the Scottish Executive.

Oil and Gas Industry

24. Miss Begg: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will make a statement on the measures being taken by the Government to promote the export opportunities of Scotland's oil and gas industry businesses. [130591]

Mr. Wilson: The Government continue to work hard to identify and promote export opportunities for the oil and gas industry through such initiatives as Pilot, the Government/industry forum. Export promotion is particularly important, and I was happy to address the Caspian Oil and Gas Conference in Baku last month. Earlier this year I was able to promote our expertise in the oil and gas sector during a visit to the Far East.

ADVOCATE-GENERAL

Human Rights Convention

28. Miss McIntosh: To ask the Advocate-General what assessment she has made of the number of additional cases expected to be brought under the European convention on human rights when it comes into force; and if she will make a statement. [130595]

The Advocate-General for Scotland: The Government anticipate that the vast majority of convention points will be raised in existing cases rather than new cases. This is certainly the experience in Scotland over the last year. It is expected that a significant number of convention points will be raised following implementation of the Human Rights Act in October, but it is anticipated that the number of challenges will be reduced when the higher courts determine the basis on which the Act and convention are to be applied.

LORD CHANCELLOR'S DEPARTMENT

Magistrates Courts (Essex)

33. Mr. Bob Russell: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department if he will review the courts closure programme for magistrates courts in Essex. [130602]

Jane Kennedy: No. The Government's policy is that magistrates courts are best managed locally. Decisions concerning the future of magistrates courts in Essex are for the Essex Magistrates Courts Committee to determine, in consultation with its local paying authority.

Legal Aid Solicitors

34. Dr. Cable: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department what assessment he has made of the impact of the recent week of action by legal aid solicitors. [130605]

Mr. Lock: The Department has made no formal assessment of the impact of the recent week of action called by the Legal Aid Practitioners Group (LAPG).

The LAPG invited 5,000 firms to take part in the week of action by suggesting that they write to the Lord Chancellor's Department. To date, my Department has received letters from about one in 100 firms invited to take part in the action. The Lord Chancellor is confident that solicitors will agree that, in future, constructive consultation on remuneration will be more productive than proposals of non-co-operation with the Legal Services Commission.

Community Legal Service

35. Mr. Darvill: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department if he will make a statement about funding the Community Legal Service. [R] [130606]

Mr. Lock: The Community Legal Service is funded by local authorities, the Legal Services Commission, the National Lottery Charities Board and a host of other organisations. The different funders are now coming together in Community Legal Service Partnerships to plan and co-ordinate the local provision of services, based on meeting local needs and priorities.

Magistrates Courts

37. Mr. Ben Chapman: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department what criteria he applies when determining appeals against closure of magistrates courts. [130608]

Jane Kennedy: When determining appeals, the Lord Chancellor looks for evidence that the MCC has followed the Central Council of Magistrates Courts Committees good practice guide. Issues to be considered: accessibility for court users, the facilities available, costs of necessary renovations to bring the court up to standard, the provision of courtrooms and workload, extra travelling distances, additional costs and overall efficiency.

Judges (Training)

38. Angela Smith: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department how often judges are expected to attend training sessions regarding changes in legislation. [130609]

Mr. Lock: Judicial training is the responsibility of the Judicial Studies Board. All judges receive induction training on appointment and continuation training at three yearly intervals thereafter in each of the jurisdictions that they exercise. The JSB advises on, and provides training on specific changes in law and procedure where directly affect the conduct and management of cases.

Drug Dealers (Sentencing Policy)

39. Mr. Clifton-Brown: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department what recent guidance he has given to magistrates regarding sentencing policy for drug dealing with intent to supply. [130610]

Jane Kennedy: None. Within the statutory limits laid down by Parliament, the nature and severity of penalties imposed by the court are matters of judicial discretion subject to any guidelines laid down by the Court of Appeal (Criminal Division).

The Magistrates Association has recently published the Magistrates' Courts Sentencing Guidelines which has been sent to all magistrates. This contains guidance on sentencing in all types of case, including cases of supplying drugs.

Road Traffic Cases

Miss McIntosh: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department what assessment he has made of the number of road traffic cases which will be brought under the European Convention on Human Rights; and if he will make a statement. [131487]

Jane Kennedy: No assessment has been made of the number of cases likely to be affected as the Government anticipate that the vast majority of human rights points will be raised in existing cases, rather than new cases. We expect a significant number of human rights points to be raised in all areas of the law in the months following implementation, but it is anticipated that the level of challenges will reduce subsequently as the higher courts determine the basis on which the Human Rights Act 1998 and Convention are to be applied. The Government have made annual provision for the overall costs of implementing the Human Rights Act in the courts—£60 million, including £39 million for legal aid. In addition, £4.5 million has been set aside to ensure that all full and part-time judges, lay magistrates and their legal advisers, are trained to deal with Convention points effectively, which should reduce the impact on court time.

Public Trust Office Executive Agency

Mr. Gareth R. Thomas: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department what the key performance targets are for the Public Trust Office Executive Agency for 2000–01. [133032]

Jane Kennedy: The following table sets out the key performance targets that the Lord Chancellor has set for the Public Trust Office for 2000–01.

Public trust office executive agency key performance targets 2000–01

(c) To reduce debtor days in the Office's Protection Division from 94 to 85 days and in the Receivership Division from 96 to 85 days.

Note:
Fuller details of the Office's plans and targets are given in its Business Plan, which is available from the Public Trust Office.

Stipendiary Bench

Mr. MacShane: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department, when section 78 of the Access to Justice Act 1999, concerning the unification of the stipendiary bench in England and Wales, will come into force. [133033]

Jane Kennedy: The Lord Chancellor has decided that section 78 of the Access to Justice Act 1999 will come into force on 31 August 2000. Section 78 of the Access to Justice Act 1999 contains certain provisions relating to the Stipendiary Magistrates Bench; namely the amalgamation of the Metropolitan and Provincial Benches to form one national jurisdiction throughout England and Wales, and a change of title from Stipendiary Magistrate to District Judge (Magistrates Courts).

The Unification of the bench will mean that it will have a single, judicial head, the Senior District Judge (Chief Magistrate), who will be responsible for the administration of the bench. The Senior District Judge (Chief Magistrate) will be supported by a Deputy Senior District Judge (Magistrates Courts). Acting Stipendiary Magistrates will be known as Deputy District Judge (Magistrates Courts).

These changes are part of the Access to Justice Act reforms to improve the efficiency of Magistrates Courts. The newly unified bench will allow greater flexibility in the allocation of judges to hear cases and respond to fluctuations in workloads.

District Judges (Magistrates Courts) will continue to complement and work alongside the 30,000 lay magistrates, providing an efficient partnership in delivering the criminal justice process.

The Lord Chancellor is very pleased to announce these measures. They will recognise the professional standing of the Stipendiary Magistracy and the importance of the work undertaken by the Magistrates Courts as a whole.

Departmental Staff

Mr. Burstow: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department, how many unfilled vacancies for permanent staff his Department has; what percentage of staff positions in his Department are vacant; what the monthly cost would be to his Department of employing civil servants in these positions; how many and what percentage of staff his Department employs on a temporary basis through employment agencies; how much his Department paid employment agencies to supply temporary staff in each of the last 12 months; and how much he expects to pay employment agencies to supply temporary staff in each of the next 12 months. [131430]

Mr. Lock: The Lord Chancellor's Department Headquarters currently has 80 unfilled permanent vacancies (a percentage of 12.9). If the positions were filled permanently by civil servants it would be a monthly cost of £148,000. Headquarters currently employs 44 temporary staff from employment agencies—a percentage of 7.1 of total staff. The total spent on staff from employment agencies for the period April 1999 to March 2000 was £553,452 (VAT included). We are unable to quote the expected cost for the present year as demand constantly fluctuates.

Access to Justice (Cheshire)

Mr. Nicholas Winterton: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department if he will make a statement on access to justice in Cheshire. [130600]

Jane Kennedy: The Lord Chancellor's aim is to provide a fair, swift and effective system of justice.

There are nine county courts which are situated in or cover parishes within Cheshire, nine magistrates courts and three Crown Court centres.

In Cheshire, as elsewhere, courts are being modernised, fit for the 21st Century. For example, one of the aims of the Crown Court Programme is to improve efficiency and enhance the facilities at all Crown Court centres, irrespective of size, location or current accommodation limitations.

The Community Legal Service (CLS) will improve access to good quality legal advice, through creating local networks of legal services based on local needs, so that people can resolve potential or actual legal disputes and enforce their rights effectively. A local CLS network is being set up in Cheshire, consisting of local solicitors and advice agencies, and it will be supported by the work of the Cheshire CLS Partnership. The CLS Partnership will co-ordinate funding and provision of services, based on meeting local needs and priorities. I had the pleasure of launching the Cheshire CLS Partnership on 19 May.

Co-operative Capability Programme

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will make a statement on the costs and benefits of United Kingdom participation in the United States Navy's Co-operative Capability Program. [130379]

Dr. Moonie: This is a matter for the Chief Executive of the Defence Procurement Agency. I have asked the Chief Executive to write to the hon. Member.

Letter from Robert Walmsley to Mr. Mike Hancock, dated 25 July 2000:

I am replying to your question to the Secretary of State for Defence about the costs and benefits of United Kingdom participation in the United States Navy's Co-operative Capability Program. This matter falls within my area of responsibility as Chief of Defence Procurement and Chief Executive of the Defence Procurement Agency.

I am pleased to say that the MoU for the UK's participation in the United States Co-operative Engagement Capability (CEC) programme was signed on 18th July 2000. The application of CEC technology will improve the RN's ability to detect, monitor and counter current and future air threats, reducing the risk of losing high value warships, as well as reducing the risk of casualties and fratricide. UK participation in CEC will also increase considerably the interoperability of UK and US Naval Forces. Royal Navy Type 23 Frigates are planned to be the first RN warships equipped with CEC. Other major surface warships will also be fitted with CEC in due course.

The estimated total procurement cost of integrating CEC into Type 23 and Type 45 is £174M and the whole life costs are estimated at around £250M. Both these figures are at 1999 prices.

The programme is still at an early stage: costs, performance and timing will be explored and refined before a Main Gate submission in 2004.

Royal Navy Vessels

Mr. Cox: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will list the Royal Naval vessels under construction. [131471]

Dr. Moonie: This is a matter for the Chief Executive of the Defence Procurement Agency. I have asked the Chief Executive to write to my hon. Friend.

Letter from Robert Walmsley to Mr. Tom Cox, dated 25 July 2000:

I am replying to your questions to the Secretary of State for Defence about the number of Royal Navy vessels under construction. this matter falls within my area of responsibility as Chief of Defence Procurement and Chief Executive of the Defence Procurement Agency.

There are currently ten major Royal Navy vessels under construction. Three ASTUTE class submarines and two Landing Platform Docking (Replacement) vessels are being assembled at BAE SYSTEMS Marine yard at Barrow. The last two vessels of the Type 23 Class of Frigates are being fitted out at BAE SYSTEMS Marine yard at Scotstoun on the Clyde. Vosper Thornycroft (UK) Ltd (VT) is finishing construction of one and fitting out a further two Single Role Minehunters at its yard in Southampton.

As well as these Royal Navy vessels BAE SYSTEMS Marine at Barrow are also constructing the first Auxiliary Oiler for the Royal Fleet Auxiliary whilst the second of class is being built at BAE SYSTEMS Marine leased yard at Govan. The Allsa Troon yard in Ayrshire is currently involved in the build of the second prototype Landing Craft Utility as part of an order for ten such vessels to be carried on the Landing Platform Docking Replacement.

There is also a variety of small boats such as rigid inflatables being constructed/procured for the Royal Navy and the other services.

As well as the above, the Government has been able to announce recently details of orders for several new Royal Navy vessels. Appledore Shipbuilders in North Devon will be constructing two new Survey Vessels under sub-contract from VT with fabrication starting later this year. On 11 July the Secretary of State for Defence announced that orders for three new Type 45 Destroyers would be placed later this year, the first and third being assembled by BAE SYSTEMS Marine and the second by VT. Further orders are expected later this year for two Alternative Landing Ship Logistics, to be manned by the Royal Fleet Auxiliary.

Missiles

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many AIM-120 B/C AMRAAMS missiles his Department plans to procure from Raytheon; and if he will make a statement. [131490]

Dr. Moonie: This is a matter for the Chief Executive of the Defence Procurement Agency. I have asked the Chief Executive to write to the hon. Member.

Letter from Robert Walmsley to Mr. Mike Hancock, dated 25 July 2000:

I am replying to your question to the Secretary of State for Defence about the number of Advanced Medium Range Air to Air Missiles (AMRAAM) 120B/C MoD intends to procure from Raytheon Systems Company (RSC) in the USA. This matter falls within my area of responsibility as Chief of Defence Procurement and Chief Executive of the Defence Procurement Agency.

Disclosure of the information you request would harm UK defence and, accordingly, I am withholding it under exemption 1 of the Code of Practice on Access to Government Information.

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence for what reason his Department is reducing its order for AMS Brimstone missiles; and if he will make a statement. [131498]

Dr. Moonie: The Ministry of Defence keeps the mix of weapons we require under review to ensure that our forward equipment programme reflects the circumstances of the world today and those we expect in the future. Brimstone will be one of a number of anti-armour weapon systems that we will be able to deploy. While there is still a firm requirement for the Brimstone missile, we have concluded that we will require fewer missiles than envisaged when the Brimstone contract was placed in 1996.

Frigates

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will estimate the cost to his Department of replacing 20 Type 22/23 frigates in the Royal Navy after 2010; and if he will make a statement. [131494]

Dr. Moonie: This is a matter for the Chief Executive of the Defence Procurement Agency. I have asked the Chief Executive to write to the hon. Member.

Letter from Robert Walmsley to Mr. Mike Hancock, dated 25 July 2000:

I am replying to your question to the Secretary of State for Defence about the cost of replacing 20 Type 22123 frigates in the Royal Navy after 2010. This matter falls within my area of responsibility as Chief of Defence Procurement and Chief Executive of the Defence Procurement Agency.

Current plans envisage a new class of surface combatant which will enter service from around 2013 when the later Type 22 and Type 23 frigates pay off.

We expect a contract for the Future Surface Combatant to be placed with a prime contractor in 2007 following competition. The FSC should benefit from the innovative ideas arising from the Type 45 and CVF procurements and it will also exploit emergent technical innovations and concurrent engineering practice to achieve SMART procurement objectives.

It would, however, be premature to release details of the budgetary costs of these ships as this could prejudice the negotiations which are expected to take place with industry post initial Gate in mid 2002.

Defence Procurement Agency

Mrs. Ewing: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many military personnel by rank are currently working for the Defence Procurement Agency. [131632]

Dr. Moonie: This is a matter for the Chief Executive of the Defence Procurement Agency. I have asked the Chief Executive to write to the hon. Member.

Letter from Robert Walmsley to Mrs. Margaret Ewing, dated 25 July 2000:

I am replying to your question to the Secretary of State for Defence asking how many military personnel by rank are currently working for the Defence Procurement Agency. This matter falls within my area of responsibility as Chief of Defence Procurement and Chief Executive of the Defence Procurement Agency.

Nimrod

Mr. Salmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what steps are being taken to eliminate the slippage in defence contracts with particular reference to slippage in Nimrod; when it is estimated that all Nimrod 4 aircraft will be operational; and how many are currently available for operation. [131591]

Dr. Moonie: This is a matter for the Chief Executive of the Defence Procurement Agency. I have asked the Chief Executive to write to the hon. Member.

Letter from Robert Walmsley to Mr. Alex Salmond, dated 25 July 2000:

I am replying to your question to the Secretary of State for Defence about slippage in the Nimrod MRA4 programme. This matter falls within my area of responsibility as Chief of Defence Procurement and Chief Executive of the Defence Procurement Agency.

You asked what steps are being taken to eliminate the slippage in the Nimrod MRA4 programme. The Nimrod MRA4 contract was let with BAE SYSTEMS in December 1996 with an In-Service Date (ISD) of April 2003. Following technical and resource problems, BAE SYSTEMS advised the Defence Procurement Agency (DPA) in late 1998 that they could not meet this date. In May 1999, following extensive negotiations the contract was re-baselined with an ISD of March 2005, a delay of 23 months and with the MoD securing various benefits in compensation.

The DPA are working very closely with BAE SYSTEMS to ensure that all possible measures are taken to support delivery of the full operational capability in the required timescales, consistent with a March 2005 ISD.

You also asked how many Nimrod MRA4 aircraft are currently in service. Nimrod MRA4 is due to enter operational service in August 2004. The In Service Date (ISD) of March 2005 marks the delivery of the 7th aircraft, with the 21st and final aircraft due for delivery in December 2008.

BOWMAN

Laura Moffatt: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what the procurement strategy is for BOWMAN. [132877]

Mr. Hoon: BOWMAN aims to provide a tactical combat radio communications system to replace Clansman, which as been in service since the mid-70s.

To deliver this project, we have been working with Archer Communication Systems Ltd. (ACSL), as our preferred supplier. ACSL has improved in recent months, but we have concluded that their proposal (submitted to us on 23 June) would not represent best value for money. We have, therefore, decided to hold a competition to meet the BOWMAN requirement. Through competition, we shall seek to achieve the best combination of performance, cost and timely delivery into service. The competition will offer substantial opportunities for participation for UK industry.

Kosovo

Mr. Gardiner: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what plans he has to improve the armed forces' equipment capability as a result of lessons learned from Kosovo. [132675]

Mr. Hoon: I refer my hon. Friend to the oral statement I made on 24 July 2000, Official Report, columns 777–89.

DERA

Mr. McCabe: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what plans he has for the future of the Defence Evaluation and Research Agency; and if he will make a statement. [132682]

Mr. Hoon: I refer my hon. Friend to the oral statement I made on 24 July 2000, Official Report, columns 777–89.

Thomson CSF

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what the total cost was of work placed to Thomson CSF by his Department in each of the last three years; what the projected value is of the contracts to them for the next five years; and if he will make a statement. [130378]

Dr. Moonie: The value of contracts placed by the Ministry of Defence with Thomson CSF in each of the last three years was:

Financial year	£ million
1997–98	44.5
1998–99	32.2
1999–2000	30.6

These figures are for prime contracts only, they do not include the value of any sub-contract received by Thomson CSF from MOD prime contractors.

It would not be appropriate to prejudge the results of any future competition for MOD contracts. It is therefore not possible to speculate on the projected value of the contracts which may be awarded to Thomson CSF in the next five years. Thomson CSF are at liberty to tender for MOD contracts and such tenders will be considered on a competitive basis with tenders received from other companies.

Staff Secondments

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will list the name, position, and time of placement of senior staff in his Department who have been seconded to the defence industry in the last five years; to which companies; how many of those employees are still employed by his Department; and if he will make a statement. [130380]

Dr. Moonie: Details of Senior Civil Servants in my Department who have undertaken secondments to companies in the defence sector over the last five years are contained in the table. Of the ten individuals, three are no longer employed by the MOD and one is currently on loan to another Government Department. Encouraging interchange with the private sector has been the policy of successive governments.

Company	Position	Time of placement
April 1995-March 1996
Raytheon	Director International Requirements	1 year 10 months (January 1995-October 1997)

Plutonium

Mr. Savidge: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what plans his Department has to recycle plutonium from dismantled redundant nuclear warheads as civilian MOX fuel. [130678]

Mr. Spellar: I refer my hon. Friend to the answers I gave to my hon. Friend the Member for Blaenau Gwent (Mr. Smith) on 14 March 2000, Official Report, columns 104–05W and 17 July 2000, Official Report, columns 11–12W. The Ministry of Defence's remit is to examine all options for disposing of this material including its conversion into civilian MOX fuel. However, as the quantity of weapons grade plutonium which is surplus to Defence requirements is a very small percentage of the overall UK plutonium stocks, we shall be taking account of civil industry's plans for disposal of their much larger amounts. Disposal of such materials is, of course, a very complex matter and final decisions are unlikely for quite some time.

Porton Down

Mr. Matthew Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence, pursuant to his answer of 27 June 2000, Official Report, column 434W, on Porton Down, if it is the assessment of the Chemical Defence Establishment that the nerve agent GF is more toxic to humans than sarin (GB). [130528]

Dr. Moonie: This is a matter for the Chief Executive of the Defence Evaluation and Research Agency. I have asked the Chief Executive to write to the hon. Member.

Letter from Sir John Chisholm to Mr. Matthew Taylor, dated 25 July 2000:

I am replying to your parliamentary question about the relative toxicity of nerve agents since the laboratories at Porton Down are part of the Defence Evaluation and Research Agency.

The relative potency of the nerve agents GB and GF depends on the route of entry of nerve agent into the body, the conditions in which the exposure occurs and the toxicological end point chosen. It is not our policy, or that of the Ministry of Defence, to publish our assessment of the human toxicology of potential chemical warfare agents because to do so could aid proliferation. I am, therefore, withholding this information under Exemption 1 of the Code of Practice on Access to Government Information.

I am sorry that I cannot be more helpful on this occasion.

Mr. Matthew Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence, pursuant to his answer on 27 June 2000, Official Report, column 435W, on Porton Down, for what reasons the Chemical and Biological Defence Establishment has compiled since 1970 an alphabetical list of individuals who took part in the service volunteer programme; and when this list was compiled. [130529]

Dr. Moonie: This is a matter for the Chief Executive of the Defence Evaluation and Research Agency. I have asked the Chief Executive to write to the hon. Member.

Letter from Sir John Chisholm to Mr. Matthew Taylor, dated 25 July 2000:

I am replying to your parliamentary question about information relating to the service volunteer programme at Porton Down since the Porton Down laboratories are part of the Defence Evaluation and Research Agency (DERA).

Alphabetical lists of those attending DERA's Chemical and Biological Defence Sector and its predecessor organisations at Porton Down as volunteers have been maintained since about 1940 in order to provide a record of participants in the service volunteer programme. The lists contain the name and service number of the volunteers and their dates of attendance at Porton Down.

I hope this is helpful.

Mr. Matthew Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence, pursuant to his answer on 27 June 2000, Official Report, column 435W, on Porton Down, if he will list the dates on which the Health and Safety Executive visited the Porton Down site between 1996 and 2000 in order to discuss specific issues. [130530]

Dr. Moonie: This is a matter for the Chief Executive of the Defence Evaluation and Research Agency. I have asked the Chief Executive to write to the hon. Member.

Letter from Sir John Chisholm to Mr. Matthew Taylor, dated 25 July 2000:

I am replying to your parliamentary question about visits made by the Health and Safety Executive (HSE) to Porton Down since the laboratories at Porton Down are part of the Defence Evaluation and Research Agency (DERA).

As I explained previously, there have been two formal inspections since January 1996 during February 1996 and May 2000. HSE staff also visit the site either to seek our advice because of our expertise in specific areas or to discuss various aspects of our own operations at Porton Down. These visits occur relatively frequently and are arranged at all levels in the organisation. It is therefore not possible to provide dates as records of these visits are not kept centrally.

I am sorry that I cannot be more helpful on this occasion.

Mr. Salmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many people in the UK served at (a) Porton Down and (b) other chemical and biological warfare establishments; how many of these are suffering illnesses that they claim are attributable to exposure to chemical and biological warfare experiments; how many are in receipt of pensions for these illnesses; how many of these are in Scotland; and what the total expenditure is on these in Scotland. [131590]

Dr. Moonie: This is a matter for the Chief Executive of the Defence Evaluation and Research Agency. I have asked the Chief Executive to write to the hon. Member.

Letter from Sir John Chisholm to Mr. Alex Salmond, dated 25 July 2000:

I am replying to your question about CBW experiments as the Chemical and Biological Defence sector at Porton Down is now part of the Defence Evaluation and Research Agency.

Since 1916, establishments based at Porton Down have been involved in the research and development that has underpinned the UK's chemical and biological defence capability. Throughout Porton Down's history, volunteers from the services have been a vital part of the research programme. Over 20,000 individuals have participated in projects aimed at developing protection against and treatment for the effect of chemical and biological agents. The majority have had no complaint about their attendance at Porton Down. We are, however, aware that there are some former volunteers who believe that they have suffered ill-health as a result of the trials in which they took part. I am afraid we are unable to provide the exact number of complainants as they have made their representations through a number of different channels.

Since 1 March 1998, we have responded to 42 enquiries from the War Pensions Agency concerning claims arising from taking part in the service volunteer programme at Porton Down. In each case, we have provided information about the particular trials in which an individual participated but we have not been informed whether these claims have been successful. We are, therefore, unable to answer your specific questions about the number of pensions and expenditure on them in Scotland.

We are not aware of any other establishments in the UK that have carried out chemical and biological defence research involving service volunteers.

I hope this explains the position.

Chemical Weapons

Mr. Llew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will set out the quantities of (a) precursors for chemical weapons and (b) chemical weapon agents held at Porton Down research establishment, used for prophylactic research; on what dates the United Kingdom disposed of its chemical weapons; and what amount was disposed of on each occasion, in the last 10 years. [130852]

Dr. Moonie: The Chemical Weapons Convention (CWC) permits the retention of toxic chemicals and their precursors, where they are intended for purposes not prohibited under the Convention. Such permitted purposes include research, medical, pharmaceutical and protective purposes. Toxic chemicals and precursors are classified according to three Schedules, primarily on the basis of their usability as chemical weapons, the risk they pose to the Convention, and their commercial utility.

The UK, as a State Party to the CWC, is permitted to hold up to an aggregate of 1 tonne of Schedule 1 chemicals. The Chemical and Biological Defence Sector of the Defence Evaluation and Research Agency at Porton Down is licensed by the CWC National Authority to hold Schedule 1 chemicals for permitted purposes and is required to make an annual declaration of holdings and usage.

The declaration is not made public for reasons of national security and so I am withholding information about specific quantities under Exemption 1 of the Code Of Practice on Access to Government Information. However, total holdings are substantially less than the permitted maximum of 1 tonne.

In addition to Schedule 1 chemicals, Porton Down holds smaller quantities of Schedule 2 and 3 chemicals.

The UK abandoned its offensive chemical weapons capability in the 1950s. The bulk of residual stocks of munitions and agents were disposed of at that time. Approximately 4,500kg of bulk chemical agent dating from before 1946 was destroyed between 1993 and entry into force of the CWC in 1997. In addition, from time to time, munitions suspected of containing chemical agent dating from before 1946 are found in the UK, for example, during land remediation, and brought to Porton Down. Disposal takes place throughout the year as operational constraints permit. Over the last 10 years, 3,418 items of this type have been disposed of.

Chinook

Mr. Field: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence (1) if Sir William Wratten and Sir John Day knew the extent of his Department's legal claim against the FADEC manufacturer, Textron Lycoming, at the time of their investigation into the fatal crash of RAF Chinook ZD576; [131259]

(2) if the engineering member of the RAF board of inquiry into RAF Chinook ZD576 informed the other members of that board as to the precise nature of the Wilmington incident, in which an RAF Chinook was severely damaged in 1989 as a result of an FADEC fault. [131258]

Mr. Spellar [holding answer 18 July 2000]: In the short time available it has not been possible to establish whether, at the time of their investigation into the crash of RAF Chinook ZD576, Sir William Wratten and Sir John Day knew the extent of the Department's claim against Textron Lycoming. This litigation sought redress for faulty test procedures that caused a Chinook helicopter undergoing tests on the ground at Wilmington, USA to be severely damaged. We know that in their report to the RAF Board of Inquiry, the Air Accident Investigation Branch (AAIB) states:

> In view of reports of a number of ongoing service difficulties experienced with the operation of FADEC, the Engine Change Units and FADEC were examined in some detail.

The report goes on to say that:

> Strip examination of the engines indicated that both were running at high speed with turbines hot at the time of impact, and revealed no signs of pre-impact failure or malfunction that could have affected the operation of either engine.

Thus, as the evidence available indicated that the engines were working normally up to the point of impact, it was reasonable to conclude that FADEC could not have been a factor in the accident. The action taken by MOD arising out of faulty test procedures in the early days of the system's development programme had no relevance to the accident under investigation. It is therefore irrelevant whether Sir William and Sir John were aware of the litigation against Textron Lycoming. Similarly it is irrelevant whether the engineering member of the RAF Board of Inquiry into the Chinook ZD576 accident advised the other members of the Board about the test at Wilmington.

Mr. Rendel: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence (1) if Textron Lycoming was required to demonstrate it had validated the design of FADEC software for the Chinook Mk2 prior to its release into operational service; and if he will make a statement; [132454]

(2) if Boscombe Down was satisfied that the FADEC software for the Chinook Mk2 (a) met aviation software standard RTCA Do. 178A or JSP 188 in June 1994 and (b) was verifiable and suitable for its intended purpose in June 1994. [132455]

Mr. Spellar: I will write to the hon. Member and a copy of my letter will be placed in the Library of the House.

RAF Carlisle

Mr. Martlew: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how much his Department received for the sale of the RAF Carlisle site; what the estimated value of the site was at the time the decision was taken to close the base; and what the cost to his Department was of the clean-up of the site. [131407]

Dr. Moonie: The core sites at RAF Carlisle were sold to Carlisle City Council and Cumbria County Council in March 1999. The outlying sites, with the exception of site four which remains on the market, were sold to Alard Properties in March 2000. The prices paid by the purchasers remain commercially confidential and I am therefore withholding the information under exemption 7 of the Code of Practice on Access to Government Information. Archive research is needed to address the other points raised and I will write to my hon. Friend when this exercise has been completed. A copy of this letter will be placed in the Library of the House.

Departmental Computer System

Dr. Gibson: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what steps he takes to ensure the security of information held on, or transmitted via, his Department's computer system. [132145]

Dr. Moonie [holding answer 24 July 2000]: The Defence Manual of Security mandates the baseline security requirements, which must be met before Communications and Information Systems are allowed to handle official information. Before any IT system is allowed to operate it must obtain a security approval known as accreditation from the security authorities. Electronic protective measures that are employed include the use of firewalls to protect systems, the identification and authentication of users and audit of user activities. All Ministry of Defence staff are required to read and agree to comply with the Security Operating System for the system that they will use.

The Ministry of Defence is continuously reviewing and seeking ways to improve, both the procedural and electronic security of its systems.

Service Personnel Children

Mrs. Ewing: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many military personnel by rank are currently working for the (a) British Army Education Service and (b) Army Training Service in the education of service personnel children. [131633]

Mr. Spellar: There are no military personnel employed to educate children of Service personnel attending Service children's school overseas. There are, however, two Warrant Officers Class 1 employed in Headquarters Service Children's Education in support functions.

Welbeck College, the Army's sixth form college, employs one Captain to teach core skills and one Warrant Officer Class 1 to teach physical education.

Service Pensions

Mrs. Ewing: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will list the total cost to public funds of service pensions (a) nationally and (b) by region for the most recent financial year, indicating the number of ex-service personnel to which these are paid. [131593]

Mr. Spellar: The total expenditure on Service pensions for financial year 1999–2000 was £2.205 billion and is paid to around 335,000 pensioners. Analysis of this expenditure by region is not held centrally and could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

Gulf War Syndrome

Mrs. Ewing: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will give a breakdown of the cost of potential claims resulting from Gulf War related illnesses for (a) the UK and (b) Scotland, indicating for each the estimated numbers of claimants. [131596]

Mr. Spellar: As at 4 July 2000 the Ministry of Defence had received 1,841 notices of intention to claim from veterans and members of their families in respect of illness allegedly arising from the Gulf conflict, although no writs or properly formulated claims have so far been received. It will not be possible to estimate the overall cost of these claims until such time as specific allegations of negligence have been submitted together with an indication of an individual's symptoms, degree of disability and personal circumstances, which would determine the level of any award.

The Ministry of Defence does not record the number of intentions to claim by region.

Mrs. Ewing: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many people claiming to be suffering from Gulf War related illnesses there are in Scotland; and how many of these are in receipt of (a) pensions and (b) benefits as a result of these illnesses. [131637]

Mr. Spellar: The information required is either not available at all or is not held in the required form. I will write to the hon. Member setting out such information as is available and a copy of my letter will be placed in the Library of the House.

Service Personnel

Mrs. Ewing: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will set out by service, rank, length of service and education and professional qualifications the total number of service personnel nationally and by region of the UK for the most recent year for which figures are available. [131636]

Mr. Spellar: This information is not held centrally and could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

Land Decontamination

Mrs. Ewing: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will list all (a) current and (b) recently disposed of MoD lands that require environmental decontamination (i) nationally and (ii) by region of the UK. [131594]

Dr. Moonie: The Ministry of Defence has a policy of carrying out Land Quality Assessments in order to assess the Department's potential environmental liabilities. Individual budget holders within the Department are responsible for carrying out their own Land Quality Assessments, and such detailed information on contamination, is not held centrally. I will write to the hon. Member and a copy of my letter will be placed in the Library of the House.

Veterans

Mr. Salmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many (a) Korean War veterans and (b) former Japanese prisoners of war there are in Scotland; how many are in receipt of forces pensions; and what the total expenditure is on these in Scotland. [131589]

Dr. Moonie: This information is not held centrally and could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

Food Sourcing

Mrs. Fitzsimons: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what his Department's policy is on sourcing food supplies for the armed forces; and if he will make a statement. [132878]

Dr. Moonie: The supply of food for our armed forces is contracted to "3663". A key requirement of the contract, as with other procurement programmes, is that it should deliver value for money. 3663 are required to seek the best prices in the open market for the products we need. I am as keen, however, on seeing our Servicemen and women eating British products as I am for our contractor to secure the best value for money, and 3663 are required specifically to give full consideration to British products which we look to them to buy wherever they are competitive. 3663 are currently supplying a range of over 1,300 different products for our armed forces, including fresh, chilled and frozen commodities, a number of which are not made or grown in this country. The company advise that almost 1,000 of these are presently British.

We have given particular attention to meat procurement. We are currently sourcing 100 per cent. of our pork and 50 per cent. of our gammon and bacon from the UK, and I am pleased to announce that with effect from July our supplies of bacon and gammon have been 100 per cent. British sourced. Since the autumn of 1998 we have been supplying 100 per cent. British beef to our Service personnel based in the UK, following agreement by the EC to release British intervention beef, at competitive prices, for our use. Our supplies of British intervention beef will, however, start to run out progressively later this year and current market prices are likely to lead to a mix of British and imported beef for future supplies. We will, however, be working closely with farmers' representatives to ensure that we maximise the amount of British beef that can be supplied competitively. In the case of lamb, our efforts to source British products at competitive prices have so far been unsuccessful. The market has been unable to take up our offer of a substantial forward buy which we hoped might attract competitive prices. The main difficulties have included capacity issues (in particular butchery and blast freezing) and the narrow range of cuts we require, as well as price. Our efforts to source more British lamb are, however, continuing.

Condoms

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many condoms have been purchased, and at what cost, over the past two years for supply to UK Service personnel; and what is the average supply per individual (a) in the UK, and (b) for each operation abroad. [131686]

Mr. Spellar: I will write to my hon. Friend and a copy of my letter will be placed in the Library of the House.

Service Personnel Housing

Mr. Cox: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how much Service personnel housing is owned by his Department (a) in the UK and (b) overseas. [132072]

Dr. Moonie: The Ministry of Defence owns 13,508 properties in the United Kingdom and 3,215 overseas.

The majority of Service Families Accommodation in England and Wales were sold on a 999 year lease to Annington Homes Ltd. in November 1996. The Ministry of Defence leases back those properties it needs to house Service personnel and their families.

Defence Medical Services

Mr. Menzies Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what were the (a) inflow and (b) outflow of fully-trained qualified medical personnel in the Defence Medical Services in (i) 1993–94, (ii) 1994–95, (iii) 1996–97, (iv) 1998–99 and (v) 1999–2000; and if he will make a statement. [131022]

Dr. Moonie: [holding answer 24 July 2000]: The total number of personnel entering and leaving the Defence Medical Services between the years 1993–94 and 1999–2000 are listed in the table. It is not possible, without disproportionate effort, to identify separately those personnel who are professionally qualified on entering or leaving the Defence Medical Services.

	Inflow	Outflow
1993–94	604	986
1994–95	611	1,056
1995–96	335	1,283
1996–97	598	1,359
1997–98	742	730
1998–99	830	773
1999–2000	941	742

Notes:
1. Intake figures comprise medical and dental students entering as cadets, qualified doctors, dentist and nurses, nurse trainees, and other personnel who may or may not be professionally qualified on entering the Defence Medical Services.
2. Outflow figures comprise all personnel leaving the Defence Medical Services, whether professionally qualified or not.
3. The figures comprise mainly medical personnel, but include some medical administrative personnel.
4. Outflow figures include personnel leaving on premature voluntary retirement, completion of engagement or commission, redundancy, medical discharge, death or dismissal.

Lock Purchasing

Mr. Winnick: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence when the hon. Member for Walsall, North will receive a reply to his letter of 23 May concerning lock purchasing. [132445]

Dr. Moonie: The Ministry of Defence can find no trace of having received the letter in question. If my hon. Friend cares to forward a second copy, I will ensure that he receives a reply as quickly as possible.

EDUCATION AND EMPLOYMENT

Circulars

Mr. Clappison: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment if he will list the circular documents which have been sent by his Department to (a) primary and (b) secondary schools since (i) 1 May 1997 and (ii) 1 January; and how many pages each document contained. [129784]

Jacqui Smith [holding answer 12 July 2000]: The documents sent automatically by this Department to all primary schools and all secondary schools since 1 January 2000 are listed in the table. I will write to the hon. Member with the information from 1 May 1997, including page numbers, as soon as it can be compiled, and place copies in the Libraries.

Mr. Clappison: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what percentage of pupils at (a) Key Stage 1, (b) Key Stage 2, (c) Key Stage 3, (d) Key Stage 4 and (e) in school sixth forms were in classes of 31 or more in (i) January 1997 and (ii) January 2000; and what estimate he has made of the percentage in each case who will be in classes of 31 or more in September 2000. [131678]

Ms Estelle Morris: The information is not available in the form requested. The available information is shown in the tables.

Advanced Subsidiary and Advanced Level Qualifications

Mr. Clappison: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment when the finalised specifications for the new Advanced Subsidiary and Advanced level qualifications to be introduced for teaching from September 2000 were made available to teachers. [131691]

Mr. Wicks: The finalised specifications for the new GCE Advanced Subsidiary and Advanced level qualifications to be introduced for teaching from September 2000 have been available to schools and colleges since January 2000. Copies of these documents have been placed on the awarding bodies' websites. In addition, the awarding bodies produced and issued hard copies of the specifications to all schools and colleges offering these qualifications.

Emotional and Behavioural Difficulties

Mr. Clappison: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what estimate he has made of the number of children with emotional and behavioural difficulties in (a) special and (b) mainstream schools; and what guidance he is giving to teachers in mainstream schools regarding the handling of challenging behaviour by children with emotional and behavioural difficulties. [131717]

Jacqui Smith: My Department does not collect statistics identifying children with special educational needs by specific categories. The total special needs population was shown as 1,700,000 on the last full return in 1999—just over 20 per cent. of the total school population.

This Government have demonstrated their commitment to improving education for all children with special needs. Schools are educating children with a wide range of needs, and so need a range of programmes and advice. We are supporting schools with a broad package of measures, including the SEN Programme of Action, the National Literacy and Numeracy Strategies and our Excellence in Cities programme.

To improve the education for children with emotional and behavioural difficulties in particular, this year we have:

provided £140 million through the Social Inclusion Pupil Support programme—guidance to support this programme, on pupil attendance, behaviour, exclusion and re-integration, was issued in July 1999; developed On-Site Learning Support Units. We will increase the number of these units to over 1,000 in mainstream schools in England within two years. To help meet this target we announced earlier this year that £28 million is being provided to create a further 360 units in secondary schools and £8 million to pilot 60 units in primary schools. These units are school-based centres for pupils at risk of exclusion owing to behavioural problems; they provide tailored teaching and support programmes.

produced a revised SEN Code of Practice and guidance on thresholds to simplify, and to support better, teachers' assessment of a child's needs and their planning of appropriate strategies to address these. Both documents are currently out for consultation; issued to all schools the Index for Inclusion produced by the Centre for Studies on Inclusive Education. This practical, self review tool will help all schools develop their policies for addressing barriers to participation pupils face, including those with emotional and behavioural difficulties; consulted on additional guidance on promoting positive handling strategies for pupils with severe behavioural difficulties. This guidance will be issued in the autumn, to supplement existing guidance on Section 550A of the Education Act 1996.

In addition, we are planning further practical guidance on best practice in the education of children with emotional and behavioural difficulties, and on effective teaching for children with mental health problems.

We have also provided guidance on the wider issue of dealing with violent or very disruptive pupils. We do not expect teachers to keep troublemakers in the classroom at any cost, and have written to all headteachers so that they know they have our full support if they have to exclude such pupils permanently. The Secretary of State also announced at the National Association of Headteachers' conference on 1 June that he would be changing the guidance to exclusion appeal panels to indicate that where there has been violence or severe threat of violence it is inappropriate for a permanently excluded child to be re-instated to the same school.

Criminal Offences (School Premises)

Mr. Clappison: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment how many (a) pupils, (b) teachers and (c) members of non-teaching staff have been the victims of (i) assaults and (ii) other criminal offences on school premises in each of the last 10 years. [131718]

Jacqui Smith: This information is not collected centrally. We have taken a range of measures to create safe and secure environments for pupils and staff. Since 1997–98, we have made specific grants to local education authorities in England to support expenditure of £22 million annually on school security measures. We have also published guidance, such as "School Security: Dealing with Troublemakers", produced with the Home Office.

Hawksworth Hall

Mrs. Curtis-Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what investigations his Department has conducted into allegations of child abuse at Hawksworth Hall; what the results of the investigations were; and what actions he proposes to take. [131968]

Jacqui Smith: The allegations of abuse at Hawksworth Hall were thoroughly investigated by the police and by child protection services in 1995. They concluded that there was not sufficient evidence for criminal prosecution. My Department subsequently considered the allegations, and as a result one former care worker was barred from working in relevant employment and placed on the Department's List 99.

We feel there are no grounds for any further action in the case of Hawksworth Hall, which closed in 1998. We are however fully committed to measures to safeguard children's welfare and protect them from unsuitable people. The Government recently published "Learning the Lessons," its response to "Lost in Care:" the Report of the Tribunal of Inquiry into the Abuse of Children in the former county council areas of Gwynedd and Clwyd since 1974. This sets out many of the measures being taken to protect the welfare of children in residential schools, or in the care of local authorities.

The Protection of Children Act 1999 makes provision for a new list of people who are unsuitable to work with children to be kept by the Secretary of State for Health, and further measures to protect children from unsuitable people are proposed in the Criminal Justice and Court Services Bill.

Ethnic Minorities

Mr. Cox: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment how much section 11 funding has been allocated to each of the London borough councils in the current financial year. [132074]

Jacqui Smith: The education element of the Home Office's Section 11 Grant scheme ceased on 31 March 1999. It was replaced by a new grant, the Ethnic Minority Achievement Grant, administered by my Department. For 2000–01 £162.5 million will be available nationally to improve the attainment of ethnic minority, Traveller and refugee pupils. This represents an increase of 7 per cent. on the amount available for the same purposes in 1999–2000. The details requested are set out in the table. They include, separately, allocations under the Adult Ethnic Minority Achievement Grant which was also previously funded under Section 11.

Children with Learning Disabilities

Mr. Fearn: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what standard assessments are used in schools to assist children with learning disabilities to progress with their education. [132091]

Jacqui Smith: The introduction of Baseline Assessment from 1998 in all primary schools helps teachers plan to meet the learning needs of all pupils, including those with learning difficulties. The National Curriculum also provides a framework within which teachers have the flexibility to deliver programmes of study appropriate to the needs and abilities of the children they are teaching, and the assessment arrangements associated with it provide schools with a reliable and consistent analysis of pupil performance, enabling teachers to assess pupils' progress and develop their teaching strategies accordingly. More generally, the "Code of Practice on the Identification and Assessment of Special Education Needs" contains practical guidance for schools, local education authorities and others on how to identify, make provision for, and to monitor the progress of children with special educational needs, including those with learning disabilities. A variety of assessment procedures and ways of tracking pupils' progress are used, depending on the type and extent of a child's special educational needs.

Mersey Partnership

Mr. Ben Chapman: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment if he will make a statement on the contribution made by Merseyside Training and Enterprise Council to the Mersey Partnership in each of the last five years. [132093]

Mr. Wicks: Merseyside TEC has been an active supporter of the Mersey Partnership since its inception both in cash terms and in Board representation. The TEC has made a financial contribution of £176,000 in each of the last five years.

The TEC Chief Executive has been a Board Member since the Mersey Partnership was established in 1993 and the TEC is also represented at senior manager level on the Mersey Partnership steering group, a membership forum that meets regularly to review progress.

Mr. Ben Chapman: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what assessment he has made of the likely contribution of the Merseyside Learning and Skills Council to the Mersey Partnership. [132094]

Mr. Wicks: Learning and skills are an integral part of wider economic development and regeneration activities. We will therefore expect the Merseyside Learning and Skills Council (LSC) to work closely with the Mersey Partnership. It will be for the LSC to decide how its resources might support the work of the Partnership.

British Sign Language

Mr. Sheerman: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment how many employees in his Department are able to communicate in British Sign Language. [132103]

Mr. Wills: At the current time, the Department does not keep centralised records of those employees that are able to communicate in British Sign Language.

Mr. Trickett: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what guidelines are provided to educational institutions by his Department in relation to British Sign Language; and if he will make a statement. [132438]

Jacqui Smith: It is for Local Education Authorities and schools to determine how to provide best for deaf children in the light of local circumstances. The Code of Practice on the Identification and Assessment of Special Educational Needs includes guidance on the steps to be taken to identify and meet the needs of children with sensory impairments, including hearing difficulties.

The Department does not provide guidelines specifically on the use of British Sign Language. The Teacher Training Agency has set standards towards which teachers involved in the teaching of deaf children are encouraged to aim. These include standards on the use of British Sign Language as a means of teaching deaf children. In addition, teachers of whole classes of deaf children are required to gain a mandatory qualification, approved by the Secretary of State. Providers of courses leading to such a mandatory qualification are now required to bid against a national specification in order to run courses beginning in September 2001. The national specification requires that all participants completing the mandatory qualification for teaching deaf children should have a minimum competence in signing, equivalent to the Stage 1 qualification from the Council for the Advancement of Communication with Deaf People.

We have also supported the National Deaf Children's Society's quality standards in the education of deaf children, which do not favour any single approach to deaf education, but which do provide practical guidance to LEAs and schools on ways of educating deaf children, including the use of British Sign Language.

Deaf People

Mr. Sheerman: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment how many deaf people he has appointed to educational bodies in the last three years. [132104]

Mr. Wills: As part of our commitment to the achievement of equal opportunity targets, and for monitoring purposes only, appointees to DfEE Non-Departmental Public Bodies voluntarily disclose whether they have a disability. However, information as to the nature of the disability is not requested so data on deaf appointees are unavailable. Of the 410 DfEE NDPB appointments and re-appointments since 1 May 1997, 30 applicants indicated they have a disability.

Parliamentary Questions

Mr. Sanell: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment how many of the written parliamentary questions tabled to his Department between 19 October 1999 and 20 April have not received substantive answers, citing as the reason that the information is (a) not held centrally, (b) not held in the form requested or (c) not available. [132136]

Mr. Wills [holding answer 24 July 2000]: I refer the hon. Member to the reply I gave on 21 July 2000, Official Report, column 331W.

Further Education

Mr. Fearn: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what representations he has received about the allocation process of funding by the Further Education Funding Council to the further education colleges in Southport, as part of the national settlement. [132492]

Mr. Wicks: My right hon. Friend has received no representations about the allocation of funds by the Further Education Funding Council (FEFC) to further education colleges in Southport.

Higher Education (Access)

Mr. Boswell: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what plans he has to amend Section 68 of the Further and Higher Education Act 1992 in order for the Higher Education Funding Council for England to provide financial help for universities submitting plans for year-on-year improvements in the widening of access. [132529]

Mr. Wicks: The Government have no plans to amend Section 68 of the Further and Higher Education Act 1992.

Mr. Boswell: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment how much additional funding will be made available to higher education institutes through HEFCE to facilitate access between 2000–01 and 2003–04. [132532]

Mr. Wicks: My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Education and Employment announced, on July 18, £20 million of additional funding to widen access to higher education in 2001–02. Further announcements will be made in due course.

Mr. Boswell: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what plans he has to consult representatives of higher education institutions on the criteria for access plans to be acceptable for additional funding. [132533]

Mr. Wicks: This is a matter for the Higher Education Funding Council for England which already negotiates annual operating statements that include a statement about widening access with all HE institutions. Further details will be available in due course.

Further Education Lecturers (PRP)

Mr. Boswell: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment (1) how he proposes to consult the further education sector on matters connected with performance-related pay; [132534]

(2) if the criteria for performance-related pay for further education lecturers are intended to be identical for those teaching in state schools; and what steps he will take to secure this alignment or broad equivalence; [132535]

(3) how, in the absence of a statutory payment framework, he will secure performance-related payment to further education lecturers; [132536]

(4) which organisation will consider the pay and remuneration of further education lecturers including any matters related to their performance. [132537]

Mr. Wicks: A first meeting of representative bodies of employers, unions and officials in this Department has been arranged for Friday 28 July to discuss and take forward this initiative. The Government do not have a fixed model that it is intending to impose: we are intent on building on, and working within, existing national arrangements.

School Buildings and Facilities

Mr. Matthew Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what provisions there are in PFI contracts for schools and LEAs on the control of and charging for out of school hours use of school buildings and facilities by the contractors in relation to (a) IT facilities, (b) sports facilities, (c) music facilities and (d) use of meeting rooms. [132742]

Jacqui Smith: The Department is not directly responsible for the procurement of schools PFI contracts, and therefore does not hold comprehensive information about the use of school facilities out of school hours. Provisions for any third party use are a matter for negotiation between the school, local education authority and the contractor and, as such, vary from contract to contract. Within schools PFI contracts, however, it is open to the local education authority and the schools concerned to permit their private sector partner to charge for the use of the facilities by others when they are not being used by the schools. There is no requirement, or expectation, that a school must make its facilities available to the wider community on a commercial basis, but allowing such use may encourage lifelong learning, help to reduce vandalism, and have the added benefit of reducing the cost of the scheme overall.

NORTHERN IRELAND

Sentences

Mr. McNamara: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what representations he has received in respect of the sentences imposed on Darren James Neil, Michael Magowan, Andrew Timothy Lea and Matthew Shane Butcher. [124459]

Mr. Ingram: None.

Parliamentary Questions

Mr. Maclennan: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many of the written parliamentary questions tabled to his Department between 19 October 1999 and 20 April 2000 have not received substantive answers, citing as the reason that the information is (a) not held centrally, (b) not held in the form requested and (c) not available. [127435]

Mr. Mandelson: The information for the period requested is as follows:

(a) 0; one partial answer

(b) 0; 13 partial answers

(c) 2; 11 partial answers.

Mr. Stunell: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many written parliamentary questions were tabled to his Department between 19 October 1999 and 20 April; and how many have not received substantive answers, with disproportionate cost cited as the reason. [131222]

Mr. Mandelson: Of the 564 written parliamentary questions tabled between this period, 10 did not receive a substantive answer with disproportionate costs cited as the reason, and a further 12 received only a partial reply.

Plastic Baton Rounds

Mr. McNamara: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what changes have been made to guidance concerning the deployment and use of plastic baton rounds since publication of the Patten report. [130995]

Mr. Ingram: No changes have been made since the publication of the Patten Report. New guidelines were produced by the Association of Chief Police Officers and were announced by the Home Secretary in a written answer to my hon. Friend the Member for Pendle (Mr. Prentice) on 27 July 1999, Official Report, columns 246–47W.

Mr. McNamara: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many plastic baton rounds have been fired since publication of the Patten report; what the circumstances were of each use; and what reports by the Chief Constable were sent to (a) the Police Ombudsman and (b) the Police Authority. [130993]

Mr. Ingram: During the period 9 September 1999 to 17 July 2000, 33 plastic baton rounds were fired by the Royal Ulster Constabulary and one by the army. In each instance the Royal Ulster Constabulary came under attack by crowds throwing petrol bombs and other missiles including blast bombs. One complaint was received from a member of the public and this has been forwarded to the Independent Commission for Police Complaints. No reports have been sent to the Police Authority for Northern Ireland. On each occasion ACPO guidelines were followed.

Water Cannon (Portadown)

Mr. McNamara: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what evaluation the Chief Constable has made of the use of water cannon in Portadown. [130994]

Mr. Ingram: Water cannon were used on three occasions in Portadown and provided an effective resource in creating distance between police and military lines and those threatening and using violence. The ability to deliver water in differing modes and at a varying pressure enabled a flexible and graduated response to the violence. While it was considered to be effective, it was one of a range of tactics and equipment used to counter serious violence.

Human Rights Commission

Mr. Barnes: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland when the Northern Ireland Human Rights Commission's Annual report will be published. [133031]

Mr. Mandelson: I am pleased to announce that the Northern Ireland Human Rights Commission's First Annual Report, covering the period up to the end of March 2000, has been laid before Parliament today. Copies are available in the Library.

Departmental Staff

Mr. Burstow: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many unfilled vacancies for permanent staff his Department has; what percentage of staff positions in his Department are vacant; what the monthly cost would be to his Department of employing civil servants in these positions; how many and what percentage of staff his Department employs on a temporary basis through employment agencies; how much his Department paid employment agencies to supply temporary staff in each of the last 12 months; and how much he expects to pay employment agencies to supply temporary staff in each of the next 12 months. [131429]

Mr. Mandelson: The NIO currently has:

(a) 34 unfilled vacancies for permanent staff;

(b) 2 per cent. of staff positions are vacant;

(c) the monthly cost of employing civil servants in these positions would be £59,000;

(d) five staff are employed on a temporary basis through employment agencies;

(e) 0.3 per cent. of staff are employed on a temporary basis through employment agencies;

(f) the amount paid to employment agencies to supply temporary staff in each of the last 12 months was:

	£000
July 1999	6.3
August 1999	7.1
September 1999	2.4
October 1999	5.0
November 1999	6.9
December 1999	4.9
January 2000	5.5
February 2000	8.5
March 2000	8.1

	£000
April 2000	2.6
May 2000	8.6
June 2000	5.7

(g) it is impossible to anticipate future months spend due to fluctuating requirements but is unlikely to be in excess of last year's figure.

Robert Hamill

Mr. Corbyn: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland when he expects to decide on holding a public inquiry under section 44 of the Police (Northern Ireland) Act 1998 into the circumstances surrounding the death of Robert Hamill. [132538]

Mr. Ingram: I would refer my hon. Friend to the oral answer my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State gave him on 19 July 2000, Official Report, column 358.

Public Processions

Mr. Thompson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland (1) what consultations he has had with the Parades Commission about bringing into force parts of the Human Rights Act 1998 before 2 October for the purposes of the Public Processions (Northern Ireland) Act 1998; and what advice he received; [132579]

(2) what consultations he has had with the Human Rights Commission about bringing into force parts of the Human Rights Act 1998 before 2 October for the purposes of the Public Processions (Northern Ireland) Act 1998; and what advice he has received on this matter. [132432]

Mr. Ingram: The Government consulted widely with a number of individuals and organisations, including the Parades Commission and the Human Rights Commission, on this issue. It is not our practice to publish individual views unless the organisation concerned does so. In the consultation process, there was a wide range of views on the early incorporation, but a unanimous view that incorporation in October would have a positive effect.

Mr. Thompson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what consultations he has had with the Royal Ulster Constabulary about bringing into force parts of the Human Rights Act 1998 before 2 October for the purposes of the Public Processions (Northern Ireland) Act 1998; and what advice he received. [132580]

Mr. Ingram: Although this issue was discussed with the police, it was determined that whatever decision was made, it would not have any implications on their current position on the policing of parades.

Mr. Thompson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what plans he has to bring parts of the Human Rights Act 1998 into force before 2 October for the purposes of the Public Processions (Northern Ireland) Act 1998. [132433]

Mr. Ingram: During consultation, the Government received mixed views on the issue of early incorporation of the Human Rights Act. The Act will, however, come into force in October as planned.

WALES

Advisory Bodies

Tony Wright: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will list all the (a) task forces, (b) action teams, (c) policy reviews and (d) other temporary advisory bodies with external members currently in existence within his Department; and on what date each body (i) was set up and (ii) is expected to terminate. [131444]

Mr. Paul Murphy: None.

Spending Review

Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what discussions he has had with the First Secretary concerning the extra cash totals under the Comprehensive Spending Review for the (a) NHS, (b) education and (c) transport; and if he will make a statement. [132382]

Mr. Paul Murphy: I have discussed the spending review with the First Secretary on a number of occasions, and he welcomes the outcome as much as I do.

The increase for Wales resulting from extra spending in England announced in the spending review is:

£ million

	2001–02	2002–03	2003–04
Health	163	458	728
Education[1]	78	183	290
Transport	40	94	163

[1] Excluding Welsh increases as a result of increases in education funding for local government in England

The Assembly has the freedom to make its own spending decisions about the use of these extra resources in response to Welsh priorities, and this settlement will make a huge difference to the services it provides.

Lords Lieutenant

Mr. Baker: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales how many of Wales's Lords Lieutenant are (a) women and (b) members of an ethnic minority. [132142]

Mr. Paul Murphy [holding answer 24 July 2000]: There is one female Lord Lieutenant in Wales, the Lord Lieutenant of Powys, the hon. Mrs. Elizabeth Shan Legge-Bourke. There are not currently any Welsh Lord Lieutenants who are members of an ethnic minority.

Departmental Staff

Mr. Burstow: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales how many unfilled vacancies for permanent staff his Department has; what percentage of staff positions in his Department are vacant; what the monthly cost would be to his Department of employing civil servants in these positions; how many and what percentage of staff his Department employs on a temporary basis through employment agencies; how much his Department paid employment agencies to supply temporary staff in each of the last 12 months; and how much he expects to pay employment agencies to supply temporary staff in each of the next 12 months. [131425]

Mr. Paul Murphy: The Wales Office has seven unfilled vacancies for permanent staff, which represents 15 per cent. of staff positions. Costs for employing civil servants into these positions can only be provided yearly, the salary scales for these positions are:

Band A—Minimum £11,096, Maximum £14,850—1 vacancy

Band B—Minimum £12,272, Maximum £17,609—2 vacancies

Band C—Minimum £15,237, Maximum £22,736—2 vacancies

Band D—Minimum £19,297, Maximum £28,942—2 vacancies.

Four staff are employed on a temporary basis through employment agencies, which is 9.4 per cent. of the current staff complement.

The table shows the amount the Wales Office has paid to employment agencies to supply temporary staff in each of the last 12 months.

The Wales Office budget for 2000–01 for casual staff is £70,000. It is not possible to predict how much expenditure will be incurred to employ temporary staff in each of the next 12 months, because this will depend on whether vacancies can be filled with permanent staff, but expenditure will be within budget.

Payments made by the Wales Office in each of the last 12 months to employment agencies

New Deal

Mr. Evans: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales how many people who have participated in the New Deal in Wales had previously been unemployed for six months or more in (a) 1997, (b) 1998 and (c) 1999. [130986]

Mr. Paul Murphy [holding answer 17 July 2000]: This information could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

Ombudsmen

Mr. Caton: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what discussions he has held with the First Secretary in the National Assembly for Wales about the implications for Wales of the implementation of recommendations in the Cabinet Office report on the Review of the Organisation of Public Sector Ombudsmen in England. [123522]

Mr. Paul Murphy: Although I meet regularly with the First Secretary to discuss a range of issues affecting Wales, we have not had discussions specifically about the implications for Wales of the Cabinet Office's report. The report proposes the creation of a single Ombudsman service for England by amalgamating the Parliamentary, Local Government and Health Service Ombudsmen. It will be for the National Assembly for Wales to consider the report's recommendations and to determine whether it would wish to follow the report's recommendations in relation to the Ombudsman service in Wales.

Mr. Caton: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what assessment he has made of the implications for Wales of the implementation of the recommendations in the Cabinet Office report on the Review of the Organisation of Public Sector Ombudsmen in England. [123521]

Mr. Paul Murphy: This report proposes the creation of a single Ombudsman service for England by amalgamating the Parliamentary, Local Government and Health Service Ombudsmen, and does not affect Wales directly. It is for the National Assembly for Wales to consider the report's recommendations and to determine whether it would wish to follow the report's recommendations in relation to the Ombudsman service in Wales.

TREASURY

Non-Aggregate Minerals

Mr. David Heath: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer for what reason he is not proposing to introduce a tax on the extraction of non-aggregate minerals. [131917]

Mr. Timms: As aggregates are the largest tonnage of onshore minerals extracted, they generate the largest environmental impact, costed at around £380 million per annum in research conducted for DETR in 1997–99. The aggregates levy will send a permanent price signal about this damage, and provide an incentive for the construction industry to reduce waste and make more use of recycled material as substitutes. The scope of the levy was determined following extensive consultation with interested paries, which suggested that certain non-aggregate minerals should not be taxed. These minerals are not open to the same degree of substitution as aggregates. In some cases they are constituents of products subject to significant international competition, so the application of the levy to these materials would raise difficulties over the international competiveness of UK producers.

Correspondence

Mr. Winnick: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer when the hon. Member for Walsall, North will receive a reply to his letter of 23 May concerning lock purchasing. [132448]

Mr. Timms: There is no record of the correspondence being received. My hon. Friend would like to forward a copy, it will be dealt with as a matter of urgency.

Tax Law Rewrite

Mrs. Lawrence: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if there have been further developments on the Tax Law Rewrite project. [133029]

Dawn Primarolo: I am pleased to tell the House that the Tax Law Rewrite project will soon reach a major milestone. Next week, the Inland Revenue will publish the project's first draft Bill, on capital allowances, for a final round of consultation. The Bill will be ready for introduction in Parliament by the end of the year. Earlier versions of this rewritten legislation have been extensively revised in the light of comments and suggestions from tax professionals and other interested parties. This continuous dialogue between the project team and business interests, tax practitioners, the legal profession and Inland Revenue specialist is a key feature contributing to the success of the project.

Aggregates Tax

Mr. Rogers: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what factors were taken into account in considering the relative value to the environment of the introduction of the proposed aggregates tax and the rejection of the Quarry Products Association's New Deal package of voluntary measures. [132264]

Mr. Timms: The Government held discussions with the Quarry Products Association regarding its proposed package of voluntary measures for a number of months, but at the time of the Budget, no viable package was on offer. In particular, the QPA attached conditions relating to Government procurement which were considered to be inconsistent with EU procurement law and would have had potential negative implications for competition within the industry.

The levy will achieve environmental benefits by making the price of aggregates reflect the environmental costs of quarrying and by encouraging the use of recycled aggregates.

Spending Review

Mr. Matthew Taylor: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer, pursuant to his statement of 18 July 2000, Official Report, columns 219–44, on the Spending Review, and the document entitled "Prudent for a Purpose", Cm 4807, page 32, how he defines productivity for the purpose of his target of raising productivity; if his measure of gross domestic product per capita will incorporate regional price information; and if he will make a statement. [132248]

Mr. Timms: There are two measures of productivity for the purposes of the target concerned. One is output per worker, the other is output per hours worked. The source for both of these is the Organisation for Economic Co-operation and Development (OECD).

Gross Domestic Product (GDP) per capita for the UK expressed in real terms is estimated using price information which is collected from a wide range of consumer outlets and businesses, chosen to ensure that prices from all parts of the UK are represented.

Monetary Policy Committee

Mr. Matthew Taylor: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer, pursuant to his answer of 17 July 2000, Official Report, columns 98–99W, what representations he has received this year concerning new appointments to the Monetary Policy Committee; if he will publish the terms of reference that are used to draw up shortlists for appointments to the Monetary Policy Committee; and if he will make a statement. [131951]

Miss Melanie Johnson: The criteria for the appointment of external members of the MPC are set out in section 13(4) of the Bank of England Act 1998.

Stock Exchanges (Stamp Duty)

Mr. David Heath: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will list the level of stamp duty payable on transactions at the stock exchanges in (a) London, (b) New York, (c) Frankfurt, (d) Amsterdam, (e) Zurich, (f) Milan, (g) Madrid and (h) Paris. [131918]

Miss Melanie Johnson: Transfers of shares in UK-registered companies are subject to UK stamp duty or stamp duty reserve tax (SDRT) wherever they are traded. Shares in non-UK companies may be traded in the UK without incurring UK stamp duties. The rate of stamp duty/SDRT on transfers of UK shares is 0.5 per cent.

The information on the taxes imposed by other jurisdictions is available from:

The Inventory of EU Taxes (16th Edition)

Taxation of Individuals in Europe (International Bureau of Fiscal Documentation)

The United States State Tax Handbook.

HIPC

Dr. Tonge: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what proportion of the UK's unilateral debt cancellation initiative has been paid by (a) the Treasury and (b) Department for International Development. [132289]

Miss Melanie Johnson: As the Department responsible for public spending in support of development, of which HIPC debt relief is a major element, the funding for debt relief is provided by the Department for International Development. Additional resources have been included in the Department for International Development's budget for the costs of debt relief.

Dr. Tonge: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what proportion of the UK's contribution to the Heavily Indebted Poor Countries Trust Fund is (a) from the Treasury budget and (b) from the Department for International Development budget. [132290]

Miss Melanie Johnson: The UK has pledged over $350 million to the HIPC Trust Fund. As the Department responsible for public spending in support of development, of which HIPC debt relief is a major element, the funding for debt relief is provided by the Department for International Development.

ENVIRONMENT, TRANSPORT AND THE REGIONS

Roads

Mr. Jenkin: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions how much was allocated for road infrastructure in England and Wales in

(a) each year from 1993–94 to 2000–01 and (b) such future years for which information is available; and what proportion of that spending will be for funding PFI in each year. [130980]

Mr. Hill [holding answer 17 July 2000]: The table shows the figures for England between 1993–94 and 2003–04. Funding for road infrastructure in Wales is the responsibility of the National Assembly.

Mersey Partnership

Mr. Ben Chapman: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions (1) what studies he has (a) undertaken and (b) evaluated on the sustainability of funding to the Mersey Partnership from the public sector; [131727]

(2) what value for money assessment he has made of the public sector contributions to the Mersey Partnership. [131729]

Ms Beverley Hughes: There have been no individual studies undertaken to look at the value for money and sustainability of funding to the Mersey Partnership from the public sector. For each Objective 1 bid a full appraisal has been undertaken which include assessments of value for money and the level of public sector contributions. Also, the Mersey Partnership's performance has been monitored primarily on a quarterly basis as Objective 1 claims are submitted; and a separate but connected process has been established for monitoring the use of the Merseyside Development Corporation's residual funding. In addition, the Regional Director of Government Office for the North West has been a member of the Mersey Partnership Board which is provided with quarterly progress reports.

Mr. Ben Chapman: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what assessment he has made of the effect of the expenditure of public funds by the Mersey Partnership in each of the last five years. [131726]

Ms Beverley Hughes: Government Office for the north west undertakes an assessment of progress against agreed outputs for the Mersey Partnership's Objective 1 funded activities each quarter. The latest claim was received at the beginning of June and the Mersey Partnership appear to be on course to meet all the outputs by 31 December 2000, and indeed have already surpassed some of the outputs signed up-to.

Mr. Ben Chapman: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions (1) what the sources were of public sector contributions to the Mersey Partnership in each of the last five years; [131724]

(2) what assessment he has made of the division between public and private sector in membership contributions to the Mersey Partnership in each of the last five years. [131728]

Ms Beverley Hughes: Funding for the Mersey Partnership over the past five years has been as follows:

Year	Objective 1	Merseyside development corporation contribution fund	Membership contributions	Private sector contributions	Totals
1995–96	609	—	415	359	1,383
1996–97	543	—	415	388	1,346
1997–98	605	—	412	472	1,489
1998–99	869	689	406	924	2,888
1999–2000	783	[1]781	382	778	2,724
Total	3,409	1,470	2,030	2,921	9,830

[1] Residual value of fund £155,000

Notes:

1. Includes all private sector income.
2. Includes other private sector income e.g. sponsorship.
3. From 1998–99 includes all private sector income from Tourism company (including "commercial" revenues generated).
4. 1998–2000 is 15 month year for TMP and 12 month year for Tourism.
5. Membership contributions included local authorities, Merseyside TEC, English Partnership and represent voluntary contributions as part of the partnership agreement.

Mr. Ben Chapman: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what plans he has for future public sector funding for the Mersey Partnership. [131725]

Ms Beverley Hughes: There are no specific plans as yet, but it is anticipated that the Mersey Partnership will be making an application to the new Objective 1 programme. However, any bid will be subject to the usual rigorous appraisal that takes account of value for money and the level of public sector support. Membership subscriptions received from public sector agencies are a matter for those organisations and they have to decide whether they are receiving value for money, although I understand most subscriptions are now underpinned by service level agreements.

Mr. Ben Chapman: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions if he will make a statement on spending under the principal expenditure headings using public funds by the Mersey Partnership in each of the last five years. [131730]

Ms Beverley Hughes: Expenditure by the Mersey Partnership over the past five years has been as follows:

	1999–2000	1998–99	1997	1996	1995

Mr. Ben Chapman: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions if he will make a statement on the resignation of the Chief Executive of the Mersey Partnership. [132088]

Ms Beverley Hughes: The resignation of the Chief Executive is a matter for him and the board of the Mersey Partnership. I understand the Chief Executive announced his intention to step down from the post at the end of July, and the board will appoint an interim manager until a new Chief Executive has been appointed.

Aviation

Mr. Jenkin: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what the remit and role are of the sectoral teams in the new Joint Aviation Requirement-Flight Crew Licensing Committee procedures proposed at the JAR-FCL Committee meeting of 8 to 11 May; and how the new procedures will improve the accountability of the JAR-FCL Committee and its Examination Sub-Committee to the Governments of the member states of the Joint Aviation Authorities. [132003]

Mr. Mullin: Under a reorganisation at the Joint Aviation Authorities its specialist committees will be replaced by sectorial teams. The exact remit and role of these teams are still being developed within the JAA. The actions of the JAA are generally accountable to the Governments of the JAA member states through the JAA board.

Mr. Jenkin: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions for what reasons the provisions of Paragraph 10.2.1.1. of Section 5, Chapter 10 of the document, JAA administrative and guidance material, referring to harmonised conduct of the JAA ATPL theoretical knowledge examinations throughout Joint Aviation Authorities member states, have not been enforced. [132002]

Mr. Mullin: Paragraph 10.2.1.1 of Section 5, Chapter 10 of the JAA administrative and guidance material states an intention to harmonise the procedures for the conduct of JAA theoretical knowledge examinations. I can assure you that the UK applies the harmonised procedures.

The national aviation authorities in all JAA member states will be subject to a standardisation visit to ensure that the state complies with the agreed procedures. If these visits reveal that the state does not comply with the harmonised procedures, its licence holders will not benefit from the mutual recognition provisions of JAR-FCL.

Mr. Jenkin: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions if it is the Government's policy to ensure, through the Civil Aviation Authority, that the Joint Aviation Authorities introduce regulations that permit the harmonisation of JAA ATPL theoretical knowledge examination procedures in all member states of the JAA. [132000]

Mr. Mullin: Requirements for the harmonisation of theoretical knowledge examination procedures are already contained in the Joint Aviation Requirements—Flight Crew Licensing. The national aviation authorities in all JAA member states will be subject to a standardisation visit to ensure that the state complies with the agreed procedures. If these visits reveal that the state does not comply with the harmonised procedures, its licence holders will not benefit from the mutual recognition provisions of JAR-FCL.

Mr. Jenkin: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions where responsibility lies in the Joint Aviation Authorities or Civil Aviation Authority for ensuring that the JAA ATPL examination guidelines published at Attachment 2 to Paragraph 10 of Chapter 10, Section 5 of JAA Administrative and Guidance Material are followed. [132001]

Mr. Mullin: Attachment 2 to Paragraph 10 of Chapter 10, Section 5 of JAA Administrative and Guidance Material refers to the construction of individual theoretical knowledge examination questions. The responsibility for ensuring that these questions comply with the guidelines rests with the Joint Aviation Authorities' Flight Crew Licensing Committee through its Sub-Committee for Examinations and with the individual member states' subject expert teams.

Mr. Jenkin: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions for what reasons the Joint Aviation Requirement-Flight Crew Licensing Committee is not minded to accept the proposals of the European Association of Airline Pilot Schools to review the central question bank and the learning objectives of the JAA ATPL theoretical knowledge examinations. [132004]

Mr. Mullin: I understand that this proposal was rejected because review by the European Association of Airline Pilot Schools would infringe the confidentiality of the central question bank. The Association has two representatives on the committee and should be fully aware of the reasons for the rejection of these proposals.

Child Safety

Mr. Paul Marsden: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what funds have been allocated to Shrewsbury and Atcham borough council for (a) child safety and (b) safe routes to school, for each year since 1997. [131708]

Mr. Hill: Between 1996–97 and 1999–2000, Shropshire county council was allocated funding through the Transport Policies and Programme (TPP) system towards local safety schemes, integrated transport packages and minor works. Any funding for child safety schemes and safe routes to school would have been made from the local safety scheme element of these allocations. The table gives details of the total TPP allocations to Shropshire from 1996–97 to 1999–2000.

£ million

Year	Total TPP allocation
1996–97	4.328
1997–98	4.207
1998–99	3.364
1999–2000	4.348

From 2000–01 onwards, under the new Local Transport Plan system, authorities receive an integrated capital block allocation for all local transport and maintenance purposes—except schemes costing more than £5 million, which are funded separately. For 2000–01, Shropshire has been allocated £6.093 million for these purposes.

Housing Renovation

Mr. Paul Marsden: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what funds have been allocated to Shrewsbury and Atcham borough council to reduce the backlog of housing renovation work for each year since 1997. [131707]

Mr. Mullin: The table shows the resources allocated to Shrewsbury and Atcham by central government to help finance their overall programme for housing investment. The decision about the share of this programme to be devoted to tackling backlog repairs in the council housing stock is a matter for the local authority.

1997–98	1,429
1998–99	1,699
1999–2000	1,664
2000–01	2,581

The figures cover the main Housing Investment Programme (HIP) allocations and the resources allocated through the Capital Receipts Initiative (1997–98 to 1999–2000 only). The 2000–01 allocation includes resources for support for private sector renewal grants which was previously provided in a separate ring-fenced allocation.

Cyclists

Mr. Ben Chapman: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what estimate he has made of the damage to the environment caused by cyclists in (a) rural areas and (b) areas of outstanding natural beauty. [132065]

Mr. Mullin: My Department has made no such estimate. Together with Government agencies and non-governmental organisations, we seek to encourage responsible behaviour in the countryside by all users to ensure that damage is kept to a minimum.

Partnership Investment Programme

Mr. Brake: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what assessment he has made of the impact of the abolition of the Partnership Investment Programme on the Government's 60 per cent. target for development on brownfield sites. [132571]

Ms Beverley Hughes: The necessary closure of the PIP scheme, following a European Commission decision, is not helpful to us in achieving the 60 per cent. target. However, this funding mechanism was only one method of achieving a target to which a number of programmes and policies contribute. We are determined to achieve that target. As announced in the Spending Review last week, we are making additional substantial resources available to the RDA's programmes, including £60 million this year and £150 million next year for physical regeneration.

Recycling and Composting

Mr. Brake: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions if he will list the Government's recycling and composting targets for each of the next five years. [132569]

Mr. Mullin: The Government have set the following targets for recycling and composting of household waste:

to recycle or compost 17 per cent. of household waste in the financial year 2003–04 to recycle or compost 25 per cent. of household waste in the financial year 2005–06.

There are no specific targets for the recycling and composting of industrial and commercial waste. However the Government have set a target of, by 2005, reducing the amount of commercial and industrial waste landfilled to 85 per cent. of that landfilled in 1998.

Aircraft Noise

Mr. Cox: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what recent representations his Department has received about early morning air flights over the London Borough of Wandsworth. [132630]

Mr. Mullin: Over past three months one letter has been received from a resident of SW11(Battersea).

Beach Pollution (Southport)

Mr. Fearn: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what (a) levels and (b) types of beach pollution were measured in Southport in each year since 1994. [132490]

Mr. Mullin: The bathing water at Southport passed the mandatory coliform standards of the Bathing Water Directive in 1994, 1996 and 1998 but failed in 1995, 1997 and 1999. I refer the hon. Member to my Department's annual publications "Bathing Water Directive, Detailed Summary of Survey Results, United Kingdom", available in the Library, for information on levels and types of beach pollution for each year in question. Details are also available on the Environment Agency's internet site: "www.environment-agency.gov.uk", and then follow "What's in your backyard".

Housing Investment Programme

Mr. Sanders: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions which local authorities have scored better than average rating for their Housing Investment Programme assessment, [132511]

Mr. Mullin: Details of the performance assessment rating given to each housing authority in the 1999 Housing Investment Programme were included in the press notice (DETR 1160/99) issued on 7 December 1999, which announced housing capital allocations for 2000–01.

Water Additives

Ms Walley: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what chemical compounds are added to water supplies by water companies; from what sources these compounds are derived; what is the (a) largest, (b) smallest and (c) average dosage added; what powers are available to him in respect of the addition of such compounds to the water supply; and what recent research his Department has (i) undertaken and (ii) evaluated into the environmental impact of increasing the levels of fluoride in water. [132420]

Mr. Mullin: The Water Supply (Water Quality) Regulations 1989 provide for approval by the Secretary of State of products, substances and processes used in the provision of public water supplies. The Secretary of State is advised on approvals issues by the Committee on Chemicals and Materials for Use in Public Water Supply. That Committee also considers the impact on the environment of residues from approved chemicals. The Secretary of State's list of approved products, which includes all chemicals approved for use in public water supplies, is published annually by the Drinking Water Inspectorate. The list is installed on the inspectorate's website, www.dwi.detr.gov.uk, and includes as a public health protection measure, conditions of approval that limit the maximum dosing concentrations.

Coastal Byelaws

Mrs. Brinton: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what plans he has to take forward the recommendations of the Review of Byelaws for the Coast published in 1998. [132645]

Mr. Mullin: We shall implement the review's recommendations, which require legislation when parliamentary and other pressures permit. We have already published a voluntary code of best and safe practice for leisure craft users, and we are exploring options for a voluntary boat registration and identification scheme.

Departmental Staff

Mr. Burstow: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions how many unfilled vacancies for permanent staff his Department has; what percentage of staff positions in his Department are vacant; what the monthly cost would be to his Department of employing civil servants in these positions; how many and what percentage of staff his Department employs on a temporary basis through employment agencies; how much his Department paid employment agencies to supply temporary staff in each of the last 12 months; and how much he expects to pay employment agencies to supply temporary staff in each of the next 12 months. [131435]

Ms Beverley Hughes: The number of permanent, casual and temporary staff employed by the Department of the Environment, Transport and the Regions (Centre), and cost associated with employing temporary staff, are set out in the tables. The Department does not have a target number of posts to be filled by permanent staff. Budgets for staff fall within the Department's running cost limits. Vacant posts are filled by permanent or casual staff, or by temporary staff, depending on the nature and duration of work.

Connex South Central

Mr. Burstow: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions, pursuant to his answer of 17 July 2000, Official Report, column 54W, on Connex South Central, what plans he has to introduce requirements for train operators to provide for a well planned and smooth changeover period between franchises in future franchise contracts. [132291]

Mr. Hill: The Franchising Director has produced a revised template franchise agreement for replacement franchises. This contains improved provisions for smooth transfer at the end of the franchises.

Radiological Protection

Mr. Chaytor: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions when the Government plan to implement the justification requirements of Euratom Directive 96/29 on radiological protection; and if he will make a statement. [130875]

Mr. Meacher: The Government are still considering the best means of implementing these requirements in the light of advice received from the Health and Safety Commission.

A63

Mr. David Davis: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions if he will make a statement on the progress of and prospects for the proposed new junction on the A63 at Melton. [132652]

Mr. Hill: I have asked the Chief Executive of the Highways Agency, Mr. Peter Nutt, to write to the right hon. Member.

Letter from Peter Nutt to Mr. David Davis, dated 25 July 2000:

The Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions has asked me to reply to your recent Parliamentary Question in which you asked if he "will make a statement on the progress of and prospects for the proposed new junction on the A63 at Melton".

In A New Deal for Trunk Roads in England, the Government confirmed its commitment to the scheme by stating that preparatory works would continue so that it could be taken forward without delay, subject to full appraisal and the views of the Regional Planning Bodies. We are currently waiting for the formal views of the Regional Planning Body on this scheme. It has responsibility for preparing draft regional planning guidance, encompassing a long-term regional transport strategy, consulting on it, before its submission to Ministers for approval.

We are continuing preparation so as to be able to discuss very quickly with local people draft highway and compulsory purchase orders. If made, these orders would give the legal authority to build the scheme. Further progress would be dependent on any objections and associated statutory procedures.

If you wish to discuss any aspect of the above further, please contact Alan Burgess, the Highways Agency's Project Manager for the scheme, on 0113 283 5417.

Building Regulations

Mr. Dawson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions when he expects to publish proposals for amendments to Part H of the Building Regulations which deals with drainage and solid waste; and if he will make a statement. [132575]

Ms Beverley Hughes: A consultation paper was issued today setting out proposals for the revision of the Approved Document to Part H of the Building Regulations.

The new document provides guidance on sustainable urban drainage systems in order to satisfy requests for information on sustainable water use, and guidance on solid waste storage to encourage recycling.

As well as addressing a wide range of technical issues, the review of Part H has included the examination of the enabling legislation which sets out how the Building Regulations related to drainage and solid waste should be applied. This should enable all those involved with the provision of drainage for buildings to make better informed decisions on the system of drainage to be used.

Rural and Urban White Papers

Mr. Andrew George: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions when he proposes to publish the Rural White Paper. [132157]

Mr. Mullin: The Rural White Paper is being prepared in tandem with a White Paper on urban policy and we intend that both White Papers will be published when the House returns in the autumn.

Mr. Andrew George: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions when he plans to publish the Urban White Paper. [132156]

Ms Beverley Hughes: The Urban White Paper is being prepared in tandem with a White Paper on rural policy and we intend that both White Papers will be published when the House returns in the autumn.

Fishing Vessels

Mr. Andrew George: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions when he plans to publish (a) a consultation draft and (b) a final draft of the proposed safety code for fishing vessels under 12 metres in length. [132155]

Mr. Hill: I will consider shortly the current proposals and the views of the Fishing Industry Safety Group on a new safety regime for under 12 metres fishing vessels. Thereafter we will commence formal consultation in August on proposals to change the existing statutory safety regime, including a draft Code of Practice. Subject to the results of consultation we hope to publish the code by the end of the year.

Mr. Andrew George: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what assessment he has made of the need for new safety measures for under 12 metre fishing vessels. [132154]

Mr. Hill: Earlier this year, I reviewed the work undertaken by the Maritime and Coastguard Agency and the fishing industry to develop a new statutory safety regime for under 12 metre fishing vessels based on a code of safe practice. I also reviewed accident and search and rescue information for this sector. I will shortly consider current proposals, together with the views of the Fishing Industry Safety Group.

Aggregates and Other Minerals

Mr. David Heath: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what assessment he has made of the environmental impact of the extraction of minerals other than aggregates. [131923]

Ms Beverley Hughes: Part 1 of the London Economics study "The Environmental Costs and Benefits of the Supply of Aggregates", published in 1998, examined how far the estimates of the value of environmental impacts of aggregates could be transferred to the surface extraction of other minerals. It was found that extraction of other surface minerals does not create any specific or additional environmental impacts that were not identified in the case of aggregates. However, the estimates of the value of the costs cannot generally be transferred directly, because the size of the environmental impacts of different types of extractive operations vary, and there may also be specific local factors.

Mr. David Heath: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what the constituent elements are of the average environmental cost of £1.80 per tonne associated with the extraction and transport of aggregates quoted in HM Customs & Excise press release Number 5 of 21 March. [131915]

Ms Beverley Hughes: Total environmental cost was estimated as at least £380 million tonnes per annum for 208 million tonnes of land-won primary aggregate. Just over half of the total estimated costs relate to local impacts of quarrying. The remainder relates to the non-local impacts of quarrying in National Parks and AONBs, generated by the application of the national survey results to such areas. It was assumed that quarries outside these areas have an impact only on those who live locally.

Mr. David Heath: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what research he has commissioned to identify the environmental cost and benefits of the supply of minerals other than aggregates. [131921]

Ms Beverley Hughes: No research has been commissioned to identify the environmental cost and benefits of the supply of minerals other than aggregates.

Mr. David Heath: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what the environmental costs per tonne are for each of the 16 crushed rock and sand and gravel quarries surveyed in the London Economics report into the supply of aggregates. [131916]

Ms Beverley Hughes: The quarries were selected in order to provide a coverage that was representative of all aggregate quarries in Great Britain in terms of source type, scale of output and population density. The methodology used could not generate robust estimates of environmental costs at the level of the individual quarry.

Mr. David Heath: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions for what reason the report he commissioned from London Economics into the supply of aggregates does not include a valuation of benefits: [131920]

Ms Beverley Hughes: The Government fully recognise the importance of aggregates to the economy. While there is a substantial body of information on the value and uses of aggregates, there had not previously been a valuation of the environmental effects of extraction.

The first phase of the research, published in April 1998, identified that the principal potential environmental benefits of aggregates extraction lie in the restoration of former quarries. Restoration could only be considered an externality—a benefit not reflected in the price of aggregates—if the value of the site was better after restoration than before operations began. It was not possible to identify any such sites in the time available. Most quarries are restored to a level in keeping with the surrounding landscape.

More generally, the survey method used assessed the value that respondents placed on the environmental impacts of quarries. This value therefore reflected the balance of perceived environmental benefits and costs of the quarry remaining open for its permitted lifespan.

Mr. David Heath: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions if the research he commissioned from London Economics into the supply of aggregates included survey questions designed to value the cost of aggregate supply from areas of outstanding natural beauty. [131922]

Ms Beverley Hughes: The research included a national survey to evaluate the costs of quarrying in areas of special environmental value. To elicit such values, respondents were asked about attitudes to quarrying in the Yorkshire Dales and Peak District National Parks. While attitudes to quarrying in other national parks or areas of outstanding natural beauty were not examined directly, the results of the national survey can be used to inform judgments about the values placed on quarrying in such areas. National planning policies for minerals are identical in the national parks and areas of outstanding natural beauty, reflecting the equivalent value society places on landscape protection in the two types of area.

Crossrail

Mr. Lidington: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions (1) who will have responsibility and over what timescale for taking forward the proposals on Crossrail contained in his Department's 10 year transport plan; and if he will make a statement; [132516]

(2) if it is his policy that the proposed Crossrail link should connect with the Chiltern Line; and if he will make a statement. [132517]

Mr. Hill: The Government's 10 Year Transport Plan announced last week by the Deputy Prime Minister envisages that an east-west rail link will go ahead. The shadow Strategic Rail Authority is currently undertaking a review of the possible east-west cross-London links and expects to report its findings to Ministers by the end of the year. Crossrail is one option for providing through services which will be considered and funding for preparatory work for an east-west rail link, such as Crossrail, was included in London's settlement under the spending review announced by my right hon. Friend the Chancellor last week. The Mayor will wish to consider Crossrail in the light of his priorities for an integrated transport strategy for London. A number of options exist for the westerly connections to the Crossrail option, including the Chiltern lines.

Chiltern Line

Mr. Lidington: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions who will be responsible for taking forward the capacity enhancements on the Chiltern line mentioned on page 47 of his Department's 10-year transport plan; what works will be included in these enhancements; over what timescale this will be; at what cost to public funds; and if he will make a statement. [132518]

Mr. Hill: The Chiltern franchise is one which the Franchising Director is currently re-negotiating and a decision surrounding a preferred bidder is expected shortly. When this decision is announced, the shadow Strategic Rail Authority will be in a position to provide capacity enhancement details on the Chiltern lines which have been developed as a part of the bidding process.

Central Railway plc

Mr. Lidington: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what his policy is towards Central Railway plc in the context of his Department's 10-year transport plan. [132519]

Mr. Hill: The Government cannot comment on the proposals that are being developed by Central Railway plc, as I understand they may in due course be the subject of a Transport and Works Act application.

Seat Belts

Mrs. Ray Michie: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions, pursuant to his answer of 2 May 2000, Official Report, columns 3–4W, on seat belts, what plans he has to publish the results of the public consultation exercise, being conducted by his Department, on draft regulations to require seat belts to be fitted to minibuses, coaches and buses which do not carry standing passengers. [132393]

Mr. Hill: Copies of the responses to the consultation exercise have been placed in the library of the Department of the Environment, Transport and the Regions where they can be viewed by appointment. A list of respondents has also been placed in the House Library. We plan to write to all the respondents when the regulations are published, explaining changes made following the consultation.

Mrs. Ray Michie: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what recent representations he has received about the provision of seat belts in buses carrying more than 16 passengers seats but incapable of exceeding 60 mph when they are used for school trips. [132392]

Mr. Hill: We have received 13 letters since the beginning of the year expressing concern about children being carried on buses without seat belts.

Mrs. Ray Michie: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what grants are available in the UK to enable coach operators to fit seat belts in minibuses, coaches and buses used in transporting children to and from school and if he will make a statement. [132394]

Mr. Hill: We are not aware of any grants available specifically for this purpose. The majority of existing minibuses and coaches will already be equipped with seat belts, and we estimate that over 95 per cent. of new minibuses and coaches are now fitted with seat belts at the time of manufacture.

GMOs

Joan Ruddock: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what end use or uses are planned for the 250 hectares of GM herbicide-tolerant maize being produced annually in UK field trials. [132647]

Mr. Meacher: The Government's agreement with the industry body SCIMAC, which was announced on 5 November 1999, sets out what will happen to the Farm Scale Evaluations produce.

The GM maize does not currently have all the necessary approvals to enter the UK food or feed chain. Therefore, the GM maize (and the all of the other GM crops) being grown in this year's farm scale evaluations programme will be destroyed.

Should the GM maize receive full clearance for food or feed safety during the farm scale evaluations period, the resulting produce will be utilised within identity-preserved channels which will ensure that consumer choice can at all times be respected.

Joan Ruddock: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions if he will make a statement on the recent deliberations of the informal gathering of Environmental Ministers on GMOs in Paris. [132648]

Mr. Meacher: I represented the United Kingdom at an informal meeting of EU Environment Ministers in Paris between 14 and 16 July. On 14 July, the Presidency facilitated a discussion on genetically modified organisms (GMOs) whose purpose was to look at wider issues outside the strict framework of the current revision to Directive 90/220 on the deliberate release of GMOs to the environment.

No decisions were taken as a result of this informal discussion. Ministers agreed, however, that it is important to finalise the conciliation procedure between the Council and the European Parliament on the revised Directive 90/220 and to ensure that the Directive is implemented in a framework which takes account of wider issues such as labelling, traceability and liability.

The Commission indicated that it would present new proposals on labelling and traceability of GMOs and GMO products in the autumn. It also undertook to work with member states to ensure that decisions under Directive 90/220 can be taken in a way which respects both legal obligations and the need to provide a high level of protection for consumers and the environment.

Air Routes

Mr. David Stewart: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions if he will make a statement on his Department's policy on varying the Cranford agreement at Heathrow to create more slots for fragile routes in the UK. [132528]

Mr. Mullin: My Department is currently undertaking a study into all aspects of airport capacity in South East England, having regard to future forecasts of demand. This is looking at a wide range of options: at this stage, nothing is ruled in and nothing is ruled out. However, there are currently no plans to modify the Cranford agreement.

Mr. David Stewart: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions if he will make a statement on his Department's role in the creation of public service obligations on internal UK air routes between Heathrow and fragile rural locations. [132522]

Mr. Mullin: The use of public service obligations (PSOs) is governed by European Regulation 2408/92. This empowers member states to impose a PSO on a route serving a peripheral or development region or on a thin route to any regional airport, where such a route is considered vital for the economic development of the region in which the airport is located, and where an adequate standard of service would not be provided by air carriers having regard solely to their commercial interest. Those standards relate to the continuity, regularity, capacity and pricing of services.

The UK Government have imposed PSOs on certain lifeline routes serving the Scottish Highlands and Islands. There are no PSOs on routes to London. A judgment in the European Court of Justice suggests that any PSO would have to be city to city, and not airport specific.

Lone Parents

Mr. Willetts: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions how many tenants in local authority and housing association accommodation are lone parents; what proportion of the total they constitute; and what proportion of new tenancies in the past year have been given to lone parents. [132399]

Mr. Mullin: The figures requested are as follows (for England only):

Registered Social Landlords (RSL)

It is estimated that in March 1999 there were 180,000 lone-parent households living in RSL accommodation; about 17 per cent. of the total. (note 2)

There were 204,168 new RSL lettings between April 1999 and March 2000, comprising 143,135 general needs lettings and 61,033 supported housing lettings. Lone-parent households accounted for 39,534 lettings (19 per cent. of the total). (note 3)

Local Authorities

At the national level, there is less information available for local authority households than for RSL households. (note 4)

In 1998–99 there were an estimated 503,000 local authority households headed by lone parents; about 15 per cent. of the total.

Of these, 81,000 had been resident for less than a year (21 per cent. of the local authority households that had been resident for less than a year).

Notes:

1. A lone parent with dependent children is defined as any person who is not married or cohabiting and who has their dependent children (aged under 16 or 16–18 and still in full-time education) living with them. Lone parents might be single (never married), widowed, divorced or separated.

2. RSL Tenants' Survey, 1999–2000, carried out by MORI on behalf of The Housing Corporation. Estimates are subject to sampling variation.

3. New RSL lettings data is from CORE General Needs and CORE Supported Housing, April 1999 to March 2000.

4. Local authority figures given are estimates from a sample survey, the "DETR Survey of English Housing", and therefore are subject to sampling variation.

Planning Appeals

Angela Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what is his policy on recovering planning appeals in England. [132884]

Mr. Raynsford: Most planning appeals are transferred to the Planning Inspectorate for Inspectors to decide on behalf of the Secretary of State. Typically between 100 and 150 appeals have been recovered by the Secretary of State for his own determination, out of around 13,000 planning appeals each year. My right hon. Friend's policy for recovering cases is set out in the following guidelines:

1. Residential development of five or more hectares or of 150 or more dwellings regardless of size of site.
2. Proposals for development of major importance having more than local significance.
3. Proposals giving rise to significant public controversy.
4. Proposals which raise important or novel issues of development control.
5. Retail or leisure development over 9,000 sq m.
6. Proposals for significant development in the Green Belt.
7. Major proposals involving the winning and working of minerals.
8. Proposals which raise legal difficulties.
9. Proposals against which another Government Department has raised major objections.
10. Cases which can only be decided in conjunction with a case over which Inspectors have no jurisdiction (so-called "linked" cases).
11. There may on occasion be other cases which merit recovery because of the particular circumstances.

These criteria replace the previous guidelines for recovering appeals set out in the 1986 White Paper "Planning: Appeals, Call-In and Major Public Inquiries" (Command 43).

Packaging Regulations

Mr. Burgon: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what consultations on the packaging regulations and related matters he plans in 2000; and if he will make a statement. [133098]

Mr. Meacher: A consultation on the charging mechanism for registration fees for compliance scheme members was published in May and the responses to that paper will be considered and decisions announced in due course. I will also shortly be issuing a paper with business recovery and recycling targets that the Government propose for 2001. The Government do not intend to carry out any further consultations in 2000.

In late 1999, the Department of the Environment, Transport and the Regions announced that it intended to carry out a consultation on the accreditation system for reprocessors under the packaging regulations, and related matters. However, earlier this year, an application for Judicial Review was made to the courts of a decision taken by the Environment Agency as to who should and who should not be accredited as a reprocessor for the purposes of the packaging regulations. As the Department of the Environment, Transport and the Regions is a party to this litigation, the proposed consultation will now be deferred until a court ruling has been given.

I was also minded to consult industry on proposals that have been put to me to change the operation of the Packaging Waste Recovery Note (PRN) System, but in view of the need for industry to focus fully at this stage on achieving the packaging directive recovery and recycling targets, which must be met in 2001, I have decided to defer the decision on whether to consult on this matter until after the deadline for meeting the directive targets has been met next year.

Local Authorities (Electricity Suppliers)

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions if he will list those local authorities which trade in electricity; and if he will make a statement. [130628]

Mrs. Liddell: I have been asked to reply.

The records of the Office of Gas and Electricity Markets show no local authorities as licensed electricity suppliers. As with any other legal person, a local authority which meets the requirements of licence exemption (set out in Statutory Instrument 1997 No. 989) may supply without a licence, and is not required to register with the regulator or the Department.

CULTURE, MEDIA AND SPORT

Millennium Dome

Mr. Baker: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport, pursuant to the answer to the right hon. Member for Wokingham (Mr. Redwood) of 9 June 2000, Official Report, column 397W, on the Millennium Dome, what average gross yield entrance receipt per visitor was anticipated for the Millennium Dome prior to 1 January. [126263]

Janet Anderson [holding answer 20 June 2000]: The average gross yield entrance receipt per visitor to the Millennium Dome anticipated prior to 1 January 2000, was £15.37.

Mr. Evans: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what estimate he has made of the number of schoolchildren from Wales who have visited the Millennium Dome free of charge. [131049]

Janet Anderson [holding answer 17 July 2000]: To date 23,000 schoolchildren from Wales have been allocated free school trips to the Dome.

Mr. Evans: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what estimate he has made of the number of people from Wales who have visited the Millennium Dome. [131050]

Janet Anderson [holding answer 17 July 2000]: There are various ways of purchasing tickets to visit the Dome, from Lottery outlets around the country, from the Dome Ticket Line, from travel and tourism companies and in person at the Dome. With so many possible purchase sources it is impossible to estimate the exact number of visitors from one particular location.

Mr. Peter Ainsworth: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport when he last met Mr. Robert Bourne of Legacy plc; what representations he has received from (a) Mr. Robert Bourne and (b) Legacy plc; and what discussions he has had with Legacy plc regarding the future use of the Dome site. [131369]

Janet Anderson [holding answer 18 July 2000]: My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport last met Robert Bourne on 30 March 2000. The future use of the Dome was not discussed. In December 1999 my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State took a decision to stand apart from the decision making process in recognition of the contacts which he has had with Robert Bourne of Legacy plc. Since December 1999, he has not received any representations from Robert Bourne or any other member of Legacy plc on the future use of the Dome.

Osborne House

Mr. Peter Ainsworth: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what discussions he has had with the Secretary of State for Health regarding the use of surplus beds at Osborne convalescent home by recuperating NHS patients. [127312]

Mr. Chris Smith [holding answer 22 June 2000]: Osborne House Convalescent Home remains open until the middle of October 2000 to recuperating NHS patients who are serving or retired members of the armed forces or the civil service. There has been no reason to discuss this current facility with the Secretary of State for Health, although note has been taken of the substantial alternative private sector provision available on the Isle of Wight.

New Millennium Experience Company

Mr. Peter Ainsworth: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport if he will list the firms of quantity surveyors employed by the New Millennium Experience Company since May 1997, the duration of their contracts and the remuneration paid to them in each case. [127309]

Janet Anderson [holding answer 22 June 2000]: The New Millennium Experience Company is currently employing Currie & Brown and Always Sayer and have done so since their contracts commenced in August 1997 and July 1998 respectively. As the contracts with both companies are ongoing, details of the fees paid to each are commercially confidential. Additional quantity surveying services have been provided by McAlpine Laing Joint Venture, as part of their construction management duties. The overall fee paid was calculated as a percentage of the construction cost, so it is not possible to separate the figure for the quantity surveying element of their work.

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport how much money was committed by the New Millennium Experience Company to underwrite the costs of the firework display on the River Thames on New Year's Eve. [128506]

Janet Anderson: The amount spent by the New Millennium Experience Company for the display, including fireworks, was £1.447 million.

Broadcasting and Telecommunications

Mr. Baker: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport if he will list those who have been formally invited to make submissions in respect of the forthcoming White Paper on broadcasting and telecommunications. [129686]

Janet Anderson [holding answer 7 July 2000]: My right hon. Friend has, in conjunction with the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry, sought views on the White Paper in a number of ways. The scope of the White Paper was announced to the House on 3 February 2000, Official Report, columns 729W and 668W. On 19 April 2000, Official Report, columns 499W and 548w, my right hon. Friends announced to the House that all views should be submitted in writing or via e-mail by 23 June and officials wrote on the same day inviting submissions from stakeholders in industry and related organisations, identified from those who had contributed to recent consultations on the topic. Details were widely publicised including on the official White Paper website (www.communicationswhitepaper.gov.uk). Further copies of the letter were sent out on request, to a total of 287 organisations and individuals. A list of their names has been placed in the Library.

As my right hon. Friends announced on 17 May 2000, Official Report, columns 125W and 131W, they also invited a number of experts to prepare papers and these were discussed at a seminar on 3 July. The expert team consisted of Sir Quentin Thomas (chair), David Cleevely, Liz Forgan, Andrew Graham, Janice Hughes, Mark Oliver, Damian Tambini and George Yarrow. The papers, with the report of the seminar's Chair, are also posted on the website, and copies have been placed in the Library, as announced on 21 July 2000, Official Report, columns 361W and 343W.

Millennium Festival

Mr. Sarwar: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport if he will make a statement on progress with the Millennium Festival in (a) Scotland and (b) the United Kingdom. [129931]

Janet Anderson: Through the commitment of the 11 UK National Lottery distributors, working in partnership with the New Millennium Experience Company, a £100 million Millennium Festival fund has been made available for national, regional and local Millennium celebrations in the year 2000.

The Millennium Festival in Scotland has provided £11 million to fund over 500 events throughout Scotland from the Highlands to the Borders. Highlights have included "The Thrie Estaties", a re-creation of one of Scotland's oldest pieces of drama recently performed in Fife and the Commonwealth Youth Games which will see young people from 14 countries coming to Edinburgh to compete in eight different sports. There have also been many hundreds of community events held across the country from Stewartry in Dumfries and Galloway to Inverness and Arbroath. The feedback received by the New Millennium Experience Company (NMEC) from smaller and local groups has been very positive.

A further £89 million has been made available for thousands of events, festivals, arts and sports activities which have been taking place throughout the year, across the rest of the UK. The Millennium Festival of Cycling celebrated the millennium with local family fun days, bike surgeries and a Cycle to Work day; the National Trust Coast Show has toured the UK coast with the Grand Turk, a replica 18th century frigate, providing an on-board exhibition of the maritime conservation work of the Trust and promoting public access to Britain's coastline; while the voice of young Britain has been heard on the internet radio station Youth FM, which has toured the UK with its mobile studio.

BBC (Independent Production Quotas)

Mr. Wyatt: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport when he expects to receive the report of the Director General of Fair Trading into the BBC's compliance with the independent production quotas for the year ending 31 March 1999; how long it has taken to report in previous years; for what reasons there was a delay this year; and if he will set a deadline for receiving such reports in future. [131568]

Janet Anderson: The Report of the Director General of Fair Trading into the BBC's compliance with the independent production quotas for the year ending 31 March 1999 is expected to be published in September. This is later than would normally be the case. The reporting period corresponds with the BBC's financial year (1 April to 31 March) and the Director General's report is usually published towards the end of the calendar year. The delay has been caused by the need to reach agreement on some issues of legal interpretation arising from the introduction of digital channels.

Hyde Park Cycle Way

Mr. Jenkin: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport how many accidents caused by cyclists there have been on the Hyde Park cycle way since it was opened. [131998]

Mr. Alan Howarth: Responsibility for the subject of this question has been delegated to the Royal Parks Agency under its Chief Executive, William Weston. I have asked them to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from William Weston to Mr. Bernard Jenkin, dated 25 July 2000:

I have been asked by the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport to reply to your Parliamentary Question about the number of accidents caused by cyclists on the Hyde Park cycle way since it was opened.

I am afraid I am unable to give you the information you have asked for. We keep a record of accidents involving injury to park users that are reported to the park manager or the Royal Parks Constabulary. The police do not investigate the cause of an accident on the cycle way unless there is evidence (or an accusation) that the cyclist was riding recklessly or dangerously, in which case the police would consider reporting the cyclist for prosecution.

The original cycle route in Hyde Park was opened in 1975 and records are no longer available for earlier years. We have no record of anyone being reported for prosecution for dangerous cycling as a result of an accident since the Royal Parks Agency came into existence in 1993.

Free Television Licence

Mr. Cox: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport how many people living in the London Borough of Wandsworth will benefit from the introduction of a free television licence for a person aged 75 years or over. [131952]

Janet Anderson: Television licences cover households rather than individuals. Figures for the number of households which will benefit from the concession are not available. However, the 1991 Census County Report Series, published by the Office for National Statistics, shows the population of the London Borough of Wandsworth as 252,425 of which 2.10 per cent. were men aged 75 and over and 4.47 per cent. were women aged 75 and over.

Mr. Willetts: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport, pursuant to his answer of 2 May 2000, Official Report, column 21W, if he will provide a breakdown of the £23.4 million cost of administering the concessionary television licence scheme for people aged 75 years and over. [131655]

Janet Anderson [holding answer 24 July 2000]: The estimated costs of administering free television licences for people aged 75 or over in 2000–01 are £24.3 million rather than £23.4 million as stated in my reply to the hon. Member of 2 May 2000, Official Report, column 20W, a transposition error for which I apologise. £3.3 million of these costs represent a carry over of set-up costs incurred in 1999–2000.

These costs will be met by the Department of Social Security, via payments to the BBC. The BBC is responsible for the administration of the scheme and has advised that a detailed breakdown of these costs is not readily available and could be obtained only at disproportionate cost and by diverting resources which would otherwise be devoted to the successful implementation of the scheme.

Stonehenge

Mr. Key: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what the total amount is spent by (a) his Department and its predecessor and (b) English Heritage since its establishment on (i) design work, (ii) public consultation and inquiries and (iii) other identifiable costs in connection with Stonehenge. [131535]

Mr. Alan Howarth [holding answer 24 July 2000]: I refer the hon. Member to the answer I gave him on 19 October 1999, Official Report, column 427W, giving details of costs up to mid October 1999. Since that date English Heritage has spent; (i) no money on design work, (ii) £23,758 on public consultation and inquiries, and (iii) £778,570 which includes consultancy fees relating to the new visitor centre, the World Heritage Site Management Plan and contributions towards the cost of the A303 improvement scheme at Stonehenge.

My Department and its predecessor Departments have not incurred any directly attributable costs in connection with Stonehenge. It is not possible meaningfully to apportion the cost of official time spent in respect of consultations and correspondence.

Mr. Key: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what price was paid for the site of the proposed Stonehenge visitors' centre at Countess East; and what price was paid for Countess Farm. [131534]

Mr. Alan Howarth [holding answer 24 July 2000]: The site for the new visitor centre at Countess Farm East has not yet been purchased. English Heritage is currently in negotiations with the owners so it would not be appropriate to comment further at this stage. Countess Farm West was purchased by the National Trust and no public money was involved.

World Cup

Mr. Greenway: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport on what date the Minister for Sport wrote to the Football Association seeking information on the cost of England's World Cup 2006 bid. [132521]

Kate Hoey: As I advised the hon. Member in my answer to him on 24 July 2000, Official Report, column 416W, I wrote to the Chief Executive of the Football Association on 20 June 2000 to request details of his plans to publish accounts for the 2006 World Cup bid.

British Tourist Authority

Shona McIsaac: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport when he will review the services and functions of the British Tourist Authority. [132835]

Janet Anderson: I am pleased to announce that, as part of a regular programme of reviews of non-departmental public bodies, my Department is commencing a review of the British Tourist Authority.

The terms of reference for the review, which will be conducted in two stages, are as follows:

To review the continuing need for the services and functions carried out by the British Tourist Authority (BTA) and consider how they can be provided more effectively in the future.

Stage One: Getting the organisation right

To determine whether there is a continuing need for the services provided by the BTA and to assess whether these services are best delivered by an NDPB.

To consider specifically:

the role and functions of the BTA, how its role has been affected by devolution and how and to what extent its functions contribute to the delivery of wider DCMS and governmental objectives;

the links BTA has or should have with other parts of the public sector and with private and voluntary sectors;

BTA's past performance against its aims, objectives, key targets and quality standards;

what BTA's customers and other interested parties (including their staff and trade unions) think about its role, performance and responsiveness to their needs; and whether there are any groups whose needs should be, but are not being addressed;

how the BTA should be organised to deliver responsive, efficient and quality services in future, and whether there is scope for other organisational options, such as abolition, market testing, merger, rationalisation, privatisation or strategic contracting out; and examples of good practice in how BTA has delivered its services.

Stage Two: Improving performance

Taking account of the Stage One report, to consider how the BTA might make improvements in efficient, effective and responsive service delivery.

To consider specifically:

the BTA's aims and objectives and the part they play in delivering wider DCMS and governmental objectives; performance targets and whether they are sufficiently comprehensive and stretching, and properly reflect the BTA's aims and objectives;

the structure and effectiveness of BTA's organisation and how it involves staff, including those at the front line, and their trade unions in the way it works; partnership arrangements and opportunities for joint working with other bodies to enhance the efficiency and effectiveness of service delivery;

how the BTA can make better use of new technology to improve the delivery of its services and functions;

the BTA's relationship with its stakeholders and the stakeholders' views on how it can best meet their needs, and the way BTA could improve its responsiveness; whether the BTA needs different freedoms and flexibilities to improve the delivery of its services;

the scope for increasing the current level of efficiency savings and income and to improve the utilisation of assets; and whether the roles and reporting arrangements of the BTA, the Department and Ministers need clearer definition and whether they provide proper support for operational and policy work.

The aim is to complete the review in six months.

Arts (North)

Mr. Peter Ainsworth: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport if he will publish the management and administration expenses of (a) Northern Arts and (b) North West Arts in each of the last three years. [132654]

Mr. Chris Smith: I have asked the Arts Council of England, which has responsibility for the English regional arts boards, to provide this information. When it is available, I will write to the hon. Member, and place a copy in the Library of the House.

SOCIAL SECURITY

Back Pain

Mrs. Gordon: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what (a) number and (b) percentage of employees took early retirement on grounds of ill health related to back pain in the last five years for which figures are available. [129820]

Mr. Bayley: This information is not held.

Winter Fuel Allowance

Ms Keeble: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how much has been paid out in Winter Fuel Allowances to people in Northampton, North from 1997–98 to 1999–2000. [131946]

Angela Eagle: The administration of Winter Fuel Payments is a matter for Alexis Cleveland, the Chief Executive of the Benefits Agency. She will write to my hon. Friend.

Letter from Alexis Cleveland to Ms Sally Keeble, dated 25 July 2000:

The Secretary of State for Social Security has asked me to reply to your recent Parliamentary Question asking how much has been paid out in winter fuel allowances to people in Northampton North from 1997–98 to 1999–2000.

Winter Fuel Payments (WFP) were introduced in the winter of 1997/98. For the winters of 1997/98 and 98/99 eligible people receiving Income Support (IS) or income based Jobseekers' Allowance (JSA (IB)) which included a pensioner premium, who were not living in residential care or a nursing home received payments of £50. All other eligible pensioners received £20 or £10 depending on their household circumstances. Where only one eligible pensioner lived in the household they would receive £20, otherwise they would receive £10 each.

Last winter, 1999/00 the amount of the payment increased to £100 for eligible households.

In 1997/98, WFP expenditure for Northampton North constituency was £321,340; in 1998/99, it was £298,540; and in 1999/00, it was £1,163,900.

I hope this is helpful.

Cold Weather Payments

Ms Keeble: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how much was paid out in cold weather payment in the years 1992–93 to 1996–97 in Northampton, North. [131945]

Angela Eagle: The administration of Cold Weather Payments is a matter for Alexis Cleveland, the Chief Executive of the Benefits Agency. She will write to my hon. Friend.

Letter from Alexis Cleveland to Ms Sally Keeble, dated 25 July 2000:

The Secretary of State for Social Security has asked me to reply to your recent Parliamentary Question asking how much was paid out in cold weather payments in the years 1992–93 to 1996–97 in Northampton North.

Cold Weather Payments (CWP) are paid to people awarded Income Support (IS) or income-based Jobseekers' Allowance (JSA) (IB) with a pensioner or disability premium or if they have a child under 5, when the temperature criteria is met for their postcode. Payment is issued automatically without the need to claim.

The information requested on CWPs is not available. CWP information is collected by weather station area rather than by Benefits Agency district or MP constituency areas. There are no details held of CWPs before 1995–96. The weather station at Bedford covers the area which includes the Northampton North constituency.

In 1995–96, estimated expenditure for the area covered by Bedford weather station was £2,850,000 and in 1996–97, it was £1,509,000. There were four periods of cold weather triggered at Bedford in 1995–96 and three in 1996–97.

I hope this is helpful.

Household Incomes

Mr. Berry: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how many, and what percentage of, children were in households with below half average income in each year from 1990 to 1999, calculated on the basis of the (a) Family Expenditure Survey and (b) Family Resources Survey, for Great Britain only, and on the basis of (i) equivalising and (ii) not equivalising net disposable household income. [131957]

Mr. Bayley: The information requested on the basis of equivalised income is published annually in editions of Households Below Average Income, copies of which are in the Library. The latest available information relates to 1998–99.

Information is not available on the basis of not equivalising household income. Equivalising income is an inherent component of ranking households by income, for income distribution statistics such as those referred to here.

Community Project Volunteers

Mr. Gorrie: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what plans he has to reduce the barriers posed by the benefit rules to people who wish to volunteer for community projects. [132246]

Angela Eagle: People who are in receipt of Social Security benefits may undertake unlimited amounts of voluntary activity including participation in community projects without its affecting their benefit providing other eligibility conditions continue to be met. Any expenses they incur in connection with their voluntary work may also be reimbursed in full without it affecting their benefits.

We are aware of the concerns expressed in the Policy Action Team report on Community Self Help and the Performance and Innovation Unit's report on Active Ageing (Winning the Generation Game) that, nevertheless, barriers to volunteering still exist and we are considering the issues raised.

Service Personnel (Pensions Appeals)

Mr. Matthew Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how many (a) former service personnel and (b) members of their families have made appeals to the Pensions Appeals Tribunal since 1970 for compensation arising out of their participation in experiments at the chemical defence establishment Porton Down; how many have been awarded compensation; and how many are awaiting adjudication. [132775]

Mr. Bayley: The information is not readily available and could be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

Jobseeker's Allowance

Mr. Hopkins: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security (1) how many Jobseeker's Allowance cases, resulting from refusals to claims based on regulations 51(2)(c) and 51(2)(b)(i) of the Jobseeker's Allowance Regulations 1996, are being stayed; and how many of the claimants involved are (a) men and (b) women; [132711]

(2) if he will estimate the number of (a) men and (b) women affected by (i) regulation 51(2)(c) and (ii) regulation 51(2)(b)(i) of the Jobseeker's Allowance Regulations 1996 for each of the last four years; [132712]

(3) what representations he has received in relation to the payment of Jobseeker's Allowance to term-time only workers; and if he will make a statement; [132714]

(4) if he will estimate the cost of restoring the entitlement to Jobseeker's Allowance for term-time only workers. [132715]

Angela Eagle: We have received representations about entitlement to Jobseeker's Allowance (JSA) or Income Support (IS) from ancillary workers and their representatives. The current legal position is that ancillary workers with an ongoing contract of employment, who are not entitled to Jobseeker's Allowance (JSA) or Income Support (IS) during term-time because of the hours they work, are also not entitled to JSA or IS during the school holidays.

This position, which reflects the original JSA provisions introduced in 1996, was confirmed by the decision of the Court of Appeal on 14 October 1999. The retrospective effect of the Court of Appeal decision means that there was never any entitlement to JSA during the school holidays for this group of ancillary workers. Leave to appeal to the House of Lords against the Court of Appeal decision was granted on 11 April.

Claims to JSA or IS by term-time workers are decided on an individual basis. We understand that no claims are being stayed under the formal staying provisions. However, the Appeals Service advise that as at 30 June there were 3,532 appeals involving term-time workers where decisions have been deferred pending the decision of the House of Lords. In addition, on the directions of Commissioners, 114 appeal cases are awaiting the outcome of the House of Lords cases. The gender breakdown is unknown and could be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

Information to estimate the number of men and women affected by regulation 51(2)(c) and regulation 51(2)(b)(i) of the Jobseeker's Allowance Regulations 1996 for each of the last four years is not available.

When JSA was introduced in 1996 the original intention of the legislation was that ancillary workers who were not entitled to benefit during term-time were also not entitled during school holidays. We have no accurate data on which to base a reliable estimate of the cost of extending entitlement to ancillary workers who are not entitled to JSA or IS during the school holidays because of the hours they work during term-time.

Benefit Fraud

Mr. Evans: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what the cost of social security fraud in the Ribble Valley was in each of the years between 1994 and 2000, broken down by type of benefit. [132725]

Mr. Rooker: Since 1998, Area Benefit Reviews (ABRs) have provided a continuous measurement of fraud and error in Income Support (IS) and Jobseeker's Allowance (JSA). It is currently not possible to provide a breakdown for other benefits.

Prior to 1998 no attempt was made to measure fraud in the Social Security system on the basis of areas and type of benefit.

Fraud figures are now available for each of the Benefits Agency's 13 Area Directorates (ADs). It is not possible to provide estimates of levels of fraud for specific towns, cities, counties or constituencies. Ribble Valley is part of AD8, which stretches from Liverpool and Chester in the south up to Workington in the north.

The ABR results estimate that the level of fraud in AD8 for the year ending September 1998 was £66 million, £47 million for IS and £19 million for JSA.

For the year ending September 1999, the figure reduced to £53 million, £37 million for IS and £16 million for JSA.

Ms Kelly: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security when he will publish the report of the second inspection by the Benefit Fraud Inspectorate of the London borough of Croydon. [133413]

Mr. Rooker: The report by the Benefit Fraud Inspectorate of the second inspection of the London borough of Croydon has been published today and copies of the report have been placed in the Library.

The BFI previously reported on the London borough of Croydon in March 1999. Since then the authority has responded positively to their recommendations, introducing the verification framework, providing more training for benefit staff and investigating items of post returned under the 'Do Not Redirect' mail scheme.

Inspectors also found that Croydon had improved working practices, verification procedures and how greater assurance that claims it pays are valid. This has contributed to Croydon administering 15 per cent. fewer claims and a fall in benefit expenditure of over £6 million in 1999–2000.

Although Croydon has made progress the report states it can do more to improve the security of benefit administration. This involves more rigorously applying sanctions, such as prosecutions and administrative penalties to make fraudsters pay for their actions and using all counter fraud measures available under new statutory powers, such as appointing inspectors.

The report provides recommendations aimed at helping the council address existing weaknesses and to improve the administration of Housing Benefit and Council Tax Benefit, as well as counter fraud activities.

My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State is now considering the report and will be asking the council for their proposals in response to the findings and recommendations of the BFI.

Benefit Overpayments

Mr. Burstow: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security, pursuant to his answer of 4 April 2000, Official Report, column 447W, on benefit overpayments, if he will estimate, in relation to the overpayments which took place on 17 and 18 January, the total (a) value of the benefits recovered so far, (b) number of customers who have repaid the overpayment in full and (c) number of customers who have paid none of the overpayment; and if he will estimate the total cost in administration and in unreturned benefit of the overpayment. [132360]

Angela Eagle: Administration of benefits and recovery of overpayments is matter for the Chief Executive of the Benefits Agency, Alexis Cleveland. She will write to the hon. Member.

Letter from Alexis Cleveland to Mr. Paul Burstow, dated 25 July 2000:

The Secretary of State has asked me to respond to your recent question asking pursuant to his Answer of 5th April, Official Report, column 447W, on benefit overpayments, if he will estimate, in relation to the overpayments which took place on 17th and 18th January, (a) the total value of the benefits recovered so far, (b) the total number of customers who have repaid the overpayment in full and (c) the total number of customers who have paid none of the overpayment; and if he will estimate the total cost in administration and in unreturned benefit of the overpayment.

The problem was caused by an incomplete file being erroneously passed to the Bankers Automated Credit Service for payment on 17th January, compounded by the correct file being reprocessed for payment on 18th January.

On 17th January 112,000 customers correctly received a payment into their bank accounts, while 60,000 customers did not receive the payment which was due. The following day, the same 112,000 customers received a duplicate of the payments into their accounts, while 60,000 received their payment a day late. The value of the duplicate payments amounts to £10.5million.

£7,311,107 has currently been repaid.

The information relating to the total number of customers who have repaid the overpayment in full, and the total who have paid nothing can only be obtained at disproportionate cost. It is however, estimated that over 68,000 have repaid in full, with a further 4,500 in the process of repaying. The balance approximately 39,000 have either not been pursued due to the small amount involved, or have refused to repay or have not responded to requests for repayment.

The estimated cost of administration is approximately £430,000, and the total currently unrecovered is approximately £3.2million.

I hope this is helpful.

ENVIRONMENT, TRANSPORT AND THE REGIONS

Waste Incinerators

Mr. Öpik: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what plans he has to seek to exclude farm and hunt kennel incinerators from the new European directive on waste incinerators; and if he will make a statement. [131477]

Mr. Hill: In negotiations on the European Parliament's proposed amendments to the waste incineration Directive proposal, the UK has made clear that it would like the text to exclude animal carcase incinerators provided that they are subject to alternative appropriate environmental regulation. We are now confident that the directive when it is adopted will include text intended specifically to exclude animal carcase incinerators with the proviso that the Commission intends to propose a revision to the animal waste directive providing for high environmental standards for incineration and co-incineration of animal waste.

Contaminated Land

Mr. Sheerman: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions (1) what steps he is taking to encourage research into contaminated land remediation; [132100]

(2) how much finance has been made available for research into the remediation of contaminated land, and how many hectares of such land have been remediated, in each of the last 10 years. [132098]

Mr. Mullin: Public funding is made available for contaminated land research on a variety of topics, including its remediation. This is undertaken by a number of bodies, including my Department, the Environment Agency, the Department of Trade and Industry, the Ministry of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food, English Partnerships, the Natural Environment Research Council, the Biotechnology and Biological Research Council, the Engineering and Physical Sciences Research Council, the Economic and Social Research Council, and the Medical Research Council. Further projects are being funded through various European programmes, including Life and the Fifth Framework Programme for Research and Development.

In addition, this type of research is an approved objective under the landfill-tax credit scheme.

It is not possible to provide a detailed breakdown of research specifically related to the remediation of contaminated land since funding programmes and individual projects within these programmes typically relate to wider issues than just remediation.

My Department has recently let a contract for a contaminated-land research audit. This aims to assess current contaminated-land research programmes and to identify gaps or duplication of effort and suggest ways to improve access to the results.

Figures for the amount of land that has been remediated in each of the last 10 years are not available. Most of this remediation has taken place as a result of voluntary action by landowners (for example, the redevelopment of brownfield sites). Statistics are not recorded when development takes place.

Croydon Tramlink

Mr. Matthew Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what the net cost is of the Croydon Tramlink project under the Private Finance Initiative; what the value is of public sector comparators in (a) pre-risk and (b) risk adjusted terms and what risks are identified as having been transferred; and if he will make a statement. [132269]

Mr. Hill: Croydon Tramlink was designed, built and is being operated by Tramtrack Croydon Ltd. (TCL), a private sector consortium, under a concession agreement with London Regional Transport made in 1996. Under the concession agreement TCL bear the risks associated with the construction and operation of the project. The Government made a fixed contribution of £125 million towards the projected capital cost of £200 million, in recognition of the wider benefits of Tramlink to the local area. TCL raised the remainder of the cost and run the system without public subsidy.

Best Value

Mr. Waterson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions to what extent the costs to local authorities of implementing the best value regime are allowed for in SSAs. [132440]

Ms Beverley Hughes: The Government added £24.25 million to the 2000–01 SSA totals to cover the cost of Best Value audit and inspection fees. Our spending plans for local government take into account the costs of implementing Best Value, together with the improvements in cost effectiveness that will flow from it.

A11

Mr. Spring: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions when he expects funding to be allocated for the upgrading of the A11 from Barton Mills to The Ford; and when he expects construction work to begin. [132539]

Mr. Hill [holding answer 25 July 2000]: Funding for the preparation of this scheme was confirmed in March this year.

The scheme is at an early stage in its development and progress is of course, dependent upon statutory procedures. It is therefore too early to identify a possible date for the start of works.

Railways (Wales)

Mr. Wigley: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions how much of the additional resources for rail transport, announced in the Spending Review 2000, will be ear-marked for railway services in Wales. [132793]

Mr. Hill: None of the additional resources announced in the Spending Review 2000 have been allocated to particular parts of Great Britain.

Waste Imports

Mr. Baker: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions if he will make it his policy to prohibit the importation of waste for use in energy-from-waste plants. [131663]

Mr. Mullin: Existing policies on imports of waste are set out in the legally binding United Kingdom Management Plan for Exports and Imports of Waste, which came into effect in June 1996.

The UK Plan prohibits most waste imports for disposal, including imports of municipal waste for final disposal, in line with longstanding UK policies of encouraging developed countries to become as self-sufficient as possible in waste disposal. Consistent with the EC Waste Shipments Regulation (EEC) No. 259–93, though, the UK Plan cannot prohibit imports of wastes for recovery, which could include incineration with energy recovery. However, individual shipments of municipal wastes for recovery require the prior consent of the UK enforcement authorities. There may be grounds for objecting to proposed shipments if the primary purpose of the importing facility is to treat local wastes and those wastes will be displaced by the proposed imports.

Available data show that no imports of municipal waste have taken place since the UK Plan took effect.

Stagecoach

Mr. Barnes: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions if he will arrange for a transcript of the final report of the public inquiry into the operation by Stagecoach of Licence PC3233 to be placed in the Library. [132294]

Mr. Hill: In the interests of minimising public expenditure, Public Inquiries conducted by Traffic Commissioners are transcribed only when necessary, such as in the case of an appeal. There is currently no reason to incur the cost of transcribing the Inquiry in question.

Regional Government (North-west)

Mr. Evans: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions how many letters he has received in each of the last three years requesting an elected north-west regional Government. [132718]

Ms Beverley Hughes: In the last three years, we have received two letters supporting elected regional government in the north-west, one in 1999 and one in 2000.

Roads (Ribble Valley)

Mr. Evans: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions how many miles of new roads were built in the Ribble Valley constituency in each year from 1994 to 2000. [132719]

Mr. Hill: New highway construction (includes realignment and dualling) in the Ribble Valley constituency in each year from 1994 to 2000 is as follows:

Correspondence

Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions when he proposes to reply to the letter of 11 April, sent by the right hon. Member for Alyn and Deeside, concerning Mr. Davey of Deeside, CH5. [133130]

Ms Armstrong: I can confirm that a response to my right hon. Friend's letter has been sent, following a delay owing to an administrative error.

Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions when he proposes to answer the letter sent by right hon. Member for Alyn and Deeside of 2 June, regarding Mr. Herbert of Mold, Flintshire, CH7. [133129]

Ms Armstrong: I replied to this letter on behalf of the Secretary of State on 21 July.

M6

Mr. Kidney: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions (1) how his Ten Year Transport Plan relates to the work of the West Midlands to North West multi-modal study; [132847]

(2) what impact the Ten Year Transport Plan will have on the proposal to widen the M6 motorway between junctions 11 and 16. [132846]

Mr. Hill: The Ten Year Transport Plan provides the resources to implement the outcomes from multi-modal studies. These studies exemplify our integrated approach to transport policy which we are applying to a series of transport problems around the country.

The West Midlands to North West multi-modal study is a good example. The aim of this study is to ensure that the M6 motorway retains its vital strategic role supporting the national economy. M6 Junction 11a-16 Widening and M6 Junction 16–19 Widening schemes were remitted for consideration in this study following the 1998 Roads Review. The study is also looking at the role that rail and public transport could play in easing the problems on the M6, and the scope for using new technologies, demand management techniques and giving priority to certain types of traffic to make better use of the existing infrastructure. The study will report in autumn 2001.

Mr. Kidney: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what action he proposes to take to relieve congestion on the M6 motorway between Junctions 6 and 10. [132848]

Mr. Hill: Over the next three years, the Highways Agency will be introducing Calmed Motorways measures on M6 Junctions 10–8 to regulate speed and reduce congestion and delays. The West Midlands Area Multi-Modal Study is looking at further measures to make best use of the M6 between Junctions 6–10 using speed and access control. The Birmingham Northern Relief Road will also provide a less congested alternative to the M6.

Roads (London)

Mr. Redwood: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions (1) for what reason one eastbound lane has been removed on the West Cromwell Road A4; [133168]

(2) how many new sets of traffic lights have been placed on the A316 from the M3 to the A4 in the last three years; [133165]

(3) for what reasons a narrow lane on the outside lane of the two lane dual carriageway A316 eastbound east of the junction with the B358 has been painted on, to narrow the two lanes cars can use; [133170]

(4) what is the hourly change in capacity of the A316 eastbound from the M3 to the A4 as a result of all the traffic management measures taken in the last three years. [133167]

(5) for what reasons the speed limit has been reduced on the A316 Country Way three lane dual carriageway. [133166]

(6) for what reasons three lanes have been reduced to two on the A4 at Queens Gate and Exhibition Road junctions. [133169]

Mr. Hill: This is a matter for the Mayor of London and Transport for London.

Mr. Dismore: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions if he will make a statement on the transfer of responsibility for London's trunk roads to Transport for London. [133246]

Mr. Hill: I am pleased to report to the House that the transfer of responsibility has been achieved effectively. Currently, however, Transport for London are developing expertise in key operational areas and the Highways Agency will be providing them with advice and support for a short handover period. This arrangement is the subject of a Service Agreement between the two bodies. Tfl are committed to achieving self-sufficiency as quickly as possible and it is envisaged that the assistance will generally be required until the autumn. The Treasury has agreed that the Agency may score this expenditure as extra-statutory and record it as special payments in their Appropriation Account.

Amber Rose

Mr. John D. Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions when the Marine Accident Investigation Branch will publish its report on the sinking of the Portavogie trawler, the 'Amber Rose', in October 1998; and if he will make a statement. [132717]

Mr. Hill: The Marine Accident Investigation Branch's (MAIB) report was sent to those involved in the accident, including the next of kin of the skipper, on Monday 24 July. It was made publicly available on Wednesday 26 July. Copies are available free of charge from the MAIB.

Tower Hamlets Housing Trust

Mr. Matthew Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what the net present cost is of the Tower Hamlets Housing Trust project under the Private Finance Initiative; what the value is of the public sector comparators in (a) pre-risk and (b) risk-adjusted terms; what risks are identified as having been transferred; and if he will make a statement. [132837]

Mr. Mullin: Information about the private finance agreement between Tower Hamlets Housing Action Trust (the HAT), Circle Thirty Three Housing Trust and its subsidiary Old Ford Housing Association (OFHA) is available on the DETR website at www.detr.gov.uk/ppp/2.htm#towerhamlets. The HAT's partners have agreed to invest £23 million, alongside the HAT's own investment of £55 million, to enable the HAT's programme for rehousing its tenants to proceed faster and at less cost to the taxpayer than would be possible with public funds alone. The risks transferred include the financial uncertainty arising from HAT tenants' right to choose between the London Borough of Tower Hamlets and OFHA as their future landlord.

Rail Transport

Mr. Wigley: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions if he will analyse the increase in expenditure on rail transport in each of the next three financial years, arising from the recent comprehensive spending review, between the expenditure he anticipates will be undertaken in England, Scotland, Wales and Northern Ireland. [133120]

Mr. Hill: The expenditure on rail announced in the Spending Review 2000 relates to Great Britain. It is not possible to provide a geographical breakdown at this stage. The distribution of expenditure will depend on progress with franchise replacement and on priorities for investment identified in the shadow Strategic Rail Authority's first strategic plan to be published in November.

Private Hire Vehicles

Mr. Ennis: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what decision he has reached following the consultation on proposals to amend the law after the judgment in the case of Benson v Boyce. [133204]

Mr. Hill: After very careful consideration of all the responses received and bearing in mind the weight of all the arguments, I have decided that the only people who should be entitled to drive a licensed private hire vehicle in England and Wales, outside London, without themselves having the appropriate licence, should be people conducting legally necessary tests, either of the vehicle or the driver. I am advised that it is already legal for people without a private hire vehicle driver's licence to conduct such tests. Accordingly, no order is necessary under the Deregulation and Contracting Out Act 1994.

Docklands Light Railway

Joan Ruddock: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions if he will provide a report on the progress of the Docklands Light Railway. [133205]

Mr. Hill: The Railway had an excellent year, the highpoint of which was the completion of the extension of the railway to Lewisham which the Deputy Prime Minister opened in November on budget and two months ahead of schedule.

On the 3 July 2000 ownership of DLR Ltd. passed from the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions to Transport for London.

Copies of the Annual Report and Accounts have been placed in the Libraries of both Houses.

Bull Bars

Mr. Leslie: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what progress has been made on making car fronts safer and controlling bull bars. [133245]

Mr. Hill: "Tomorrow's Roads—Safer for Everyone", our road safety strategy, commits the UK to backing proposals for the European Commission to bring forward a Directive to make car fronts safer. The Government believe that a pedestrian protection Directive could ultimately secure a reduction in deaths and serious injuries to pedestrians of up to 20 per cent.

The Government also said in the road safety strategy that such a Directive would be the best way of preventing particularly dangerous bull bars being fitted to vehicles. As a part of our consideration of how best to tackle bull bars, we asked the Transport Research Laboratory (TRL) to do some test work comparing a range of typical bull bars and base vehicles. TRL's report on this is being published today and copies have been put in the House Library.

In summary, TRL recommend that an approval procedure for bull bars should be considered, with a test speed of 40km/h (25mph). They warn against a low speed test, which is the best we could demand in any national approval scheme. We believe this confirms our view that controls on bull bars should be introduced on a Europe-wide basis. TRL's research is a thorough piece of work, and their initial findings have enabled us to submit a technical proposal to the European Commission setting out how bull bars could be dealt with in the anticipated pedestrian protection Directive.

The Government do, however, recognise that there is a desire for action to be taken as quickly as possible. We have therefore also submitted a comparable technical proposal for amending the 'existing' external projections Directive to include a test for bull bars, as a quick interim measure. This second proposal was well received by other member states when it was initially tabled in early June, and we hope it will make swift progress..

HOUSE OF COMMONS

Parking Facilities

Mr. Brake: To ask the hon. Member for Roxburgh and Berwickshire, representing the House of Commons Commission, if the Commission will introduce a workplace parking charge scheme. [131842]

Mr. Kirkwood: I refer my hon. Friend to the reply given to my hon. Friend the Member for Torbay (Mr. Sanders) on 12 April 2000, Official Report, column 149W.

Environmental Performance

Mr. Brake: To ask the hon. Member for Roxburgh and Berwickshire, representing the House of Commons Commission, (1) if the Commission will introduce measures and set targets to ensure the House of Commons improves its environmental performance by (a) conserving (i) energy, (ii) water, (iii) wood, (iv) paper and (v) other resources, (b) reducing waste, (c) phasing out substances damaging to health and the environment, (d) encouraging contractors to develop environmentally-preferable goods and services, (e) purchasing wood from sustainable sources, (f) drawing up emergency procedures for dealing with significant environmental risks, (g) ensuring buildings achieve a good standard of environmental performance, (h) following the Government's Green Claims Code and (i) ensuring staff work in an environmentally responsible manner; [131840]

(2) if the Commission will establish a target for the House of Commons (a) to buy electricity from renewable sources and (b) to switch from hydrofluorocarbons, perfluorobutane and sulphur hexafluoride to environmentally-preferable substitutes. [131841]

Mr. Kirkwood: This is a matter for the Serjeant at Arms; I have asked him to write to my hon. Friend.

HEALTH

Nurses Pay

Mr. Robathan: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what are the average rates of pay for nurses employed (a) on NHS Direct and (b) in the rest of the NHS. [106784]

Mr. Denham: The recently published results of the Department's August 1999 National Health Service Earning Survey, copies of which are available in the Library, show that the estimated average full-time equivalent salary for all qualified NHS nurses on national payscales was £19,300 after the pay awards for April 2000 are taken into account, and £22,200 if all other payments, e.g. allowances and overtime, are included. Information about the pay for nurses employed by NHS Direct cannot be separately identified from the pay of other qualified nurses.

Scientists

Mr. Sanders: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many (a) clinical and (b) biomedical scientists there are within each range of the relevant payscales. [108306]

Mr. Denham: The information requested is in the tables.

Department of Health's August 1999 NHS Earnings Survey.

Mr. Hilary Benn: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what is the average level of pay for medical laboratory scientific officers on grade 1 of the payscale working in hospitals in the United Kingdom. [115488]

Mr. Denham: The recently published results of the Department's August 1999 National Health Service Earnings Survey, copies of which are available in the Library, show that the estimated average full-time equivalent salary for all Grade 1 NHS Medical Laboratory Scientific Officers (biomedical scientists) on national payscales was £16,800 after the pay awards for April 2000 are taken into account and rises to £22,100 if all other payments e.g. allowances and overtime, are included.

Health and Social Care (Rural Areas)

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will assess the benefits of joint health and social care (a) planning and (b) provision in rural areas; and if he will make a statement. [127301]

Mr. Denham: We are persuaded of the benefits of joint health and social care planning and, where appropriate, provision. We have taken a number of significant steps to promote joint working.

Joint planning is especially important in rural areas where services are more dispersed and some people face problems of access. The provision of joint services across the spectrum of health and social care has been encouraged through use of the Partnership Grant, and by the flexibilities provided for in the Health Act 1999, and increasingly means that rural areas can be better served.

The partnership arrangements in the Health Act 1999 came into force in April 2000. The new flexibilities include pooling of funds, delegation of functions and money transfers. To date there have been 22 notifications of partnership arrangements, amounting to over £200 million of resources, of which nine are from local authority areas which would be described as largely rural. These include Devon, Warwickshire, Herefordshire, Gloucestershire, Wiltshire, Cumbria and North Yorkshire.

Infertility Treatment

Ms Atherton: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) what plans he has to make the provision of infertility treatment on the NHS a decision to be taken by central Government; and if he will make a statement; [128890]

(2) what measures he plans to introduce to increase the capacity of the NHS to provide infertility treatment. [128747]

Yvette Cooper: It is for health authorities to set their own priorities for the delivery of services and to consult locally in deciding on those priorities.

We will shortly be publishing the results of a survey into infertility provision across the country, which clearly demonstrate variations in the level of service provided. The Department will be examining ways to tackle unacceptable variations in service delivery while continuing to target our priority areas of cancer and heart disease.

NHS Pay

Mr. Matthew Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many employees working within the NHS earn (a) the national minimum wage, (b) between the national minimum wage and £3.80 per hour, (c) between £3.80 per hour and £4.00 per hour, (d) between £4.00 per hour and £4.20 per hour, (e) between £4.20 per hour and £4.40 per hour and (f) less than £5.00 per hour; what the number of staff in (a) to (f) represent as a percentage of total NHS staff; and if he will make a statement. [108899]

Mr. Denham: The information requested is shown in the table.

We are committed to eliminating the worst instances of low pay. The new national minimum wage removes the worst excesses of low pay and ensures greater decency and fairness in the workplace. The recent settlements reached for National Health Service staff on national payscales will give the lowest paid staff in the NHS proportionately more pay—taking the lowest adult hourly rate to over £4 per hour.

Healthy Eating

Mr. Sarwar: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will (a) make a statement on the Government's proposals to encourage healthy eating among children and (b) ensure that the Government's efforts are co-ordinated across the United Kingdom with the devolved administrations. [129928]

Yvette Cooper: As part of the strategy to tackle the issues raised in the National Diet and Nutrition Survey of 4–18 year olds, which we published in June, we have set up a cross-Government working group on improving children's diet and physical activity in England. It involves Health and Education Ministers, the chair of the Food Standards Agency and the chair of the Health Development Agency. Already, through the Healthy Schools Programme, we are encouraging schools to present consistent, informed messages about healthy eating and food on offer from canteens, vending machines and tuck shops. Additionally we have recently announced that we will be spending £2 million this year to promote fruit and vegetable consumption among school aged children. Any further proposals to improve children's diet will be included in the National Plan for the National Health Service which is due to be announced later this month.

As public health is a devolved topic, any proposals in this area for Scotland, Wales and Northern Ireland are the responsibility of the devolved administrations who may develop dietary policy and initiatives which best meet their own particular needs. However, I intend to keep in close contact with my ministerial counterparts in the other UK countries and fully explore the opportunities for co-ordination in this area.

Fluoride

Mr. Etherington: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will list the research projects funded by his Department to investigate the chronic toxic effect of fluoride on body enzymes and proteins. [130198]

Yvette Cooper: The Department and its predecessors have not funded any specific research projects on the effects of fluoride on enzymes or other body proteins.

Mr. Etherington: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will list for each (a) health authority in England and Wales and (b) water company supplying artificially fluoridated drinking water the safety tests that are carried out in respect of (i) silicofluorides and (ii) hydrofluosilicic acid. [130204]

Yvette Cooper: All substances used in the treatment of water supplies must be approved by the Drinking Water Inspectorate acting on behalf of the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions. Disodium hexafluorosilicate (a silicofluoride) and hexafluorosilicic acid (also called hydrofluorosilicic acid) are approved for use in artificial fluoridation schemes under the Water Industry Act 1991, subject to compliance with a Code of Practice on the Technical Aspects of the Fluoridation of Water Supplies published by the Department of the Environment. This code covers the design, construction, operation and maintenance of fluoridation plant to ensure that the correct level of fluoride is added and there are fail-safe precautions against over dosing. The code includes a detailed specification for the two chemicals together with advice to water companies on how to check the purity of the chemicals against the specification.

In-vitro Fertilisation

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many in-vitro fertilization treatments have taken place in each of the last five years in the United Kingdom; how many were (a) NHS-funded and (b) privately funded; and if he will make a statement. [130374]

Yvette Cooper: The information requested is not available centrally.

A recent Departmental survey of infertility provision showed that many health authorities could not distinguish their spending on infertility services from their general gynaecological budget. Many have difficulty identifying some or all of the treatments they purchase.

The Department has no access to information on the number of infertility treatments being privately funded.

Allergies

Dr. Kumar: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what plans he has to introduce a national framework for the provision of paediatric allergy services. [130996]

Yvette Cooper [holding answer 17 July 2000]: We are taking forward the National Service Framework (NSF) programme with the development of one new NSF per year. We will consider the proposed service area or care group for the next NSF against the criteria set out in "A First Class Service", as well as the priorities and targets identified in the National Plan.

Prostate Cancer

Mr. Ruffley: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) how many prostate-specific antigen blood tests were performed in (a) 1997–98, (b) 1998–99 and (c) 1999–2000; [130743]

(2) how many new biopsy-proven cases of prostate cancer there were in (a) 1997–98, (b) 1998–99 and (c) 1999–2000. [130750]

Yvette Cooper: The information requested is not currently available. The latest available figures of registrations of prostate cancer for 1991–1996. Figures for 1994–1996 are provisional.

Mr. Ruffley: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many (a) radical prostatectomy surgeries, (b) external beam radiation therapy courses and (c) radioactive seed implants (brachytherapy) for prostate cancer were performed in (i) 1997–98, (ii) 1998–99 and (iii) 1999–2000. [130748]

Yvette Cooper: The number of episodes where either a prostatectomy or radiotherapy for prostate cancer was performed, in NHS hospitals in England for 1997–98 to 1998–99 are shown in the table. Data for 1999–2000 are not yet available.

Number of Finished Consultant Episodes (FCEs[1]) for selected diagnoses and operations in NHS Trusts in England, 1997–98 and 1998–99

Diagnosis/operation	1997–98	1998–99
(a) Malignant neoplasm of prostate C61 (ICD10) with open excision of prostate M61 (OPCS 4R), or endorscopic resection of outlet of male bladder M65 (OPCS 4R).	6,468	6,366
(b) Malignant neoplasm of prostate C61 (ICD10) with Radiotherapy session Z51.0 (ICD10)	5,125	6,345

[1] An FCE is defined as a period of patient care under one consultant in one health care provider. The figures do not represent the number of patients, as one person may have several episodes within the year.

Notes:

Figures for 1997–98 are grossed for both coverage and unknown/invalid clinical data, but the figures for 1998–99 are ungrossed (i.e. no adjustments have as yet been made for shortfalls in data).

Mr. Evans: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what the average waiting time is for (a) a body scan and (b) a bone scan following prostate cancer diagnosis. [132722]

Mr. Denham: This information is not collected centrally.

Coronary Heart Disease

Mr. Cox: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many (a) men and (b) women were treated for coronary heart disease during the last 12 months. [130767]

Yvette Cooper: The number of admissions for coronary heart disease to National Health Service Trusts in England, by gender, for the financial year 1998–99, is shown in the table.

Male	186,585
Female	99,918

Meat Inspections

Mr. Gill: To ask the Secretary of State for Health which other EU countries are supportive of a meat inspection regime based upon risk analysis. [131100]

Ms Stuart: I am advised by the Food Standards Agency that at recent European Commission Working Group meetings on veterinary legislation, all European Union member states have expressed support for the Commission's initiative to fundamentally review ante- and post-mortem inspection procedures in slaughterhouses. All member states were of the view that the current meat inspection system should be re-assessed on the basis of risk. However, there were varying degrees of support for the extent to which it would be possible to move away from the present levels of official supervision and for plant operators to take responsibility for post-mortem inspection. Subsequent bilateral meetings between Food Standards Agency officials and representatives from the veterinary authorities in France and the Netherlands have shown these countries to be very supportive of a risk-based approach to both official controls and meat inspection procedures.

Mr. Breed: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what assessment he has made of the possibility of introducing the hazard analysis and critical control point system into the meat hygiene service. [131810]

Ms Stuart [holding answer 21 July 2000]: Hazard Analysis and Critical Control Points (HACCP) is a food safety management system which places responsibility for the production of safe food on food business operators. HACCP is widely regarded as the most effective approach to preventing food safety problems but is not currently a mandatory requirement in the meat slaughtering sector. The European Commission's proposals for new food safety hygiene rules, presented by Commissioner Byrne at the Agriculture Council on 17 July, would extend HACCP-based controls to all food production, including meat slaughtering. We welcome these proposals and the opportunity they give to modernise official controls and meat inspection procedures. The new legislation is expected to take at least two years to negotiate, with a further interim phase needed for full implementation. I am advised that the Food Standards Agency will be consulting widely on the Commission's proposals in developing the United Kingdom's negotiating position.

In the meantime, the meat industry is being encouraged to adopt HACCP on a voluntary basis. In a survey in 1999 about 54 per cent. of red meat (full throughput) slaughterhouses and 71 per cent. of white meat (full throughput) slaughterhouses in Great Britain claimed to have a full HACCP system in place.

Hospitals, Shrewsbury

Mr. Paul Marsden: To ask the Secretary of State for Health, pursuant to his answer of 3 July 2000, Official Report, column 39W, on the Royal Shrewsbury Hospital, how many patients were treated for each of the treatments listed; and if he will make a statement. [131165]

Yvette Cooper: The information is not available in the requested format. The table relates to the numbers of operations performed at the Royal Shrewsbury Hospital between 1 April 1999 and 31 March 2000.

	Number
Hip operations	80
Knee replacements	5
Hernia operations	717
Cataract operations	1,546

Action is being taken specifically on both reducing waiting times for patients needing orthopaedic procedures and on improving services to them. We are also improving access to cataract services. In doing so, we will improve the volume of surgery and reduce waiting lists. A capital modernisation fund of £20 million over two years from 2000–01 will allow local services to modernise.

Mr. Paul Marsden: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what plans he has to visit the Copthorne South hospital buildings in Shrewsbury; and if he will make a statement. [131699]

Yvette Cooper: Due to heavy diary commitments, there are no plans at present for the Secretary of State for Health to visit the Copthorne South hospital buildings in Shrewsbury.

Modernisation Fund

Mr. St. Aubyn: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) if he will list each application which he has determined for support from the Modernisation Fund, referred to in Figure 11.5 of the Departmental report, indicating the health authorities to which each application related, the amount of each application, the date of each application, the date of his decision on each application and the amount awarded thereunder, since the establishment of the fund; [129688]

(2) if he will place in the Library a copy of each application to the Modernisation Fund, referred to in Figure 11.5 of the Departmental report, by a health authority which has been personally determined by ministers, and the reasons cited for such determination, since the establishment of the fund; [129689]

(3) if he will list each application to the Modernisation Fund, referred to in Figure 11.5 of the Departmental report, by a health authority which was (a) personally determined by ministers and (b) determined by officials, indicating in each case the amount of each application and the amount of each award, since the establishment of the fund. [129690]

Mr. Denham [holding answer 17 July 2000]: The table listing, by health authorities, the awards for the eighteen 1999–2000 Modernisation Fund budgets that were allocated via a bidding process has been placed in the Library.

Correspondence

Mr. Wilshire: To ask the Secretary of State for Health when he will reply to the letter from the hon. Member for Spelthorne dated 17 February relating to his constituent, Mrs. J. Stevens. [130653]

Ms Stuart [holding answer 17 July 2000]: I replied to the hon. Member on 24 July.

Abortion

Fiona Mactaggart: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what action he has taken to promote the uptake of the Royal College of Gynaecologists' guidelines entitled The Care of Women Requesting Induced Abortion. [131463]

Yvette Cooper: The Department has alerted all independent sector places carrying out termination of pregnancy to this new guideline. One of the conditions for approval is that practice should be guided by authoritative guidelines such as those from the Royal Colleges and we will monitor implementation during inspection visits. We expect the guideline to be used as the basis of local protocols that will promote the development of high quality services and take account of local needs and service provision.

In addition, the guideline will be considered as part of the national sexual health and HIV strategy currently being developed.

Health Spending

Mr. Hesford: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how much of the additional spending for health announced in the last Budget has been allocated to achieve specific targets; what the targets are for each health authority; and how much funding has been allocated to each target within each health authority. [131744]

Mr. Denham: Table 1 shows the elements of the additional spending for health announced in the last Budget that have been earmarked for health authorities to date, together with targets where appropriate. Table 2 shows the sums that have been allocated to each health authority to date. Other sums have been allocated other than to health authorities or are yet to be allocated.

Table 1:

Purpose	£ million
Additions to health authority any primary care group/trust unified allocations, to achieve financial balance, to improve waiting lists and times, to implement winter plans, including developing intermediate care services and to action recommendations of the National Institute for Clinical Excellence.	600
To reward performance against indicators for waiting, winter planning and financial balance. The money is allocated in stages throughout the year. The criteria used to assess whether health authorities receive payments are based on national benchmarks and locally agreed plans.	60
For further development of services for wheelchair users. Health authorities are able to use this money flexibly to meet local needs and priorities in wheelchair services.	4
For further development of smoking cessation clinics. This money supports the National Priorities Guidance targets for smoking, namely 150,000 smokers accessing services and 20,000 quitting long-term; which in turn supports a 1 per cent. fall in prevalence by April 2001.	4
Further funding for booked admissions to reduce waiting. By March 2001 booking should be taking place in all acute NHS Trusts, in at least two specialities/high volume procedures. By the same date amount two million patients will have received a booked appointment or admission to hospital.	10
To support extended access to primary care and access to extended services in primary care. No specific targets for health authorities yet set.	54.5
For nurse leadership initiatives enabling all ward sisters and charge nurses to attend a leadership programme.	2
To increase critical care capacity (£5 million for neo-natal services and £145 million for adult intensive care of which £2.5 million goes to support local service redesign). Allocations to individual health authorities will be announced shortly.	150
For a flu vaccination programme. This will be offered to all aged 65 and over, as well as the 'risk' population. The main objective is to reduce the number of deaths and serious illness in those groups most likely to be affected.	60
For information technology. Allocations to health authorities and targets to be finalised.	60
For the development of cancer networks and for a peer review assessment visiting process for cancer services.	3

Therapists

Helen Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many (a) training places available for speech and language therapists and (b) applicants for places there were in each of the past 10 years. [130668]

Mr. Denham: These data are not collected centrally.

Data on the number of training places and the total number of applicants for places is a matter for the University and Colleges Admissions Service.

Mr. Gordon Marsden: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what assessment his Department has made of the (a) number of clinical placements available for physiotherapists and (b) recruiting requirements for physiotherapists. [131739]

Mr. Denham: The number of clinical placements available for physiotherapists is not held centrally. It is for education consortiums to assess the availability of sufficient, high quality clinical placements and commission the education and training to meet the needs of local health services.

The National Workforce Review document, "A Health Service of all the talents: Developing the NHS Workforce, Consultation Document on the Review of Workforce Planning" outlines wide-ranging and radical proposals and recommendations which look to address issues surrounding the way the National Health Service plans for, educates, trains and deploys its staff, to ensure that the NHS has the workforce required to deliver service priorities.

We are reviewing our assumptions about staff requirements in the light of the autumn 1999 census of NHS staff, the current survey of recruitment, retention and vacancy levels, and any other recent and relevant information.

Mr. Gordon Marsden: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what the ratio is of (a) speech and language therapists and (b) physiotherapists to service users in (i) Blackpool, Wyre and Fylde, (ii) the North West and (iii) nationally. [131741]

Mr. Denham: The data requested are in the table:

NHS Hospital and Community Health Services (HCHS): Therapists working within the speech and language therapy and physiotherapy areas of work, in England, North West Regional Office area and North West Lancashire Health Authority as at 30 September 1999

Mr. Gordon Marsden: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what assessment his Department has made of the impact on recruiting requirements for speech and language therapists of their increased responsibilities, with particular reference to dysphagic patients and children with special educational needs. [131735]

Mr. Denham: Following the Dearing Review of higher education in 1998, funding for training of speech and language therapists, chiropodists, dietitians, orthotists and prosthetics was transferred from the Department for Education and Employment to the Department of Health. This Department has commissioned consultants to carry out a labour market analysis of speech and language therapists. This will include any recruitment implications resulting from increased workload due to treating dysphagia patients and children with special educational needs.

Mr. Gordon Marsden: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what the retention rate was of speech and language therapists in the NHS in the last 12 months. [131742]

Mr. Denham: The information requested is not held centrally. The number of speech and language therapists (whole time equivalent) employed in the National Health Service increased by 17 per cent. between 1995 and 1999 (from 3,270 to 3,830).

Mr. Gordon Marsden: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what assessment his Department has made of research by Deborah Rossiter, of the Royal College of Speech and Language Therapists, into the recruitment and retention of speech and language therapists. [131737]

Mr. Denham: The research is being fed into the Department's current labour market analysis of the speech and language therapy profession.

Mr. Gordon Marsden: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what plans and targets his Department has for the recruitment of (a) speech and language therapists and (b) physiotherapists. [131743]

Mr. Denham: The national recruitment, retention and vacancy survey published in September 1999 gave us the latest authoritative data on staff vacancies from 98 per cent. of National Health Service trusts. It shows that only 3.3 per cent. of physiotherapist and 1.2 per cent. of speech and language therapist posts have been vacant for 3 months or more (in England). We are ensuring that effective recruitment and retention policies are in place to make the best use of trained staff and that training levels are sufficient to get a better match between supply and demand.

We are taking a number of steps which will help to address the issue of recruitment and retention of physiotherapists and speech and language therapists.

These include the publication of the framework for the management of human resources for the whole of the NHS, "Working Together: securing a quality workforce for the NHS", which sets targets for local employers to improve recruitment and retention year on year. We have issued guidance to the service on improving working lives and we will shortly be issuing guidance on Lifelong Learning and Continuing Professional Development.

We are also modernising services and modernising employment practice in the NHS: developing more supportive, flexible and family friendly working practices; extending and improving investment in lifelong learning and professional development; tackling violence and racism in the workplace; involving staff in the way services are delivered and in the changes and developments that affect their working lives.

We have accepted in full the pay increases recommended by the Pay Review Body for Nursing Staff, Midwives, Health Visitors and Professions Allied to Medicine (including physiotherapists) for 2000–01. The Review Body have recommended an across the board increase of 3.4 per cent. for 2000–01 and for the second year running these increases will be paid in full without staging. Taken together with last year's award, this means that physiotherapists will have received real terms increases of over 5 per cent., the best settlement for over 10 years.

Earlier this month, speech and language therapists accepted the pay offer for the years 2000–01 (3.25 per cent. or £300 whichever is the higher) and 2001–02 (a formula on which negotiations will be based) and the agreement will be promulgated to the NHS on 27 July 2000. Manufacturing Science and Finance Union, the main union representing speech and language therapists, balloted their speech and language therapist membership on the offer and the vote in favour of accepting the offer was 98 per cent.

Career prospects for speech and language therapists have been improved with the introduction on 19 May of a revised grading structure for speech and language therapists which extends the existing pay spine to match that of clinical psychologists.

Mechanically Recovered Meat

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what safeguards are in place to ensure that mechanically recovered meat is not contaminated with specified risk material; and if he will make a statement. [131891]

Ms Stuart: I am advised by the Food Standards Agency that specified risk material (SRM) controls are designed to ensure that all SRM is completely separated from the parts of the carcases of cattle and sheep which might be used for food before any further processing, such as the production of mechanically recovered meat (MRM), can take place. These controls are rigorously supervised by the Meat Hygiene Service, which inspects each carcase individually to ensure that all traces of SRM have been removed before the health mark is applied. As an additional safeguard, the SRM rules also prohibit the use of vertebral column of cattle or sheep, which will have been in contact with SRM in the form of the spinal cord, in MRM production.

Air Quality

Mr. Sheerman: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) what guidance his Department gives on the frequency of air-changes in residential accommodation that is compatible with good health; [132083]

(2) what guidance his Department gives to asthma sufferers on the importance of air circulation in the domestic environment; [132084]

(3) what recent research he has commissioned on the link between asthma and air quality in the domestic and work environment; [132368]

(4) what steps he is taking to evaluate the role of air quality in home and business environments on health. [132085]

Yvette Cooper: The Health and Safety Executive has commissioned research into the relationship between certain substances and occupational asthma. It has also commissioned research to develop monitoring methods and improve workplace controls.

The Health and Safety Commission sets occupational exposure limits for some 500 substances. Virtually all hazardous substances that can cause ill health in the workplace are subject to control under the Control of Substances Hazardous to Health Regulations.

The Department also provides information for the public on air pollution and health in the form of an information pack. This pack contains a wide range of information, including leaflets and factsheets from organisations such as the National Asthma Campaign and the Lung and Asthma Information Agency that contains specific health advice for people with asthma. The pack also provides information on how to obtain Department of the Environment, Transport and the Regions leaflets on such issues as dust mites in the home, carbon monoxide poisoning in the home and damp and mould control for the home.

The Department's Committee on the Medical Effects of Air Pollutants has recently published advice on the health effects of air pollutants and this includes advice on precautions to take with pollutants indoors, including maintaining domestic appliances and ventilation. The importance of ventilation to improve air quality in the home is well understood and is enforced through the building regulations.

In 1997, the Department, together with the DETR jointly commissioned a research programme "The Effects On Health Of Exposure To Air Pollutants And Damp In The Home". This £1.3 million programme focused on air pollution in the home and its effects on health. Specific projects concentrated on exposure to indoor air pollutants in children and their mothers with asthma and exposure to particulate air pollution and respiratory illness. The projects are due for completion later this year when the results and conclusions will be assessed.

Pathology Services

Mr. Nicholas Winterton: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will make a statement on (a) the role of pathology services in the National Health Service and (b) what steps he has taken to increase recruitment and retention of staff in the pathology service. [132403]

Mr. Denham: Pathology services are an integral part of effective National Health Service diagnosis, treatment, patient care and screening programmes, they play an important role in protecting the public health in the new NHS.

The Department is currently developing a specific strategy for improving recruitment and retention; liaising closely with employers, the Royal College of Pathologists, professional bodies and trade unions to raise the profile of the work of pathology staff. In addition, the National Advisory Group for Scientists and Technicians has been charged to develop plans to improve workforce planning, education, training and career development.

Drinking Water (Chlorination)

Mr. Baker: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what representations he has received from (a) the Spina Bifida and Hydrocephalus Association, (b) the Pure Water Association and (c) other bodies regarding the chlorination of drinking water. [132345]

Yvette Cooper [holding answer 24 July 2000]: No representations have been received.

Mr. Baker: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will make a statement on the study commissioned by his Department into the use of chlorine-treated drinking water, with particular reference to (a) its cost, (b) when the report is expected and (c) the reasons for his Department's decision to commission the study. [132330]

Yvette Cooper [holding answer 24 July 2000]: The Committee on Toxicity of Chemicals in Food, Consumer Products and the Environment advised that:

> We consider that there is insufficient evidence to conclude that the presence of chlorination by-products in tap-water increases the risk of adverse reproductive outcomes. We recommend, however, that the claimed associations between patterns of drinking-water intake and the incidence of adverse reproductive outcomes be investigated further, since any causal association would be of significant public health concern.

The statement was published in the 1999 Annual Report of the Committees on Toxicity, Mutagenicity and Carcinogenicity of Chemicals in Food, Consumer Products and the Environment. Copies of the Annual Report are in the Library, and may be found on the internet at http://www.doh.gov.uk/coc.htm.

In view of the Committee's advice, funding Departments (which include the Department of Health and the Department of the Environment, Transport and the Regions), commissioned the Small Area Health Statistics Unit (SAHSU) at Imperial College to undertake a case-control epidemiological study to examine whether there are adverse reproductive outcomes associated with chlorination by-products in drinking-water. The study is part of core funding of SAHSU, and is not costed separately. The first part of the study, which is investigating the hypothesis of an association between chlorination byproducts and stillbirths, low birth weight, birth weight distribution and sex ratio, is expected to report in the autumn of 2000. A proposed second phase will investigate the hypothesis of an association with certain congenital anomalies (cleft lip/palate, and major defects of the heart and of the abdominal wall), and is expected to take about 16 months to complete.

In addition, the Department of Health has commissioned the Medical Research Council Institute of Environment and Health to examine the techniques of systematic review and meta-analysis in environmental epidemiology and toxicology. The project, which costs £85,260, and which is expected to report by the end of 2002, will include consideration of epidemiological studies on chlorinated drinking-water and reproductive outcomes as one example of a body of research to which such techniques may be applied.

Mr. Baker: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what advice his Department gives to water companies regarding the chlorination of drinking water. [132347]

Yvette Cooper [holding answer 24 July 2000]: Chemical disinfection of drinking-water is an important part of the treatment of water to protect human health. There are, however, concerns that traces of the chemical by-products of disinfection processes may be harmful. Standing expert advisory committees, whose members are appointed by the Chief Medical Officer, have advised the Drinking Water Inspectorate (DWI) at the Department of the Environment, Transport and the Regions on the evidence linking the consumption of chlorinated tap-water with cancers and with adverse reproductive outcomes. The Committee on Carcinogenicity of Chemicals in Food, Consumer Products and the Environment concluded that:

> Overall, the further epidemiological studies fail to provide persuasive evidence of a consistent relationship between chlorinated drinking-water and cancer. It remains possible that there may be an association between chlorinated drinking water and cancer which is obscured by problems such as the difficulty of obtaining an adequate estimate of exposure to chlorination by-products, misclassification of source of drinking water (including the use of bottled water), failure to take adequate account of confounding factors (such as smoking status), and errors arising from non-participation of subjects.
> We therefore consider that efforts to minimise exposure to chlorination by-products remain appropriate, providing that they do not compromise the efficiency of disinfection of drinking-water.

The statement was published in March 2000 in the 1998 Annual Report of the Committees on Toxicity, Mutagenicity and Carcinogenicity of Chemicals in Food, Consumer Products and the Environment.

The Committee on Toxicity of Chemicals in Food, Consumer Products and the Environment concluded that:

> We consider that there is insufficient evidence to conclude that the presence of chlorination by-products in tap-water increases the risk of adverse reproductive outcomes. We recommend, however, that the claimed associations between patterns of drinking-water intake and the incidence of adverse reproductive outcomes be investigated further, since any causal association would be of significant public health concern. We therefore consider that efforts to minimise exposure to chlorination by-products by individuals and water authorities remain appropriate, providing that they do not compromise the efficiency of disinfection of drinking water.

The statement was published in March 2000 in the 1999 Annual Report of the Committees on Toxicity, Mutagenicity and Carcinogenicity of Chemicals in Food, Consumer Products and the Environment. Copies of the Annual reports have been placed in the Library, and may be found on the internet at http://www.doh.gov.uk/coc.htm

The advice was passed on to water and sewerage companies, and water companies, in England and Wales, by DWI in Information Letter 12/99 on 14 July 1999. The letter included additional advice from DWI to the companies. The letter may be found on the internet at http://www.dwi.detr.gov.uk/regs/infolett/1999/info1299.htm

Mr. Baker: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what recent discussions officials in his Department have had with their counterparts in other Governments regarding the chlorination of drinking water. [132346]

Yvette Cooper [holding answer 24 July 2000]: There have been no recent discussions. However, officials keep in touch with scientific and regulatory developments in this area, through published literature, contact with scientists working in this field, involvement in preparation of World Health Organisation guidelines and evaluations, and through colleagues in the Department of the Environment, Transport and the Regions.

Mobile Phones

Dr. Gibson: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what assessment he has made of (a) the NRPB report and (b) the Stewart report on mobile phones. [132435]

Yvette Cooper: The most recent document concerning mobile phone base stations published by the National Radiological Protection Board (NRPB) is "Exposure to Radio Waves Near Mobile Phone Base Stations" (NRPB-R321 published June 2000). A summary is available at www.nrpb.org.uk. The contents of this report have been noted and copies have been placed in the Library.

The Stewart report published on 11 May made wide-ranging recommendations. We issued our initial response on the same day. The Department is keeping an overview of action taken by the appropriate Government Departments to respond to the report's recommendations. Progress is as follows:

Advice has already been issued to local education authorities and schools about base stations in an around school premises and the use of mobile phones by children.

Research recommendations are being taken forward by the Department of Health in conjunction with the Department for Trade and Industry, the research councils and industry. An announcement is planned for September.

The Department of Trade and Industry is also developing arrangements for information about mobile phones exposures to be made available and on measurement and auditing of base stations, for which schools are seen as the priority.

The Department of the Environment, Transport and the Regions will shortly be consulting on the principle and precise scope of possible changes to the planning process for mobile phone base stations.

The Department of Health will issue a leaflet later this year to be distributed widely and, specifically, to be available where mobile phones are sold.

Human Embryo Stem Cells

Dr. Gibson: To ask the Secretary of State for Health when he expects to receive the report from the Chief Medical Officer about the use of human embryo stem cells for medical research. [132436]

Yvette Cooper: The Chief Medical Officer's Expert Group on Therapeutic Cloning has completed its work on the potential benefits, risks and the ethical issues raised by developments in stem cell research and cell nuclear replacement. We are now considering the report's recommendations.

Human Papilloma Virus

Dr. Gibson: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what criteria will be used to set up the pilot schemes for human papilloma virus testing. [132504]

Yvette Cooper: The final criteria for selection of joint pilot sites for human papilloma virus testing and liquid based cytology have not yet been agreed by the Project Steering Group. They will broadly cover areas such as population size, high quality audit and historical information, number of smears taken annually and meeting national population coverage targets.

Liver Cancer

Dr. Gibson: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what assessment he has made of hepatitis C infection levels of Government cancer strategy in relation to liver cancer. [132117]

Yvette Cooper [holding answer 24 July 2000]: Studies carried out in a number of countries have shown that a percentage (generally about 1–5 per cent.) of individuals with chronic hepatitis C infection may progress to primary hepatocellular cancer. The Public Health Laboratory Service, in association with the British Association for the Study of the Liver, is setting up a surveillance system to monitor end stage liver disease attributed to hepatitis C.

As part of our modernisation programme for the National Health Service, we are taking action on a number of fronts to ensure prompt access to cancer diagnosis and treatment across the country. This will include improving liver cancer services.

Smoking

Mr. Hunter: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what his estimate is of the total tobacco consumption in the United Kingdom in (a) 1997, (b) 1998 and (c) 1999. [132340]

Yvette Cooper: The number of cigarettes released for home consumption in the United Kingdom were in (a) 1997 81.0 billion (b) 1998 75.3 billion, and (c) 1999 34.2 billion. It is not possible accurately to estimate overall cigarette consumption because of the effects of smuggling and forestalling.

Mr. Hunter: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if, before supporting the proposal for an EU Directive on the manufacture, production and sale of tobacco products he prepared a regulatory impact assessment on the proposal. [132339]

Yvette Cooper [holding answer 24 July 2000]: Yes. This assessment was available to the Scrutiny Committees of both Houses of Parliament examining the Directive proposals.

Mr. Hunter: To ask the Secretary of State for Health which members of staff of Action on Smoking and Health (a) have been and (b) are to be seconded to his Department; and to whom they will be responsible and report. [132342]

Yvette Cooper [holding answer 24 July 2000]: No member of the Action on Smoking and Health staff has been seconded to the Department and no decisions have been taken on any future arrangement.

Mr. Hunter: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he intends to continue to authorise the use of the product descriptions (a) low, (b) light, (c) ultra light, (d) mild and (e) other similar terms relating to tobacco products. [132341]

Yvette Cooper [holding answer 24 July 2000]: As currently drafted, the Directive on Labelling, Manufacture and Sale of Tobacco Products would ban the use of such descriptions. The original European Commission proposal permitted member states to allow the terms to be used on tobacco products but the United Kingdom has argued strongly against any form of derogation.

Biomedicine

Mr. Wareing: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what plans Her Majesty's Government have to sign up to the European Convention on Human Rights and Biomedicine; and if he will make a statement. [131643]

Yvette Cooper [holding answer 24 July 2000]: The Convention on Human Rights and Biomedicine contains a wide range of complex ethical and legal provisions. The rights of patients, whether undergoing medical treatment or research, are central to the Convention. The provisions cover a mixture of devolved matters (such as consent to treatment) and reserved matters (such as embryo research). We are considering the most appropriate way forward in the light of devolution.

Public Records

Mr. Matthew Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will open for public inspection the file DT 33/2055 at the Public Record Office. [132752]

Mr. Denham: File DT 33/2055 contains records of the General Nursing Council for England and Wales (GNC). The decision whether or not to open the file for public inspection is a matter for the United Kingdom Central Council for Nursing, Midwifery and Health Visiting, the successor body to the GNC.

Official Visits

Mr. Matthew Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will list the visits outside Britain made by his Department's Permanent Secretary on official business since 1 January 1999, indicating the date and purpose of the visit in each case. [132751]

Ms Stuart: The Permanent Secretary visited Bonn, Germany on 17 to 18 May 1999 to discuss the German health system.

Health Service Managers

Mr. Burnett: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what guidance he issues to health authorities or trusts about employment contracts of senior administrative and managerial personnel employed by the NHS; and where they are published. [132708]

Mr. Denham: The National Health Service Executive have issued guidance to NHS trusts and health authorities on employment contacts in respect of:

the pay and conditions of service for NHS managers in trusts and health authorities who retain residual national arrangements, set out in Personnel Management (86)7 (which also included a model contract for general managers, amended by Health Service Guidance (96)1), and in Health Circular (89)1 (which also included model contract clauses for senior managers);

the pay and conditions for managers in health authorities, effective since 1 April 1998, set out in Health Service Circular 1998/017;

a service-wide policy restricting the use of short term contract for all staff working in the NHS, set out in Health Service Circular 1999/108; and, guidance on the early termination of general and senior managers fixed term rolling employment contracts, set out in Health Service Circular 199/138 and Health Service Circular 1999/140.

Copies of these are in the Library. Guidance published since 1996 is also available on the Department's website.

Medical Inquiries

Mr. Burnett: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will introduce legislation to require the General Medical Council to hold its inquiries in public and to put the conclusions of its inquiries into the public domain. [132706]

Ms Stuart: Much of the fitness to practise work of the General Medical Council is already conducted in public. Decisions that a doctor is not fit to practise are always made public.

The General Medical Council is undertaking a "Structural and Legal Review" of its fitness to practise procedures. The GMC will publish its proposals for modernisation later this year. We will need to consider how far they meet the rising expectations of the public and Parliament for fundamental changes to the way the GMC deals with doctors who do not meet the expected standards of conduct and performance set by the profession. If the Council cannot deliver the reform that is necessary we will act to put into place effective measures for the protection of the public.

Mr. Burnett: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what guidance he issues on non-judicial inquiries into events in the NHS; how many of such inquiries have been conducted; how many reports of such inquiries have been put in the public domain; and how many such inquiries have been carried out by employees of the NHS since May 1997. [132707]

Ms Stuart: Non-statutory inquiries into events in the National Health Service are carried out at many levels of NHS management as part of the management process. They may be initiated internally by staff, through formal mechanisms such as the NHS Complaints Procedures, or through external agencies. Some inquiries may be staffed from within the NHS organisation while others will have the benefit of independent members. No general guidance has been issued, although specific information on the NHS Complaints Procedures was issued under cover of Executive Letter (96)19, copies of which are available in the Library.

Full details of these inquiries are not held centrally. For information on inquiries established by the Department since December 1997 I refer the hon. Member to the reply given to the hon. Member for North Devon (Mr. Harvey) on 25 July 2000, Official Report, columns 499–500W. all those inquiries listed have either reported publicly or intend to do so.

Waiting Lists

Mr. Evans: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) how many people in Ribble Valley waited (a) between six and 12 months, (b) between 12 and 18 months and (c) over 18 months for an in-patient appointment; [132723]

(2) how many people in Ribble Valley waited (a) between three and six months, (b) between six and nine months and (c) over nine months for their first out-patient appointment; [132724]

(3) how many people from the Ribble Valley died while on an NHS waiting list between 1994 and 2000. [132727]

Mr. Denham: Patients waiting for a first out-patient appointment at Blackburn, Hyndburn and Ribble Valley Health Care National Health Service Trust at 31 March 2000 for all specialities, were:

waiting 13–25 weeks—516 patients waiting over 26 weeks—147 patients and total waiting over 13 weeks—663 patients.

Patients waiting for an in-patient appointment at Blackburn, Hyndburn and Ribble Valley Health Care NHS Trust at 31 March 2000 for all specialities, were:

between 6 and 12 months—857 patients between 12 and 18 months—48 patients and over 18 months—none.

Information relating to the number of people from Ribble Valley who died on an NHS waiting list is not collected centrally.

Note:

The waiting list information available is collected centrally by the Blackburn, Hyndburn and Ribble Valley Health Care NHS Trust and not by area of residency.

Prescription Charges

Mr. Tynan: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what provision is made in relation to prepayment prescription charges for payment to be made in instalments by direct debit instalments. [132364]

Ms Stuart: In England prescription pre-payment certificates (PPCs) are not available by instalments. To introduce payment on a sliding scale, by instalments or by direct debit, would inevitably increase administrative costs. This would in turn lead to higher season ticket fees, and so reduce the potential savings and make them less attractive for those who continue to use them. However, we recognise that some people may have difficulty in finding the fee for an annual PPC in one payment, which is why we have also made PPCs available for four-monthly periods at a cost of £31.40.

FOREIGN AND COMMONWEALTH AFFAIRS

Absenteeism

Mr. Matthew Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what the level of absenteeism was in (a) his Department, (b) its agencies and (c) its related public bodies in the last year for which figures are available; what his estimate is of the total cost of this level of absenteeism to public funds in each of the last five years; and if he will make a statement. [131321]

Mr. Hain [holding answer 18 July 2000]: In 1999–2000 staff in the Department took an average of eight days of sickness absence. Based on an average salary cost (including superannuation and national insurance) the cost to the FCO was £5.5 million. These figures include absences at the FCO's only Executive Agency, Wilton Park, which employs around 40 staff, and the FCO's non-departmental public bodies, all of which employ fewer than seven staff. The cost of this level of absenteeism in the previous four years would have been £5.3 million in 1998–99, £5.3 million in 1997–98, £5.4 million in 1996–97 and £5.4 million in 1995–96. The average number of days of sickness absence in the British Council's operations in the United Kingdom in 1999–2000 was 5.3 days at a total cost of £726,829. The cost of this level of absenteeism in the previous four years would have been £701,882 in 1998–99, £680,825 in 1997–98, £660,401 in 1996–97 and £640,589 in 1995–96.

Nepal

Mr. Gerrard: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs (1) what reports he has received regarding the demonstrations held in the Kailali district of Nepal and in Katmandu by bonded labourers demanding their freedom; [132308]

(2) if he will make early representations to the Government of Nepal urging it to release bonded labourers from slavery. [132309]

Mr. Hain: We are aware of the demonstrations. The announcement made by the Nepalese Government on 17 July to abolish bonded labour will be well received by those campaigning against it.

Indian Sub-continent (UK Visits)

Mr. Gorrie: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what plans he has to reduce the obstacles presented to citizens from the Indian sub-continent wishing to visit their immediate family in the UK. [132244]

Mr. Vaz: The 1999 Immigration and Asylum Act provided for the restoration of appeal rights for people refused visas to visit close family members in the UK. The new appeal right, which will apply to many visitors from the sub-continent, will come into effect from 2 October, and will provide a further, independent review of refusal decisions.

We are making every effort to improve the visa service, particularly in the sub-continent. At my request, there was an independent high level review of the Immigration Section in Islamabad last month, which made recommendations for improvements in the service there. We are in the process of implementing those.

Chagos Islands

Mr. Llew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs when the study of the options for repatriating the Ilois People to the Chagos Islands was commissioned; what it has cost to date; when it will be completed; what epidemiological studies have been undertaken of the displaced Ilois People since their evacuation from their home islands; and if he will place in the Library copies of Government papers relating to the evaluation of such studies. [132049]

Mr. Battle: The initial stage of the feasibility study of the physical problems and possible environmental impact of any resettlement in the outer islands of the British Indian Ocean Territory was commissioned in March. The work to date will cost about £55,000. It is being borne by the Government of the territory. The first report, copies of which will be placed in the Library of the House shortly, has identified the need for further study and data collection of issues such as the availability of groundwater. This could take up to 12 months. The timing of more detailed work is uncertain at present. In part it will be influenced by the outcome of the further scientific studies identified by the consultants.

Her Majesty's Government have not undertaken any epidemiological studies in Mauritius of the Ilois.

Ambassadors and Commissioners

Mr. Baker: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs how many British ambassadors and high commissioners on 1 January in each of the last 10 years were (a) women and (b) members of an ethnic minority; and if he will express the number in each category as a percentage of the total number of ambassadors and high commissioners. [132501]

Mr. Hain: The number of women who were British Ambassadors or High Commissioners on the 1 January in the past 10 years is as follows:

Year	Number	Percentage
1990	3	2.4
1991	3	2.3
1992	2	1.5
1993	3	2.2
1994	3	2.2
1995	3	2.2
1996	5	3.5
1997	7	4.9
1998	7	4.9
1999	7	4.9
2000	7	4.9

On 1 January 1994 and 1 January 1995 one Ambassador (0.7 per cent.) was of minority ethnic origin.

Moldova

Mr. Mackinlay: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on bilateral relations with Moldova and his Department's assessment of the political situation in that country. [131836]

Mr. Vaz [holding answer 25 July 2000]: Bilateral relations with Moldova are good. Our Ambassador in Bucharest is also accredited to Moldova and he and his staff visit regularly. Her Majesty's Government, through Foreign and Commonwealth Office and Department for International Development technical assistance, support projects designed to promote economic and democratic development. This year bilateral assistance has supported a range of projects including police training, training of journalists, an education programme for teachers and work in the conflict prevention field. The Under-Secretary of State for International Development opened the Department for International Development's office in Chisinau in June 2000.

Her Majesty's Government hope that the current debate over the constitutional issues in Moldova will not undermine the prospects for economic reform. HMG remain concerned about the situation in Transdniestria and support the work of the OSCE Mission to Moldova in promoting a political settlement. HMG continue to press Russia to comply with commitments made at the OSCE Istanbul summit in November 1999 to complete withdrawal from Moldovan territory by the end of 2002. Her Majesty's Government have contributed £100,000 to the OSCE voluntary fund to assist with this withdrawal and has offered, in principle, to provide resettlement training for the Russian troops based in Transdniestria.

Diplomatic Missions

Mr. Dismore: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will publish figures recording the number of outstanding parking and other minor traffic violation fines incurred by diplomatic missions and international organisations in the United Kingdom during the year ending 31 December 1999. [133341]

Mr. Battle: At the end of 1999, unpaid fines in respect of parking and other minor traffic violations incurred by members of diplomatic missions and international organisations in the United Kingdom totalled 5,112. In April this year the Foreign and Commonwealth Office wrote to all diplomatic missions and international organisations in the United Kingdom giving them the opportunity to either pay their outstanding fines or appeal against them if they considered that they had been issued incorrectly. As a result payments totalling £36,120.00 were received leaving a total of 4,124 unpaid fines for 1999. The following table details diplomatic missions and international organisations which have more than 10 fines outstanding.

Mission	Number of fines outstanding
Nigeria	536
Angola	399
UAE	285
Egypt	152
Iran	125
Morocco	120
Qatar	117
Algeria	109
Turkey	103
Jordan	96

Yugoslavia

Mr. Dismore: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what sanctions the United Kingdom implements in relation to the Federal Republic of Yugoslavia. [133342]

Mr. Hain: The UK implements the provisions of United Nations Security Council resolution 1160 (1998), which imposed an arms embargo on the Federal Republic of Yugoslavia and a prohibition on arming and training for terrorist activities there.

The UK also implements the following measures, imposed by the European Union in relation to the Federal Republic of Yugoslavia, which are designed to target the Milosevic regime.

- an arms embargo and an embargo on the supply of equipment which might be used for internal repression or terrorism
- a selective visa ban
- a ban on the provision of Government-financed export credit and other forms of export finance
- a selective freeze of funds and investment ban
- an oil embargo (with specified exemptions including in relation to Kosovo, Montenegro and the EU's Energy for Democracy programme).

The EU flight ban in relation to the Federal Republic of Yugoslavia has been suspended until 31 March 2001.

Sanctions

Mr. Dismore: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will list the sanctions and arms embargoes currently implemented by the United Kingdom. [133343]

Mr. Hain: As of today's date, the United Kingdom implements mandatory UN sanctions, imposed by the UN Security Council acting under Chapter VII of the Charter of the United Nations, in relation to Afghanistan, Angola, Eritrea, Ethiopia, Iraq, Liberia, Rwanda, Sierra Leone, Somalia, Sudan and the Federal Republic of Yugoslavia. UN sanctions in relation to Libya have been suspended.

The United Kingdom implements, in addition, sanctions imposed by the European Union in relation to Afghanistan, Bosnia and Herzegovina, Burma, China, the Democratic Republic of Congo, Croatia, Libya, Sudan and the Federal Republic of Yugoslavia.

In accordance with a decision of the OSCE, the United Kingdom implements arms embargoes on Armenia and Azerbaijan. There are also national arms embargoes on Iran and Zimbabwe.

A list of sanctions regimes and arms embargoes implemented by the UK is in the Library of the House. Annexed to this is a summary of additional UK restrictions on the export of strategic goods. These documents are also available on the FCO website and are updated each time there are changes to sanctions regimes implemented by the UK, or to UK restrictions on the export of strategic goods.

Indonesia

Dr. Tonge: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what recent discussions he has had with his EU counterparts concerning the imposing of an arms embargo in Indonesia. [132541]

Mr. Battle: The EU Presidency declaration of 17 January made clear that the EU would continue to follow closely events in Indonesia and strictly implement the EU Code of Conduct on arms exports. We regularly discuss the situation in Indonesia with EU partners. EU Ambassadors in Jakarta recently made a joint demarche to President Wahid on 17 July covering the situation in Maluka.

Separately, the UK has made quite clear that Indonesia is on notice that we will move within the EU to reimpose restrictive measures, if we see a repetition of the type of state-sponsored violence perpetrated in East Timor. We are closely monitoring the situation in the provinces of Indonesia.

Sudan

Mr. Tynan: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement concerning plans for the restoration of the joint electoral system in Sudan. [132162]

Mr. Hain: We have noted statements by the Government of Sudan to the effect that National Assembly elections will be held in the Autumn. I discussed the prospects for elections with the Sudanese Foreign Minister on 18 July and he repeated that his Government was indeed committed to holding elections.

We look to the Government to proceed with elections, and to lift the State of Emergency, as soon as possible.

Feira Presidency Conclusions

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on the planned effect of Article 50 of the Feira Presidency conclusions on European Communities' legislation on sport. [129918]

Kate Hoey: I have been asked to reply.

Article 50 of the Feira Presidency conclusions recognises the important role that sport can play in social policy. As we have set out in our sports strategy 'A Sporting Future For All' the Government firmly believe that sport has an important role to play in fostering social inclusion. The UK is represented on a working group of sports officials, set up under the Portuguese Presidency looking at the specific characteristics of sport. Their report will be discussed by the Sports Ministers in November.

TRADE AND INDUSTRY

Correspondence

Mr. Wilshire: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry when he will reply to the letter from the hon. Member for Spelthorne dated 12 April relating to his constituent, Miss R. Whittaker. [130652]

Mr. Alan Johnson [holding answer 17 July 2000]: I replied to the hon. Member on behalf of the Secretary of State earlier today.

Electricity Suppliers

Mr. Gareth R. Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry when his Department intends to publish its Code of Practice for licence-exempt electricity suppliers; what arrangements it will make for its monitoring operation; and if he will make a statement. [131674]

Mrs. Liddell: Representatives of electricity industry trade associations together developed a voluntary code of practice for licence-exempt suppliers, but have not yet published or implemented the code. I would encourage them to do so.

Renewable Energy

Mr. Llew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what discussions he has had with Ministers and officials in the Department of the Environment, Transport and the Regions about co-ordinating renewable and sustainable energy projects and the regeneration programme. [131993]

Mrs. Liddell: Officials in DTI and DETR keep in touch with each other on matters relating to regeneration and sustainable energy projects.

The location of renewable energy projects is determined largely by the availability of resources and ease of connection to the electricity supply system.

Earlier this year my hon. Friend the Minister for Housing and Planning announced a strategic approach to renewable energy planning. Under the leadership of the Government Offices for the Regions, regional assessments and targets for renewable energy provision are being prepared based upon, and where necessary updating, resources studies. It is our intention that Regional Development Agencies will have a key role to play in this work.

BAe

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what conditions were attached to the grant of £530 million to BAe systems in respect of the company's future employment levels in the UK; and if he will make a statement. [131892]

Mr. Alan Johnson: Conditions in the A3XX launch investment contact, as with all other launch investments, remain commercially confidential.

We estimate that the A3XX will create 22,000 new jobs (8,000 in BAe SYSTEMS and the UK supply chain, and 14,000 new induced employment) and safeguard a further 62,000 jobs (20,000 on current Airbus programmes and 42,000 in induced employment).

Launch investment is a risk and revenue sharing Government investment in the design and development of specific civil aerospace projects in the UK. The investment is not a grant and is repayable at a real rate of return, usually via levies on sales of the product developed.

Trade Bodies

Mr. Rogers: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry (1) what criteria he uses to determine whether a trade body is representative of an industry and should be consulted in the formulation of a policy decision; [132261]

(2) what his policy is in determining whether a trade body is representative of an industry; [132262]

(3) what percentage of an industry must a trade body represent to be considered representative of that industry. [132263]

Ms Hewitt: It is not the place of the Government to tell industry how to organise its own representative bodies. However, in the Best Practice Guide for the Model Trade Association the Government have identified the key characteristics that we feel trade associations should have as representatives of their industry.

They should represent the whole of a commercial or industrial sector and seek to cover all products, services and processes.

They should also ensure that their members represent a substantial proportion of the sector (both in terms of output and members).

Furthermore, before consulting trade associations or any other organisations representing industry, the Government is guided by the Code of Practice (How to conduct written consultation exercises) issued by the Cabinet Office, which sets out the guiding principles for effective consultation.

Design in Business Week

Mr. Sheerman: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what steps he is taking to promote the Design in Business Week in the Autumn. [132082]

Ms Hewitt: Design in Business Week is an annual event run by the Design Council and its promotion is a matter for the Design Council.

The Design Council is to be congratulated on running Design in Business Weeks. Last year, it worked with some 120 organisations to run events which demonstrated the contribution that Design makes to innovation and competitiveness, attracting a business audience of 10,000. The week this year will run from 27 October to 3 November and I wish the Design Council even greater success than last year.

Bioremediation

Mr. Sheerman: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry how much money has been made available by his Department for the purposes of research into bioremediation in each of the past 10 years. [132099]

Mr. Byers: The table gives an estimate of the amount of money spent through the OST Science Budget to the academic community, and the DTI Innovation budget to industry for research into bioremediation.

1990–91	240,000
1991–92	110,000
1992–93	405,000
1993–94	785,000
1994–95	1,060,000
1995–96	1,620,000
1996–97	3,010,000
1997–98	3,770,000
1998–99	3,960,000
1999–2000	4,360,000

Parliamentary Questions

Mr. Stunell: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry how many of the written parliamentary questions tabled to his Department between 19 October 1999 and 20 April have not received substantive answers, excluding those not answered (a) citing disproportionate costs, (b) stating that the information is not available, not held centrally, or not held in the form requested or (c) citing commercial or other confidentiality. [132130]

Mr. Byers [holding answer 24 July 2000]: Very few Parliamentary Questions will not have been answered substantially for reasons other than those specified in the hon. Member's question. In addition to the information provided in the answers to the right hon. Member for Caithness, Sutherland and Easter Ross (Mr. Maclennan) on 23 June 2000, Official Report, column 313W and 29 June 2000, Official Report, column 576W, a further 12 Parliamentary Questions received answers indicating that the Minister would write with further information.

Mr. Stunell: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry how many written parliamentary questions were tabled to his Department between 19 October 1999 and 20 April; and how many have not received substantive answers citing disproportionate cost as the reason. [132467]

Mr. Byers: Of the 1,707 written parliamentary questions answered during this period, 25 answers cited disproportionate costs as the reason for not providing part or all of the information requested.

Mobile Phones

Dr. Gibson: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what discussions he has had with the mobile phone industry about labelling mobile phones with their radiation levels. [132434]

Ms Hewitt: Officials have held discussions with the mobile phone industry following the publication of the report of the Independent Expert Group on Mobile Phones (the Stewart Report), which recommended that information on SAR values for mobile phones be readily accessible to consumers.

SAR is the Specific Energy Absorption Rate. It is the rate at which energy is absorbed by unit mass of tissue in an electromagnetic field. SAR is the measurement unit used in the exposure guidelines of the National Radiological Protection Board and the International Commission on Non-Ionizing Radiation Protection. Mobile phones do not emit ionising radiation.

In the Government response to the Stewart Report recommendations we agreed that the consumer should have access to SAR values when purchasing a mobile phone and that SAR measurements should be displayed at all points of sale, with each mobile phone, and on the world wide web. It is important that SAR values should be viewed in context, for example by comparing the SAR value against the recommended exposure limits.

This recommendation will be implemented when the European standard on the test methodology for SAR measurement is adopted.

Press Releases

Mr. Lansley: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry how many press releases have been issued so far this year; and what the total cost of the production and issuing of press releases was in (a) 1997, (b) 1998, (c) 1999 and (d) 2000 to date. [132781]

Mr. Byers: The DTI has issued 520 press releases since 1 January 2000.

The cost of distributing press releases was:

(a) 1997—£184,669;

(b) 1998—£230,560;

(c) 1999—£211,268;

(d) 2000 (to date)—£105,701.

Science and Innovation White Paper

Dr. Gibson: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry when he intends to publish the White Paper on Science and Innovation; and if he will make a statement. [133102]

Mr. Byers: I am today publishing the White Paper, "Excellence and Opportunity, a science and innovation policy for the 21st century".

I have arranged for copies to be placed in the Libraries of both Houses.

Post Offices

Dr. Cable: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what plans he has to increase Post Office Counters investment in commercially viable sub-post offices in urban areas which are not areas of social deprivation. [132798]

Mr. Byers: In the first instance, it is for the Post Office, in partnership with sub-postmasters and the National Federation of Subpostmasters, to determine the scope for additional investment in the modernisation of commercially viable urban sub-post offices to provide an improved level of service.

ECGD

Dr. Cable: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry for what reason total managed expenditure for the Export Credits Guarantee Department is planned to fall from £0.9 billion in 1999–2000 to zero in 2003–04; and if he will reconcile this planned fall with the figures provided in the 1998 Comprehensive Spending Review. [132797]

Mr. Caborn: Total managed expenditure for the Export Credits Guarantee Department almost entirely consists of the refinancing of previously issued export finance loans.

The net figure falls from £0.9 billion in 1999–2000 to zero in 2003–04 because the level of repayments on previously re-financed loans is projected to rise progressively to equal the forecast level of new refinancing advances.

It is not possible to reconcile with the figures in the 1998 Comprehensive Spending Review as the refinancing programme did not commence until after the Review.

Astra

Mr. Campbell-Savours: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry (1) for what reason his Department is seeking to have documents relating to the Astra case destroyed; [131507]

(2) what public interest justifications for the retention of documents relating to the Astra case he considered in making the decision not to retain them; [131508]

(3) if he will require the Official Receiver to retain documents relating to the Astra case. [131510]

Dr. Howells: The accounting records of Astra Holdings plc are under the control of the Official Receiver as liquidator of the company following a winding-up order made by the court on 13 January 1999.

Having established that the records were no longer required for the purposes of the liquidation, the Official Receiver proposed to utilise his powers under insolvency legislation and destroy the records. However, he became aware that third parties were interested in retaining the accounting records, for reasons unconnected with the liquidation.

In view of the competing demands for the preservation of the records, the Official Receiver has sought direction from the court on the question of their destruction, or continued preservation and custody. A court hearing to determine this matter is awaited and until then the records will be stored at public expense.

Mr. Campbell-Savours: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will place in the Library a copy of his reply to the organisation Killing Secrets on the question of Astra documents. [131509]

Dr. Howells: Copies of my letters of 29 April and 19 May 2000 to Killing Secrets will be placed in the Library.

Ilisu Dam

Dr. Tonge: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry, pursuant to his answer of 2 May 2000, Official Report, column 27W, on the Ilisu Dam, what direct contact he has had since May with the Turkish Government concerning consultations with those directly affected by the Ilisu Dam. [132542]

Mr. Caborn: My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry has had no direct contact with the Turkish Government on this matter.

Dr. Tonge: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry when he expects the full environmental impact assessment report on the Ilisu Dam to be complete. [132540]

Mr. Caborn: The latest information is that the full Environmental Impact Assessment Report will not be available before September 2000 at the earliest.

CULTURE, MEDIA AND SPORT

Millennium Dome

Mr. Peter Ainsworth: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport if he will list the parliamentary questions tabled since May 1997 concerning the Dome which have not been answered on the grounds of (a) commercial confidentiality and (b) public interest. [127820]

Janet Anderson [holding answer 26 June 2000]: Of the 1,100 questions that have been answered on the Millennium Experience since May 1997, 72 questions have been answered on which information requested has been declined on the grounds of commercial confidentiality.

Sport England

Mr. Breed: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport if he will provide a breakdown of the basis on which Sport England forecasts the Lottery draw-down for 2000–01. [130520]

Kate Hoey: The drawdown for 2000–01 was based on the estimated payment profile of individual awards. This included budgeted drawdown for payment on major schemes such as the English Institute of Sport and the Commonwealth Games Stadium. The budget for 1999–2000 included some provision for drawdown on these two major schemes, but progress payments were delayed, which has led to the increase in the amount to be paid out this financial year.

Mr. Breed: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport on what basis Sport England estimates the percentage increase in the Lottery drawn-down for 2000–01 over the figure for 1999–2000. [130517]

Kate Hoey: The method used by Sport England for estimating the drawdown year on year is based on the estimated payment profile of individual awards, and not on a percentage increase of the previous years drawdown.

Parliamentary Questions

Mr. Stunell: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport on how many occasions he deposited papers in the Library in response to parliamentary questions tabled to his Department between 19 October 1999 and 20 April. [131230]

Mr. Chris Smith [holding answer 20 July 2000]: Papers were deposited in the Library on 40 occasions in response to parliamentary questions tabled to my Department between 19 October 1999 and 20 April 2000.

This figure excludes instances where either my ministerial colleagues or I promised to write to right hon. and hon. Members in response to a parliamentary question.

Mr. Stunell: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport how many written parliamentary questions tabled to his Department between 19 October 1999 and 20 April have not received substantive answers, citing as the reason commercial or other confidentiality. [132464]

Mr. Chris Smith: Twenty questions tabled to my Department between 19 October and 20 April 2000 have not received substantive answers citing as the reason commercial or other confidentiality.

My Department always aims to provide a substantive reply to hon. Members' questions. Where this is not possible due to commercial or other confidentiality, we endeavour to provide as helpful and as detailed a reply as possible based on the information that is available. In these cases a partial rather than a substantive answer is given.

Art Thefts

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport, pursuant to his answer of 12 June 2000, Official Report, column 500W, on missing works of art, for what reasons the theft on 9 January 1997 of rings and cameos from the Sir John Soane's Museum was not included in this list. [132512]

Mr. Alan Howarth: My letter of 4 July to my hon. Friend in response to his parliamentary question asking the Secretary of State to list the items missing, stolen or unaccounted for from the national collections did not refer to the Sir John Soane's Museum because it is not a national museum. Copies of my letter were placed in the Library of the House on 4 July.

Football Regulator

Ms Walley: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what progress he has made on the implementation of the Football Task Force report; and if he will make a statement on the Football Foundation and the proposed regulatory body. [132497]

Kate Hoey: The Government will respond to the Football Task Force's final report, Football Commercial Issues, shortly. My right hon. Friend the Prime Minister, with the football authorities, yesterday launched the Football Foundation, the new partnership body which will distribute development funding for the sport, and I refer my hon. Friend to the answer given by my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State the Under-Secretary of State to my hon. Friend the Member for Liverpool, Garston (Maria Eagle) on 24 July 2000, Official Report, columns 414–15W.

Foreign Artefacts

Mr. Mackinlay: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what representations have been received from foreign Governments about the return of (a) aboriginal human remains and (b) artefacts removed from aboriginal tombs and graves that are held in United Kingdom museums, Government departments and agencies, and learning and research institutions; and if he will make a statement. [131838]

Mr. Alan Howarth [holding answer 25 July 2000]: The subject of ancestral remains was raised by the Australian Prime Minister Mr. John Howard during his meeting with my right hon. Friend the Prime Minister on, following which they issued a joint statement. No other foreign governments have made representations in recent years.

Mr. Mackinlay: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport if he will list those art, cultural and folk artifacts that foreign Governments have requested be returned to their country of origin and which are currently held in (a) public institutions and (b) private collections within the United Kingdom; and if he will make a statement. [131837]

Mr. Alan Howarth [holding answer 25 July 2000]: The following are the requests received from foreign governments:

For the Parthenon Sculptures from the Government of Greece; for the Koh-I-Noor diamond from the Governments of India and Pakistan and for items from the India Office Library from the Governments of India, Pakistan, Burma, Nepal and Bangladesh.

Mr. Mackinlay: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what inventory has been made of (a) aboriginal human remains and (b) artefacts removed from aboriginal tombs and graves, held in museums, Government departments and agencies, and learning and research institutions within the United Kingdom; and if he will make a statement. [131839]

Mr. Alan Howarth [holding answer 25 July 2000]: No central inventory exists at present. It is a matter for each individual institution holding such items to compile their own records.

National Lottery

Mr. Evans: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what proportion of Lottery ticket receipts has been spent in Wales through the National Lottery Charities Board. [131030]

Kate Hoey: Up to the end of March 2000, the proportion of total Lottery ticket receipts paid out by the National Lottery Charities Board for grants in Wales was 0.2 per cent.

Mr. Evans: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport how much money has been spent by people in Wales on lottery tickets. [131031]

Kate Hoey: Up to the end of March 2000, £2.01 billion had been spent on Lottery tickets in Wales.

Mr. Evans: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport how many projects have unsuccessfully applied for grants to the National Lottery Charities Board; and if he will list the amount of each of these grants. [131032]

Kate Hoey: Up to 21 July 2000.

Of the 98,026 grant applications that the National Lottery Charities Board (NLCB) has received since it was established in 1995, 62,253 (63 per cent.) were unsuccessful.

CABINET OFFICE

Computer Disasters

Mr. Fabricant: To ask the Minister for the Cabinet Office what research she has undertaken into the likely effects of a computer disaster occurring to the principal departments of state; and what contingency measures have been taken to reduce the impact of a disaster. [130964]

Mr. Ian McCartney: I refer the hon. Member to my reply to the hon. Member for Mid-Bedfordshire (Mr. Sayeed) on 21 July 2000, Official Report, column 370W.

Modernising Government

Mrs. Brinton: To ask the Minister for the Cabinet Office what discussions have taken place between her Department and the Department of the Environment, Transport and the Regions, on the place of sustainable development in relation to modernising Government. [131989]

Mr. Stringer: The Cabinet Office Regulatory Impact Unit has been leading on the commitment in the Modernising Government White Paper to produce an integrated system of impact and appraisal tools in support of sustainable development. The Department of the Environment, Transport and the Regions have been closely involved in this, for example running a pilot exercise to test the Policy Makers Checklist and contribute to proposals for an integrated approach to appraisal. DRTR will also be working with the Centre for Management and Policy Studies which has a remit to identify and promote best practice in policymaking.

Permanent Secretaries

Mr. Baker: To ask the Minister for the Cabinet Office how many permanent secretaries in the Civil Service are (a) women and (b) members of an ethnic minority; and if she will express the number in each category as a percentage of the total. [132502]

Mr. Stringer: With effect from 7 August there will be three women Permanent Secretaries in the Civil Service which is 8 per cent. of the total. They are Rachel Lomax, Department of Social Security, Mavis McDonald, Cabinet Office and Juliet Wheldon, Treasury Solicitor, who is the first woman to occupy this post. No Permanent Secretary is from an ethnic minority background.

Departmental Staff

Mr. Burstow: To ask the Minister for the Cabinet Office how many unfilled vacancies for permanent staff her Department has; what percentage of staff positions in her Department are vacant; what the monthly cost would be to her Department of employing civil servants in these positions; how many and what percentage of staff her Department employs on a temporary basis through employment agencies; how much her Department paid employment agencies to supply temporary staff in each of the last 12 months; and how much she expects to pay employment agencies to supply temporary staff in each of the next 12 months. [131439]

Mr. Stringer: There are currently approximately 150 unfilled vacancies in my Department; this is approximately 8.5 per cent. of staff positions. The estimated monthly cost of filling these vacancies, based on average salaries per grade, including ERNIC and superannuation costs, is £339,237.00.

My Department currently employs 45 temporary staff. This represents 2.5 per cent. of total staff numbers.

In each of the last 12 months the amounts paid by my Department to employment agencies were as follows:

July 1999	93,793.63
August 1999	114,958.87
September 1999	126,714.45
October 1999	111,927.39
November 1999	108,047.59
December 1999	81,414.78
January 2000	97,304.51
February 2000	146,355.06
March 2000	203,174.28
April 2000	65,671.40
May 2000	177,558.80
June 2000	134,168.62

Estimates of my Department's expected payments to employment agencies to supply temporary staff in each of the next 12 months are not available and could be provided only at disproportionate costs.

Ministerial Travel

Mr. Pearson: To ask the Minister for the Cabinet Office if she will revise her guidance on ministerial travel to include the Rover 75 series in the makes and models of car available to the Government Car Service. [132293]

Mr. Ian McCartney: The Government Car and Despatch Agency is currently undertaking a thorough evaluation of the suitability of the Rover 75, along with other cars, as a model for use by the Government Car Service. The Agency's report is expected shortly.

Parliamentary Questions

Mr. Stunell: To ask the Minister for the Cabinet Office how many written parliamentary questions tabled to her Department between 19 October 1999 and 20 April 2000 have not received substantive answers, citing as the reason commercial or other confidentiality. [132463]

Mr. Stringer: Between 19 October 1999 and 20 April 2000, there have been no questions tabled to the Cabinet Office which did not receive substantive replies citing as the reason commercial or other confidentiality.

Service Standards

Mrs. Heal: To ask the Minister for the Cabinet Office if she will make a statement on the performance of the main Departments and Agencies against the six service standards for central Government over the financial year 1999–2000. [133344]

Mr. Ian McCartney: I have arranged for a report on the performance of the main Departments and Agencies to be placed in the Libraries of the House. This is the first report on performance against the revised service standards announced in the Modernising Government White Paper, and reflects the Government's commitment to openness and to reporting transparently on our performance.

In most cases, Departments' performance in responding to correspondence from the public has improved over the past year, although performance varies widely and there is still room for improvement overall. Ministers are determined that performance should continue to improve through the introduction of new technology and the overhaul of outdated procedures. The performance of the main Departments and Agencies is summarised in the table.

Against the other standards, the report shows that visitors to public offices are usually seen within 10 minutes of their appointment, and that most visitors without an appointment are seen within the designated target. All Departments have at least one telephone inquiry point, and calls to designated numbers are usually answered promptly. Use of the internet is increasing rapidly and all the main Departments dealing with the public have websites, publicise their complaints procedure on-line, and, in most cases, are able to accept e-mailed inquiries. The report also shows some of the innovative ways in which Departments and Agencies are consulting their users and making their services more accessible.

[1] Performance has been rounded up or down to the nearest whole figure.
[2] MAFF's Regional Service Centres have a 10 working day target.
[3] Performance in responding to complaints only.
[4] Total volume covers public correspondence sent to Ministers or to the Department as a whole. It does not include correspondence sent direct to individual branches or units.
[5] Performance is measured by an independent research company sending a 'mystery letter' each quarter to each job centre (total of 4,000 letters a year). The company assesses the letters for quality as well as speed or reply.
[6] Correspondence received by the Ministerial Correspondence Unit.
[7] The Inland Revenue merged with the Contributions Agency (CA) in April 1999. Former CA staff are currently working a target of responding to 95 per cent. of customer inquiries (not just correspondence) within 20 working days. During the period of this report, they received some 53,000 inquiries and responded to 99 per cent. within target. All Inland Revenue staff are working towards a 15 day correspondence target for 2000–01.
[8] Inland Revenue offices received some 74,000,000 items of correspondence during the reporting period; however, this figure includes all internal post. There are no facilities for the collation of separate figures for external correspondence.
[9] Target for Chief executive's correspondence is 20 working days. During the reporting year, 762 items were received with 99 per cent. answered within target.

EDUCATION AND EMPLOYMENT

Pupil Expenditure (Greater London)

Mr. Cox: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment how much money was spent per pupil attending (a) primary and (b) secondary schools in the Greater London area in each of the last three years. [124750]

Ms Estelle Morris: The following table sets out spending per pupil in both primary and secondary schools in the Greater London area, from 1996–97 to 1998–99 (provisional), the last three financial years for which figures are available. The figures are based on Net Institutional Expenditure.

Provisional

The following table sets out the resources being made available in Greater London for primary and secondary schools, as part of the drive to raise standards. These figures are not comparable with the Net Institutional figures set out above. The special and specific grants total include the money for schools announced in the Budget on 21 March.

PFI Contracts (Schools)

Mr. Matthew Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what the estimated rate of return on capital is to the contractors under the PFI contracts for schools. [131350]

Jacqui Smith: The Department is not a signatory to any school PFI contracts and therefore does not have full information about the commercial details of these deals. However, our monitoring of deals signed recently suggests that contractors are likely to receive a return on capital of some 8–9 per cent. from PFI schemes in schools.

Performance-related Pay

Mr. Clappison: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment, pursuant to his answer of 16 March 2000, Official Report, column 295W, when he expects to have figures for the total cost of administering the performance-related pay scheme. [131675]

Ms Estelle Morris: It is not possible to say when the total cost will be known.

Mr. Clappison: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment how many representations he received in support of his plans requiring teachers to participate in the assessment of other members of the teaching staff in their schools. [131698]

Ms Estelle Morris: Representations expressing support were received from the National Association of Head Teachers, the National Employers' Organisation for Schoolteachers and the Secondary Heads' Association.

Mr. Clappison: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what assessment he has made of the average time currently spent in training (a) a primary school head teacher and (b) a secondary head teacher in the administration of performance-related pay; and what has been the cost of such training. [131714]

Ms Estelle Morris: In England, primary and secondary headteachers were invited to attend a one day threshold assessment training event in March or April. They were also invited to attend a further half day follow-up training event in June. The costs associated with the training events form part of the contracts the Department has with outside companies and are, therefore, commercial in confidence.

In Wales, each headteacher was offered one day's training and the vast majority have attended. The cost of this training in Wales, which was completed on 11 July, is not yet known.

We do not have details about any additional training such headteachers may have undertaken.

Mr. Clappison: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what role he requires (a) deputy heads and (b) teachers to play in the assessment of other members of a school's teaching staff for the purpose of performance-related pay in (i) primary and (ii) secondary schools. [131716]

Ms Estelle Morris: The Secretary of State's original intention was that a headteacher could request input from their teamleaders or other senior members of staff who had a more direct overview of a teachers' work to assist in assessing threshold applications. This applied in both primary and secondary schools. Following the outcome of the judicial review brought by the NUT the threshold assessments have been put on hold and there is now no contractual duty for such staff to assist the headteacher in assessments.

Mr. Clappison: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment if he expects teachers other than departmental managers to assist heads in carrying out assessments for performance-related pay. [131796]

Ms Estelle Morris: The Secretary of State's original intention was that a headteacher could request input from their teamleaders or other senior members of staff to assist in assessing threshold applications. The Guidance that accompanied the School Teachers' Pay and Conditions Document made clear that this should only reasonably apply to teachers with managerial responsibilities who have an overview of the relevant aspects of the work of the teachers concerned. Following the outcome of the judicial review brought by the NUT the threshold assessments have been put on hold and there is now no contractual duty for such staff to assist the headteacher in assessments.

Mr. Clappison: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what assessment he has made of the effect of the decision of Mr. Justice Jackson on 14 July on the formula for payments from his Department to local authorities in respect of threshold payments as set out in paragraphs 3 to 15 of Annex A of Special Grant report 61; what modifications he plans to make to the timescale for payments set out in those paragraphs; and whether he intends to proceed on the basis of Special Grant report 66 for making payments. [131797]

Ms Estelle Morris: The Government remain committed to the introduction of a threshold for teachers, providing an additional £2,001, backdated to September 2000, for all teachers who demonstrate the characteristics of effective teaching.

The need to refer the standards for assessing teachers against the threshold to the School Teachers Review Body, following Mr. Justice Jacksons' judgment will have the effect of delaying teachers assessments and so payments to successful teachers. As a consequence, we will not seek parliamentary approval for Special Grant Report 66 which will be replaced with a revised report in autumn setting out a new timetable for payments to local authorities.

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what the total cost is to the Government of the performance-related pay threshold payments; what proportion this is of the £1 billion set aside for the increase in teachers' pay; and if he will make a statement. [132075]

Ms Estelle Morris: The Government have undertaken to fund each full-time equivalent teacher passing the threshold at an annual rate of £2,357. This comprises the threshold uplift of £2,001 increased by 17.8 per cent. for pension and national insurance contributions. The total cost of the threshold will depend on the number of teachers who pass the assessment, as will the proportion this represents of the £1 billion available until March 2002.

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what estimate he has made of the cost of paying assessors to visit schools for the performance-related pay threshold payments; and if he will make a statement. [132076]

Ms Estelle Morris: DfEE has contracted Cambridge Education Associates (CEA) to manage the appointment, deployment and quality assurance of external assessors in England. The cost associated with this contract are commercial in confidence. Assessors in Wales will be managed by consortiums of Welsh local education authorities. The cost of the Department's contracts with the Welsh consortia has not yet been finalised.

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment how much money has been set aside as travel expenses for assessors to visit schools in connection with the performance-related threshold payments; and if he will make a statement. [132077]

Ms Estelle Morris: There is no separate fund set aside for travel expenses for assessors.

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what the costs were of writing, printing, and distributing the printed materials associated with the performance-related pay threshold; and if he will make a statement. [132078]

Ms Estelle Morris: It is not possible to provide this information as many of the materials were produced and distributed under commercial contract.

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment in relation to the performance-related pay threshold payments for teachers, how much headteachers' training has cost the Government; and if he will make a statement. [132079]

Ms Estelle Morris: The costs associated with the training events form part of the contracts the Department has with outside companies and are, therefore, commercial in confidence.

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment how much has been spent on recruiting and training the assessors for the threshold application forms in connection with performance-related pay for teachers; and if he will make a statement. [132080]

Ms Estelle Morris: The costs associated with the recruitment and training of external Assessors form part of the contracts the Department has with outside companies and are, therefore, commercial in confidence.

Edinburgh Road Special School, Holt

Mr. Prior: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment if he will make a statement on the future of the Edinburgh Road School for Children with Special Needs in Holt, Norfolk. [132374]

Jacqui Smith: In October 1999 Norfolk LEA served Notice on the Secretary of State of its proposal to relocate the existing Edinburgh Road Special School to a new site in Sheringham. The statutory process involves local consultation, the serving of the Notice by the LEA, a period for objections followed by consideration by the Secretary of State during which he will consider, among other information, advice from HMI.

Today I have informed the hon. Member and Norfolk LEA that my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State is minded to approve the proposals, subject to the necessary planning permission being granted.

Teacher Training

Mr. Clappison: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment how many applications have been received for courses of postgraduate initial teacher training commencing in September; and how many had been received at the same stage (a) in 1999 and (b) in 1997, broken down in each case into those applying by subject for secondary training, separately identifying those applying for maths, foreign languages, science and technology; and if he will list the Government's targets for recruitment for those subjects for September. [131676]

Ms Estelle Morris: Targets for 2000–01 for England are given in the table.

1. Targets are for undergraduate combined with postgraduate.
2. The margin for flexibility is equivalent to the provision the Teacher Training Agency had last year to "vire" places between secondary subjects within certain parameters, but is now given explicitly.

Graduate Teacher Training Registry (GTTR).

The number of trainees recruited onto mathematics postgraduate initial teacher training courses declined between 1994–95 and 1998–99, and there was a similar decline in the number of trainees recruited onto science postgraduate initial teacher training courses between 1996–97 and 1998–99. In October 1998 'golden hello' incentives were announced for teacher trainees taking a postgraduate certificate of education in mathematics or science. Such trainees received £2,500 during their training and a further £2,500 on going on to take up a relevant teaching post. Recruitment to these subjects in 1999 was up on the previous year.

My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State announced on 30 March 2000 that £6,000 training salaries would be introduced for postgraduate trainees starting initial teacher training courses from September 2000. New style 'golden hello' incentives of £4,000 were announced for postgraduate trainees in mathematics, science, modern foreign languages, information technology and design and technology, who successfully complete their induction and go on to take up a relevant teaching post. Since the announcement, postgraduate application figures for secondary initial teacher training as provided by GTTR are 15 per cent. higher for mathematics, 21 per cent. higher for science, 61 per cent. higher for modern foreign languages and 53 per cent. higher for technology than for the same period from the end of March to July last year. Applications for postgraduate secondary subjects taken together are 38 per cent. higher than for the same period last year from the end of March to July last year.

Beanfield Community College

Mr. Clappison: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what consultations have been carried out regarding the decision to close the sixth form of Beanfield Community College in order to bring about its reconfiguration as Corby Community College under the Fresh Start policy; what assessment he has made of the effect of this closure on the education of members of the present lower sixth in the college; and if he will make a statement. [131677]

Mr. Wicks: The proposals to close the sixth form at Beanfield Community College were decided under the new arrangements for local decision making. Since September 1999, most decisions on statutory proposals have been taken by local School Organisation Committees. Statutory guidance requires those bringing forward proposals to consult all interested parties, and also requires School Organisation Committees to satisfy themselves before deciding proposals with a significant post-16 dimension that all interested parties have been fully consulted and their views explicitly addressed.

AS Levels

Mr. Clappison: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment if he will make a statement on the policy of university admission authorities towards AS levels; and how many universities he expects to use AS levels as predictors of likely A level performance. [131692]

Mr. Wicks: Universities are responsible for their own admissions policies. Initial indications are that they will consider the new AS level qualifications as early predictors of A level performance and make conditional offers that include, alongside A levels, AS qualifications as evidence of breadth. The position will be clearer once the HE prospectuses are published early in 2001. A guidance note for HEIs on changes to the post-16 curriculum in England, Wales and Northern Ireland was published by UCAS in June 2000 in conjunction with the Department and the regulatory authorities. Copies will be placed in the Libraries.

Examination Fees

Mr. Clappison: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment how much schools were charged in respect of examination fees for (a) GCSE examination entries and (b) A levels in each year of the last five years. [131693]

Mr. Wicks: As schools are charged individually and may have arrangements with more than one awarding body to buy a range of qualifications of which GCSE and GCE A level are but two, it is not possible to provide precise figures. Estimates of the amounts charged to maintained schools (including grant maintained schools) in England, Northern Ireland and Wales, based on the number of reported entries and the average fee charged for each qualification in each year are set out in the table:

£ million

	GCSE	GCE A level
1995	77.5	8.83
1996	81.9	9.3
1997	83.5	10.5
1998	84	11.5
1999	88.8	12.6

Note:
This information has been provided by the Joint Council for General Qualifications.

The increases in charges are due to higher numbers of entries, as well as to take account of inflation.

City Academies

Mr. Clappison: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what his most recent estimate is of the number of City Academies that will be in place in September 2001. [131694]

Ms Estelle Morris: Initial discussions are under way with a number of potential sponsors and LEAs about possible City Academies. It is too early to say when the first City Academies will be established.

Classrooms

Mr. Paul Marsden: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment if he will list the new primary and secondary classrooms built in Shrewsbury and Atcham since 1997. [131706]

Jacqui Smith: Local education authorities may draw on a number of different sources for funding to build new classrooms. The Department does not currently collect information on how local authorities use their Annual Capital Guideline allocations, nor on what building projects are funded from authorities' own resources. Details of projects in the Shrewsbury and Atcham constituency funded under the New Deal for Schools initiative, which included new classrooms, were given to my hon. Friend on 8 May 2000, Official Report, columns 291–92W. In addition, Shropshire local education authority has received £2.6 million under the Class Size Initiative. Two new infant classrooms have been built in the Shrewsbury and Atcham constituency: one at Greenfields County Primary School, and one at Springfield County Infant School.

Assistant Heads

Mr. Clappison: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what estimate he has made of the number of teachers likely to be appointed to the post of assistant head in the first year of its operation. [131715]

Ms Estelle Morris: Schools and, for centrally employed staff, LEAs will be free to appoint assistant headteachers as needed within their management structures, and within the resources they have available. Given the widely differing circumstances of individual schools, we have not attempted to estimate the total number likely to be appointed, although it is unlikely that any school will need a leadership group (including headteacher, deputy headteachers and assistant headteachers) of more than seven.

The DfEE will provide a grant of £2,356, comprising £2,000 plus 17.8 per cent. for national insurance and pension contributions, in academic year 2000–01 for all classroom teachers and advanced skills teachers appointed on a permanent basis by 31 December 2000 to assistant head teacher posts.

Agency and Supply Teachers

Mr. Clappison: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what his most recent assessment is of the proportion of teaching posts in (a) primary and (b) secondary schools, occupied by agency or supply teachers; and how many were so occupied for each of the last three years. [131719]

Ms Estelle Morris: The numbers of short-term (i.e. contracts of less than four weeks) agency or other supply teachers employed on the third Thursday in January 1997, 1998, 1999 and 2000 in the maintained nursery, primary and secondary sector in England are as follows:

	Nursery/primary	Secondary
January 1997
Number of agency/supply teachers	8,300	4,400
Percentage of all qualified teachers	4.2	2.3
January 1998
Number of agency/supply teachers	8,300	4,000
Percentage of all qualified teachers	4.2	2.1
January 1999
Number of agency/supply teachers	8,900	4,500
Percentage of all qualified teachers	4.5	2.3
January 2000
Number of agency/supply teachers	10,500	5,300
Percentage of all qualified teachers	5.2	2.7

Note:
Figures are rounded to the nearest 100

The numbers of short-term supply teachers employed will vary because of the effect of seasonal factors. Many local authorities explained that the growth in the January 2000 supply teachers was due to the flu epidemic.

There was a growth of 6,900 full-time equivalent regular teachers in the maintained schools sector between January 1998 and January 2000.

Sure Start

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment if he will make a statement on the impact of Sure Start in Waltham Forest. [132375]

Yvette Cooper: I have been asked to reply.

Waltham Forest Sure Start received a grant of £1,772,200 from February 2000, and has begun to work towards the 12 demanding objectives in the Sure Start Public Service Agreement. The overall aim of the Sure Start programme in Waltham Forest is to give every child the best start in life. The impact of the programme will be assessed in a major evaluation programme which we expect to be under way later this year.

Teaching Costs

Mr. Cox: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what the average cost is per year of employing a school teacher at (a) a primary school and (b) secondary school in the Greater London area. [132634]

Ms Estelle Morris: The estimated cost of employing a full-time school teacher (including heads and deputies) in the maintained nursery, primary and secondary sector in Greater London from 1 April 2000 is shown in the following table.

	Nursery/primary	Secondary
Average salary	26,900	28,500
Employer costs[1]	4,000	4,200
Total cost	30,900	£32,800

[1] Includes 7.5 per cent. National Insurance and 7.4 per cent. pension costs.

Note:

Figures are rounded to the nearest 100.

Investors in People

Miss McIntosh: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment which organisation will be responsible for administering and awarding Investors in People from 1 April 2001. [132684]

Mr. Wicks: From 1 April 2001 the Learning and Skills Council will be responsible for Investors in People services including advice, client support, assessment and recognition services. For advice and support for small and medium sized organisations the LSC will contract with the Small Business Service.

Assessment and recognition services will be provided by Investors in People regional quality centres.

Departmental Staff

Mr. Burstow: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment how many unfilled vacancies for permanent staff his Department has; what percentage of staff positions in his Department are vacant; what the monthly cost would be to his Department of employing civil servants in these positions; how many and what percentage of staff his Department employs on a temporary basis through employment agencies; how much his Department paid employment agencies to supply temporary staff in each of the last 12 months; and how much he expects to pay employment agencies to supply temporary staff in each of the next 12 months. [131436]

Mr. Wills [holding answer 25 July 2000]: The Department is recruiting externally to fill 60 vacancies for permanent staff at present, across a range of grades, from administrative assistant to Senior Civil Service Band 2.

There are also posts which are in the process of being filled by movement of existing staff (for example by promotion or lateral transfer) and which may be temporarily unfilled. The number varies daily but is commonly between 3 and 5 per cent. of total staff numbers.

The monthly cost to the Department of employing staff in the vacant positions currently being advertised is approximately £126,614.

The Department employs approximately 85 agency workers on an average working day, this figure is approximately 2 per cent. of the overall number of people employed by the Department.

The Department paid employment agencies approximately £104,166 each month in the last 12 months to supply temporary staff. The Department expects to pay employment agencies approximately £112,500 each month in the next 12 months to supply temporary staff.

Joint Venture Company (Leeds)

Mr. Gunnell: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment under what circumstances the services to be operated by the proposed joint venture company in Leeds will be returned to the sole control of the LEA. [132513]

Ms Estelle Morris [holding answer 25 July 2000]: Leeds City Council, the local education authority, will be responsible for ensuring that services to schools, pupils and parents in Leeds are delivered on its behalf to an agreed specification under the contractual arrangement with the proposed joint venture company. The joint venture company will take day-to-day responsibility for delivery, and will have the power to take the necessary operational decisions. The contract will be for a fixed period, not yet determined. Towards the end of the contract, the Secretary of State and Leeds City Council will need to come to a view on arrangements for the future delivery of relevant services.

Higher Education

Mr. Boswell: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment if he will project against annual Government spending plans to 2004 the real unit of resource per student in higher education on the assumption of (a) no increase in student numbers and (b) steady progress towards a target of 50 per cent. participation by young people. [132530]

Mr. Wicks [holding answer 25 July 2000]: My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Education and Employment last week announced an extra £100 million for higher education in 2001–02 on top of the increase announced in November 1999. Compared to 2000–01 the projected real-terms increase in unit cost per full-time equivalent student in 2001–02 if student numbers remained at 2000–01 levels, would be 2.2 per cent. If the number of students increases in line with plans for 2001–02, which are compatible with meeting the Government's target that 50 per cent. of 18 to 30-year-olds should have the opportunity to benefit from higher education by the end of the decade, then the real-terms unit cost will be about 0.5 per cent. above that in 2000–01. My right hon. Friend has yet to announce the allocation of funding for higher education for 2002–03 and 2003–04.

Term-time Workers

Mr. Hopkins: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment if he will estimate the number of term-time only workers who are (a) women under 45, (b) women over 45, (c) men under 45 and (d) men over 45; and what is the average per capita annual income of each group. [132713]

Ms Estelle Morris: This information is not held centrally.

Education Funding (Bury)

Mr. Chaytor: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment if he will list for Bury MBC in each of the last four years (a) the total revenue allocation for education from non-SSA budget headings, (b) the total capital allocation for education and (c) the annual percentage change for (a) and (b). [131387]

Ms Estelle Morris: The total revenue and capital allocations for education from 1997–98 to 2000–2001 for education outside the Education Standard Spending Assessment for Bury Metropolitan borough council are shown in the following table along with the annual percentage increase.

The revenue allocation for 1997–98 includes grant to cover for the cost of the nursery voucher scheme. This was funded from Education Standard Spending from 1998–99. The revenue allocations for 2000–01 does not include Nursery Grant for which data are not yet available. Since 1997–98 spending per pupil in England has increased by £300 in real terms.

	Revenue allocations	Annual percentage increase	Capital allocations	Annual percentage increase
1997–98	2,306,783	—	968,050	—
1998–99	1,705,347	–26	2,039,207	111
1999–2000	3,345,615	96	3,970,250	95
2000–01	5,133,028	53	4,759,253	20

School Meals

Mr. Willis: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what plans he has to ensure that all local education authorities provide state school primary aged children with the choice of a hot school meal, with particular reference to the implementation of the Education (Nutritional Standards for School Lunches) (England) Regulations 2000. [132716]

Jacqui Smith: We do not have the statutory power to require local education authorities and schools to provide hot meals for maintained primary pupils. This is because cold food that is provided in line with our new nutritional standards can be just as nutritious as hot food. We shall nevertheless make clear, in our forthcoming complementary guidance to school caterers, the importance of making hot meals available, especially during the winter months.

NORTHERN IRELAND

Police Oversight Commissioner

Mr. McNamara: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what annual budget is set aside for the police Oversight Commissioner, broken down into convenient budget heads; what representations he has received regarding the moneys to be allocated for this purpose. [130421]

Mr. Ingram: The Government are currently in discussion with Mr. Constantine, the Oversight Commissioner, as to the resources he will require.

Lords Lieutenant

Mr. Baker: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many of Northern Ireland's lord lieutenants are (a) women and (b) members of an ethnic minority. [132143]

Mr. Mandelson: The information is as follows:

(a) 1

(b) 0.

Plastic Baton Rounds

Ms Kelly: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many proposals his Department received to undertake a study to examine an alternative to plastic baton rounds, in accordance with recommendation 71 in the Patten report; what institution has been commissioned to undertake this research; when a decision was made on who would conduct the research; when the research commenced; which individuals are undertaking the research; and what the expected completion date is. [132032]

Mr. Ingram: I have established a UK-wide Steering Group to lead the research project. The Group comprises representatives of the Association of Chief Police Officers, Her Majesty's Inspector of Constabulary, the Home Office, the Ministry of Defence, the Police Scientific Development Branch of the Home Office, the Police Authority for Northern Ireland, the Royal Ulster Constabulary and the Northern Ireland Office. The Steering Group was formed in June of this year and held its first meeting on 8 July. The first phase of the project will be completed by the end of this year. One organisation has been suggested as a potential candidate to undertake the research.

Mr. McNamara: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what steps he has taken to investigate which institutions, organisations and individuals have the necessary expertise to conduct an independent study to find an alternative to the plastic baton round. [131024]

Mr. Ingram: The first phase of the research project involves a literature review that will be undertaken by the Police Scientific Development Branch of the Home Office—an organisation with recognised and extensive expertise in this area. This work will involve investigating which institutions, organisations and individuals ought to have a role to play in contributing to the research programme to find an acceptable, effective and less potentially lethal alternative to the plastic baton round.

Mr. McNamara: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what the terms of reference will be for the independent study to find an alternative to the plastic baton round. [131025]

Mr. Ingram: The Terms of Reference which have been set for the Steering Group leading the research project are as follows:

Objective

To establish whether a less potentially lethal alternative to baton rounds is available; and to review the public order equipment which is presently available or could be developed in order to expand the range of tactical options available to operational commanders.

Task

In the light of the recommendations in the Patten Report for a research programme to find an acceptable, effective and less potentially lethal alternative to the Plastic Baton Round, and for the RUC to be equipped with a broader range of public order equipment, to provide advice to the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland in a report as follows:

Phase 1 (Defining operational objectives and literature review)

Define the operational objective against which less potentially lethal weapons must be tested;

Prepare a literature review of less potentially lethal weapons available or under research.

Examine the literature review against the operational objective.

Phase 2 (Evaluating the literature review, preparing business case and directing further research as necessary)

Formulate proposals for further research on less potentially lethal weapons which would benefit from further research and which have the potential for successful transfer to the operational field, setting out the timings and the costs of that research; and Prepare business case.

Phase 3 (Research)

As directed under Phase 2, conduct further research, evaluate performance and safety, and establish deployment costs.

Phase 4 (Operational objectives and Public Order Equipment)

Define operational objectives for public order equipment;

Prepare a report on the tactical deployment of a range of public order equipment in Northern Ireland, covering as wide a range of equipment as possible.

Mr. McNamara: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what changes have been made to police training programmes concerning use of plastic baton rounds since publication of the Patten report. [131026]

Mr. Ingram: Since the publication of the Report of the Independent Commission on Policing for Northern Ireland, officers undergoing baton gun training have also been involved in a wider training programme including equal opportunities, community and race relations, the effects of Human Rights legislation and the use of force. Baton gun training specifically highlights the use of force, human rights matters, their issue, deployment and use together with command and control protocols, tactical deployment procedures and the criteria for their use. Officers in command positions undertake training in the issue, deployment and use of baton guns at both tactical and strategic levels and concentrate on accountability and human rights issues associated with the use of force.

Mr. McNamara: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what (a) organisations and (b) individuals have been consulted in order to implement the Patten Commission proposal for a research programme to find an alternative to the plastic baton round. [131027]

Mr. Ingram: My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland has consulted with ministerial colleagues about the establishment of, and terms of reference for, a Steering Group to lead the research project. The first phase of the research project will involve consultation with other organisations and individuals.

Mr. McNamara: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what estimate he has made of the cost of a research programme to find an alternative to the plastic baton round; and if he will make a statement on how he will ensure best value is achieved and evaluated. [131028]

Mr. Ingram: The Government have made the necessary funding available for phase one of the research project which involves a literature review undertaken by the Police Scientific Development Branch of the Home Office. This research will help to determine the level of funding required for the remainder of the project. The principles of economy, efficiency and effectiveness will guide the research project.

Mr. McNamara: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what proposals he has to invite tenders from those with the expertise to conduct a research programme to find an alternative to the plastic baton round. [131029]

Mr. Ingram: None at this stage.

Royal Ulster Constabulary

Ms Moran: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland when he plans to publish Her Majesty's Inspectorate of Constabulary's year 2000 report on the Royal Ulster Constabulary. [133347]

Mr. Ingram: Her Majesty's Inspectorate of Constabulary (HMIC) 1999–2000 Report will be published today Wednesday 26 July 2000. Copies of the report have been placed in the House of Commons Library. The report will also be available to the public from today.

Criminal Injuries Compensation

Ms Moran: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland when he will respond to the report made by Sir Kenneth Bloomfield following his review of criminal injuries compensation in Northern Ireland, published in July 1999. [133348]

Mr. Mandelson: After careful consideration of Sir Kenneth Bloomfield's detailed report on the fitness for purpose of criminal injuries compensation arrangements in Northern Ireland, I am today able to announce the Government's broad proposals for the future of the scheme. The detail will be published next year for consultation in the form of a draft Order in Council.

I must first place on record my gratitude and thanks to Sir Kenneth Bloomfield and his colleagues on the review for a most diligent and thorough investigation into the legislation and workings of the current criminal injuries compensation scheme. Their terms of reference asked them to advise the Government on:

the fitness for purpose of criminal injuries compensation arrangements in Northern Ireland in the light of the experiences of victims of terrorist violence . . .

and their research led them to consider many harrowing accounts of death and injury from victims of criminal violence, and to judge the extent to which the compensation scheme met their needs. The review team submitted their report last July when Sir Kenneth said that it would be difficult to argue that the statutory scheme in Northern Ireland is ungenerous, taken as a whole. As a result, the main thrust of their recommendations is designed to re-prioritise the scheme.

Before addressing the report I must stress this Government's commitment to the provision of fair and equitable compensation for innocent and deserving victims of violent crime, and their particular desire to ensure proper arrangements to recognise the additional suffering of victims of terrorist violence and civil unrest in Northern Ireland.

The major structural change proposed by the review team is the introduction of a tariff-based scheme with the tariff calculated on the average value of awards in Northern Ireland. This will provide a more transparent and straightforward system, and will allow claims to be settled more quickly. I have decided to accept this recommendation and extend it to apply to all claims and not just to those arising from less serious injuries, as recommended by the review. This will provide for consistency in the value of awards. The review also recommended that a tariff approach would largely make legal assistance in the making of claims unnecessary, and I have accepted this conclusion. Legal costs will therefore no longer be met by the scheme. Instead, Victim Support (NI) will be funded to provide assistance along the same lines as they currently do in GB. I have also decided that the right of appeal to the court should, in the future, no longer be necessary as part of a tariff-based scheme. The review recommended retention of court involvement for reasons which were persuasive at the time, but which should prove less so as progress is made across a range of issues on the wider political front. I therefore propose to replace it with an independent appeals tribunal, along the lines of the Criminal Injuries Compensation Appeals Panel. This will allow appeals to be processed more quickly, with less formality, and with less potential for retraumatising victims.

I have also agreed changes as recommended by the review in eligibility for awards, and in exclusion from or reduction in awards. More flexible arrangements will apply under the new scheme to those claiming as a result of psychiatric illness, there will be more generous bereavement support payments to a wider group of relatives, and the current statutory time limits for lodging a claim will be replaced by a flexible approach which will allow claims to be made, in certain circumstances, long after the incident. Future cases will also be capable of being reopened for a limited period on strict medical grounds. It is also proposed to introduce a penalty points system to regulate the effect of previous criminal convictions on awards. The same provisions will also apply to convictions for terrorist offences.

Finally, to address the concerns raised by Sir Kenneth in his report over inadequate financial assistance to past victims of the Troubles, I am also promising a further commitment of funds from next April to take forward the implementation of his report into victims of the Troubles "We Will Remember Them". In total this will represent a substantial package aimed at alleviating the financial hardships and other suffering inflicted on many by violence during the Troubles. Details of how this money will be dispersed will be announced in due course.

In conclusion, I have accepted some two thirds of the 64 recommendations made by Sir Kenneth and his team. I believe these decisions, which were arrived at only after lengthy consideration, represent the best way to ensure for the future a fair and equitable system of criminal injuries compensation which will recognise the suffering of innocent victims of violent crime.

Government Information

Mr. McNamara: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what is (a) the longest, (b) the shortest and (c) the average number of days taken by his Department to acknowledge receipt of letters requesting information under the Code of Practice on Access to Government Information at its (a) London and (b) Belfast office. [131361]

Mr. Mandelson: Thirteen Open Government requests were received by the Belfast office in the period 1 January 1999 to 30 June 2000. The longest time taken to acknowledge these requests was three working days, the shortest was the day of receipt and the average was 1.3 working days.

In the same period, one request was received by the London office. There is no record of that being acknowledged. However, a review of documents, instigated as a result of that request, will be completed shortly and a substantive reply will be provided to my hon. Friend without further delay.

Parliamentary Questions

Mr. Stunell: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many parliamentary questions were tabled to his Department between 19 October 1999 and 20 April which requested information, pursuant to his previous answers. [132462]

Mr. Mandelson: Between 19 October 1999 and 20 April 2000, 14 parliamentary questions were tabled which were pursuant to previous answers.

DEFENCE

Defence Clothing and Textiles Agency

Mr. Duncan Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if the appointment of Mr. Bill Finch as Product Development Manager at Feuchter went before the Advisory Committee on Business Appointments following his retirement as Contracts Branch Director of the Defence Clothing and Textiles Agency. [129731]

Mr. Spellar [holding answer 7 July 2000]: Under the Cabinet Office rules on the acceptance of outside appointments by Crown servants, only applications from officials at 3-Star/Deputy Under Secretary level and above are considered by the Prime Minister's Advisory Committee. Mr. Finch's application to join Feuchter was approved under these rules by officials within the Ministry of Defence.

Extraction/Insertion Pod

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what the cost has been to his Department of the development of the Extraction Stroke Insertion Pod for UK use; and what the expected cost will be to bring this into service; and if he will make a statement. [130377]

Dr. Moonie: This is a matter for the Chief Executive of the Defence Evaluation and Research Agency. I have asked the Chief Executive to write to the hon. Member.

Letter from John Chisholm to Mr. Michael Hancock, dated 26 July 2000:

I have been asked to reply to your question about the extraction/insertion pod for UK use since the work to which you refer was carried out as part of DERA's Pathfinder programme.

Pathfinder was launched by the then Defence Research Agency in 1992 in order to strengthen the industry participation in the research programme that MOD contracted from DRA. A concept study of the AVPRO EXINT pod was carried out as a Priority Pathfinder, which DERA funded from its own resources, in 1996. About £39K was contributed to the study by DERA to look at the aeromedical aspects of the pod. A report was issued on the completion of the study and AVPRO subsequently put forward proposals for further work to the Ministry of Defence (MOD). At the present time these proposals have not been taken up.

I hope this is helpful.

Royal Navy Vessels

Mr. Davidson: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will make a statement on the existing procedures by which the names of new Royal Navy vessels are determined. [131565]

Dr. Moonie: The procedure for determining the names of Royal Navy and Royal Fleet Auxiliary vessels is well established. Proposals are initiated by the Ships' Names and Badges Committee (SNBC), comprising representatives from the principal naval command areas. Names, reflecting an appropriate theme across all vessels of a class, are addressed early in the procurement cycle. The Committee consider a number of criteria such as promoting links with communities, the geographical spread of names and opportunities to revive names with an honourable history of service. Selected names are then submitted through Controller of the Navy and the Chief of Naval Staff to the Under Secretary of State for Defence for approval. In the case of major vessels, final approval is sought from Her Majesty the Queen.

Co-operative Capability Programme

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what estimate he has made of the cost to the Government of participating in the US Navy's Co-operative Engagement Capability; and if he will make a statement. [131497]

Dr. Moonie: I refer the hon. Member to the answer I gave him on 25 July 2000, Official Report, column 542W.

Chinook Crash, Mull of Kintyre

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if the Accident Investigations Branch inspector investigating the fatal crash of Chinook ZD576 on 2 June was able to determine that the SuperTANS navigational equipment was (a) switched on after impact and (b) functioning prior to impact; and if he will make a statement. [131795]

Mr. Spellar: The Air Accidents Investigation Branch team that carried out the independent technical investigation for the RAF Board of Inquiry into the Mull of Kintyre accident reported that the SuperTANS navigation unit recovered from the cockpit wreckage was slightly fire scorched but with little apparent impact damage. The On/Off switch was found in the Off position. However, subsequent examination by the manufacturer clearly showed the unit had been operating until impact, and it appeared that the switch position had been altered by the effect of the impact.

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what independent analysis was made of the SuperTANS navigation equipment from the wreckage of RAF Chinook ZD576; and if he will make a statement. [131794]

Mr. Spellar: As part of the technical investigation after the Mull of Kintyre accident, a detailed investigation of the SuperTANS navigation unit was carried out by the manufacturer, RACAL Avionics Ltd., under the direction of the Air Accidents Investigation Branch. Only the manufacturer had the necessary expertise to interrogate this equipment.

Missile Defence System

Ann Clwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence, pursuant to his answer of 27 June 2000, Official Report, column 433W, on the Missile Defence System, what criteria the UK will use to determine its response should the United States choose to make a request for assistance in the deployment of a nuclear missile defence system. [132566]

Mr. Hoon: We have made clear we would consider any request carefully in light of the circumstances at the time, taking into account relevant factors including the implications for UK defence. However, we do not yet know whether, or in what circumstances, we might receive such a request, so it is too early to indicate in more detail how or on what basis we might respond.

Republic of Cyprus

Mr. Cox: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what the current deployment is of British service personnel in the Republic of Cyprus. [132702]

Mr. Spellar: Currently 312 UK service personnel are based in the Republic of Cyprus as part of the UN Force in Cyprus (UNFICYP).

Landmines

Mr. Cox: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many British service personnel are involved in landmine destruction, indicating the countries in which they are deployed. [132701]

Mr. Spellar: British Service personnel are not currently involved in landmine destruction per se. But they do provide technical expertise, management and specialist skills to support mine action programmes worldwide. As at 1 July, personnel were deployed as follows:

As Senior Technical Adviser to the UN Mine Action Co-ordination Centre in Kosovo.

As Senior Technical Adviser to the UN Mine Action Centre in Bosnia.

As a Staff Officer within the Humanitarian Demining Training Centre at the US Army's Engineer School.

As Head of Technical Unit at the Geneva International Centre for Humanitarian Demining.

Additionally, in Bosnia, as part of the Stabilisation Force (SFOR), UK military personnel are involved in the co-ordination and monitoring of mine clearance; emergency disposal of mines and unexploded ordnance as required; and mine awareness training. Similar work is undertaken in Kosovo. We also maintain an Explosive Ordnance Disposal detachment in the Falkland Islands.

Military Overstretch

Mr. Cox: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what estimate he has made of the extent of the military overstretch faced by the UK's armed forces. [132696]

Mr. Spellar: The Government remain concerned at the degree of overstretch our armed forces have been subject to due to undermanning and the recent high level of Operational tempo. We are determined to drive this down.

Undermanning as at 1 May 2000 was:

The Naval Service—1,016

Army—7,968

RAF—922.

The RAF is now in broad manning balance; the Naval Service and Army will be on target in 2002 and 2005 respectively.

As at 1 June 2000, the percentage of armed forces personnel committed to operations were:

The Naval Service—32.39 per cent.

Army—27 per cent.

RAF—12.65 per cent.

This is a significant improvement on the position at the height of Kosovo, when, for example, the Army had 47 per cent. of its trained personnel committed to operations.

UN/NATO Shared Assets

Mrs. Ewing: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will list all UK/NATO shared assets (a) nationally and (b) by UK region for the most recent year for which figures are available. [131635]

Mr. Spellar [holding answer 25 July 2000]: The information requested is not readily available; however, I will write to the hon. Member and a copy of my letter will be placed in the Library of the House.

Service Recruitment

Mrs. Ewing: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will list by service, corps and regiment, recruitment levels nationally and by region of the UK for the most recent year for which figures are available. [131592]

Mr. Spellar [holding answer 25 July 2000]: Details on armed forces recruitment levels are not held centrally in the format requested. Information is held, however, on the number of selections, by Government Office region. It should be noted that selection figures indicate those personnel who have been chosen to enter the Services. For many, the actual date of intake into the armed forces will have fallen outside the year of selection.

The selections during the period 1 April 1999 to 31 March 2000, by Service and Government Office region, are reproduced in the table.

Government office region	Naval Service[1]	Army[2]	RAF[3]

Departmental Assets

Mrs. Ewing: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what is the total value of assets belonging to his Department (a) nationally and (b) by UK region; and if he will break down the assets by (i) estates, (ii) kit and (iii) plant and machinery for the same areas for the most recent financial year. [131634]

Mr. Spellar [holding answer 25 July 2000]: I regret the information sought is not held centrally and could be provided only at disproportionate cost. A summary of the total value of assets belonging to the Department as at 31 March 1999 is as follows:

	£ billion
Land and buildings	13.5
Fighting equipment	27.9
Plant and machinery and vehicles	4.6
Capital spares	8.4
IT and communications	1.2
Assets in course of construction	9.5
Total	65.1

I shall in future be publishing a summary of the values of assets held in Ministry of Defence's annual Departmental Resource Account (DRAc) under the new resource accounting and budgetary arrangements. The first such account will cover the 1999–2000 financial year and will be laid before Parliament later this year following NAO examination.

The National Asset Register published in November 1997 provides some information on location of land and buildings by region. It is planned to publish an updated version of this with values later this year.

Nuclear Submarines

Mr. Burnett: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many nuclear submarines carrying conventional weapons are currently operational. [132710]

Mr. Spellar: All 15 Royal Navy submarines carry conventional weapons. Currently, nine (three Vanguard Class Trident submarines, three Trafalgar Class and three Swiftsure Class) are operationally available. Submarines in this category may be deployed at sea, in port, or carrying out trials, training or maintenance. In every case they are operational now or at very short notice. The specific operational readiness of each submarine is, however, classified and is being withheld under Exemption 1 of the Code of Practice on Access to Government Information.

CR Gas

Mr. McNamara: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence (1) what (a) quantity, (b) strength and (c) type of CR gas was deployed on 16 October 1974 at HM Prison Maze; [131390]

(2) how many inmates of HM Prison Maze gave blood samples for analysis following the use of CR gas at HM Prison Maze in October 1974; what the results of blood analysis were; where the data are stored; and what follow-up studies have been made. [131388]

Mr. Spellar: As far as can be ascertained from surviving records, some 200 hand-held spray devices containing 0.05 per cent. CR were held at HM Prison Maze at that time, but were not used (although CS smoke was used). We have no record of blood samples being taken at the prison at that time.

Mr. McNamara: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what evaluation he has made of (a) the effectiveness of CR gas in keeping public order and (b) the circumstances in which CR gas may be deployed. [131389]

Mr. Spellar: The term CR refers to the chemical agent Dibenzoxazepine. Dibenzoxazepine has severe short-term incapacitating effects which have been well documented in the medical literature (for example, in Medicine, Science and Law, October 1973). CR may be deployed and authorised for use by the Armed Forces in certain special circumstances, particularly where it might enable the use of firearms to be avoided.

Defence Munitions Establishment, Gosport

Mr. Rapson: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what plans he has for the Defence Munitions establishment at Gosport. [133357]

Mr. Spellar: In common with the rest of the Defence Logistics Organisation, Defence Munitions has been set challenging savings and efficiency targets. A number of significant savings initiatives have already been delivered from the constituent parts.

Previous efficiency studies such as Options for Change and Front Line First have, by and large, resulted in DM Gosport in Hampshire being a net inheritor of tasks and resources. Consequently the Depot has escaped the hard root and branch reviews which other parts of Defence Munitions have been subject to. To address the efficiency issue at DM Gosport a review of work practices and Depot management structure was initiated late 1999. The Study Team identified, as a first step, business efficiencies which, if implemented, would result in reductions of up to 30 per cent. of the total number of posts of 650.

I was advised in February that further work was necessary. This was undertaken by a team comprising Depot staff and Trades Union representatives, which was supported by consultants to build upon the team's work, and charged with identifying the precise future optimum business processes and management structure of the Depot. This further work has now completed and indicates that post reductions in the order of 46 per cent. are possible without detriment to the output of the Depot.

A "without commitment" Preference Exercise carried out at the Depot has identified that the majority of redundancies would be achieved voluntarily. While the probability of job losses is always unwelcome, it is crucial that we take advantage of new business processes (such as multi-skilling, operator self inspection, exploitation of new technology, and outsourcing of a number of support functions) if we are to ensure that we are able to maximise investment on front line defence capability and continue to give best value for money to the taxpayer.

I also hope that these changes will better place DM Gosport to win future commercial contracts for weapon processing and associated work, therefore securing job opportunities for the future.

Departmental Secondments

Mr. Willis: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence, how many staff were seconded from the private sector to his Department from (a) May 1997 to April 1998, (b) May 1998 to April 1999 and (c) May 1999 to the latest date for which figures are available, stating in each case the companies from which staff have been seconded. [109074]

Dr. Moonie [pursuant to the reply, 8 February 2000, c. 109–10W]: A correction is required to the information given for secondments from the private sector to the Ministry of Defence for the period May 1998 to April 1999. During this period there were 20 inward secondments, not 19 as stated, as there were two secondees from Rolls-Royce for this period, not one. The corrected information is in the table.

AGRICULTURE, FISHERIES AND FOOD

Bottom-set Gillnets

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what plans he has to reduce the use of bottom-set gillnets; and if he will make a statement. [130382]

Mr. Morley: I have no such plans at present. The Sea Mammal Research Unit is currently trialling a range of gear modifications, including the use of acoustic deterrents (pingers) with Cornish fishermen, in order to reduce the scale of cetacean bycatch. If these measures prove effective, I will encourage their use in all similar UK fisheries.

Parliamentary Questions

Mr. Stunell: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food how many of the written parliamentary questions tabled to his Department between 19 October 1999 and 20 April 2000 did not receive substantive answers, citing as the reason that the information was (a) not held centrally, (b) not held in the form requested and (c) not available. [131197]

Mr. Morley [holding answer 18 July 2000]: According to our records, of the 1,189 written parliamentary questions tabled during this period, we answered seven questions where the information was not held centrally, nine where the information was not held in the form requested and 34 where the information was not available.

Mr. Stunell: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food how many written parliamentary questions tabled to his Department between 19 October 1999 and 20 April 2000 have not received substantive answers, citing as the reason commercial confidentiality or other confidentiality. [131228]

Mr. Morley [holding answer 20 July 2000]: For this period there were 1,189 written parliamentary questions tabled, of which seven did not receive substantive answers, citing as the reason commercial or other confidentiality.

Felling Licences

Mr. Chope: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food, pursuant to his answer of 8 March 2000, Official Report, column 723W, on tree felling licences, what the outcome was of the investigation by the Forestry Commission into allegations that the RSPB had felled trees which were not included in the felling licence for Avon Heath Country Park; and if he will make a statement. [132357]

Mr. Morley [holding answer 24 July 2000]: The Forestry Commission has not yet completed its investigation. I shall write to the hon. Member when I have further information.

Departmental Staff

Mr. Burstow: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food how many unfilled vacancies for permanent staff his Department has; what percentage of staff positions in his Department are vacant; what the monthly cost would be to his Department of employing civil servants in these positions; how many and what percentage of staff his Department employs on a temporary basis through employment agencies; how much his Department paid employment agencies to supply temporary staff in each of the last 12 months; and how much he expects to pay employment agencies to supply temporary staff in each of the next 12 months. [131440]

Mr. Morley [holding answer 25 July 2000]: Pay budgets within my Department are decentralised so the above information could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

Meat Hygiene Service

Mr. Campbell-Savours: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food when he will publish the 1999–2000 Annual report and Accounts for the Meat Hygiene Service. [133345]

Mr. Nick Brown: The 1999–2000 annual report and accounts for the Meat Hygiene Service have been laid before Parliament. Copies are available in the Library of the House.

PRIME MINISTER

Business Appointments

Mr. Roy: To ask the Prime Minister if he has received the third report of the Advisory Committee on Business Appointments; and if he will make a statement. [133247]

The Prime Minister: The Committee has submitted its third report to me and I have today placed copies in the Libraries of both Houses. Since 1975 the Committee has advised the Prime Minister of the day on the propriety of business appointments that Crown servants wish to take up when they leave the Crown service. Following a recommendation of the Committee on Standards in Public Life, it now also provides advice directly to former Ministers on their business appointments. The Committee's third report provides an account of their work in 1999–2000.

The Committee has an important role, and I am very grateful to all the members for giving their time so freely to it.

Standards in Public Life Report

Mr. Hinchliffe: To ask the Prime Minister when the Government intend to respond to the Sixth report of the Committee on Standards in Public Life. [133414]

The Prime Minister: The Sixth Report of the Committee on Standards in Public Life, which focused on implementation of the Committee's First Report, was published in January. It concluded that the process of reform of standards of ethical behaviour in public life that had been set in train following the publication of its First Report had been a success and made a number of further recommendations. I am grateful to Lord Neill and his Committee for their continued work in this vital area.

I have published today the Government's response to the Committee's Sixth Report (Cm 4817) and copies are available in the Library.

Parliamentary Questions

Mr. Stunell: To ask the Prime Minister on how many occasions he has deposited papers in the Library in response to parliamentary questions tabled to his Department between 19 October 1999 and 20 April. [132465]

The Prime Minister: Sixteen.

Engagements

Sir Peter Tapsell: To ask the Prime Minister if he will list his official engagements for Wednesday 26 July. [132363]

The Prime Minister: This morning I had meetings with Ministerial colleagues and others. In addition to my duties in the House I will have further such meetings later today.

INTERNATIONAL DEVELOPMENT

Parliamentary Questions

Mr. Stunell: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development how many of the written parliamentary questions tabled to her Department between 19 October 1999 and 20 April have not received substantive answers, citing as the reason that the information is (a) not held centrally, (b) not held in the form requested and (c) not available. [132469]

Clare Short: Of the 574 written parliamentary questions tabled to my Department between 19 October 1999 and 20 April 2000, one did not receive a substantive answer because the material was not held centrally, two because the information was not held in the form requested and four because the information was not available.

SCOTLAND

Post Offices

Mr. Sarwar: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will make a statement on changes to the payment of benefits and pensions and the effect on post offices (a) in Glasgow and (b) in Scotland. [127716]

Dr. Reid: The Government are committed to investing £480 million in the automation of the entire post office network, allowing the move to paying benefits and pensions by automated credit transfer to start in 2003. This will not prevent people from continuing to collect their benefits in cash from their local post office if they prefer.

In addition, the Government have recently unveiled a further package of measures to modernise the post office network, giving opportunities for significant new business and securing its future. As an example, from 27 July Lloyds TSB customers will be able to carry out basic banking transactions at 2,000 post offices throughout Scotland free of charge, underlining the potential for post offices to provide an ever-increasing range of services to local communities.

Parliamentary Questions

Mr. Stunell: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland on how many occasions he has deposited papers in the Library in response to parliamentary questions tabled to his Department between 19 October 1999 and 20 April. [132466]

Dr. Reid: Two.

WALES

Spending Review

7. Mr. Donald Anderson: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what discussions he has had with the First Secretary about the effect of the 2000 spending review on transport in Wales. [130883]

Mr. Hanson: I discuss many aspects of transport with the First Secretary during our regular meetings. The settlement announced for Wales last week has given Wales an extra £299 million transport consequential under the Barnett Formula. As my hon. Friend will be aware, any decisions on how the settlement is allocated within Wales will be for the Assembly to decide and will be announced in their budget plans later this year.

There will also be scope under European Structural funded schemes for ambitious transport infrastructure projects, which the National Assembly for Wales will evaluate alongside all other bids.

12. Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what discussions he has had with the First Secretary about the effect of the 2000 spending review on police funding in Wales. [130888]

Mr. Paul Murphy: I meet the First Secretary regularly to discuss a range of issues.

Last Wednesday's announcement by the Home Secretary of an extra £1.6 billion for police funding in England and Wales for the next three years is very good news. It represents an average annual increase in police funding of 7 per cent. and will mean a further 4,000 recruits for England and Wales, bringing the total to 9,000 extra recruits over the next three years. Police forces in North Wales, Dyfed Powys and Gwent will also benefit from extra funding in recognition of the special challenges which they face in policing sparsely populated rural areas.

14. Mrs. Lawrence: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what discussions he has had with the Assembly First Secretary about the effect of the 2000 comprehensive spending review on EU structural funds in Wales. [130890]

Mr. Paul Murphy: I have discussed this matter with the First Secretary on a number of occasions.

The settlement covers in full the increase in EU Structural Funds receipts, outside of the Barnett formula, and he welcomes it as much as I do.

15. Mr. Martyn Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what discussions he has had with the First Secretary about the effect of the 2000 spending review on police chief constables in Wales. [130891]

Mr. Paul Murphy: I meet the First Secretary regularly to discuss a range of issues.

Last Wednesday's announcement by the Home Secretary of an extra £1.6 billion for police funding in England and Wales for the next three years is very good news. It represents an average annual increase in police funding of 7 per cent. and will mean a further 4,000 recruits for England and Wales, bringing the total to 9,000 extra recruits over the next three years. Police forces in North Wales, Dyfed Powys and Gwent will also benefit from extra funding in recognition of the special challenges which they face in policing sparsely populated rural areas.

It will be for individual chief constables in Wales to determine how they spend the funds allocated to them.

17. Mrs. Betty Williams: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what discussions he has had with the First Secretary about the effect of the 2000 spending review on education in Wales. [130893]

23. Mr. Denzil Davies: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what discussions he has had with the First Secretary about the effect of the 2000 spending review on education in Wales. [130899]

Mr. Paul Murphy: I met with the First Secretary on a regular basis in the run-up to the 2000 Spending Review.

I welcome the excellent settlement secured for Wales, which includes amounts consequential on allocations to the Department for Education and Employment.

18. Ms Julie Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what discussions he has had with the First Secretary about the effect of the 2000 spending review on health and social services in Wales. [130894]

Mr. Hanson: My right hon. Friend, the Secretary of State met with the First Secretary on a regular basis in the run-up to the 2000 Spending Review.

The excellent settlement secured for Wales includes amounts consequential on allocations to the Department of Health which can be allocated by the National Assembly to improve healthcare.

Minimum Wage

8. Mr. Caton: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what discussions he has held with the First Secretary about the impact of the national minimum wage on the Welsh economy. [130884]

Mr. Paul Murphy: I regularly meet the First Secretary of the National Assembly for Wales and discuss a number of issues including the Welsh economy.

The minimum wage has brought substantial benefits to large numbers of people, especially women and part-time workers, without any indication of significant adverse effect on employment or economy in Wales.

Common Agricultural Policy

9. Mr. Gareth Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will make a statement on progress on reform of the common agricultural policy in relation to upland farming in Wales. [130885]

Mr. Hanson: A major reform arising from Agenda 2000 CAP reforms was contained in the European Commission's Rural Development Regulation, relating to Less Favoured Areas (LFAs). The new scheme for the LFAs, which constitute 80 per cent. of Wales, was submitted to the European Commission last December by the National Assembly for Wales. Commission approval is expected in the near future.

Local Government Settlement

11. Mr. Llew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what discussions he has had with the First Secretary regarding the consultation over the local government settlement for Wales. [130887]

Mr. Hanson: The Secretary of State had regular meetings with the First Secretary in the run-up to the 2000 Spending Review. The settlement we have secured for Wales includes amounts consequential on allocations to the Department for Environment, Transport and the Regions for local government. It will of course be for the National Assembly to decide how the consequential amounts will be allocated in Wales, and it is currently consulting on its joint review of the standard spending assessment formula for distribution of grant to local authorities in Wales.

Rural Development

13. Mr. Simon Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales when he last discussed sustainable rural development with the First Secretary; and if he will make a statement. [130889]

Mr. Hanson: My right hon. Friend discusses a range of rural issues in his weekly meeting with the First Secretary and I discuss rural development matters in my regular liaison meetings with Assembly Cabinet members. The National Assembly for Wales has what we believe is a unique duty, set out in section 121 of the Government of Wales Act 1998, to make a scheme setting out how it proposes to promote sustainable development in the exercise of its functions.

Exchange Rate

16. Miss McIntosh: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what recent discussions he has had with the First Secretary on the impact of the level of the pound on farmers; and if he will make a statement. [130892]

Mr. Paul Murphy: I have regular weekly meetings with the First Secretary and we discuss a wide range of topics. I understand that the majority of the agrimonetary compensation out of the total £10.6 million promised to Welsh dairy, beef and sheep farmers at the No. 10 Agriculture Summit on 30 March will be paid between August and December this year. We also are hopeful that the Agenda 2000 CAP reforms and the Rural Development Plan will enable Welsh farmers to achieve a sustainable agricultural industry.

Farm Incomes

19. Mr. Fabricant: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales when he will meet the First Secretary to discuss farm incomes in south Wales. [130895]

Mr. Paul Murphy: I meet the First Secretary on a regular weekly basis and we discuss a wide range of issues. I am hopeful that the Rural Development Plan for Wales, coupled with support from Objectives 1, 2 and 3 of the European Structural Funds and the industry's own resilience and coherent approach to rural development, will result in an improved level of farm incomes not only in south Wales but the whole country.

EU Structural Funds

20. Mr. Alan W. Williams: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will make a statement on match funding for Objective 1 structural funds for west Wales and the valleys. [130896]

Mr. Paul Murphy: The excellent spending review settlement for Wales announced last week included an additional £421 million to cover in full the increase in EU Structural Funds receipts in Wales, outside of the Barnett formula. This settlement unlocks funding within the Block to meet the match funding requirement.

I have talked with the First Secretary and the Assembly Finance Secretary who agree that as a result of this settlement, no worthwhile Objective 1 project will be held back by lack of resources.

Organic Farming

21. Mr. Öpik: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what recent discussions he has had with the First Secretary about promoting organic farming. [130897]

Mr. Paul Murphy: I meet the First Secretary on a regular weekly basis and we discuss a wide range of issues. I understand that the National Assembly has committed nearly £3 million to the organic farming scheme in its first year of operation. The scheme pays grants to farmers to help them through the period of conversion to organic farming. I also welcome the launch of the Centre for Organic Excellence in Aberystwyth on 10 July, which will help the Assembly achieve its aim of converting 10 per cent. of agricultural land to organic production by 2005.

Pensioners

22. Mr. John Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what recent representations he has made to the Secretary of State for Social Security on behalf of Welsh pensioners. [130898]

Mr. Hanson: As a member of the Inter Ministerial Group on Older People I regularly discuss pensioner issues.

During the course of this Parliament, an extra £6.5 billion over and above inflation, will be spent on pensioners. Of this, half is going to help the poorest third of pensioners primarily through increases to the Minimum Income Guarantee and Winter Fuel payments.

The Minimum Income Guarantee will benefit 94,000 pensioners in Wales. This will be increased in line with earnings throughout the remainder of this Parliament.

A comprehensive strategy has been put in place by this Government to tackle pensioner poverty. This targeted approach ensures that more help is directed towards those pensioners that need it most.

Ambulance Response Times

24. Mr. Edwards: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will meet the First Secretary to discuss the implementation in Wales of national targets for ambulance response times. [130900]

Mr. Hanson: I have no plans to discuss this issue at present but would be happy to include this item in my regular discussions with the First Secretary or the Assembly Health Secretary.

NHS Waiting Lists

25. Mr. Clifton-Brown: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what discussions he has had with the National Assembly for Wales regarding NHS waiting lists. [130901]

Mr. Hanson: Regular discussions about the NHS in Wales are held with both the Assembly First Secretary and the Assembly Health Secretary and waiting lists are often included on the agenda.

The National Assembly are keen to reduce waiting lists as much and as soon as possible. Together with providing additional funding for this purpose, they have set strict targets to be met by Health Authorities.

Manufacturing Industry

Mr. Ben Chapman: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what recent discussions he has had with the First Secretary on manufacturing industry in Wales. [130879]

Mr. Paul Murphy: The First Secretary and I meet on a regular basis and discuss a number of issues including manufacturing in Wales. Overall, manufacturing output in Wales for the four quarters to the first quarter of 2000 was 2.9 per cent. higher than this corresponding period a year earlier.

TREASURY

Savings

Mr. Love: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how much was invested in individual savings accounts in their first year of operation (a) in total and (b) net of transfers from other savings instruments; how much was invested in (i) TESSAs and (ii) PEPs in their first year of operation; and if he will make a statement. [127835]

Miss Melanie Johnson: Individual Savings Accounts attracted a total of over £28 billion in their first year 1999–2000, which is around a third more than the sum put into PEPs and TESSAs in their last year of operation of 1998–99. This excludes proceeds from matured TESSAs subscribed to cash components of ISAs or TESSA only ISAs. The proportion of funds which is attributable to new savings is not available.

Only £480 million was subscribed to PEPs in their first year (1987) compared to over £16 billion subscribed to the stocks and shares components of ISAs in their first year. The amount invested in TESSAs in their first year (1991) was around £7.3 billion, whereas the cash component of ISAs attracted some £12.3 billion in their first year.

Census Forms

Mr. Tyrie: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer, pursuant to the oral statement of the Economic Secretary on 5 July 2000, Official Report, Standing Committee D, column 15, with whom the status of the commitment to ensure that census forms will read, "What is your religion? This question is voluntary, has been checked"; and if he will make a statement. [131365]

Miss Melanie Johnson: Under the provisions of Section 3(1) of the Census Act 1920, for the purpose of enabling any Order in Council directing a census to be taken to be carried into effect, the Chancellor of the Exchequer may make regulations with respect to the forms to be used in the taking of a census.

If the Census (Amendment) Bill, as currently drafted were to become law, then subsequent to the necessary Amendment Order being made providing for particulars in respect of religion to be added to those already approved by Parliament for inclusion in the 2001 Census, I will make, on behalf of the Chancellor, regulations setting out the form and wording of the particular question on religion to be included on the 2001 Census forms. This would include the statement that the question is voluntary.

Legal advisers for the Office for National Statistics have confirmed that the authority to include such a statement on the census form would fall within the provision of Section 3(1) of the Act, once the Act has been amended to provide for such particulars to be included without penalty for not doing so.

In my statement to the Standing Committee D on 5 July, I announced my intention to make such a statement on the 2001 Census form to be included in regulations, should the Bill receive Royal Assent.

HIPC

Ms Walley: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will make a statement on the World Bank's refusal to include (a) Haiti, (b) Bangladesh and (c) Nigeria in the Heavily Indebted Poor Countries programme. [130992]

Miss Melanie Johnson: The list of countries eligible for debt relief under HIPC is not fixed, nor does the UK Government regard it as fixed. Any country which is eligible for concessional lending from the IMF and World Bank, which has established a track record of reform and sound programmes and which faces an unsustainable debt burden, beyond available debt relief mechanisms, can qualify for debt relief under the HIPC Initiative. It is then, of course, a matter for the country itself to chose to opt for HIPC debt relief.

Working Families Tax Credit

Mr. Fraser: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will make a statement on the rate of up-take of the Working Families Tax Credit in Dorset. [130836]

Dawn Primarolo: The number of families in receipt of Working Families Tax Credit at the end of May 2000 is provisionally estimated at 1,056,000. The number in receipt of Family Credit at the end of May 1999 is estimated at 821,000.

Mr. Cox: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many families receive the Working Families Tax Credit. [132625]

Dawn Primarolo: The number of families in receipt of the Working Families Tax Credit at the end of May 2000 is provisionally estimated at 1,056,000.

Mr. Willetts: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many recipients of the Working Families Tax Credit work in the (a) public and (b) private sectors. [132698]

Dawn Primarolo: Estimates could not be made without incurring disproportionate cost. Information on the sector of the employer is not relevant for determining eligibility for Working Families Tax Credit or calculating the value of the award, and is not captured to the computer system used for the statistical analysis of these awards.

Mr. Willetts: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will provide a breakdown by region of the number of recipients of the Working Families Tax Credit. [132700]

Dawn Primarolo: The number of families in receipt of Working Families Tax Credit (WFTC) at the end of May 2000 is provisionally estimated at 1,056,000. The breakdown by country and Government Office Region is as follows:

Thousand

Country and Government Office Region	Provisional estimate of number of recipients of WFTC at end-May 2000
United Kingdom	1,056
England	855
North-East	62
North-West	154
Yorkshire and Humberside	119
East Midlands	83
West Midlands	107
East of England	72
London	78

South-East	96
South-West	84
Wales	62
Scotland	101

Lost Working Days

Mr. Gibb: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many working days were lost to individual action in (a) 1996, (b) 1997, (c) 1998 and (d) 1999. [131116]

Miss Melanie Johnson: The information requested falls within the responsibility of the National Statistician. I have asked him to reply.

Letter from Len Cook to Mr. Nick Gibb, dated 26 July 2000:

As National Statistician I have been asked to reply to your recent question about the number of working days lost to industrial action.

The table below shows the number of working days lost to labour disputes in the United Kingdom for each year since 1996.

Number of working days lost due to labour disputes in the UK

	Number

National Minimum Wage

Mr. Sarwar: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will estimate the average take-home pay of workers benefiting from the National Minimum Wage (a) before the Budget in March and (b) following the measures announced in the Budget. [130956]

Dawn Primarolo: The Government are pursuing a comprehensive strategy to ensure that every individual shares fairly in the increasing prosperity of the nation. As a result of personal tax and benefit changes announced in Budget 2000 and previous Budgets, households will be, on average, £460 a year better off. Households with an individual in receipt of the National Minimum Wage will be, on average, £1,500 a year better off.

Mr. Cox: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many (a) men and (b) women have benefited from the introduction of the national minimum wage to date. [132107]

Miss Melanie Johnson: The information requested falls within the responsibility of the National Statistician. I have asked him to reply.

Letter from John Pullinger to Mr. Tom Cox, dated 26 July 2000:

I have been asked to reply to your recent question regarding the number of men and women who have benefited from the introduction of the National Minimum Wage (132107). I am replying in the absence of the National Statistician.

Definitive estimates on the number of people that have been affected by the national minimum wage are not yet available. Currently available estimates for assessing the effect draw on data from both the New Earnings Survey and the Labour Force Survey, and recognise the particular value that each survey adds to the quality and analytical details that can be provided. However, the latest adjusted estimates are mainly based on data for the Spring (March-May) 1999 Labour Force Survey. The reference period spans the implementation date for the National Minimum Wage Act on 1 April 1999. This means adjusted estimates are unlikely accurately to measure the effect of this legislation since there are employees who could have been earning below the minimum wage rates in March 1999, before the law took effect.

The currently available estimates for March-May 1999 were published in an Office for National Statistics (ONS) First Release on 14 October 1999 and show that the number of people earning below the minimum wage rates set in April 1999 had fallen significantly between 1998 and 1999. A copy of this first release is available in the House of Commons Library.

ECOFIN Council

Mr. Hood: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what the outcome was of the ECOFIN Council held in Brussels on 17 July; and if he will make a statement. [131570]

Miss Melanie Johnson: I attended the meeting of the Economic and Finance Council of Ministers.

Draft conclusions on the taxation of savings and the Code of Conduct were circulated by the Presidency and adopted without amendment.

The Presidency concluded that it was not possible to adopt the draft conclusions on Money Laundering because the question of how broad a definition of predicate offences to include in the Directive would need to be discussed further. The extent to which lawyers and accountants should be included in the scope of the directive also requires further consideration. It was hoped political agreement would be possible at the September ECOFIN meeting.

Conclusions were adopted without discussion on Undertaking for Collective Investment in Transferable Securities (UCITS) and Accounting Standards.

The Commission presented its communication on a Global Strategy for the Protection of the Community's interests, noting it intended to resubmit to InterGovernmental Conference its proposal for a European Public Prosecutor (EPP). The Council agreed conclusions to maintain momentum on fight against fraud, but did not support the Commission on the EPP.

On Lisbon follow-up it was agreed that ECOFIN would discuss in November reports on the Quality and Sustainability of Public Finances and Structural Performance indicators.

A mandate for the Group of Wise Persons was agreed unanimously. A copy has been placed in the House of Commons Library.

Conclusions on enlargement were adopted. ECOFIN agreed to discuss exchange rate policy and economic and financial stability in EU candidate countries at a future meeting.

Household Incomes

Mr. Berry: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer, pursuant to his answer of 12 July 2000, Official Report, column 592W, on the effect of the minimum wage on household income of different income deciles, what estimate he has made of the percentage effect on the population estimated in (a) 1997–98, (b) 1998–99 and (c) 1999–2000 to have below half average household income. [132020]

Dawn Primarolo: The Government are implementing a comprehensive strategy to tackle the causes of child and pensioner poverty. The National Minimum Wage, in providing a statutory level beneath which pay cannot fall, forms part of that strategy.

The National Minimum Wage was introduced in April 1999. It is therefore not possible to estimate its effect on incomes in 1997–98 and 1998–99. Income information for 1999–2000 will be available next year in "Households Below Average Income" which is produced by the Department for Social Security.

Tax Allowances

Mr. Matthew Taylor: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what estimate he has made of the revenue yield for the next five financial years of restricting the value for the purpose of income tax of (a) the personal allowance and (b) age related allowances to the value of the basic rate of income tax; and if he will make a statement. [132271]

Dawn Primarolo: The estimated revenue yield in a full year from restricting the personal allowance to the basic rate would be £2.7 billion in 2000–01. Because of the tapered withdrawal of the age-related personal allowances, there is no relief for them at the higher rate and there would be no Exchequer effect from restricting them.

This estimate is based on the Survey of Personal Incomes and consistent with the March 2000 Budget.

Letter from John Pullinger to Mr. Tom Cox, dated 26 July 2000:

I have been asked to reply to your recent question regarding the number of men and women who have benefited from the introduction of the National Minimum Wage (132107). I am replying in the absence of the National Statistician.

A copy of this first release is available in the House of Commons Library.

Pesticides Tax

Mr. Alan Simpson: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer, pursuant to his answer of 21 June 2000, Official Report, column 215–16W, on pesticides tax, if he will list each of the meetings held with organisations named in the question. [132313]

Mr. Timms: I have had a number of meetings with interested parties, including industry representatives and the RSPB. In addition, I have read a number of written representations.

Government Borrowing

Mr. Matthew Taylor: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he has revised his plans for announcements concerning debt management as referred to in his written answer of 12 June 2000, Official Report, column 462W; and if he will make a statement. [132250]

Miss Melanie Johnson: There have been no subsequent changes to the Government's financing remit since the statement of 12 June.

Fuel Duty

Mr. Brake: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer, pursuant to his answer of 17 July 2000, Official Report, column 99W, concerning payment of duty on fuel products at the terminal instead of the point at which they leave the refinery, if he will carry out a strategic environmental appraisal of this policy. [132644]

Mr. Timms: The potential environmental impact is only one consideration of this policy. Any change would also impact on revenue flow, Customs resources and accounting systems and revenue security. There are no plans to review the policy.

Aggregates Tax

Mr. Fearn: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what assessment he has made of the effect on employment in coastal areas of the introduction of the proposed aggregates tax. [132493]

Mr. Timms: All of the revenues raised from the levy will be recycled back to business through a cut in employer National Insurance contributions (NICs) and a new 'Sustainability Fund' aimed at delivering local environmental benefits. It is not possible to say precisely what the effect of the levy, the cut in employer NICs and the Sustainability Fund will be on the aggregates and construction industries, since this will depend, among other things, on future employment trends and the degree to which firms switch to recycled materials.

Mr. Rogers: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what the principal objectives are of the proposed aggregates tax. [132431]

Mr. Timms: The main objective of the aggregates levy is to bring about environmental benefits by making the price of aggregates better reflect their true environmental costs, and encouraging the use of recycled aggregates.

In addition, some of the revenues from the levy will be used for the new 'Sustainability Fund' aimed at delivering local environmental benefits to areas subject to the environmental costs of aggregates extraction. The Government will be consulting shortly on how this fund can best be used.

Audit and Accountability Steering Group

Ms Walley: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if the central Government Audit and Accountability Steering Group will have objectives relating to environmental sustainability; and if there are members of the Steering Group with expertise in environmental sustainability. [132572]

Mr. Timms: The terms of reference for the review by Lord Sharman of central Government audit and accountability have not yet been discussed by the Steering Group. The members of the Steering Group include a former senior official of the Department of the Environment, Transport and the Regions.

Spending Review

Mr. Matthew Taylor: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer, pursuant to his oral statement of 18 July 2000, Official Report, columns 219–29, when he will publish full public service agreements for all departments; and if he will make a statement. [132677]

Mr. Andrew Smith: I plan to do so on 28 July.

Disabled Persons Tax Credit

Mr. Willetts: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if it is his policy that, when the Disabled Persons Tax Credit is replaced in 2003, the Employment Tax Credit will be paid to childless disabled people. [132697]

Dawn Primarolo: Final decisions on the precise details of the ETC will be taken nearer the time of its introduction. When the new credits are introduced in 2003 payments to the working disabled will continue to be made to both those with and without children.

Correspondence

Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer when he proposes to reply to the letter of 4 April, sent by the right hon. Member for Alyn and Deeside, concerning Mr. Marguson of Deeside. [133131]

Mr. Timms: There is no record of this letter having been received. If my right hon. Friend would send a copy to me it will be dealt with as soon as possible.

Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer (1) when he proposes to answer the letter of the right hon. Member for Alyn and Deeside, of 6 June, concerning Mr. Collard of Deeside, Flintshire; [133132]

(2) when he proposes to answer the letter sent by the right hon. Member for Alyn and Deeside, regarding Mr. Peck of Deeside, Flintshire, on 9 June. [133128]

Mr. Timms: I have already done so.

Euro

Mr. Matthew Taylor: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer (1) which studies his Department has (a) commissioned, (b) reviewed and (c) undertaken that examine the cost to (i) UK businesses and (ii) euro zone business of preparing for introduction of the euro; and if he will make a statement; [132901]

(2) which studies his Department has (a) commissioned, (b) reviewed and (c) undertaken that examine the cost to (i) UK businesses and (ii) euro zone business of preparing for introduction of the euro; and if he will make a statement. [132899]

Miss Melanie Johnson: The Treasury has neither commissioned nor undertaken studies of this nature. The cost of a changeover would depend on the overall approach taken and the decisions made by individual businesses.

ENTRUST

Mr. Baker: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what steps he is taking to ensure best use of public money by ENTRUST. [131666]

Mr. Timms: ENTRUST does not determine where funds generated through the landfill tax credit scheme are spent. The Government are keen to promote more spending of contributions on recycling and re-use, particularly the recycling of household waste. The Government set out in the Waste Strategy 2000 ways in which they hope to achieve this and intend to consult interested parties on these proposals.

Mr. Baker: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what recent assessment he has made of the (a) efficiency and (b) funding distribution policies of ENTRUST. [131665]

Mr. Timms: Funds are donated by landfill site operators to environmental bodies. ENTRUST has no part in deciding which projects receive funding. The landfill tax legislation sets out the broad categories of environmental projects that can qualify for funding.

As the regulator of the landfill tax credit scheme, it is ENTRUST's job to ensure that the money is properly spent by qualifying environmental bodies in ways governed by the landfill tax regulations, and that no direct benefit passes to the contributors. HM Customs and Excise, which audits ENTRUST's performance to ensure that it meets an acceptable standard, is satisfied that ENTRUST has appropriate systems in place to identify abuses and revoke the approval of non-compliant bodies.

Mr. Baker: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will make it his policy to abolish ENTRUST and redirect landfill tax moneys to local authorities. [131667]

Mr. Timms: No. The Government have set out in the Waste Strategy 2000 that they will explore options for amending the landfill tax credit scheme to contribute more to the objective of increased recycling, including helping local authorities to raise recycling levels.

Financial Services Authority

Dr. Cable: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer when the Financial Services Authority submitted its response to the Cruickshank report. [132802]

Miss Melanie Johnson: The FSA's response to the Cruickshank report will be published alongside the Government's own response to the report.

Debt Management Office

Mrs. Lawrence: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will make a statement about the UK Debt Management Office's annual report and accounts. [133248]

Miss Melanie Johnson: The DMO's annual report and administrative accounts for 1999–2000 are being published today. Copies have been deposited in the Libraries of both Houses.

HOME DEPARTMENT

Travellers

Mr. Coaker: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what assessment he has made of the effectiveness of the powers available to (a) local authorities and (b) the police to deal with travellers; and what discussions he has had with (i) local authorities and (ii) the police about strengthening these powers. [131888]

Mr. Charles Clarke: We consider that the statutory powers currently available are adequate provided that they are used effectively and at an early stage when necessary.

There has been some concern that guidance on dealing with trespass by travellers needs clarifying in some respects. My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions (DETR) has, therefore, today published a revision to DETR Circular 18–94 to local authorities on the use of their powers to deal with unauthorised camping. A copy has been placed in the Library.

We also propose to publish shortly, jointly with the DETR, a revision to the Good Practice Guidance "Managing Unauthorised Camping", aimed at ensuring there is clarity over the use of the relevant powers. In addition, research into the effectiveness of this Guidance has been commissioned and is expected to report in the Autumn. Further changes to the Guidance may be considered at that time.

It is the Government's view that there needs to be adequate site provision if unauthorised camping is to be managed properly. The DETR is about to commission research into the availability and condition of local authority Gypsy sites. The results will be considered as part of the next spending review. In the meantime, the Minister of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions, my hon. Friend the Member for Greenwich and Woolwich (Mr. Raynsford), announced in his reply to my hon. Friend the Member for Harrow, West (Mr. Thomas) on 24 July 2000, Official Report, columns 398–404W, that his Department would be making available over the next three years £17 million to help local authorities to improve and refurbish a limited number of existing sites. Details of the scheme will be published in the autumn.

There are regular discussions involving Ministers, Members of Parliament, local authorities and the police about all aspects of the Government's policy on travellers.

Transsexual People

Dr. Lynne Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department when he received the report of the Interdepartmental Working Group on Transsexual People; and when he proposes to publish it. [132882]

Mr. Straw: The Interdepartmental Working Group reported to me just before Easter. I am most grateful to members of the Working Group and those who contributed to it for the thoroughness of their work. Since Easter, I have consulted ministerial colleagues in other Government Departments and the devolved Administrations.

I have today placed copies of the report in the Library. Similar arrangements are being made in the Scottish Parliament, the National Assembly for Wales and the Northern Ireland Assembly. The report will be placed on the Home Office website. Hard copies may be obtained on application to my Department.

The report will be considered carefully within Government.

Sexual Offences Review Report

Mrs. Curtis-Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department when the sexual offences review report will be published. [132520]

Mr. Charles Clarke [holding answer 25 July 2000]: I can confirm that the "Setting the Boundaries: reforming the law on sex offences", report of the review of sex offences, is being published today.

My right hon. Friend the Home Secretary set out the terms of reference for the review in his reply to my hon. Friend the Member for Nottingham, South (Mr. Simpson) on 25 January 1999, Official Report, columns 80–81W. The review was asked to look at the law in England and Wales and to make recommendations that will provide clear and coherent sex offences that protect the individual, particularly children and more vulnerable people from abuse and exploitation; enable abusers to be appropriately punished; and were fair and non-discriminatory in accordance with the European Convention on Human Rights and the Human Rights Act 1998.

This review was open and inclusive—it involved many stakeholders directly in its Steering Group and advisory External Reference Group, and consulted with many more at a series of conferences and seminars. It has looked at the evidence from research and the experience of law reform in other countries. The review has now completed its report to Government. It has made far-reaching recommendations to strengthen the effectiveness and protection of the law for children, raised important questions about the nature of the protection that should be offered to vulnerable people, proposed codifying and clarifying the law on consent in rape and setting the law on a fair and non-discriminatory basis for men and women whether as victim or offender. It also recommends new laws for dealing with the trafficking of human beings for sexual exploitation and the use of children in sexual exploitation, as well as looking at penalties and treatment.

The issues involved are sensitive and complex ones, on which there will be differing views. It is a long time since we have had such a thorough and comprehensive set of proposals on the law of sex offences, based on careful thought and consultation. But these proposals are just that—recommendations made to Government by a broadly based review, set up to provide the framework for further debate. The review involved many people from outside the civil service from many different groups and backgrounds, as well as civil servants from a wide range of departments. Before the Government can come to a conclusion on any of them, we need further input and views on what is recommended. This is the start of a real debate on what we think the law should be and how it should be framed.

We would like views on all of the proposals in the report. The review has posed some specific questions, but we want reactions to all the recommendations. We would like to know how well they would work, whether they would add to the protection of the vulnerable, whether they would apply fairly, equitably and with justice and whether there would be any effects or consequences that have not yet been identified.

The Government particularly welcome the proposals to strengthen the law for children and vulnerable people—we have made great strides in tackling the issues of evidence for children and vulnerable people and it is time that the offences in the criminal law were revised to ensure robust and comprehensive protection for the weakest in our society. It is important to get the law right while ensuring that vulnerable people are not deterred from seeking advice from statutory authorities. We would welcome views on the proposals that relate to the protection of children and vulnerable people—what the impact and consequences of those would be. We welcome the review's clarity on the importance of the age of consent and the need to maintain it at 16.

The Government do not think it would be right to take a view on the proposals in the report until they have been scrutinised and tested in consultation. This report and its proposals are not an end but a beginning—the report provides a carefully argued framework for consideration by all those who are affected, personally or professionally, by these proposals. The report is being made widely available in summary and full form, both in hard copy and on the Home Office website. It is free and available on request, as is a supporting volume of evidence. The period for consultation is long—until March 2001—to give time for the full implications of the proposals to be considered. I look forward to an important social debate that will help the Government frame proposals for a safe just and tolerant society.

Copies of the report and summary have been placed in the Library and the Vote Office.

Fire Service

Mr. Cawsey: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will announce planned future capital provision for the Fire Service in England and Wales. [133349]

Mr. Mike O'Brien: To assist the fire service in improving its efficiency and effectiveness, I am increasing credit approval provision for the service from its current level of £35.7 million to £59.7 million in 2001–02. Planned provision will be sustained at that level in 2002–03 and increased by a further £2 million to £61.7 million in 2003–04.

Access to Government Information

Mr. Paul Clark: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department when he intends to publish the 1999 report on the operation of the Code of Practice on Access to Government Information. [133351]

Mr. Straw: I have published this report today. Copies have been placed in the Library.

Horserace Betting Levy

Mr. Caplin: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department when he intends to publish the fifth report on the impact of the National Lottery on the horserace betting levy. [133352]

Mr. Mike O'Brien: An update on the impact of the National Lottery on the horserace betting levy has been published today. I am arranging for copies to be placed in the Library.

The paper, which has been prepared by the Home Office's Economic and Resource Analysis Unit, examines continuing trends in off-course betting expenditure and their relationship to the horserace betting levy.

The analysis indicates, that in 1999, off-course betting expenditure was about 14.7 per cent. below the level it would have reached in the absence of the National Lottery and that, by implication, the horserace betting levy raised £9–10 million less than it may otherwise have done.

This is broadly consistent with the findings of the first four reports.

As the Government have already announced their intention to abolish the horserace betting levy system, it is not our intention to commission any future reports in this series.

Asylum Seekers

Mr. Cawsey: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department when he will announce the appointment of the Asylum Support Adjudicators. [133353]

Mr. Straw: I have pleasure today in announcing the appointment of the following Asylum Support Adjudicators, under section 102 of and Schedule 10 to the Immigration and Asylum Act 1999:

Asylum Support Adjudicators	Appointments
Chief Asylum Support Adjudicator	Mrs. Sehba Haroon Storey
Deputy Chief Asylum Support Adjudicator	Ms Gillian Carter
Asylum Support Adjudicators	Mrs. Sarah Breach
	Mr. Laurence Brass
	Mr. Alan Ponting
	Dr. Ethlyn Prince
	Mrs. Susannah Walker

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many local authorities in areas to which asylum seekers are being dispersed have designated a named individual as a contact for the National Asylum Support Service and the Home Office; and if he will make a statement. [132383]

Mrs. Roche: The National Asylum Support Service has regular contact with local authorities, but no local authorities have designated a named individual as a contact point for the National Asylum Support Service. Local authorities who wish to exchange information with the Immigration and Nationality Directorate about individuals who may be subject to immigration control must register a named person as the contact point. Some 549 local authorities have designated a named individual.

Detention and Training Orders

Mr. Simon Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many (a) boys and (b) girls have been sentenced to a detention and training order broken down by (i) sentencing court area, (ii) offence and (iii) type of accommodation they were placed in; and if he will make a statement. [125341]

Mr. Boateng [holding answer 12 July 2000]: The detention and training order was implemented on 1 April 2000. Information provided by the Youth Justice Board for England and Wales indicates that between 1 April and 30 June 2000, 1,475 detention and training orders were made, 1,383 against boys and 92 against girls. Dr. Vis: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) how many children have received a detention and training order, broken down by (a) age, (b) gender and (c) race, since its introduction; [129699]

(2) how many boys and girls aged under 18 years have been sentenced by each court to a detention and training order. [129700]

Mr. Boateng: The detention and training order was implemented on 1 April 2000. Information provided by the Youth Justice Board for England and Wales indicates that between 1 April 2000 and 30 June 2000, 1,475 detention and training orders were made, 1,383 against boys and 92 against girls. The available information on age and ethnicity is set out in the tables. Information on sentencing court was contained in the reply I gave to the hon. Member for Southwark, North and Bermondsey (Mr. Hughes) today.

Police (Kent)

Mr. Wyatt: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) what contribution his Department will make towards the extra staff required by Kent County Constabulary to enforce the provisions of the Kent County Council Bill and the Medway Council Bill; [130934]

(2) how many extra police he estimates will be needed by Kent County Constabulary to enable effective enforcement of the provisions of the Kent County Council Bill and Medway Council Bill; [130933]

(3) how many (a) meetings, (b) e-mails and (c) telephone calls there have been between his Department and Kent County Constabulary to discuss the Kent County Council Bill and Medway Council Bill. [130932]

Mr. Charles Clarke [holding answer 17 July 2000]: Meetings were held between the Home Office, Kent County Constabulary and the Trading Standards Authority to investigate the principle of the Kent County Council Bill and the Medway Council Bill before they were deposited. Additional meetings and telephone calls have been held between the Home Office and the solicitors representing the Kent County Constabulary. The Home Office submitted a report on the Bills and Kent Country Constabulary met any concerns.

Records are not kept centrally of the number of meetings held, e-mails exchanged, or telephone calls received or made by the Department on any specific subject.

The Chief Constable has advised me that he does not anticipate that enforcing the provisions of the Bills will impose any significant increased demand on police resources. He is confident that the Bills will enhance Kent's existing intelligence led policing and lead to increased efficiency for individual officers investigating individual crimes.

Parliamentary Questions

Mr. Stunell: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many written parliamentary questions tabled to his Department between 19 October

1999 and 20 April 2000 have not received answers, citing as the reason commercial confidentiality or other confidentiality. [131229]

Mr. Straw [holding answer 20 July 2000]: My Department answered a total of 2,751 written parliamentary questions between 19 October and 20 April 2000.

It is always my practice to provide as full a reply as possible to all parliamentary questions, and to provide all relevant information even where that specifically requested is not available. Where, occasionally, information is withheld, the reasons for non-disclosure are consistent with the exemptions contained within the Code of Practice on Access to Government Information Section Second Edition (1997). For example:

information which could harm national security or defence, (paragraph 1a);

information whose disclosure could prejudice the enforcement or proper administration of the law, including the prevention, investigation or detection of crime, or the apprehension or prosecution of offenders (paragraph 4b);

information whose disclosure could endanger the life or physical safety of any person, or identity the source of information or assistance given in confidence for law enforcement or security purposes (paragraph 4f); and information whose disclosure could lead to improper gain or advantage or would prejudice negotiations or the effective conduct of personnel management, or commercial or contractual activities (paragraph 7a).

Crime Statistics

Mr. Clappison: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many offences were committed in the borough of Hertsmere in each of the last four years for which figures are available, broken down by type of offence; and what the clear-up rate was in each case. [131948]

Mr. Charles Clarke: The latest available data for notifiable offences recorded by the police in Hertsmere are given in the table. No data are available for the year to March 1997 due to substantial changes in boundaries.

[1] Data for the year to March 1998 are not available

[2] Clear up rates are based on crimes detected in a given period compared to crimes recorded in that period, because some crimes detected in the period may have been recorded in a previous one the clear up rate can exceed 100 per cent.

Notes:

1. The rules for recording crimes changed in April 1998 which led to a large increase in the number recorded, see Home Office Statistical Bulletin 18/99 'Recorded Crime Statistics, England and Wales April 1998 to March 1999' for more details

2. The definition of clear ups changed in April 1999, to exclude certain types of police action that would previously have been recorded as clear ups, and led to a decrease in clear up rates, see Home Office Statistical Bulletin 12/00 'Recorded Crime Statistics, England and Wales April 1999 to March 2000' for more details

Young Remand Prisoners

Mr. Clappison: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many (a) 15 and (b) 16-year-olds were held on remand in adult prisons according to the most recent figures available; and if he will list the prisons concerned. [131723]

Mr. Boateng: On 30 June 2000, the latest date for which figures are available, the numbers were:

Prison	15-year-olds	16-year-olds
Altcourse	0	1
Doncaster	12	13
Norwich	1	2
Total	13	16

Alcohol

Mr. Ben Chapman: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) what discussions he has held with alcohol retailers on measures they are proposing to help prevent high percentage volume beers, lagers and ciders from reaching under-age drinkers; [132255]

(2) if he will discuss with alcohol retailers the display and marketing of high alcohol volume percentage beers, lagers and ciders. [132257]

Mr. Mike O'Brien: I refer my hon. Friend to the reply I gave him on 21 July 2000, Official Report, columns 362–63W.

Mr. Ben Chapman: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) if he will make a statement on the numbers of recorded incidents of criminal damage that have involved the consumption of alcohol by the perpetrator, indicating the proportion which involved under-age drinkers; [132243]

(2) if he will make a statement on the numbers of recorded non-vehicle related thefts (a) nationally and (b) on Merseyside that have involved the consumption of alcohol by the perpetrator, indicating the proportion which involved under-age drinkers; [132253]

(3) if he will make a statement on the number of recorded burglaries (a) nationally and (b) on Merseyside that involved the consumption of alcohol by the perpetrator, indicating the proportion which involved under-age drinkers; [132265]

(4) if he will make a statement on the number of recorded crimes (a) nationally and (b) on Merseyside that involve the consumption of alcohol by the perpetrator, indicating the proportion which involved under age drinkers; [132258]

(5) if he will make a statement on the number of recorded violent crimes (a) nationally and (b) on Merseyside that have involved the consumption of alcohol by the perpetrator, indicating what proportion involved under age drinkers; [132272]

(6) if he will make a statement on the numbers of recorded incidents of criminal damage on Merseyside that have involved the consumption of alcohol by the perpetrator; [132274]

(7) if he will make a statement on the numbers and proportion of recorded incidents of criminal damage on Merseyside which involved under age drinkers in each of the last three years. [132310]

Mr. Charles Clarke: The information requested is not available. The police do not routinely provide information on the perpetrators of the offences that they record, and for many offences the perpetrator will not be known.

Estimates of the proportion of offences in which alcohol is involved have come from various ad-hoc studies. The figures they give vary somewhat according to the samples of offences taken, and the methodology of the studies. Moreover, it is difficult to say whether the misuse of alcohol was the cause of an offence, or merely a contributory factor.

One recent study looked at arrestees in five police force areas in 1996–97. This showed that 25 per cent. tested positive for alcohol, ranging from 42 per cent. in Sunderland to eight per cent. in Manchester. The proportion of offenders arrested for violent crime, burglary, non-vehicle related thefts and criminal damage that tested positive for alcohol is shown in Table 1. Information on the age of the arrestees is not available.

Table 1: Proportion of arrestees testing positive for alcohol

Main offence	Percentage of arrestees testing positive for alcohol
Grievous bodily harm	17
Actual bodily harm	38
Burglary dwelling	26
Burglary non-dwelling	16
Theft from the person	0

Criminal damage	46

Note:
Based on Table D.5 in "Drugs and crime: the results of research on drug testing and interviewing arrestees", by Trevor Bennet, Home Office Research Study 183, Home Office, 1998. Only offences for which there are large enough numbers are included in Table 1

The British Crime Survey also asks victims who had some knowledge of the person(s) who committed crimes against them mentioned in the survey whether they considered the perpetrator to be under the influence of drink or drugs. Table 2 presents results.

Table 2: Violence involving alcohol and/drugs (percentages): 1996 British crime survey

Source:
The 1996 British crime survey: England and Wales, Home Office Statistical Bulletin 19–96. Home Office, 1996.

According to the most recent statistics, the number of offenders found guilty or cautioned for drunkenness in England and Wales in 1998 was 53,587. The number of those found guilty or cautioned under 18 was 8,487. For Merseyside the number of offenders was 8,602: 1,649 of these were aged under 18.

Mr. Ben Chapman: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will make a statement on the timetable for introducing a new offence of knowingly permitting the sale of alcohol to an under-18-year-old. [132105]

Mr. Mike O'Brien: It is currently an offence under section 169(1) of the Licensing Act 1964 for the holder of a liquor licence knowingly to allow any person to sell intoxicating liquor to a person under 18. Under the Private Member's Bill introduced by my hon. Friend the Member for Pudsey (Mr. Truswell), the Licensing (Young Persons) Bill, this offence will be amended to include any person who works in licensed premises in a capacity, whether paid or unpaid, which gives him authority to prevent the sale. The Bill has so far enjoyed wide support and was successful at Second Reading in the House of Lords on 14 July. We therefore hope that the extended offence will become law this year.

Mr. Ben Chapman: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what plans he has to discuss with the brewing industry measures they are proposing to tackle anti-social and criminal behaviour by under-age drinkers. [132307]

Mr. Mike O'Brien: The Minister of State, my hon. Friend the Member for Norwich, South (Mr. Clarke), has this year chaired two seminars with representatives of the brewing, hospitality and leisure industry, and other interested groups to discuss this and other matters relating to the links between alcohol and crime. A further seminar is due to take place in September. A range of initiatives within a strategic action plan should flow from this work.

The Government have already been encouraged by the industry's approach to social responsibility. A good example was the launch of the Brewers and Licensed Retailers Association's Partnership Initiative on 29 March this year. The Initiative is part of an ongoing industry-wide strategy to promote retailer responsibility across the licensed trade. It opens the way to direct industry involvement in crime and disorder partnerships, and will enable them to make a positive contribution to public order policies at local level. The aim of the initiative is to facilitate this involvement by setting up a database of company nominees and actively seeking to place them in local partnerships through liaison with local authorities.

Life Signs Monitoring Systems

Mr. Key: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if the sensors in the life signs monitoring systems produced by Mandel UK Ltd. have been approved by (a) the Department of Trade and Industry and (b) the National Radiological Protection Board; and if he will make a statement. [131777]

Mr. Straw [holding answer 24 July 2000]: I understand that the life signs monitoring system has been approved by Department of Trade and Industry and the National Radiological Protection Board.

Mr. Key: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department in which locations life signs monitoring systems are to be installed in police cells by Wiltshire Constabulary; and at what cost. [131770]

Mr. Charles Clarke [holding answer 24 July 2000]: Wiltshire Constabulary are installing a life signs monitoring system in the new custody suite at Melksham. I understand the cost of equipping the 20 cells will be approximately £55,700 excluding cabling and enclosure costs.

Prisoner Rehabilitation

Mr. Fearn: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what training exists for prisoners to assist them with their rehabilitation. [132505]

Mr. Boateng: The Government's clearly stated aims for the Prison Service are to reduce re-offending and to protect the public. To achieve the objective of reducing re-offending the Prison Service seeks to provide constructive regimes which address offending behaviour, improve education and work skills and promote law abiding behaviour in custody and on release.

The Prison Service offers three general offending behaviour programmes, Enhanced Thinking Skills, Reasoning and Rehabilitation and Problem Solving, suited to prisoners convicted of offences related to sex, drugs and violence. There is also a family of specialist programmes for sex offenders. These programmes have been accredited by an independent panel of experts as being effective in reducing re-offending. Government funding has allowed the Prison Service to double the number of accredited programmes delivered over the period 1999–2002 and to develop new programmes to address a wider range of offending behaviour, including drug related crime.

Education in prison focuses on a core curriculum of basic educational skills, life and social skills and Information Technology skills. Together with opportunities to gain National Vocational Qualifications, these training opportunities enhance the prospects of a prisoner's employability.

As preparation for release, an Inmate Development and Pre-Release programme is offered at a number of establishments, while others run an eight week preparation for work course which provides the opportunity to acquire nationally recognised accredited skills. In addition, resettlement prisons and specialist resettlement units provide a range of training facilities to enable prisoners to return satisfactorily to the community.

Training Schemes (Prisons)

Mr. Fearn: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department which prisoners are eligible to follow training schemes provided within HM prisons. [132491]

Mr. Boateng: The purpose of education and training in prisons is to address the offending behaviour of prisoners by improving their employability and so reduce the likelihood of their re-offending on release. All prisoners, including those removed from association, in segregation units or in hospital units, should have the opportunity to participate in educational activities.

Prisoners under 18 years of age must spend on average at least 30 hours per week engaged in purposeful activity, including education, training, work, physical education and offending behaviour programmes.

All prisoners allocated to work undertake an induction programme which covers health and safety issues, first aid, and workshop practice.

Offending Behaviour Programmes seek to address the cognitive deficits (poor thinking skills) which cause prisoners to offend in order to prevent recidivism. To be successful, they must be targeted on those prisoners who have been assessed as having the kinds of cognitive deficits which the existing programmes are seeking to address. This inevitably means that some prisoners are excluded from participation.

Press Releases

Mr. Lansley: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many press releases were issued this year to date; and what the total cost of production and issuing of these press releases was in (a) 1997, (b) 1998, (c) 1999 and (d) 2000 to date each year. [132772]

Mr. Straw: The information for my Department is as follows:

	Number
1997	386
1998	524
1999	450
2000	[1]250

[1] To date

The primary cost of issuing press releases relates to their electronic distribution which is carried out through the Central Office of Information, and postage. No central records of other costs which might be involved (eg faxing, e-mail) is available.

Electronic news distribution costs were:

1999	21,095
1998	21,095
1997	[1]27,764

[1] When the service included some hand delivery of press releases

Postal costs varied according to the number of press releases issued in the year and were approximately £15,000 in 1997, £19,500 in 1998 and £12,000 in 1999.

Costs to date for 2000 are £11,374 for electronic distribution costs and for postage costs £6,750.

Violent Crime

Mr. Cox: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many representations he has received from victims of crimes of violence in the last 12 months. [132703]

Mr. Charles Clarke: The Department receives representations from victims of crime of violence on a wide range of issues. Details are not collated centrally.

Prison Service

Gillian Merron: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what progress has been made in setting up a pay review body for prison governors, prison officers and related grades for the Prison Service in England and Wales, and in modernising the arrangements for industrial relations; and if this will extend to these grades in the Northern Ireland Prison Service. [133354]

Mr. Boateng: Agreement has been reached to set up a pay review body to make independent recommendations to the Government on the pay of prison governors, prison officers and related grades for the Prison Service in England and Wales. This review body would operate on the lines of the five existing review bodies which deal with 1.3 million public sector employees. Like the existing review bodies, it would have a secretariat from the independent Office of Manpower Economics.

This establishment of an independent pay determination mechanism would be under the provisions of Section 128 of the Criminal Justice and Public Order Act 1994 as part of a comprehensive programme of improvement in prison service management.

It is also my right hon. Friend the Home Secretary's intention, when Parliamentary time allows, to replace Section 127 with a reserve statutory power and a voluntary industrial relations agreement. Section 127, as it stands, makes it unlawful for officers of a prison to take industrial action. The voluntary agreement which has been accepted by the Prison Governors' Association (PGA), the Prison Officers' Association (POA) and the National Executive Committee (NEC) will be put to a special POA delegates conference in August. This will mean that they have agreed not to induce, support or authorise industrial action. In recognition of this we will provide them with a new disputes procedure which will include independent arbitration. The voluntary agreement, which will be legally binding, will give my right hon. Friend the Home Secretary the power to seek injunctive relief.

My right hon. Friend the Home Secretary intends to use the provisions of the voluntary agreement instead of those in Section 127, while awaiting Parliamentary time to effect the changes in legislation. However, it is clear on all sides that Section 127 would be used in the event of a breakdown of the agreement.

Together, I hope these measures will create a new climate for industrial relations in the Service. They clear the way for more constructive dialogue on a wide range of issues by modernising the way that this key group of public sector workers deal with their employer.

The remit of the pay review body would also have the scope to make an independent determination in relation to the pay of prison governors, prison officers, night patrol officers and prison auxiliaries in the Northern Ireland Prison Service based on submissions made to it by that Service.

The implementation of this agreement and the delivery of the intentions I have outlined are dependent on my being satisfied that the state of industrial relations within prisons is such as to enable the effective and efficient management of the Service.

Such a state cannot be said to have been attained in the light of the current withdrawal of good will by the POA, but I will keep the situation under constant review.

Police (Medical Retirement)

Dr. Cable: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many medical retirements from the police there have been in the last 10 years as a result of periodontal deformities which exceed 3 mm. [132801]

Mr. Charles Clarke: The information requested is not available centrally and could be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

Under the Police Pensions Regulations 1987 (as amended) a police officer may be retired on the ground that he or she is permanently disabled. For these purposes disablement means inability, occasioned by infirmity of mind or body, to perform the ordinary duties of a male or female member of the force. It would be a matter of fact whether a periodontal deformity could render a police officer unable to perform the ordinary duties of a police officer.

Dr. Cable: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department when his Department's approved medical standards for police recruitment were last approved (a) in total and (b) in respect of periodontal conditions. [132800]

Mr. Charles Clarke: The Home Office Guidelines on Medical Standards of entry to Police Forces were first issued to forces on 13 February 1995. They were endorsed by the Association of Local Authority Medical Advisers and the Association of Chief Police Officers' Joint Working Group on Organisational Heath, Safety and Welfare. The guidelines were reviewed and re-issued to forces on 3 March 1998. No separate review has been undertaken of periodontal conditions, in relation to which the current guidelines recommend that forces should consider carefully any candidate with evidence of poor dental hygiene.

DNA

Mr. Dalyell: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will refer to the Law Commission the question whether the restrictions on the use of DNA to be found in section 643(B) of the Police and Criminal Evidence Act 1984 should be maintained. [131478]

Mr. Charles Clarke: I am looking at this issue carefully to determine whether to propose changes to section 64 (3B) of the Police and Criminal Evidence Act 1984. I do not consider it necessary at present to seek advice from the Law Commission on this issue.

Ms Elaine Moore

Mr. McNamara: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what progress he has made in settling on a figure to compensate Ms Elaine Moore following her wrongful arrest and imprisonment in July 1998. [131362]

Mr. Straw: I am not aware of any application for compensation having been received by the Home Office in respect of Ms Moore's case. If an application is received, it will be dealt with in the usual way. It falls to me, as Secretary of State, to decide whether in principle an applicant qualifies for compensation. The amount of any award is determined by the independent assessor, Sir David Calcutt QC.

LORD CHANCELLOR'S DEPARTMENT

Enforcement Procedures Review

Mr. Dismore: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department what assessment he has made of the Enforcement Procedures Review which was due to end in June. [133350]

Mr. Lock: We have been engaged in a comprehensive review of the enforcement of civil court judgments since 1998 and the first phase ended in June 2000. In that phase we have:

- examined the present methods available for enforcement of county court and High Court judgments;
- assessed their effectiveness; and
- identified what changes would be necessary to enhance the effectiveness of the current methods of enforcement.

Copies of the paper on this work have been placed in the Libraries of both Houses. It outlines the conclusions reached to date. Many of the proposals have already been exposed in consultation. This paper provides information on the current state of play of the enforcement review. The proposals remain subject to refinement, particularly as we examine in more detail the issues arising from the second phase of the review. Its terms of reference are:

- to implement costs recommendations (including the production of a unified set of Rules of Court for enforcement); and
- to identify, in the light of the amended procedures and revised powers of bailiffs, the type of agent(s) or form of agency which should be responsible for carrying out those enforcement procedures; and to make costed recommendations.

I am also pleased to announce that Professor Beatson has now submitted to the Lord Chancellor his "Independent Review of Bailiff Law: Report", copies of which have also been placed in the Libraries of both Houses. This report will inform the work of the second phase of the review.

It is the Government's intention to issue a White Paper after the review is complete. It will also cover some issues which arise in the enforcement of the orders of the criminal courts.

Access to Justice (Funding)

Mr. Burnett: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department on how many occasions since May 1997 his Department has (a) authorised and (b) refused requests for funding in exceptional individual cases, under section 6(8)(b) of the Access to Justice Act 1999, for representation before (i) a tribunal, (ii) an inquest and (iii) a public inquiry. [R] [132709]

Mr. Lock: Before 1 April 2000, the Lord Chancellor had the power to direct the Legal Aid Board to grant legal aid in exceptional individual cases, under section 4 of the Legal Aid Act 1988. Since 1 April, when the Access to Justice Act came into force, he may direct or authorise the Commission, under section 6(8)(a) of the Act, to fund cases in those circumstances he chooses to specify. He may also authorise funding in exceptional individual cases under section 6(8)(b) of the Act, but only where the Legal Services Commission asks him to do so. In March, the Lord Chancellor issued detailed directions setting out the circumstances in which he would expect the Commission to request his authorisation. The numbers of directions and authorisations the Lord Chancellor has given, and of refusals by him and the Commission, are shown in the table.

	Directed or authorised		Refused
	1988 Act	1999 Act	1988 Act	1999 Act
Tribunals	0	1	2	0
Inquests	2	6	0	1
Public inquiries	0	0	0	1

Parliamentary Questions

Mr. Stunell: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department how many of the written parliamentary questions tabled to his Department between 19 October 1999 and 20 April have not received substantive answers, excluding those not answered (a) citing disproportionate cost, (b) stating that the information is not available, not held centrally, or not held in the form requested and (c) citing commercial or other confidentiality. [132461]

Mr. Lock: I refer the hon. Member to the written answer that I gave him on 18 July 2000, Official Report, column 162W and to the written answer I gave to the right hon. Member for Caithness, Sutherland and Easter Ross (Mr. Maclennan) on 22 June 2000, Official Report, column 295W.

TRADE AND INDUSTRY

Post Offices

Mr. Breed: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry how many post offices are within (a) three miles and (b) five miles of a digital telephone exchange; and if he will make a statement. [131802]

Mr. Alan Johnson: I understand from the Post Office that all but around 500 post offices are within approximately 3 km of a digital telephone exchange, enabling ISDN connections. At those offices where a normal ISDN connection is not possible an equivalent satellite link will be installed.

Regional Selective Assistance

Mr. Redwood: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry how many offers of regional selective assistance made since May 1997 have received EU approval. [131826]

Mr. Byers [holding answer 21 July 2000]: Under the RSA scheme the vast majority of offers do not require approval. Of those that do, four have been approved since May 1997.

Mr. Redwood: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry for which Ford plant regional selective assistance was offered. [131827]

Mr. Byers [holding answer 21 July 2000]: Bridgend and Swansea.

Mr. Redwood: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry which non-motor companies have received offers of regional selective assistance; and how many have received their first payment. [131823]

Mr. Byers [holding answer 21 July 2000]: For reasons of commercial confidentiality, details of offers are not routinely published until after the first payment of grant. Information on such offers of £75,000 or more can be found in "Labour Market Trends".

Mr. Redwood: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if the payments of regional selective assistance to Vauxhall Motors Ltd. and Ford Motor Co. Ltd. have received EU approval. [131828]

Mr. Byers [holding answer 21 July 2000]: Yes.

Mr. Redwood: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry (1) when Toyota received (a) offers and (b) payment of Regional Selective Assistance as detailed in a press release on 14 June 1999; [131825]

(2) how much Regional Selective Assistance (a) Rover Group Ltd., (b) Jaguar Cars Ltd., (c) Peugeot Motor Co. plc, (d) Vauxhall Motors Ltd. and (e) Ford Motor Co. Ltd. have received since May 1997; [131822]

(3) what payments have been received and grants given to (a) Rover Group Ltd., (b) Jaguar Cars, (c) Peugeot Motor Co. plc, (d) Vauxhall Motors Ltd. and (e) Ford Motor Co. by his Department since May 1997; and which of these received European Commission approval. [133144]

Mr. Byers [holding answer 21 July 2000]: The policy under successive Governments has been that payments of Regional Selective Assistance are a commercial matter between the company and the Government and are not normally disclosed. Details of offers of grant of £75,000 or more are given in "Labour Market Trends". The offer to Toyoda Gosei Company Ltd. (part of the Toyota group) was made in May 1999 and did not require EC approval. The Rover engine project (Hams Hall) and Jaguar Cars project received EC approval.

ECGD

Dr. Cable: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry (1) what the planned net profit is of the ECGD for each year of the 2000 Spending Review (2001–2004); and how this figure would differ if loans by the ECGD were required to earn a 6 per cent. return; [132452]

(2) if he will list the net profit or loss for the ECGD in the last three years; and how this would have varied had the agency been required to record returns below 6 per cent. as a loss. [132457]

Mr. Caborn [holding answer 25 July 2000]: ECGD is set the financial objective by Ministers of breaking even over the longer term on its new business account. Given the nature of ECGD's business and the highly uncertain nature of the risks which it covers, it will clearly be many years before the outcome of any particular year's business can be known. In recognition of this, Ministers have set ECGD a more measurable objective of achieving a ratio (Reserve Coverage Ratio) of at least 1.5 between its reserves and estimates of expected losses on amounts at risk under its guarantees.

ECGD is currently preparing its 1999–2000 accounts, which will be laid before the House in the autumn. The in-year surplus/deficit for the previous three years is as follows:

£ million

	Surplus/deficit	Reserve coverage
1996–97	1,032.3	2.4
1997–98	(514.3)	1.0
1998–99	136.9	1.3

ECGD does not currently operate to a capitalised regime. This will be introduced by April 2002 as announced by my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry in its Mission and Status Review. The House will have an opportunity to debate the specific proposals for the ECGD Trading Fund including the proposals for the capital-charging regime.

Dr. Cable: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry when he expects the Review of the ECGD to be published. [132795]

Mr. Caborn [holding answer 26 July 2000]: I refer the hon. Member to the answer given to my hon. Friend the Member for Eccles (Mr. Stewart) on 25 July 2000, Official Report, columns 520–21W.

Dounreay

Mr. Maclennan: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will place in the Library the assessment made by the UKAEA of the potential routes by which radioactive particles could have reached the beaches on and near Dounreay, Caithness. [132037]

Mrs. Liddell [holding answer 26 July 2000]: I am happy to meet this request. UKAEA prepared a report, "Dounreay Particles" for the Scottish Environmental Protection Agency (SEPA) earlier this year. UKAEA has agreed that a copy of this report should be placed in the Library.

Export Promotion

Dr. Cable: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what the size is of the joint DTI-FCO budget for export promotion referred to in paragraph 15.2 of the Spending Review 2000; and how much was spent by these two Departments on export promotion in (a) 1997, (b) 1998 and (c) 1999. [132453]

Mr. Caborn [holding answer 25 July 2000]: The total budget for 2000–01 for the trade development and promotion activities of British Trade International (branded as Trade Partners UK) is approximately £187 million. This includes administration costs and programmes of support for business, but excludes certain FCO overheads. A breakdown is provided in the answer given to the hon. Member for North Norfolk (Mr. Prior) on 21 June 2000, Official Report, columns 184–85W.

For previous years the information is:

	1997–98	1998–99	1999–2000
DTI
Programme expenditure	54	58	57
Administration costs	24	24	25
FCO
Administration costs[1]	[2]—	130	[3]139

[1] Including overheads
[2] The FCO did not collate information on budgets for export promotion only prior to 1998–99. Expenditure for commercial work in 1997–98, which was primarily for export promotion, was £156 million
[3] Estimated

Universal Bank

Dr. Cable: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what role the proposed Universal Bank within the Post Office will play in relation to the sale of financial products, with particular reference to (a) ISAs and (b) stakeholder pensions. [132799]

Mr. Alan Johnson [holding answer 26 July 2000]: We await the Post Office's business plan for the Universal Bank later in the year.

Wind Generation

Mr. Maclennan: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will list for each year since 1995 (a) the installed United Kingdom wind generation capacity and (b) the electricity it generated; and if he will make a statement. [132581]

Mrs. Liddell [holding answer 26 July 2000]: The information required is as follows:

Year	Contracted capacity (MW)[1]	Electricity Generation (GWh)[2]
1995	76.224	379.510
1996	97.491	482.953
1997	132.288	656.935
1998	137.748	873.047
1999	148.722	[3]492.597

[1] The totals for contracted capacity (in Megawatts) are cumulative
[2] One Gigawatt hour (GWh) = 1,000 Megawatt Hours (MWh)
[3] The total for 1999 is less than that of 1998 because the contracts of wind projects supported under the First and Second Rounds of the Non-Fossil Fuel Obligation ceased at the end of 1998 and the compilation of further statistical data on their operation for 1999 and subsequent years has been discontinued

The Government have a target of generating 10 per cent. of the UK's electricity from renewable sources by 2010, subject to the cost to consumers being acceptable. We expect both onshore and offshore wind to be needed to meet this target. The Government are taking a range of measures to encourage renewables including a proposed obligation on electricity suppliers, exemption of renewable energy from the Climate Change Levy and an expanded research and development programme. We are also considering the scope for limited additional support for more expensive technologies, including offshore wind.

Parcelforce

Mrs. Browning: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what percentage by volume of Parcelforce's (a) domestic and (b) international mail is (i) under 10kg and (ii) between 10 and 20kg in weight; and if he will breakdown the above categories into (1) business to business post, (2) business to customer post and (3) non-business post. [132796]

Mr. Byers [holding answer 26 July 2000]: This is a commercial matter for the Post Office. It has informed me that:

of UK parcels sent by businesses some 70 per cent. go to other businesses—the remainder go to home address.

of export parcels sent by businesses some 75 per cent. go to other businesses—the remainder go to home addresses.

of business-originated parcels within the UK some 80 per cent. is under 10kg in weight—only a fraction of the remainder is over 20kg in weight.

of export parcels from businesses about 85 per cent. are under 10kg—again, only a fraction of the remainder is over 20kg in weight.

Rover

Mr. Burden: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what assistance is being planned for the Rover supply chain during the interruption to production of the Rover 75 while the production line is being moved from Oxford to Longbridge. [133760]

Mr. Byers: In April I announced a fund of £12 million to support the Rover supply chain in the West Midlands. This fund will now be available to assist companies in all regions of England who are heavily dependent on the revenue from supplying parts for the Rover 75. Some £5 million remains uncommitted in the fund for this purpose.

North West Development Agency

Mr. Campbell-Savours: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what arrangements exist for his Department to consult the North West Development Agency on matters relating to economic and industrial development in the region. [132048]

Mr. Caborn: Monthly meetings take place between Ministers and all Regional Development Agency (RDA) Chairmen, which provide a regular opportunity for discussion and consultation. In addition, RDA Chairmen and Chief Executives meet DTI ministers on many occasions, and RDAs have contributed to written consultations on numerous policy proposals.

Mr. Campbell-Savours: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry on how many occasions in the last 12 months his Department's officials consulted the North West Development Agency on decisions it is taking in relation to economic development in the region. [132047]

Mr. Caborn: My officials in both HQ and the Government Office for the North West are in regular contact with the North West Development Agency, ensuring our policies on regional economic development are tailored to regional needs. Contact has taken the form of individual meetings, seminars and written communication.

MOX Fuel (Japan)

Mr. Chaytor: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will exercise his power as sole shareholder in BNFL to ensure that the full costs attributable to the return of the MOX fuel from Japan are clearly indicated on the Company's financial accounts. [132296]

Mrs. Liddell: I understand that BNFL is making full financial provision in its accounts for the MOX Demonstration Facility (MDF) data falsification events.

Former Miners (Health)

Dr. David Clark: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry how many former miners have attended the full medical assessment process at each of the spirometry centres in Durham and Newcastle; and what the figures are for each of the other centres in Great Britain. [132871]

Mrs. Liddell: As at 17 July, the number of full medical assessments per centre was:

Centre	Number of assessments completed
Ayr	44
Barnsley	7
Cannock	5
Chesterfield	4
Coventry	12
Durham	8
Edinburgh	83
Glasgow	79
Leeds	12
Lochore	57
Manchester	13
Mansfield	77
Mexborough	32
Mountain Ash	130
Newcastle	11
Newport	289
Nottingham	58
Pontefract	45
Sheffield	76
Swansea	217
Domiciliary visits	139
Total	1,398

Healthcall have the capacity to carry out 2,500 assessments per month now, rising steadily by September, but the actual throughput at each centre depends greatly on the speed with which solicitors send in the completed Claims Questionnaires and record holders release medical records. The rate at which solicitors are returning completed Claims Questionnaires and Mandates has picked up, but we still urge solicitors to do all they can to increase the numbers being sent to us. We have the capacity to deal with them.

Coal State Aid Scheme

Mr. Coaker: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what progress has been made on the coal state aid scheme; and if he will make a statement. [133735]

Mrs. Liddell: I am pleased to announce that on 26 July the UK Government formally applied to the European Commission for their approval to pay operating aid to United Kingdom coal producers over the period to July 2002. This notification follows extensive consultation by my Department with coal producers and purchasers to ensure that the scheme we are proposing meets the Government's objectives spelled out in the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry's announcement of 17 April, and complies with European regulations.

Our application to the Commission comprises an outline of our proposed scheme and a "Modernisation, Rationalisation and Restructuring Plan" as required by the European Coal and Steel Communities Treaty and subsequent decisions. These documents have been placed in the House of Commons Library.

The European Commission must now consider our proposed scheme over the next three months.

Merchant Navy Day

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will ensure that the Red Ensign is flown from departmental buildings on Merchant Navy Day, 3 September. [132967]

Dr. Howells: I refer my hon. Friend to the answer given today by my hon. Friend the Parliamentary Under-Secretary of State for the Home Department.

Ministerial Duty Roster (Summer)

Mr. Gibb: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will publish the daily ministerial duty roster for his Department during the summer adjournment. [133065]

Mr. Byers: It is not the normal practice of the Government to publish a daily Ministerial Duty Roster. The Department will ensure that it has sufficient cover through the summer recess in line with the requirements of the Ministerial Code.

Companies House

Gillian Merron: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he has reached a decision on the future of Companies House following the review announced by the Minister for Competitiveness on 16 February 2000, Official Report, column 557–58W. [133762]

Mr. Alan Johnson: The first stage of the review of Companies House has now been completed. I am pleased to say that the review has confirmed that Companies House is performing well, both in meeting its own objectives and targets and in contributing to the achievement of wider Government objectives such as our e-Government strategy. Its standards of customer service are high, as shown by the award in 1998 of its third Charter Mark, and customers are generally satisfied with the service they get from Companies House. Companies House is already providing a wide range of services electronically. The CH Direct service offers electronic access to images of all documents dating back to 1995. All the major returns (except accounts) can be filed electronically. Plans are well advanced to introduce facilities to incorporate new companies electronically and to simplify the process for e-filing generally following the passing of the Electronic Communications Act 2000. Companies House is on track to have all services available electronically well in advance of the Government target of 2005.

The functions carried out by Companies House—the incorporation of companies, registration of information about their continuing operations and provision of information to the public—are and will continue to be essential to ensuring effective, competitive markets. The Review has confirmed that those functions are best delivered by retaining Companies House as an Executive Agency and that there is a continuing role for the private sector in the delivery of Companies House services.

The issue now is how Companies House can perform even better in future. I want to see Companies House continue to improve the quality of its services, setting and maintaining high standards of customer service and responsiveness to customer needs. Customers rightly look to Companies House as a reliable source of accurate and up-to-date information and we must ensure that it meets those expectations. Companies House will need to continue to modernise to improve the quality, range and flexibility of its services. Its operation is increasingly based on electronic interaction with customers, rather than the processing of paper, and this trend will continue, in line with the increasing use of e-commerce throughout the economy. Companies House's main operating system is now some 15 years old. It lacks flexibility and is not best-suited to supporting such an operation. It will therefore need to be replaced. The transition to a new system will need to be managed carefully and taken step by step to ensure that there is no interruption in the business. Substantial investment in IT will be required over the next three years or so to achieve this. Funding will be available from the cash reserves Companies House has built up during its period as a Trading Fund. This investment will lay the basis for an even more successful next five years.

The report of stage 1 of the review of Companies House has been placed in the Library of the House.

Stage 2 of the review is now starting and will be completed in the autumn. As I announced in February, this second stage will consider whether any changes should be made to the way in which Companies House operates, including its aims and objectives, targets and financial controls. It will also consider in more detail the costs and funding of the investment in new systems.

Coal Authority

Mr. Denis Murphy: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry when the Coal Authority's report and accounts for 1999–2000 will be laid before Parliament. [133736]

Mrs. Liddell: I have today laid a copy of the report before Parliament.

Subsidies

Mr. Redwood: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will reconcile his answers of 17 July 2000, Official Report, column 27W, Ref. 130308 and 130309/10, concerning regional selective assistance for companies manufacturing cars, with particular reference to the two lists of companies. [133455]

Mr. Byers: The answer to Ref. 130308 concerned companies which received payments of grant since May 1998.

The answer to Ref. 130309/10 concerned offers made since May 1997.

Two of the companies, Vauxhall and Ford, shown in the list of those receiving payments since May 1998, had offers made before May 1997. They are therefore excluded from the list of offers made since May 1997.

Mr. Redwood: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he has European Commission Competition Directorate approval to (a) subsidise the coal industry and (b) grant a subsidy to Toyoda. [133066]

Mr. Byers: I am seeking approval from the European Commission to a subsidy scheme to help the UK coal industry.

Toyoda Gosei Company Ltd.—part of the Toyota Group of companies—received an offer of £1.7 million Regional Selective Assistance (RSA) in May 1999. Under the terms of the Motor Vehicle Framework for State Aid, no prior EU approval was required.

Iran

Ms Southworth: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if there are trade sanctions against Iran. [133734]

Dr. Howells: There are no United Nations trade sanctions against Iran. A UK national arms embargo was imposed on 1 March 1993. It covers all goods and technology on the Military List as well as items entered in Group 0 in Annex 1 of the European Council Decision 94/942/CFSP on the export of dual-use goods, as amended. An amendment was announced on 28 January 1998 to clarify that licences would not be approved for any equipment where there was knowledge or reason to suspect that it would go to a military end-user or be used for military purposes. The exception is equipment which would not normally require an export licence but is deemed licensable under the Weapons of Mass Destruction (WMD) end-use control and where WMD concerns are not subsequently substantiated.

All applications for export licences to Iran are considered by an interdepartmental committee of advisers and representatives from the DTI, Foreign and Commonwealth Office and Ministry of Defence. This committee meets once a month and makes recommendations on each application which are subsequently submitted to Ministers in the three Departments for approval. This procedure reflects the concerns that the Government has about exports to Iran and ensures that all licensing decisions are consistent with our policy.

Oil and Gas Licensing

Mr. David Stewart: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what has been the outcome of the 9 Landward Round of Oil and Gas Licensing. [133737]

Mrs. Liddell: I am pleased to announce the award of 37 licences to 21 companies for onshore oil and gas exploration over 123 blocks. Licensees will now need to obtain any necessary consents from local planning authorities, who will take account of any environmental concerns, and to agree access terms with landowners before carrying out any on-site activities on these licences.

The UK's onshore oil and gas industry has a strong future, as shown by the high level of interest in this round. The areas covered by the awards range from Scotland to southern England, and include acreage never previously considered for oil and gas exploration. It is encouraging to see licences going to new applicants from both the UK and overseas.

Over 60 blocks are for mines gas and coalbed methane, offering the potential for new jobs in former mining communities. This gas will now contribute to the UK's energy supply rather than being wasted.

Applications involving five companies are still being considered and I will make a further announcement when any outstanding issues have been resolved.

Competition Commission

Mr. Simon Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry in what way Welsh interests are represented on the Competition Commission; and by whom. [133266]

Dr. Howells: The Competition Commission is not set up to represent different geographical areas. Its members are chosen on merit and experience.

Institute of Arable Crops Research

Dr. Tonge: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what financial assistance his Department has provided through the Biotechnology and Biological Sciences Research Council to the Long Ashton Research Station of the Institute of Arable Crops Research since 1997; and what this financial assistance is intended for. [132854]

Ms Hewitt: The main form of the Biotechnology and Biological Sciences Research Council (BBSRC) funding support to the Long Ashton Research Station (LARS) is via the Competitive Strategic Grant, which provides funding for basic and strategic research programmes that map onto BBSRC's priorities and underpins LARS's mission. Unlike university grants, for which the Higher Education Funding Councils provide the infrastructure element of "dual funding", the Competitive Strategic Grant and capital funding meets the full costs of the various programmes. BBSRC has also provided equipment and minor works grants. In addition, BBSRC has awarded funds to LARS for research projects which LARS scientists have won in competition with other scientists from the bioscience community.

The table shows the funding of the Long Ashton Research Station from the Biotechnology and Biological Sciences Research Council since 1997:

	1997–98	1998–99	1999–2000
Competitive Strategic Grant	3,415	3,435	3,065
Equipment	175	180	180
Minor Works	70	85	55
Research Grants	675	980	875
Total BBSRC Funding	4,335	4,680	4,175

PFI Contracts

Mr. Alan Williams: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry in how many of his Department's PFI contracts KPMG has been an adviser. [132859]

Dr. Howells: KPMG was an adviser in one PFI/PPP contract involving the Department and its agencies.

Gas-fired Power Station, Anglesey

Mrs. Betty Williams: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry when he will announce his decision on Burlington Resources (Irish Sea) Ltd.'s proposal to build a gas-fired power station at Rhosgoch on the Isle of Anglesey. [133738]

Mrs. Liddell: The Government have received new information on the proposal to build a new 560 MW gas-fired power station at Rhosgoch, Anglesey. This was refused approval on 9 November 1999 on energy policy grounds and a direction under section 14(3) of the Energy Act 1976 to that effect was issued. However, as in all such cases, the Government indicated that they would be willing to reconsider their decision should new information come to their attention that there had been a significant change in circumstances.

The Government have now received new information which warrants reconsideration of the proposal, not least on local and environmental grounds. After re-evaluating the further information, the Government have concluded that the proposal should not be halted on energy policy grounds and that the direction of 9 November 1999 should be revoked.

However, local planning and other clearances are still required under section 36 of the Electricity Act 1989.

I have placed copies of the Press Notice and the decision letter in the Library of the House.

Data Protection

Mr. Wyatt: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry (1) which Minister in his Department has the lead responsibility for data protection in relation to websites; and if he will make a statement; [133053]

(2) what recent representations he has received relating to the proposed prosecution of electricity generating companies under data protection law; [133070]

(3) what powers he has in addition to those of the Data Protection Commissioner to prosecute companies in violation of data protection law. [133069]

Ms Hewitt: My Department has no responsibility for the protection of data held at or accessible through websites. My Department has no special powers to mount prosecutions under the Data Protection Act. We have received no representation about prosecutions of electricity generating companies under that Act, but are aware of the public interest in the recent security breach at the website of the supply business of PowerGen. While the standards of security of websites are not regulated, my Department takes seriously its responsibility for promoting good information security to business. This is one of the vital factors in ensuring confidence in e-business. My officials have therefore had discussions with the company to understand the circumstances that led to the security breach, how the company solved the technical issues and how the business community as a whole might learn from their experience. I understand that the company resolved the vulnerability quickly and are making great efforts to learn how their management controls allowed it to happen. They intend to make public the results of their inquiries. Furthermore, we are exploring with the company how best we might disseminate the lessons learnt to improve the performance of all those UK companies who are rising to the challenge of working on-line.

Advisory Bodies

Tony Wright: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will list all the (a) task forces, (b) action teams, (c) policy reviews and (d) other temporary advisory bodies with external members currently in existence within his Department; and on what date each body (i) was set up and (ii) is expected to terminate. [131446]

Mr. Byers: I refer my hon. Friend to the answer given today by my hon. Friend the Parliamentary Secretary, Cabinet Office to him and to my hon. Friend the Member for Eastwood (Mr. Murphy), Official Report, column 799w.

Departmental Groups

Mr. Stunell: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will list each group that is responsible to his Department, with significant and plural membership from outside the civil service, and to which the Nolan rules on non-departmental public bodies do not apply and for each such group, if it (a) is a company limited by guarantee, (b) is a charity, (c) has no formal legal basis, and (d) has some other legal basis giving details. [131238]

Dr. Howells [holding answer 24 July 2000]: I refer my hon. Friend to the answer given today by my hon. Friend the Parliamentary Secretary, Cabinet Office to my hon. Friends the Members for Eastwood (Mr. Murphy) and for Cannock Chase (Tony Wright), Official Report, column 799w. All groups listed for this Department come under category (c).

Directors' Remuneration

Dr. Cable: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry when he will introduce legislation to give greater executive responsibility to shareholders in respect of directors' remuneration. [132803]

Dr. Howells: The Department of Trade and Industry published a consultation paper on directors' remuneration last year which put forward a number of proposals for improving disclosure of directors' remuneration and boards' accountability to shareholders. My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry will make an announcement shortly on the Government's response to the consultation.

Departmental Initiatives

Dr. Lynne Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry, pursuant to his answer of 19 July 2000, Official Report, column 174W, if he will list all departmental initiatives between May 1997 and 18 July 2000 requiring bids from voluntary organisations and local authorities for funding together with the total resources allocated to these initiatives, the number of successful bids and the proportion this represents of total bids received; and what data he collects on the average cost of preparing the bids for funding through each initiative. [132668]

Dr. Howells: A detailed breakdown of the Department's activities is given in the annual Expenditure Plans Report "Trade and Industry: The Government's Expenditure Plans (Cm 4611)", published by The Stationery Office Ltd.

The Department of Trade and Industry does not collate information on the types of organisation applying for funding and such information could be compiled only at disproportionate cost. Applicants are not required to provide details of their application costs to the Department.

Govan Shipyard

Mr. Redwood: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what undertakings the Government gave to Govan Shipyard when it was bought by BAE Systems with regard to environmental liabilities. [130306]

Dr. Reid [holding answer 13 July 2000]: I have been asked to reply.

No undertakings in respect of environmental liabilities at the Govan shipyard were given to BAE Systems. As reported to the Scottish Parliament, the Scottish Executive, however, has entered into an agreement with Clydeport plc, who own the site, in relation to environmental improvements. Any aid will be provided under the European Union conditions applying at the time.

INTERNATIONAL DEVELOPMENT

AIDS (Africa)

Mr. Streeter: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development if she will list the value of each project she is currently funding in Africa dealing with HIV/AIDS that would rate as principal expenditure under her PIMS marker system. [131621]

Mr. Foulkes [holding answer 20 July 2000]: The Policy Information Market System (PIMS) provides a framework which measures the extent to which DFID's projects and programmes are being targeted on key policy areas. PIMS covers bilateral commitments with a value of £100,000 or over. Contributions to multilateral agencies are excluded because they do not analyse their expenditure in the same way.

There are 34 policy information markers which are scored according to which policy areas are targeted, either as a Principal or Significant objective. Principal objectives are those which are fundamental to the design of a programme or project, without which it would not be undertaken. Significant objectives are those which, although important, are not one of the primary reasons for undertaking the activities. Scoring against PIMS is an all-or-nothing procedure with the total commitment value or expenditure counting against each of the PIMS awarded to the project. As DFID policy areas are mutually supportive and overlapping, most new commitments contribute, to and are marked against, two or more markers.

Some 46 bilateral projects dealing with HIV/AIDS in Africa, launched since 1997, are currently being funded that would rate as principal expenditure under DFID's PIMS market system. The total commitment for these projects is £82.9 million. A list will be placed in the Library of the House.

Mr. Streeter: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what proportion of her Department's expenditure on HIV/AIDS in Africa will be marked as (a) principal and (b) significant under her Department's PIMS marker system; and what proportion is (i) multilateral and (ii) bilateral. [131615]

Mr. Foulkes [holding answer 20 July 2000]: The Policy Information Marker System (PIMS) provides a framework which measures the extent to which DFID's projects and programmes are being targeted on key policy areas. PIMS covers bilateral commitments with a value of £100,000 or over. Contributions to multilateral agencies are excluded because they do not analyse their expenditure in the same way.

Scoring against PIMS is an all-or-nothing procedure with the total commitment value or expenditure counting against each of the PIMS awarded to the project. As DFID policy areas are mutually supportive and overlapping, most new commitments contribute to, and are marked against, two or more markers.

The PIMS marker system excludes multilateral expenditure, although DIFD also contribute to HIV/AIDS through multilaterals. Our bilateral expenditure on HIV/AIDS in Africa from 1992–93 to 1999–2000 recorded under the PIMS marker system was as follows:

£ million

	Principal	Significant
1992–93	2 (50%)	2 (50%)
1993–94	2 (50%)	2 (50%)
1994–95	7 (78%)	2 (22%)
1995–96	11 (79%)	3 (21%)
1996–97	14 (74%)	5 (26%)
1997–98	15 (79%)	4 (21%)
1998–99	15 (75%)	5 (25%)
1999–2000	13 (57%)	10 (43%)

Mr. Streeter: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development how much was spent on principal AIDS programmes in Africa in financial year 1998–99 following her departmental PIMS marker system. [131617]

Mr. Foulkes [holding answer 20 July 2000]: The Policy Information Marker System (PIMS) provides a framework which measures the extent to which DFID's projects and programmes are being targeted on key policy areas. In financial year 1998–99, £15 million was spent on programmes in Africa of which the principal purpose under the PIMS marker system is to combat HIV/AIDS. A further £5.4 million was spent on programmes which are marked as having a significant contribution to combat HIV/AIDS under the PIMS marker system.

Nepal

Mr. Gerrard: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what discussions she has had with the Government of Nepal regarding the situation of indigenous groups and untouchables who are the victims of bonded labour in Nepal; and if she will make a statement. [132312]

Mr. Foulkes: Our officials have in recent weeks been in dialogue with senior Government of Nepal officials in the Home Ministry and Prime Minister's Office in support of the campaign to make bonded labour illegal in Nepal. I am pleased to report that the Government of Nepal decided on 17 July to make this practice illegal and in so doing cancelled all related debts. The challenge now is how to ensure legislation is enforced, and to support these individuals in securing future livelihood opportunities. In addition to existing UK support to an Integrated Social Development Programme which works directly with bonded labourers and untouchables, we have informed the Government of Nepal that the UK is ready to assist further in the rehabilitation of bonded labourers. We are also working to mobilise the support of other donors.

Disabled People

Mr. Rowe: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what steps she has taken to ensure that the 1999 annual report of her Department is made available to blind and visually impaired people. [133105]

Mr. Foulkes: Given the relatively specialist nature of many of our publications, we have not normally made them available systematically in audio, braille or large print formats. The Departmental Report falls into this category. In the case of such publications, we consider any requests for audio or braille formats case by case and in the light of the provisions of the relevant legislation. We are however looking to continue to improve the accessibility of our publications for blind and visually impaired people, particularly in the case of those publications aimed at a broader public audience. This includes reviewing the scope for making more use of large print and audio formats, as well as ensuring the availability of material in appropriate formats via the internet.

UN Consolidated Appeals

Ms Julie Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development if she will list the contributions her Department has made to UN Consolidated Appeals over the last three years. [132485]

Mr. Foulkes: According to UN figures, in the last three years (1997–1999) the UK contributed some US$170 million (£112 million) to UN consolidated appeals. This is broken down as follows:

1997—US$51,913,597 (£34.2 million)

1998—US$51,329,562 (£33.8 million)

1999—US$66,893,817 (£44.0 million).

Further details of UK contributions can be found in the tables below. However, these figures are reliant on data received through the UN's reporting systems, and do not necessarily give a full picture of UK funding.

Ministerial Duty Roster (Summer)

Mrs. Gillan: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development if she will publish the daily Ministerial Duty Roster for her Department during the summer adjournment. [133071]

Mr. Foulkes: It is not the normal practice of the Government to publish a daily Ministerial Duty Roster. This Department will ensure that it has sufficient cover through the summer recess in line with the requirements of the Ministerial Code.

SOLICITOR-GENERAL

European Convention on Human Rights

32. Miss McIntosh: To ask the Solicitor-General what assessment he has made of the impact of cases brought under the European Convention on Human Rights on the work load of the CPS. [131296]

The Solicitor-General: The significance of the Human Rights Act 1998 on the work of the CPS was recognised at an early stage, and a high priority has been given to ensure that preparations are well under way for implementation of the Act in October 2000.

An assessment of the impact of the Human Rights Act was carried out by the CPS in conjunction with other prosecuting agencies, the Home Office, Lord Chancellor's Department and the Treasury.

In consultation with other prosecuting agencies and leading external human rights experts, the CPS has developed a comprehensive training course for CPS prosecutors. The training programme aims to reach over 3,000 key staff before the end of July.

This training programme and the continued guidance and advice that CPS staff will receive will ensure that cases giving rise to Human Rights issues will be dealt with in a wholly professional and effective manner. Initially, we expect that human rights problems will be raised in ordinary cases, and they will be dealt with in the ordinary way. We have anticipated additional costs, and there is no doubt that they will arise.

Crime Victims

33. Mr. Paterson: To ask the Solicitor-General if he will make a statement on measurement of the satisfaction of victims of crime with the Crown Prosecution Service. [131297]

The Solicitor-General: A key objective in the criminal justice system Strategic Plan 1999 to 2002 is > to meet the needs of victims, witnesses and jurors within the system.

Victim satisfaction is currently measured by the British Crime Survey, conducted by the Home Office. This focuses on satisfaction with police performance. As the CPS takes on an enhanced role in relation to victim care, an inter-agency steering group will consider how best to measure victim satisfaction with CPS performance.

A witness satisfaction survey, conducted by BMRB Social Research on behalf of the Home Office, is to take place this month and next. The CPS co-operated with the planning of this survey, which will obtain a broad indication of the level of satisfaction of witnesses with their treatment by criminal justice agencies.

Domestic Violence

34. Mr. Kidney: To ask the Solicitor-General if he will make a statement on the role of the CPS in ensuring the effective prosecution of incidents of domestic violence. [131298]

The Solicitor-General: Violence against women is a serious crime with serious consequences for victims, families and whole communities.

The Crown Prosecution Service regards violence in a domestic context as particularly serious. Prosecutors will therefore consider the full range of prosecution options, whether or not the victim is willing or able to attend court as a witness.

The CPS is fully committed to working with its partners in the criminal justice system to fight against domestic violence.

Treasury Solicitor

35. Ms Buck: To ask the Solicitor-General what criteria were adopted in the selection process for the recently appointed Treasury Solicitor. [131299]

The Solicitor-General: The essential criterion used in selecting the new Treasury Solicitor was whether he or she could fulfil the role. This means that the successful candidate should, among other things, be able personally to give advice to Ministers on a range of legal issues, often of a highly sensitive nature; be able to act as the Chief Executive of the Treasury Solicitor's Department, which is an executive agency; be able to act as Head of the Government Legal Service with overall responsibility for recruitment, training and career development of some 1,300 Government lawyers; and, finally, be able to implement the Modernising Government programme within the Government Legal Service. Miss Juliet Wheldon, who is the new Treasury solicitor, fully meets all of these requirements.

Prosecution Times

36. Mr. Geraint Davies: To ask the Solicitor-General what assessment he has made of the effectiveness of the co-operation between the Crown Prosecution Service, the police and the courts in reducing the average time taken between arrest and sentencing of criminals. [131300]

The Solicitor-General: The Crown Prosecution Service is continuing to improve working practices with the police and courts to improve performance, building on recommendations made by both the Narey report and Glidewell. Measures taken include: advance information in every early hearing case; a reduction in the number of first hearings; more lawyer time spent on preparing for trials though the deployment of designated caseworkers; and reducing duplication and delay by moving towards co-locating CPS staff with police staff in joint criminal justice units.

Crown Prosecution Service

Mr. Ben Chapman: To ask the Solicitor-General if he will make a statement on morale in the Crown Prosecution Service. [131292]

The Solicitor-General: The SR 2000 settlement for the CPS, which was announced last week, was a good settlement and was well received by staff in the CPS. It will provide a much needed boost to hard pressed prosecutors and caseworkers. As a result, the CPS's budget in 2001–02 will be 12 per cent. higher in real terms than now. This is on top of the additional funding of £15.8 million for 2000–01 which I announced on 26 June 2000. These increases will address the concerns about resource constraints which were identified in the recent staff survey and stress audit.

Helen Jones: To ask the Solicitor-General what plans he has to introduce guidance for the Crown Prosecution Service on decisions to drop cases on grounds of lack of credibility of a witness where the witness suffers from mental health problems. [132903]

The Solicitor-General: None. The Code for Crown Prosecutors issued by the DPP under section 10 of the Prosecution of Offences Act 1985 gives guidance to prosecutors for use when deciding whether or not a case should be prosecuted. The code states that Crown Prosecutors must be satisfied there is enough evidence to provide a realistic prospect of conviction before a case may be prosecuted. When considering this, prosecutors will consider the admissibility and reliability of the evidence. This will include considering the credibility of each witness and any factors which impact on a witness's credibility. The code is presently under review and a revised edition will be published later this year.

The CPS is working with other criminal justice agencies to take forward initiatives recommended in the report "Speaking Up for Justice". The recommendations of the report aim to improve access to justice for vulnerable or intimidated witnesses. These initiatives include measures designed to assist vulnerable witnesses, including those with a disability, to give evidence in court proceedings. The availability of such measures will be a relevant consideration for prosecutors when making prosecution decisions.

Ministerial Duty Rota (Summer)

Mr. Garnier: To ask the Solicitor-General if he will publish (a) the Ministerial Duty Rota for his Department during the summer adjournment and (b) the dates between which (i) the Attorney-General and (ii) the Solicitor-General will be on annual leave during the adjournment and not available for official duties. [133159]

The Solicitor-General: It is not normal practice of Government to publish a daily Ministerial Duty Roster. This Department will ensure that it has sufficient cover through the summer recess in line with the requirements of the Ministerial Code. Likewise, it is not normal practice to disclose Ministers' holiday plans, as this is personal information.

Overseas Visits

Mr. Garnier: To ask the Solicitor-General what official overseas visits the Law Officers plan to make during the summer adjournment. [133160]

The Solicitor-General: I am making no official visits overseas during the summer adjournment. My right hon. Friend the Attorney-General is visiting the following countries on official business: (i) South Africa, to attend the International Association of Prosecutors Conference in Cape Town; (ii) Germany, to see the Army Prosecuting Authority's court system in Bielefeld; (iii) Brazil, to attend the First World Congress for Attorneys-General in Sao Paulo; and (iv) China, to attend, at the personal invitation of the Deputy Procurator General, the Asia Crime Prevention Foundation in Beijing.

Merchant Navy Day

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Solicitor-General if he will ensure that the Red Ensign is flown from departmental buildings on Merchant Navy Day, 3 September. [132960]

The Solicitor-General: I refer my hon. Friend to the answer given today by the Parliamentary Under-Secretary of State for the Home Department.

CPS (Essex)

Mr. Bob Russell: To ask the Solicitor-General if he will order an inquiry into the handling by the Essex Crown Prosecution Service of a case of alleged careless driving in respect of a fatal accident at Colchester on 6 May 1999; and if he will make a statement. [131076]

The Solicitor-General [pursuant to his reply, 19 July 2000, c. 174]: The fatal road traffic accident which happened in Colchester on 6 May 1999 was a tragedy. Understandably, the family of the deceased feels let down by the decision of the Crown Prosecution Service not to continue with the prosecution of the defendant for the offence of careless driving.

On 10 July 2000, Official Report, column 174W, I informed the hon. Member in a written answer that I would be speaking to the Chief Crown Prosecutor to discuss the circumstances of the case.

I have now met with the Chief Crown Prosecutor for Essex and the Branch Crown Prosecutor responsible for the prosecution team. I am satisfied with the explanation that I have been given as to why the criminal prosecution in this case was discontinued.

The history of the proceedings is this: the police were instructed to issue summons against the defendant for careless driving on 21 September 1999.

The case was listed at Colchester magistrates court for 9 November 1999 but was adjourned by agreement to 7 December to enable the defence to look at the prosecution statements. After the defendant entered a not guilty plea a pre-trial review was fixed for 21 December 1999. At the review the defence requested an adjournment to look into possible defects in the motor vehicle which the defendant was driving when the incident occurred. On 11 January 2000 the defence confirmed that the issue of defects to the motor vehicle would not be pursued. On the same day a medical report was faxed to the court which suggested that the defendant had a medical condition that would have affected her driving.

As the prosecution had not seen this medical evidence before it asked for the case to be adjourned for the Crown to look at the report and consider obtaining its own medical report. The case was therefore adjourned until 22 February 2000. However, on 26 January the defence made a request to the court that as the date and venue fixed was not convenient for the defence the matter be adjourned until 2 May 2000.

Meanwhile, a first medical report obtained on behalf of the prosecution was received at the CPS Branch Office on 14 February 2000. Unfortunately, the report was sent in an envelope marked "personal" so therefore was not opened until the lawyer dealing with the case returned from annual leave two weeks later. Hearing dates which had been fixed by the court (i.e. 4 and 18 April and 16 and 30 May) had to be adjourned at the request of the prosecution, so that points raised in the medical report which had been obtained could be clarified. Further medical reports were obtained by the prosecution on 25 April and 24 May 2000.

During the week of 1 May there was a case conference with the prosecution team at which it was concluded that it would not be possible to prove the case against the defendant. This was in the light of the evidence that the defendant was suffering an epileptic fit at the relevant time and therefore was not "driving". Consideration was given to proceeding with the case on an alternative basis but alternative charges were statute barred.

As I said, I have spoken at length with both the Chief Crown Prosecutor and the Branch Crown Prosecutor. Both took this case extremely seriously. Indeed the Branch Crown Prosecutor who had immediate carriage of the case pursued it in what I would describe as an exemplary manner. But the plain fact is that the Crown Prosecution Service could not prosecute—indeed it would have been unlawful to do so—in the face of the medical evidence.

The Chief Crown Prosecutor for Essex and I, either separately or together, will be happy to meet the hon. Member if he so wishes, to discuss the case.

DEFENCE

Strategic Defence Review

Mr. John Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what progress has been made by his Department in its strategic environmental appraisal of the Strategic Defence Review; and if he will make a statement. [133603]

Dr. Moonie: The study phase of the Strategic Environmental Appraisal concluded in March of this year and my Department's review of its recommendations has now also been completed. I am able to announce to the House that I am publishing the report and will place a copy in the Library of the House.

Centre for Defence Medicine

Mr. Menzies Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many beds the Centre for Defence Medicine in Birmingham will house; what the projected size is of its outpatient throughput; what the size is of its civilian catchment area; and if he will make a statement. [132473]

Dr. Moonie: The Centre for Defence Medicine (CDM) will have academic teaching and clinical roles and will be a centre of excellence for military medicine. It will be relatively small at the beginning and will develop steadily over a number of years. The clinical element will be similar to the arrangements at the Ministry of Defence Hospital Units, with, initially, one ward of 32 beds staffed and managed by Defence Medical Services (DMS) personnel and other DMS personnel integrated throughout the host Trust. DMS personnel will treat both Service and civilian patients. It is envisaged that when the CDM is fully developed its clinical side will have an annual throughput of some 2,700 Service outpatients. The catchment area for civilian patients will be the same as for the host Trust, the University Hospital Birmingham, within the West Midlands region. As a major tertiary care provider, the Trust treats patients from throughout the country and the DMS personnel will also have the opportunity to treat such patients.

Mr. Menzies Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what incentives are (a) in place and (b) being planned to improve the retention rates for fully qualified medical personnel in the Defence Medical Services. [132167]

Dr. Moonie: A number of measures to improve retention in the Defence Medical Services (DMS) have been taken or are under active consideration. The decision to open the Centre for Defence Medicine (CDM) at Birmingham in April 2001 has been enthusiastically welcomed by members of the DMS. It is intended that the CDM will become, in partnership with its host Trust, University Hospital Birmingham NHS Trust, together with the University of Birmingham, a prestigious centre of expertise in military medicine, which we are confident will encourage retention of DMS personnel.

The frequency of operational deployments has been reduced for some specialties in Bosnia by the development of a multinational hospital facility at Sipovo, and work is in hand for a similar facility in Kosovo. Distinction Awards were introduced with effect from 1 April 1999 to bring DMS consultants' pay more closely into line with that of their NHS counterparts. Common terms of service have been agreed for medical and dental officers and pay spines based on these were submitted to the Armed Forces Pay Review Body in January 2000 for approval in principle. Future pension arrangements for medical and dental officers are also under review; a number of options are under consideration but no decisions have yet been taken. Common terms of service have also been agreed for nurses and work is in hand on the delivery of common terms of service for medical technicians. This year we introduced an annual Continuous Attitude Survey among all DMS personnel which will help inform our work on measures to improve retention.

Mr. Menzies Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what (a) medical training facilities, (b) military facilities and (c) field hospitals will be housed in the new Centre for Defence Medicine in Birmingham. [132549]

Dr. Moonie: The Centre for Defence Medicine is envisaged as being the future professional focus for the Defence Medical Services, with academic, research and teaching roles as well as a significant clinical function. The Centre will be accommodated in a mix of facilities which will, as appropriate, either be shared with our civilian partners or run by military personnel. The latter will include a headquarters, wards staffed and managed by military medical personnel, mess facilities and domestic accommodation. There are no plans to locate any Field Hospitals at the CDM. There is, however a Territorial Army Field Hospital at Birmingham, some of whose members are employed by the host Trust, the University Hospital Birmingham NHS Trust.

Defence Medical Services

Mr. Menzies Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence (1) what the recommended manpower level is for consultants in (a) burns and plastics and (b) accident and emergency in the Defence Medical Services; [132165]

(2) how many consultants are employed in (a) burns and plastics and (b) accident and emergency in the Defence Medical Services. [132163]

Dr. Moonie: The Defence Medical Services' post-Strategic Defence Review (SDR) requirement for consultants in burns and plastic surgery and accident and emergency, and the number of consultants employed in these specialties as at 1 April 2000 are as follows:

	Post-SDR consultant requirement	Manning as at 1 April 2000
Burns and Plastic Surgery	10	2
Accident and Emergency	23	3

Mr. Menzies Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence (1) what percentage of the establishments for (a) general practitioners, (b) orthopaedic surgeons and (c) anaesthetists in the Defence Medical Services are currently filled; [132169]

(2) what the post-Strategic Defence Review establishments are for (a) general practitioners, (b) orthopaedic surgeons and (c) anaesthetists in the Defence Medical Services. [132168]

Dr. Moonie: The Defence Medical Services' post-Strategic Defence Review (SDR) operational and retained task requirement for general medical practitioners, consultant orthopaedic surgeons and anaesthetists, and the numbers employed in these specialities as at 1 April 2000 are as follows:

	Post-SDR operational and retained task requirement	Manning as at 1 April 2000	Percentage manned
General medical practitioners	437	208	48
Consultant orthopaedic surgeons	28	9	32
Consultant anaesthetists	120	30	25

Note:
Figures include those in Command and Staff posts but exclude trainees.

Mr. Menzies Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence (1) how the overall recommended manpower strength of the Defence Medical Services has changed since June 1999; and whether there has been an increase in the actual strength; [132551]

(2) how many field hospitals the Defence Medical Services can deploy simultaneously; [132471]

(3) how many of the regular personnel to be recruited into Defence Medical Services will be (a) direct entry qualified personnel and (b) trainees. [132550]

Dr. Moonie: I will write to the right hon. and learned Member and a copy of my letter will be placed in the Library of the House.

Ministry of Defence Hospital Units

Mr. Menzies Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what assessment his Department has made of the advantages of maintaining a single service identity for the Military District Hospital units. [132166]

Dr. Moonie: The Ministry of Defence Hospital Units (MDHUs) are part of the tri-Service Defence Secondary Care Agency and it is the Ministry of Defence's policy that they should be manned by personnel of the three Services, but that responsibility for recruitment, career management and promotion should remain with the single Services. The MDHUs are located in areas where there were previously single Service hospitals and, in practice, the majority of Service personnel at each MDHU have, so far, been of the same Service as the previous military hospital and of many of the other local units. This pattern reflects individuals' posting preferences, which the armed forces seek to meet where possible. We recognise the benefits to morale of posting individuals to their preferred locations and they are not posted elsewhere except where this is necessary for manning or operational reasons or for the development of their careers.

Mr. Menzies Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what the average waiting times are for a first appointment for armed forces personnel in each of the single Service Military District Hospital units at (a) Derriford, (b) Frimley Park and (c) Peterborough. [132164]

Dr. Moonie: Data on the treatment of Service personnel at the four tri-Service Ministry of Defence Hospital Units (MDHUs) situated in Derriford, Peterborough, Frimley Park and Northallerton NHS Trusts is not collected in the format requested. In 1999–2000 the MDHUs aimed to offer 50 per cent. of Service personnel a first outpatient appointment within four weeks and 90 per cent. within 13 weeks. Details on their performance in meeting these targets are as follows, except for Derriford for which no information is currently available.

Frimley Park	49	83
Northallerton	41	79
Peterborough	28	84

Mr. Menzies Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many beds there are at each of the military district hospital units at (a) Derriford, (b) Frimley Park and (c) Peterborough; and what percentage of these are set aside for the fast-tracking of military personnel. [132470]

Dr. Moonie: The four Ministry of Defence Hospital Units (MDHUs) at Derriford, Frimley Park, Peterborough and Northallerton are fully integrated within their host NHS Trusts and treat both military and NHS patients. Details of the number of beds in military managed wards at each MDHU are as follows. Military patients, however, may be treated on any ward of the host hospital and no beds are allocated for their exclusive use.

MDHU	Beds in military managed wards
Derriford	35
Frimley Park	58
Peterborough	29
Northallerton	[1]36

Departmental Assets

Mr. Hawkins: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will list the disposals of his Department's land, buildings and property (a) agreed, (b) contracted for and (c) planned (i) in the Surrey Heath parliamentary constituency, of any value and (ii) within the UK as a whole, where the net value exceeds £1 million. [132914]

Dr. Moonie: The information requested is not held centrally in the format requested. I will write to the hon. Member and a copy of my letter will be placed in the Library of the House.

Staff College

Mr. Hawkins: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what plans there are for the use of the staff college site at Camberley; and if he will make a statement. [132917]

Dr. Moonie: Future use of the former Army Staff College site has been under review for some time. Pending further work on a longer-term option, an alternative short-term use has been found.

The Army Medical Services Headquarters and the Army Medical and Legal Branch will be relocated at the Camberley site later this year.

Once a final decision has been made I will write to the hon. Member and a copy of my letter will be placed in the Library of the House.

Apache Helicopters

Mr. Keetch: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many Apache helicopters have been delivered to the UK; how many are (i) fully serviceable, (ii) unserviceable and (iii) cleared for public flying; and if he will make a statement. [132851]

Dr. Moonie: Three Apache helicopters have been delivered to the UK MOD to date. The first WAH-64 Apache was delivered to DERA Boscombe Down for trials; two further aircraft have been delivered to the Army Air Corps in Middle Wallop, and training sorties are in progress. Regarding the point on clearance for public flying, and assuming this meant flying at public displays, such clearance is customarily done on an "as required" basis; any of the three delivered aircraft could be so cleared if required.

RAF Chilmark

Mr. Key: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence when (a) explosive ordnance disposal and (b) contamination clearance will be completed at the RAF Chilmark site. [132174]

Dr. Moonie: The explosive ordnance disposal on the Headquarters site at RAF Chilmark is programmed for completion by mid-October 2000. On the Ladydown site it is expected to take 2 to 3 years.

The extent of contamination which requires clearance cannot be assessed until the explosive ordnance has been completed. A further statement will be made when the timescale is known.

Mr. Key: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence for what reason the HQ North and HQ South parts of the RAF Chilmark site must be re-checked for explosive ordnance; and when this will be (a) started and (b) completed. [132173]

Dr. Moonie: The HQ North and HQ South parts of the RAF Chilmark site, together with the Proof Yard, are being re-checked for explosive ordnance following the discovery of projectiles in the Proof Yard in May 2000.

The re-checking started in May 2000 and is expected to be completed by the end of this year.

Mr. Key: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if the Crichel Down rules apply to the site of former RAF Chilmark; and if he will list (a) the former owners and (b) those who are in negotiation with his Department. [132172]

Dr. Moonie: The Crichel Down rules apply to the former RAF Chilmark as they do to all surplus Government land acquired by or under the threat of compulsion. My Department has concluded that the obligation to offer land back to the former owners applies to parts of the site.

My Department is trying to trace the former owners or successors to establish whether they are interested in repurchasing the land. It is not possible to identify the former owners until this process has been completed. However, my Department is in discussion with Salisbury District Council, Wiltshire County Council, English Nature and the Wiltshire Trust, who are seeking to establish the Chilmark Trust in order to acquire the site. My Department will not be able to conclude discussions until the former owner position is clarified.

Defence Estates

Mr. Livsey: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what representations he has had from (a) farming unions and (b) the Country Landowners Association in Wales, with regard to transfer of responsibility of the Defence Estates management to the private sector. [132733]

Dr. Moonie: None.

Mr. Livsey: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if agreements reached between his Department and owners of land adjoining land owned by his Department will be fully honoured following transfer of the Defence Estates management to the private sector. [132734]

Dr. Moonie: As the hon. Member is aware, the Army are seeking a Strategic Partner to assist with the management of their estate and the provision of training services in Great Britain. In this context, such agreements will be fully honoured.

Mr. Livsey: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many staff will be made redundant as a result of his Department's Defence Estates being transferred to the private sector in Wales, indicating the numbers involved in each defence location in Wales. [132737]

Dr. Moonie: The Department's Defence Estate in Wales is not being transferred to the private sector. The Ministry of Defence seeks to identify a commercial partner to support the work of the Army in the management of their estate and the provision of training serviees in Great Britain. The chosen partner will provide all the non-core functions considered appropriate. The strategic partnering project is in a very early stage and it is not possible to say with any certainty what the impact of introducing a strategic partner will be on the existing operation and on the consequent employment opportunities for local staff.

Mr. Livsey: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what statutory mechanism will be put in place to settle disputes between adjoining landowners and occupiers of land and the company managing the Defence Estates, following transfer to the private sector. [132736]

Dr. Moonie: As the hon. Member is aware, the Army are seeking a Strategic Partner to assist with the management of their estate and the provision of training services in Great Britain.

In this context, there are no plans to put in place such a statutory mechanism. Disputes will be settled as they arise, as they are now.

Mr. Livsey: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what his policy is in respect of privatisation of his Department's Training Land Estate. [132738]

Dr. Moonie: The Department's Training Land Estate is not being transferred to the private sector, although, as the hon. Member is aware, the Army are seeking a Strategic partner to assist with the management of their Estate and the provision of training services in Great Britain.

Mr. Livsey: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will ensure that the current nominal level of rental charges for sheep grazing on his Department's grazings will be secured after privatisation and continued at current levels. [132735]

Dr. Moonie: There are no plans to transfer the Defence Estate to the private sector, although as the hon. Member is aware, the Army are seeking a Strategic Partner to assist with the management of their estate and the provision of training services in Great Britain. Irrespective of any partnering arrangements that may be entered into, grazing charges will continue to be set in the same way as they are now, against a number of factors including annual income trends, stock prices and farm rental comparisons.

Army Deployment (Northern Ireland)

Mr. McNamara: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what the additional Army deployment in Northern Ireland was in July by way of assistance given to the RUC in the Portadown area. [131391]

Mr. McNamara: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many soldiers were assigned to duties under the control of the RUC in Portadown in July. [131392]

Mr. Spellar: Soldiers assisted the RUC at Portadown in a variety of roles, but they remained under military command.

Mr. McNamara: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many soldiers were issued RUC riot equipment and uniforms in Portadown in July. [131393]

Mr. Spellar: No soldiers were issued with RUC riot equipment in July. However, six soldiers from the Royal Military Police who were supporting the RUC in evidence gathering teams were issued with police coveralls. The soldiers wore helmets and armbands which clearly indicated that they were military police.

Static Code Analysis

Mr. Swayne: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if static code analysis for validating software is part of current Defence Standards; and if he will make a statement. [131782]

Dr. Moonie: Static code analysis is one of several techniques for analysing software set out in Defence Standards. Reference to static code analysis can be found in Defence Standard 00–55 (Part 2). "Requirements for Safety Related Software in Defence Equipment" and in Defence Standard 00–13 "Requirements for the Achievement of Testability in Electronic and Allied Equipment". These documents are available on the internet at www.dstan.mod.uk.

Mr. Mitchell: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what proposals he has for requiring the registration of food outlets under the new EU food hygiene regulations; if these will apply to charity events; and what level of (a) charges for licences and (b) fines for transgressions he proposes to apply. [132822]

Ms Stuart: Food premises are already required to be registered under the Food Premises (Registration) Regulations 1991, as amended. The regulations exempt, subject to certain conditions, voluntary and charitable organisations from the requirement to register. There is no charge for registration. Fines for offences on conviction may not exceed either level 3 or level 5 on the standard scale, depending on the offence.

The European Commission has presented five inter-linked proposals for regulations on food safety rules and associated animal health controls. These are intended to replace some 16 commodity-specific EC directives and the general food hygiene directive that applies to all other foodstuffs. The initial drafts of these regulations show a proposed coming into force date of 1 January 2004. The first meeting of experts took place on 25 and 26 July where the Commission presented the proposals and laid down its intended plans for tackling the wide range of issues. Regarding registration requirements for food premises, the United Kingdom will seek to ensure continuity with current domestic requirements.

It is likely that, following the summer break, meetings will take place in Brussels on a monthly basis. In the meantime, we are in the process of consulting with interested parties and stakeholders to seek their views.

Parliamentary Questions

Mr. Rowe: To ask the Secretary of State for Health when he will reply to the question tabled on 11 July by the hon. Member for Faversham and Mid-Kent on non-executive directorships of National Health Service trusts (ref. 130534). [133140]

Ms Stuart: I replied to the hon. Member on 25 July.

GM Crops

Mr. Yeo: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) if the Government plans to trace the food products which may contain oil produced from British oil seed rape affected by the contamination of Advanta rapeseeds by GM rapeseeds; [124154]

(2) if the Government plans to publish advice to consumers wishing to avoid food containing ingredients produced from crops grown from conventional Advanta rapeseed contaminated with GM rapeseed. [124162]

Ms Stuart: No decision has yet been taken as to how crops grown from the contaminated rapeseed will be disposed of but the genetically modified element of the crop does not have the necessary authorisation under the Deliberate Release Directive (90/220) to enable it to be commercially marketed in the EC.

I am however, advised by the Food Standards Agency that while there is a possibility that some rapeseed containing a very low level of GM seed may have been grown in the UK last year, there is no information available on where this might have occurred. There is thus no way of being able to trace any oil from this source that may have entered the food chain as the oil cannot be distinguished from conventionally produced rapeseed oil by analytical means. This will in any case have been mixed with oil from other sources and dispersed widely.

The amount of oil from GM rapeseed in any single food product is likely to be extremely small, if it is present at all, but for the reasons given, there is no obvious way for consumers to be able to identify products which might contain traces of the GM derived oil.

Cancer Treatment

Mr. Hammond: To ask the Secretary of State for Health, pursuant to his answer of 27 June 2000, Official Report, column 437W, on cancer treatment, if he will estimate the percentage of cancer referrals in the NHS which are seen by (a) a cancer specialist and (b) a general surgeon in the most recent 12 months for which figures for referrals are available. [128593]

Yvette Cooper: Data specific to the monitoring of the two-week waiting time breast cancer standard record the waiting time between date of decision to refer and date seen. They do not record the specialist seen by the patient. Data collected on non-two-week specific outpatient referrals and the waiting time to see a consultant are collected only by the consultant's main speciality code. This would not necessarily be able to identify cancer patients.

Guidance issued to the National Health Service on improving outcomes in breast cancer recommends that patients with breast cancer should be managed by multi-disciplinary specialist breast care teams working to written guidelines. Diagnostic services must be able to provide rapid and accurate information to enable patients who do not have breast cancer to be reassured and treated if necessary, while ensuring that those who do proceed rapidly to treatment.

Sheep (Spinal Cord Removal)

Mr. Breed: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what reasons underlay the decision to require the removal of spinal cord from sheep at slaughter. [131813]

Ms Stuart [holding answer 21 July 2000]: I am advised by the Food Standards Agency that specified risk material (SRM) controls on sheep were introduced, on the basis of advice from the Spongiform Encephalopathy Advisory Committee (SEAC), after it had been demonstrated that sheep could be infected experimentally with BSE, and because it was considered possible that sheep had been exposed to BSE infectivity through feed. SEAC advised that the spinal cord of older sheep could pose a potential risk to human health if eaten, and recommended an extension of the SRM controls to include this tissue once it had been established that there were practical methods for removing it from the carcase. The controls are precautionary, as at present there is no evidence that BSE is present in commercial sheep.

Communication (Deaf People)

Mr. Sheerman: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what facilities his Department offers to deaf people in communicating with health trusts, health authorities and primary care groups. [132102]

Mr. Hutton: The Department has issued a range of guidance for the National Health Service on communicating with deaf and hearing impaired people. This includes "Doubly disabled: Equality for disabled people in the new NHS: access to services" together with a training video "When is it my turn?" for training and raising staff awareness of the communication needs of deaf and hearing impaired people. These were issued in April 1999.

To support implementation of Part III of the Disability Discrimination Act across the NHS, the NHS Executive issued guidance in July 1999. This guidance was informed by research conducted by "Disability Matters" on barriers faced by disabled people in the accessing the NHS. Their report, which concluded that the most significant barrier faced by disabled people in accessing the NHS was staff awareness and attitudes, was issued to health authorities, NHS trusts and primary care groups. It also led to the development of a distance learning package, "Welcoming Patients to the NHS" which was launched in November 1999. All these publications included material on communicating with deaf and hearing impaired people.

Accident Prevention Task Force

Mr. Austin: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will list the members and terms of reference of the accident prevention task force; when it is expected to meet; what its priorities are; and if he will make a statement. [132109]

Yvette Cooper [holding answer 24 July 2000]: The Task Force to advise on the prevention of accidental injuries, promised in the White Paper, "Saving Lives: Our Healthier Nation" will hold its initial meeting on a date to be arranged this autumn. The Task Force will be chaired by the Department of Health and involve other Government Departments as observers. Details of members are given. Its terms of reference are:

Taking account of "Saving Lives" and other initiatives in hand to reduce the burden of accidental injury, advise the Chief Medical Officer on:

the most important priorities for immediate action in order to meet the target the development of an implementation plan, consulting with other stakeholders where necessary whether the necessary delivery structures are in place to take forward the implementation plan how progress on the implementation plan should be monitored

how to develop and publicise a more unified approach to accident prevention across Government and the National Health Service.

A report with recommendations should be submitted to CMO within one year of its first meeting.

Accident Task Force Membership

Wendy Broome—Senior Road Safety Officer, Hertfordshire County Council.

Professor Yvonne Carter—Professor of General Practice and Primary Care.

Ashley Martin—Peterborough City Council, Director of the Institute of Home Safety.

Carol Sherriff—Director of the Child Accident Prevention Trust.

Dr. Liz Towner—University of Newcastle upon Tyne, Department of Community Child Health.

John Ransford/Nominee—Local Government Association.

Care Homes

Mr. Colman: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what plans he has to strengthen the regulation of private care homes for the elderly. [132705]

Mr. Hutton: In November 1998 we published our White Paper, "Modernising Social Services" which included our plans for reforming the regulation of care homes. The Care Standards Act brings about these reforms.

We will establish an independent National Care Standards Commission to regulate statutory and independent sector care services in accordance with national minimum standards to ensure consistency and improve the quality of life and level of protection for the most vulnerable people in society. The Commission will be accountable to my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State. It will be responsible for the registration and inspection of all residential care and nursing homes, including those for older people. The Commission is expected to be fully operational by April 2002.

Press Releases

Mr. Lansley: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many press releases were issued in (a) 1997, (b) 1998, (c) 1999 and (d) this year to date; and what the total cost of the production and issuing of these press releases was in each year. [132748]

Ms Stuart: The Department adheres to the Access to Information Code of Practice and continually reviews the most cost effective methods for issuing press releases. The total cost of producing and issuing press releases cannot be separately identified as many of the costs are absorbed within the expenditure for running the Department's Communications Directorate.

The table shows the cost of distributing press releases provided by external suppliers in each financial year requested:

Financial Year	£ 000
1997–98	53
1998–99	102
1999–2000	107
2000–01 to date	44

The table shows the number of press releases issued each calendar year requested:

Year	Total
1997	406
1998	556
1999	742
2000 to date	372

Press Officers

Mr. Lansley: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many press officers were employed in his Department in (a) May 1997, (b) January 1998, (c) January 1999 and (d) January 2000; and what the total expenditure on press officers by his Department was in each of the years concerned. [132759]

Ms Stuart: Detailed information on the number of press officers employed by the Department during the financial year 1997–98 and 1998–99 was provided in Appendix II of the report, "The Government Information and Communications Service" (HC 770), published by the Select Committee on Public Administration (29 July 1998). Copies are available in the Library.

As at January 2000, the Department employed 16 press officers. Cost of press officers employed by the Department in the financial year 1999–2000 was £590,000.

Prescription Charges

Mr. Edward Davey: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what estimate he has made of the extra costs (a) per patient and (b) in aggregate, in prescription charges per year to patients using commonly prescribed generic drugs as a result of the price increases resulting from the introduction of patient packs; what action he has (i) taken and (ii) plans to minimise the costs to patients; and if he will make a statement. [132885]

Ms Stuart: The prescription charge is a flat-rate charge. Changes in the cost of medicines to the National Health Service do not therefore affect the charges paid by patients. We have given a commitment not to increase prescription charges by more than inflation (as measured by the retail prices index) for the rest of this Parliament.

ENVIRONMENT, TRANSPORT AND THE REGIONS

Military Convoys (A696)

Mr. Beith: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what recent representations he has received about the effect of military convoys on road safety on the A696; and if his Department and the Highways Agency have had discussions with the police authority about the future escorting of convoys to and from the Otterburn Range. [132915]

Mr. Hill: I have asked the Chief Executive of the Highways Agency, Mr. Peter Nutt, to write to the right hon. Member.

Letter from Peter Nutt to Mr. A. J. Beith, dated 27 July 2000:

The Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions has asked me to reply to your recent Parliamentary Question concerning the effect of military convoys on road safety on the A696, and the possibility of the future escorting of convoys to and from the Otterburn Range.

The Highways Agency has received a number of representations from Parish Councils, other community groups and individuals about military convoys on the A696. Officers from the Agency have discussed this on a number of occasions with Northumbria Police. While this is a matter of operational concern to the Agency, at present the movements of the convoys along the highway are largely the responsibility of the Ministry of Defence and the Police. The Police involvement depends upon the size and weight of the vehicles in the convoy. The Agency has had a number of meetings with the MOD and the Police in an attempt to ensure safety and minimise disruption due to the movements of convoys and their timing.

Should you require any further information, please contact the Area Manager, Neil Taylor at our Leeds office, on 0113 283 5481.

Pavements (Wheelchair Access)

Mr. Beith: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what was the average amount spent by highway authorities in England in each of the last five years on pavement alterations to enable wheelchair access; and how much each authority spent in that time. [132918]

Mr. Hill: This information is not collected centrally.

My Department does, however, encourage local authorities to make provision for wheelchair users, as well as other disabled people, in the pedestrian environment. This is a central theme in the Local Transport Plan guidance.

We have also announced in the 10 year Transport Plan that we will be developing measures for evaluating accessibility in transport systems, and in streets and public places, to check that investment is delivering real improvements in the day to day mobility of disabled people.

Liquefied Petroleum Gas

Mr. Boswell: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions if he will make a statement on recent developments in the uptake of LPG as a road fuel, with reference to the number and cost of Powershift grants and other incentives, and the number of vehicles of different types converted to duel fuelling. [132909]

Mr. Hill: The demand for LPG vehicles, in particular for LPG dual fuel cars, is growing strongly thanks in large part to Government fuel duty incentives for road gas fuels and the Powershift programme, which is sponsored by my Department. In recognition of this increasing demand, my right hon. and noble Friend Lord Macdonald of Tradeston announced earlier this year an increase in the Powershift budget to £10 million—almost a threefold increase on last year.

Between 1 April and 30 June, Powershift grants totalling £2.5 million were offered towards the purchase of 2,077 LPG vehicles. Over the course of this financial year, Powershift expects to support the purchase of over 5,000 LPG vehicles. This is in addition to the 17,000 gas powered vehicles already registered with the DVLA at the end of 1999.

Housebuilding (South-East)

Mr. Burns: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions if he will list by each local authority area in the county of Essex and the unitary authorities of Southend and Thurrock the most recent estimates of the number of houses to be built under the SERPLAN recommendations in each local authority area. [132828]

Ms Beverley Hughes: SERPLAN made no estimates of the number of homes to be built in each local authority within Essex. The regional housing provision is distributed below county level by the strategic planning authorities through the preparation of structure and unitary development plans. In the case of Essex, Essex county council and Southend unitary authority are responsible for keeping the Essex and Southend on Sea structure plan up to date and Thurrock unitary authority is responsible for preparing a unitary development plan for its area.

North West Development Agency

Mr. Campbell-Savours: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what the cost has been to the North West Development Agency of consultancy work allocated to outside bodies in the last 12 months. [132039]

Ms Beverley Hughes: The total cost for consultancy work allocated to outside bodies during the financial year 1999–2000 was £1,946,000.

Mr. Campbell-Savours: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions if he will ensure that the annual report of the North West Development Agency includes in future information which has been sought by hon. Members on the operations of the North West Development Agency. [132043]

Ms Beverley Hughes: There are no plans to change the requirements for Regional Development Agencies to publish reports and accounts on the breadth of activities during the year. The North West Development Agency's annual report and accounts for 1999–2000 have now been certified by the National Audit Office and will be laid before the House today. If there are questions that my hon. Friend feels are unanswered by the report he can address them to the Agency or the Secretary of State.

Mr. Campbell-Savours: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what the cost of printing publications from the North West Development Agency was in the last 12 months. [131545]

Mr. Campbell-Savours: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what progress has been made on moving North West Development Agency facilities from Cockermouth to Penrith. [131553]

Ms Beverley Hughes: Lease negotiations with the proposed developer of the new premises at Penrith are expected to be concluded shortly with an anticipated availability for occupation early in the new year.

Mr. Campbell-Savours: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what was the last negotiated rental charge per foot secured on premises on the North West Development Agency English Partnership estate at Homewood in Cockermouth. [131555]

Ms Beverley Hughes: The last negotiated letting at the Lakeland Business Park was secured at a principal rental of £7.11 per square foot plus a service charge/maintenance rent of £1.57 per square foot. This letting commenced on 20 March 2000 and was in respect of premises of 817 square feet.

Mr. Campbell-Savours: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions on how many occasions in the last 12 months members of the Board of the North West Development Agency have stood aside from consideration of North West Development Agency Board business due to conflict of interest. Mr. Campbell-Savours: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what expenses were paid to each member of the Board of the North West Development Agency in each of the last 12 months. [131546]

Ms Beverley Hughes: Expenses paid to North West Development Agency Board Members in financial year 1999–2000 are set out in the analysis.

The amounts are commensurate with the distance Board Members travel and their participation in other Agency related activities such as Sub Groups and Conferences.

Mr. Campbell-Savours: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what arrangements are in place to secure accountability by the North West Development Agency to the North West Regional Assembly. [131548]

Ms Beverley Hughes: The North West Development Agency is not accountable to the North West Regional Assembly. However, the Assembly is designated as a Regional Chamber under the provision of the regional Development Agencies Act 1998 which requires the NWDA to consult the Assembly in the exercise of its functions and to have due regard to any views expressed by the Assembly. The NWDA has also entered into a Concordat with the Assembly and the Government Office for the North West, which refers to the Assembly's role in scrutinising the NWDA's Corporate Plan and monitoring its activity. The role is facilitated through twice yearly meetings between the NWDA and the Assembly at member level, regular meetings at officer level and the NWDA formally consults the Assembly on its Corporate Plan and other key documents.

Mr. Campbell-Savours: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what the cost of the North West Development Agency was in each quarter since the agency was formed. [131550]

Ms Beverley Hughes: The cost of running the North West Development Agency in the financial year 1999–2000 was as follows:

Quarter 1—£2,425,000

Quarter 2—£3,249,000

Quarter 3—£3,553,000

Quarter 4—£4,297,000

Mr. Campbell-Savours: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions how many persons it is proposed will be based as employees at the North West Development Agency premises at Penrith. [131552]

Ms Beverley Hughes: It is expected that 15 staff of the North West Development Agency will be based at the agency's office in Penrith with "hot desk" provision for two or three others to work there when necessary.

Mr. Campbell-Savours: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what plans he has to reverse the decision to consolidate North West Development Agency office premises in Penrith. [131554]

Ms Beverley Hughes: My right hon. Friend has no such plans. Location of office premises is a matter for the North West Development Agency to decide.

Mr. Campbell-Savours: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what the current arrangements are for the registration and declaration of interests by members of the Board of the North West Development Agency. [132042]

Ms Beverley Hughes: The Chairman and other Board Members of the North West Development Agency are required to declare any personal or business interests that may conflict with their responsibilities as Board Members and to make and maintain a public register of such interests.

The Register of Interests is available for public inspection at the Head Office of the North West Development Agency in Warrington. Significant interests are also shown in the North West Development Agency's Annual Report.

Mr. Campbell-Savours: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions on what issues the North West Development Agency officials expect to be consulted by DTI officials in relation to economic and industrial development in the North West Region. [132046]

Ms Beverley Hughes: The Department of Trade and Industry is now consulting the North West Development Agency on all key programmes which relate to economic industrial development, particularly where they relate to the implementation of the Regional Strategy. Some current examples are:

Cluster development

Regional Centres of Manufacturing Excellence

The development of the Small Business Service

The Regional Innovation Strategy.

DTI also regularly consults with the North West Development Agency on inward investment activities and on major Regional Selective Assistance cases.

Telecommunications Masts

Mr. Dismore: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions (1) which mobile phone companies have notified him of a change in their policy on selecting sites for mobile phone masts to take account of the Stewart report; what such changes in policy are, in each case; and if he will make a statement; [132934]

(2) what recent discussions he has had with each of the mobile phone operators concerning their policy on the siting of mobile phone masts; and if he will make a statement. [132935]

Ms Beverley Hughes: My officials have met each of the mobile phone operators at least twice since the Stewart report was published on 11 May. They have discussed the range of actions being taken forward by Government in response to the Stewart report's recommendations on planning and the role of the operators in taking forward the recommendations, including those about base stations on and near schools and about mast sharing.

The Federation of the Electronics Industry (FEI) issued a response to the Stewart report on 11 May. This included an explanation of the policy of the mobile phone operators on the siting of base stations. The response is available on their website at "www.fei.org.uk".

Mr. Swayne: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what recent discussions he has had with the Department of Health on amending his planning guidance notes to adopt a precautionary approach to health risks from mobile telephone masts; what assessment he has made of the report of the Independent Expert Group on Mobile Phones; and if he will make a statement. [132582]

Ms Beverley Hughes: The Independent Expert Group on Mobile Phones (chaired by Sir William Stewart) published its report on mobile phones and health on 11 May.

The group recommended a precautionary approach, comprising a series of specific measures, to the use of mobile phone technologies until we have more detailed and scientifically robust information on any health effects. The Government accepts the recommended precautionary approach advised by the Stewart report.

In its response to the group's report the Government said that it was minded to introduce a requirement for full planning permission for all new telecommunications masts, but would need to consult widely before doing so, including on the principle and precise scope of any new arrangements. We intend to issue shortly a consultation paper on this and related guidance which will include consideration of health concerns.

Discussions have been held with the all relevant Government Departments, including the Department of Health, in drawing up the consultation paper and related guidance.

Planning

Mr. Evans: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what weighting PPG3: Housing is to carry in relation to local authorities' development plans in determining planning applications as set out in section 54A of the Town and Country Planning Acts. [132979]

Ms Beverley Hughes: Planning Policy Guidance note 1 advises local planning authorities that > if there are no other material considerations, the application or appeal should be determined in accordance with the development plan but emphasises that plan policies should be relevant and up-to date (para 54).

PPG3 advises that > development plans form the framework within which decisions on proposals for development are taken. It is important that plans are kept up to date and properly reflect national policy guidance.

PPG3 further advises that > in considering planning applications for housing development in the interim, before development plans can be reviewed, local authorities should have regard to the policies contained in this PPG as material considerations which may supersede the policies in their plan (see paras 37–39).

Angela Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what was the performance of the Government Offices for the Regions in 1999–2000 in meeting targets for issuing decisions on called-in planning applications and on recovered appeals following receipt of the Inspector's report; and if he will make a statement. [133689]

Mr. Raynsford: The information is as follows:

i. Called-in applications

Target: issue 80 per cent. of decisions in 13 weeks and 100 per cent. in 20 weeks

Performance: 62 per cent. issued in 13 weeks and 72 per cent. in 20 weeks

ii. Recovered appeals

Target: issue 80 per cent. of decisions in 8 weeks and 100 per cent. in 13 weeks

Performance: 48 per cent. issued in 8 weeks and 57 per cent. in 13 weeks.

The number of call-in and recovery cases—typically, about 150 of each a year—represents a very small proportion of the number of planning applications and appeals dealt with every year. They also tend to be rather more complicated than the generality of planning decisions. Nevertheless, it is clear that, overall, the decision-making process for called-in applications and recovered appeals needs to be expedited. The Department has been reviewing the procedures with a view to improving performance.

Packaging Regulations

Mr. Green: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what estimate he has made of the number of companies who are required to register under the Packaging Regulations and who had not done so by 30 June. [133045]

Mr. Meacher: The number of businesses which are required to register under the Packaging Regulations, and had failed to do so by 30 June 2000, has been estimated by the Environment Agency at between 400 and 650. Work currently being undertaken by the Environment Agency should help to refine that figure later in the year. The majority of those businesses are likely to be smaller ones with an average packaging tonnage of between 100–150 tonnes per annum.

Mr. Green: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what has been the (a) maximum and (b) minimum fine imposed on firms for infringing the Packaging Regulations. [133048]

Mr. Meacher: (a) The maximum fine was £10,000 plus costs and (b) the minimum was zero (unconditional discharge).

Mr. Green: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions how many firms had been successfully prosecuted for infringing the Packaging Regulations by 30 June. [133046]

Mr. Meacher: Sixteen firms have been successfully prosecuted under the Packaging Regulations.

Mr. Green: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what has been the average fine imposed on firms prosecuted for infringing the Packaging Regulations. [133047]

Mr. Meacher: The average fine under the Packaging Regulations is £1,500 plus costs.

Central Railway

Mr. Hammond: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what assessment he has made of the merits of the Central Railway project on its current proposed routing around the south-west quadrant of the M25. [133141]

Mr. Hill: None.

Mr. Hammond: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions (1) if he will meet a delegation of elected representatives from Surrey to discuss the problem of blight created by the proposed Central Railway scheme; [133142]

(2) what steps he plans to take to avoid long-term blight of properties located on or close to the route of the Central Railway proposed freight line through Surrey. [133143]

Mr. Hill: In answer to a Parliamentary Question today, my hon. Friend the Member for Greenwich and Woolwich (Mr. Raynsford), has announced the publication of the report of the Compulsory Purchase Policy Review Advisory Group which, among other things, considers the issue of blight. In his reply, my hon. Friend has invited comments on all the recommendations in the report, and these will then be taken into account in preparing the Government's response setting out our future policy intentions with regard to compulsory purchase issues including blight.

In the meantime, little could be achieved by meeting a delegation to discuss the specific blight problems caused by the proposed Central Railway scheme in Surrey as there are no statutory powers under which any remedy could be provided at this stage in the development of the Company's scheme.

Mr. Hammond: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what assessment he has made of the financial strength of the promoters of the proposed Central Railway scheme and of the likelihood of the project reaching fruition. [133157]

Mr. Hill: None. I understand that Central Railways plc may intend to submit an application under the Transport and Works Act but no such application has yet been received.

London Roads

Mr. Redwood: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what reduction in hourly capacity has been caused by traffic management changes to the A4 Cromwell road in the last three years. [133175]

Mr. Hill: This is a matter for the Mayor of London and Transport for London.

Mr. Redwood: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what has been the increase in car journey times on the M4 eastbound in the morning peak from the M25 to the start of the bus lane, as a result of the introduction of the bus lane. [133176]

Mr. Hill: I have asked the Chief Executive of the Highways Agency, Mr. Peter Nutt, to write to the right hon. Member.

Letter from Peter Nutt to Mr. John Redwood, dated 27 July 2000:

The Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions has asked me to reply to your recent question about the increase in car journey times on the M4 eastbound in the morning peak from the M25 to the start of the bus lane, due to the introduction of the bus lane.

The independent monitoring of the M4 bus lane, which is being undertaken by the Transport Research Laboratory (TRL), has been providing details of the changes in journey times on the M4 between junction 4 and the elevated section. Journey times between the M25 and junction 4 have not been monitored in the same way because traffic conditions here are rarely affected by the introduction of the bus lane. Changes in conditions are due to the general increase in traffic volumes, local increases attributable to growth at Heathrow Airport and Stockley Park, and the consequent operation of the M25/M4 junction, the junction 4 roundabout and the section of road between.

The TRL monitoring for the first year supports the changes in journey times reported after 3 months and which were given in the leaflet that was widely distributed and placed in the Library of the House. I enclose a further copy for your ease of reference. The figures for reductions in journey times between junction 4 and the elevated section, as recorded by TRL for the equivalent October/November 1998 and 1999 periods, are as follows:

Minutes

	Time saved per vehicle
Time of day	Buses and taxis	Other vehicles
06.30–09.30	4.1	1.3
09.30–17.30	–0.7	–0.9
17.30–20.30	2.9	0.6
20.30–06.30	–1.2	–1.0

Weekday

TRL are currently finalising their report for the first year's operation of the scheme, and I have asked that they divide off the journey time changes to give the information for the section between junctions 4 and 3. To clarify the reasons for changes in conditions between the M25 and junction 4, I have also asked TRL to review all of the data routinely obtained from sensors in the carriageway and to include their conclusions in the report. We expect to receive this within a month and I will write again with this information when it is available.

In the meantime, should you wish to discuss this matter further Paul Harwood, the Project Manager for this section of the M4 would be happy to speak to you. His telephone number is 01306 878471.

OSPAR

Mr. Illew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what factors underlay the decision to delay the submission in draft of the United Kingdom discharge strategy to the OSPAR Commission meeting in Denmark in June; and what considerations led to the decision to submit the document to the meeting. [133454]

Mr. Meacher: Publication of the Consultation Document on the UK Strategy for Radioactive Discharges 2001–2020 was not delayed: it was published as soon as possible after the document was finalised. The document was not submitted to the June meeting of the OSPAR Commission but, after publication, copies were circulated to those attending the meeting, since it was relevant to the discussions at the meeting on the implementation of the OSPAR Strategy with regard to Radioactive Substances.

Mr. Gordon Marsden: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions when he will publish the UK contribution to the OSPAR Quality Status report for the Celtic Seas Region. [133612]

Mr. Mullin: I have today published a "Quality Status Report of the Marine and Coastal Areas of the Irish Sea and Bristol Channel". This report was prepared for my Department by the Centre for the Environment, Fisheries and Aquaculture Science (CEFAS) as part of the work involved in preparing the "Quality Status Report of the Celtic Seas" which was launched by the OSPAR Commission on 30 June.

The report published today summarises and evaluates information on the current health of the coastal and marine environment of the Irish Sea and Bristol Channel, and the impact of man's activities upon these areas. The assessment shows that the marine environment of the Irish Sea and Bristol Channel is generally in a good state of health, although it highlights over-fishing, endocrine-disrupting chemicals and the pressure for more intensive use of coastal land as being of particular concern. Its conclusions are relevant to policy considerations and to decisions affecting future developments near the coasts, and to the setting of conservation priorities.

In addition, the Joint Nature Conservation Committee (JNCC) have today published a "Directory of the Celtic Coasts and Seas". This document was commissioned by DETR to complement the OSPAR "Quality Status Report of the Celtic Seas". The Directory describes the physical characteristics of the coastline of the Celtic Seas, the marine influences which affect it and regionally important habitats and species. It also describes the national, European and international measures which have been adopted to protect the natural resources in the area.

Rural Buses

Dr. Strang: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions how much money each local authority received from the Government under the rural bus subsidy scheme in (a) 1998–99 and (b) 1999–2000; and how much each local authority is expected to receive in 2000–01. [132300]

Mr. Hill: My Department is responsible only for Rural Bus Subsidy Grant (RBSG) payments to English local authorities; the figures requested for these authorities are set out in the table. In February this year we announced that RBSG was to continue for a further three years from March 2001. In addition to support under the rural bus subsidy scheme we have also provided £28 million for 104 schemes approved in the first two Rural Bus Challenge competitions in 1998 and 1999; a further £20 million is available for this year's Challenge competition.

The total is less than the £32.5 million allocation because the timing of the Budget announcement, and the need to establish a new grant mechanism, meant that the money was spent over less than a full financial year. The balance was transferred to the 1998 Rural Bus Challenge.

Total payments were slightly less than the full total allocation of £32.5 million because unspent grant from the previous year was carried forward and offset against authorities' allocations. Again the balance was transferred to the Challenge competition for that year.

New Forest

Mr. Swayne: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions (1) if, under his proposals for a New Forest national park, the park authority will have to seek the consent of the Verderers Court before proceeding with any recreational development in the open forest; [132012]

(2) if the Verderers will retain their existing power to prevent recreational development in the open forest under his proposals to create a national park in the New Forest. [132013]

Mr. Mullin: The creation of a National Park in the New Forest would neither repeal nor amend the New Forest Acts, which lay down the powers of the Verderers. A National Park Authority would, therefore, need to obtain any appropriate consent under those Acts before carrying out recreational development. As there would be no change to the New Forest Acts, the Verderers would retain the powers they currently have to prevent development.

Ministerial Duty Roster (Summer)

Mr. Syms: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions if he will publish the daily ministerial duty roster for his Department during the summer adjournment. [133059]

Ms Beverley Hughes: As is the case throughout the year there will be a Minister on duty at all times over the summer.

Private Finance Initiative

Mr. Alan Williams: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions in how many of his Department's PFI contracts KPMG has been an adviser. [132868]

Ms Beverley Hughes: KPMG has acted as financial adviser only to the Highways Agency's A13 Thames Gateway Design Build Finance Operate project, signed in April this year.

Farm Woodland Management

Mr. Alan W. Williams: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions if he will assess the possibility of establishing an intermediary organisation to administer and encourage farm woodland management as a carbon sink to offset the climate change levy for energy-intensive manufacturing companies. [131272]

Mr. Meacher: The Government are already committed to the establishment and sustainable management of woodland for a wide range of public benefits. Advice and grant aid is provided through the Forestry Commission's Woodland Grant Scheme and the Agriculture Department's Farm Woodland Premium Scheme.

Government have already stated that—subject to certain restrictions—companies with emission targets under the climate change levy agreements will be able to use traded emission credits to meet their obligations. This is likely to work through the wider UK Emissions Trading Scheme, under which trades are expected to take place from April next year, alongside the launch of the levy. Under the trading scheme there will be scope for creation of emission credits by projects which reduce greenhouse gas emissions. However, the Government are taking a cautious view on the inclusion of forestry projects in the scheme. There are concerns about the security and permanence of carbon fixed in this way, as well as monitoring and verification issues, that will need to be addressed before such projects can be permitted.

The climate change levy is designed to be revenue neutral for the private sector and, moreover, expected to be broadly neutral between manufacturing and services.

Regional Development Agencies

Ms Atherton: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions if the Regional Development Agencies have prepared annual accounts and reports for 1999–2000; and if he will make a statement. [133601]

Ms Beverley Hughes: The Regional Development Agencies' annual reports and accounts for 1999–2000 have been published today. Copies have been placed in the Library. These cover the period from 1 April 1999 through to 31 March 2000. The Government welcome the continued progress made by Agencies and their commitment to improving the economic regeneration, skills and competitiveness of the regions. The Agencies are producing real benefits for their regions.

Hedges

Mr. Jenkins: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions when he will report on the responses to the consultation paper on high hedges. [133610]

Mr. Mullin: We intend to publish the results from my Department's consultation on possible solutions to the problems caused by high garden hedges, and our decision on the way forward on this issue, during August. I will write to hon. Members with further information when the announcement is made.

Aerodromes and Navigation Facilities

Mr. Paul Clark: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what proposals he has for changes in the arrangements for safeguarding aerodromes and navigation facilities. [133613]

Mr. Mullin: The safeguarding of certain aerodromes and navigation facilities is a process under which local planning authorities are directed to consult the Civil Aviation Authority (CAA) on development proposals which may have consequences for the safe operation of those aerodromes or navigation facilities. The CAA has no powers to prevent development, but where it considers that a proposed development would affect protected airspace it can advise against it. Planning authorities are obliged to take such advice into account in making their decisions.

We consider that it would be more appropriate that those aerodromes which are currently safeguarded by the CAA should be safeguarded by the aerodrome operators themselves. Navigation aids which are provided for aerodrome navigation purposes should also be safeguarded by the aerodrome operator. The CAA will provide full training in this task and, as part of its responsibility for aerodrome licensing, will audit and oversee aerodrome operators' performance of the task.

Where a technical site is owned and operated by NATS, NATS should safeguard the facilities, subject to monitoring by the Authority as part of its regulatory assessment process.

We shall be consulting local government and others concerned about the revision of the departmental circular and the statutory direction. Meanwhile, when a local planning authority consults the CAA about a planning application arising within a safeguarded area, the CAA will obtain the views of the relevant aerodrome on that application and, if it agrees with their views, forward them to the relevant planning authority with an indication of its support for them.

Compulsory Purchase

Mrs. Organ: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions when he intends to publish the recommendations of the advisory group set up to undertake a Fundamental Review of Compulsory Purchase Laws, Procedures and Compensation and the results of the associated research into the operation of the Crichel Down rules. [133614]

Mr. Raynsford: I am pleased to be able to announce that my Department has today published two reports. The first sets out the final recommendations of the advisory group set up in June 1998 to undertake a Fundamental Review of Compulsory Purchase Laws, Procedures and Compensation. The second sets out the findings of Gerald Eve and the University of Reading on the operation of the Crichel Down rules. Copies of both documents have been placed in the Library of the House.

We are publishing the findings of the advisory group in order to give interested parties an opportunity to comment before we in Government prepare our own response. The response will also take into account the many views which we have already received, including those from the Urban Task Force, on ways in which the compulsory purchase system might be improved. It is unlikely that any compulsory purchase arrangements could please everyone, but I welcome this opportunity for debate both to help clarify key concerns and to indicate the level of consensus likely to be achievable.

The advisory group have said that they consider that the current compulsory purchase arrangements are basically sound. However, they have identified a number of ways in which the existing procedures could be speeded up and the compensation provisions made simpler, more equitable and quicker to apply.

They also explored the scope for using existing compulsory purchase powers for regeneration purposes. The group concluded that, although local authorities could make greater use of their existing powers than most of them currently seem prepared to do, there would be advantage in clarifying the position by making an appropriate specific statutory provision.

The group found no justification for making any additional blanket payments over and above market value to compensate for the compulsory purchase of all properties, but they do suggest a proposal for "business-loss" payments aimed at small businesses and payable on a similar basis to the current "home-loss" payments. They also propose a power for those whose property is being compulsorily acquired which would enable them to serve the equivalent of a "notice to treat" on the acquiring authority; and one of their suggestions is that acquiring authorities should have explicit powers to ensure that, in tightly defined circumstances in areas where local collapses in the property market have resulted in very low open market values, owner-occupiers can be provided with adequate replacement housing.

Turning to the operation of the Crichel Down rules, the Government acknowledge the shortcomings which the researchers have identified. They have confirmed the suspicions, which led to the commissioning of the research, that the current arrangements are not working well and, again, we need to establish a dialogue. We therefore invite views not only on the detailed operation of the rules but also on such fundamental concepts as the purpose of the rules, whether they are needed at all and, if so, whether they should be statutory and to which bodies they should apply.

We look forward to receiving views on the two reports. All comments received by my Department by Friday 13 October 2000 will be taken into account in preparing the Government's response. That will represent the second stage of the Fundamental Review and, as a third stage, we will then consult formally on those proposals.

Thames Ditton Lawn Tennis Club

Mr. Casale: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what action he proposes to take following the court's decision in the Thames Ditton Lawn Tennis Club case. [133615]

Mr. Raynsford: My Department has today issued a consultation paper inviting views on whether to introduce controls over the demolition of sports buildings. The paper proposes that a planning application should in future be required for the demolition of buildings used for sporting purposes and for essential ancillary purposes, where no planning permission exists for the redevelopment of the site.

The proposals issued today are designed to safeguard local sports facilities. This small but important measure further underlines the Government's commitment to creating sporting opportunities for everyone, as set out in our sports strategy "A Sporting Future for All", which was issued jointly by the Department for Culture, Media and Sport and the Department for Education and Employment in April 2000.

The consultation paper is being sent to a wide range of planning and sports bodies. Comments are requested by 27 October 2000. Copies of the consultation paper have been placed in the Library.

Planning Inspector's Annual Report

Angela Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions when he expects to publish the Planning Inspector's annual report and accounts for 1999–2000. [133616]

Mr. Raynsford: PINS has a key role to play in taking forward our modernising planning agenda. I am therefore very pleased to say that the Inspectorate has met all but one of the targets set for its work in England. Its annual report for 1999–2000, which is published today, shows that its performance delivered an improvement upon the timeliness targets for handling planning appeals. It has maintained the high standard for development plan inquiries, thereby helping to create a greater certainty for all involved in the planning process as more areas are covered by up to date development plans.

The agency continues to meet its 3 per cent. efficiency target. On-going investment in staff development and IT systems have improved performance and service to customers. The Inspectorate's website was re-launched in March and now covers a wide range of information to assist users of the planning system. Surveys show that the Inspectorate's handling of appeals and its decisions are widely respected. Its quality target was not just met but exceeded.

Copies of the annual report have been placed in the Library.

Supporting People Programme

Mr. Prosser: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions when he will make further information available on the structure and resourcing of the Supporting People programme. [133617]

Mr. Raynsford: I will on Monday publish a further consultation paper on the Supporting People programme. This paper, "Decision Making and Working Arrangements", is published jointly by my Department, the Department of Health, and the Home Office, and sets out our proposals on how the scheme should work, following discussions with the consultative groups who are helping develop the detail of the scheme.

The paper sets out:

The need to provide clear guidance to those authorities who are inexperienced in managing supported housing, in order to prevent undermining the existing good quality services;

The need to involve the expert authorities and practitioners in the development of this guidance;

That the Supporting People strategy will have to be agreed by a partnership group including Health, Probation, and in a county, all the districts, and that the county will be responsible for managing this process in two-tier authorities. Elected Members will approve the strategy;

That sheltered housing tenants, and other tenants in long stay supported accommodation, have a legitimate expectation of security of tenure and continuity of support services;

That administrative arrangements are very important. We propose a common system of information be held, and are exploring what IT support may be appropriate;

A schematic project plan which authorities should use to drive the programme forward.

We are seeking responses to this paper by 15 October 2000.

I am also pleased to say that we will be providing £140 million of revenue funding over three years to enable authorities to implement the Supporting People programme. We are talking to the LGA and their partners about the detail of how these funds will be distributed, but intend to invite authorities to set out their first year preparation plans as a trigger for the first payments. The table sets out the funding for each of the next three years.

London Underground

Mr. Love: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions if he will publish details of London Underground Limited's performance in 1999–2000. [133692]

Mr. Hill: The table shows a comparison of London Underground Limited's performance in 1999–2000 with that in 1998–99. It also shows the performance targets that London Underground have been set to achieve by the end of 2000–01.

National Bus Company Pensioners

Ms Rosie Winterton: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions, pursuant to his answer of 21 July 2000, Official Report, column 357W, if he will make a statement on the outcome of the court hearing on further interim payments to National Bus Company pensioners. [133761]

Mr. Hill: I am pleased to be able to say that I have been informed by the National Bus Company pension trustees that the hearing cleared the way for them to make tax-free interim lump sum payments to some 8,500 pensioners who were members of the BEST pension scheme and who began receiving a Standard Life pension after April 1986. This is of course in addition to the other interim payments referred to in my earlier answer.

The trustees will be making these payments as soon as possible.

Social Exclusion Unit

Mr. Fabian Hamilton: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what research the Social Exclusion Unit has undertaken on the views of people living in deprived areas towards public services. [133775]

Ms Armstrong: Earlier this year, as part of its work on developing the National Strategy for Neighbourhood Renewal, the Social Exclusion Unit commissioned MORI to re-analyse the first wave of People's Panel data in order to assess attitudes to various services held by people living in deprived and non-deprived areas. This report will be published through the next People's Panel newsletter, which is due to be issued at the end of August/beginning of September. At the same time, copies of the summary of the report will also be put on to the People's Panel website and full copies of the report will be placed in the Libraries in both Houses.

Local Government Procurement

Mr. Terry Davis: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what plans he has to strengthen local government's capacity to develop modern procurement practices. [133777]

Ms Armstrong: I have today announced the establishment of a joint DETR/Local Government Association taskforce to review commissioning and procurement in local government in the light of the requirements of Best Value.

The taskforce will be chaired by Sir Ian Byatt, who is retiring this month as Director General of Water Services; the vice-chair will be Sarah Wood, Director of Finance at Birmingham City Council.

The review will cover the procurement of goods, works and services. It will address directly the role of modern procurement practice in delivering best value. It is expected to recommend practical measures which local authorities can take to secure real benefits to local people from efficient and effective procurement.

The review will consider ways of giving effect to the Government's objectives on electronic and green procurement. It will also take into account the findings of the Gershon review of civil procurement in central government, the second Bates review of PPP/PFI, the Construction Industry Taskforce report "Rethinking Construction" and the work of the Public Sector Productivity Panel.

The taskforce is expected to start work in September and will publish a report and recommendations next spring. In October, the chairman will set out the taskforce's full membership, its working methods and the procedure for making written submissions.

Nuclear Research

Mr. Chaytor: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what research has been commissioned by the Environment Agency, in the context of its current review of authorisations of Sellafield discharges, into (a) the use of Magnox fuel in Magnox reactors, (b) the construction of a new head-end plant at Thorp and (c) dry storage technologies. [117164]

Mr. Meacher [holding answer 11 April 2000]: I understand that the Environment Agency has not commissioned research into the use of Magnox fuel in Magnox reactors or into dry storage techniques. However as part of the current Sellafield review, the agency is requiring BNFL to asses whether it would be practicable to modify the Thermal Oxide Reprocessing Plan (THORP) to enable it to reprocess spent Magnox fuel.

GM Crops

Mr. Alan Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what data has been collected from the field trials of genetically-modified crops in respect of (a) cross pollination with (i) non-GM crops and (ii) wild flora, (b) distance measurements of GM drift, (c) impact upon insect life within test and adjacent sites and (d) sub-spoil impact assessments; and in what form the data is available for scrutiny. [119112]

Mr. Meacher: The information is as follows:

(i) My Department, through a research contract with the National Institute of Agricultural Botany, has been monitoring field trials of GM herbicide tolerant oil seed rape for cross pollination with neighbouring crops and wild relatives since 1995. Last year the two fields of spring sown rape grown as part of the farm scale evaluations were included in this study. Some of the results from earlier years have already been published in scientific journals and a full report will be published later this year.

(ii) GM pollen drift is being measured between both the GM and non-GM sides of the fields of rape and maize in the farm scale evaluations and fields of these crops growing within a 1000 metre radius of the GM crop. In addition since 1993 all the sites at which research trials of GM crops have been grown and their immediate environs have been checked in subsequent years for 'GM volunteers'. Reports of this monitoring are available on the public register held in the Department.

(iii) and (iv) Data in respect of impact on insect life and the sub-soil are being collected during the farm scale evaluations. The data will be reviewed by the Scientific Steering Committee overseeing the evaluations and submitted for publication as soon as possible in peer reviewed scientific journals. The research consortium has already published two reports on progress with the evaluations and more will follow at six-monthly intervals.

Joan Ruddock: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions when he intends to publish the first results, including interim data, from the farm-scale evaluations of GM crops under way in the UK. [120719]

Mr. Meacher [holding answer 3 May 2000]: The design of the farm scale evaluations requires data to be collected over a three-year period to give a big enough sample size to allow statistically valid conclusions to be drawn. The Scientific Steering Committee therefore takes the view that it is unlikely that sufficient data will be available for scientifically reliable results to be published until late 2002 for the spring sown crops and late 2003 for the autumn sown crops.

The Scientific Steering Committee and the research contractors have agreed that reports on progress with the evaluations should be prepared and published at six-monthly intervals. Two interim reports have already been agreed by the committee and published by the research consortium. A further report on progress with the evaluations will be published in late 2000. This will include analysis and assessment of the study protocols and the validity of data obtained this year.

The research consortium will also shortly be submitting for publication in a scientific journal information on the design of the evaluations including the statistical power to detect potential differences.

Joan Ruddock: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions if he has (a) been, and (b) asked to be, informed of the locations in the United Kingdom where Advanta Seeds UK's conventional rapeseed sown in 1999 and 2000 contained genetically modified rapeseed; and if he will place copies of written information in his possession on such locations in the Library. [126172]

Mr. Meacher [holding answer 15 June 2000]: The presence of the GM seed was not discovered until this year and therefore no action has been taken to find out where it was sown in 1999.

Officials from the Ministry of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food have written to all farmers who have sown the relevant Hyola varieties this year, to clarify the subsidy position and inform them that if they received seed from the specific batches that were affected, their crops must not be marketed in the EU.

Advanta have put in place their own arrangements to identify and compensate farmers and the Government's inspectors, the Central Science Laboratory (CSL), will audit these arrangements to ensure that none of the affected oil seed rape enters the food chain.

In light of these measures, and in light of the advice that the growing of these seeds does not pose a threat to human health or the environment, I have not been, or asked to be, informed of the exact locations where the affected Advanta seeds were sown.

Byker Heat Station, Newcastle

Mr. Cousins: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions if he will place in the Library the annual approved discharge limit and the annual actual known discharge limit of dioxins from the Byker Heat Station, Newcastle for each year since 1985. [125139]

Mr. Hill [holding answer 12 June 2000]: The plant was not authorised under the Environmental Protection Act 1990 until March 1993 and annual returns were not required by the authorisation until March 1994.

The Annual Mass Emission Limit for dioxins has remained at 30g since that first authorisation. The actual reported discharges of dioxins against this limit were:

April 1993-March 1994: 0.147g

April 1994-March 1995: 0.1g

April 1995-March 1996: 0.117g

April 1996-March 1997: 0.131g

January 1997-December 1998: 0.0955g

January 1999-December 1999: 0.016g.

The Annual Mass Emission Limit appears higher than needed. However, in practice this limit is not used for day to day regulation of the authorised process by the Environment Agency. In line with current Agency guidance (S2 5.01 on Waste Incineration), the process is controlled and limited by reference to the concentration of dioxins released to the air. The authorisation sets an emission concentration of 1.0 ng/m^3 TEQ (Toxic Equivalent), which is a far tighter control parameter than is implied by the 30g mass limit. Tests on the plant in the years 1994 to 1999 have shown concentrations between 0.22 and 0.76 ng/m^3.

The Environment Agency is considering the introduction of a 0.1 ng/m^3 limit which could be considered to be BATNEEC (Best Available Technique Not Entailing Excessive Cost) for existing incinerators, and could therefore be achieved under existing legislation. The Environment Agency also advise that they will in future authorisations for industrial plant reduce the limit in the authorisation to 0.1ng/m^3, in line with the proposed EC Waste Incineration Directive and their current guidance on new plant.

Admiralty Arch

Mr. Robathan: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions (1) if he will list the fixtures and fittings ordered for his residence in Admiralty Arch since May 1997, with particular reference to carpets; and if he will estimate the cost of them; [129361]

(2) what refurbishment work (a) is under-way and (b) has been completed in the flat which he occupies in Admiralty Arch; and what is his estimate of the costs of such work since May 1997. [129360]

Ms Beverley Hughes: The flat occupied by the Deputy Prime Minister at Admiralty House was completely renovated and refurbished in 1997 and partly recarpeted this year. The total cost was £99,936 of which £11,139 + VAT was for carpets.

M11 Link Road

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions if he will provide a detailed breakdown of the final cost of the M11 Link Road, separately identifying each consultant's fees relating to the M11 Link Road and indicating the purpose for which these were paid. [131687]

Mr. Hill: Responsibility for this scheme, together with the relevant papers, passed to Transport for London on 3 July.

This is a matter for Transport for London to decide on as the contracts and the consultant's duties are continuing. Until the final accounts for the main works contracts have been settled and the consultant's duties have been completed, it is not possible to give the final cost of fees. It would prejudice the ability to negotiate settlement of contracts if a detailed breakdown of estimated final cost is provided before the negotiations are complete. A detailed breakdown will be available when the final cost of the A12 Hackney to M11 Link Road is known.

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what the basis was for calculating the £15 million estimate for local compensation in relation to the M11 Link Road. [131688]

Mr. Hill: The estimate was made by the Highways Agency's professional adviser using the best information on land and property values available at the time. Responsibility for this scheme, together with the relevant papers, passed to Transport for London on 3 July.

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what measures his Department has taken to ensure that there has not been unreasonable profit-taking in the last 12 months of contracts for the M11 Link Road; and if he will make a statement. [131689]

Mr. Hill: Under the Institute of Civil Engineers (ICE) Conditions of Contracts used on this scheme, the value of the works is determined by an independent engineer, not by the contractor. The Highways Agency's quantity Surveyor makes regular visits to the site offices to ensure the works are being valued in accordance with the contract. Responsibility for this scheme, together with the relevant papers passed to Transport for London on 3 July.

Paint (Volatile Solvents)

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what assessment he has made of potential health hazards arising from paints containing a high amount of volatile solvents; and if he will make a statement. [131685]

Mr. Meacher: High exposures to any number of solvents can be damaging to health. Most hazardous solvents used at work, including paints, have specific occupational exposure limits set after detailed scientific reviews of their health effects. Employers using any hazardous solvent must follow the requirements of the Control of Substances Hazardous to Health Regulations 1999.

The safety of chemical products, including paint, sold to the general public or used at work is regulated by the Chemicals (Hazard Information and Packaging for Supply) Regulations 1994 which require, among other things, that product manufacturers must assess a product for its health effects (for example, toxicity, irritancy). If dangerous, the product must then be labelled with a warning symbol and with phrases indicating the dangers. The particular chemical(s) which causes the product to be classified must also be named on the label.

The regulations require that all potentially dangerous chemicals supplied to the general public must be in packaging which is properly labelled and contains warning about the potential hazards and giving brief advice on suitable precautions. Manufacturers would also, if relevant, be required to give details of how to use the product safely. Chemicals used at work must be supplied with a safety data sheet.

Green Ministers

Mr. Llew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions, pursuant to his answer to the hon. Member for Elmet of 13 July 2000, Official Report, columns 631–32W, for what reasons (a) the Treasury, Home Office and Department of Social Security were not represented by Ministers at the Green Ministers Meeting and (b) the Cabinet Office, Prime Minister's Office, Department for Education and Employment, Wales Office, Scotland Office, Northern Ireland Office and Ministry of Defence were not represented at the meeting. [132016]

Mr. Meacher: Green Ministers from Treasury, Department of Social Security, Cabinet Office, Department for Education and Employment and Ministry of Defence were engaged on official business elsewhere. The Green Minister for the Home Office had an unavoidable private engagement. All but the Department for Education and Employment and Ministry of Defence were represented by officials. The Wales Office, Scotland Office, Northern Ireland Office and Prime Minister's Office receive papers for meetings but only attend on an ad hoc basis.

Brownfield Land

Mr. Sheerman: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions how many hectares of contaminated brownfield land were identified in the UK in (a) 1970, (b) 1980, (c) 1990 and (d) 2000. [132106]

Mr. Mullin: Estimates of the amount of contaminated land are not available. The amounts of derelict land in England were recorded in the Derelict Land Surveys. These defined derelict land 'land so damaged by industrial or other developments that is incapable of beneficial use without treatment.' Not all derelict land is necessarily contaminated.

The Derelict Land Surveys show that the area of derelict land in England amounted to 43,273 hectares in 1974, 45,683 hectares in 1982, 40,500 hectares in 1998 and 39,600 hectares in 1993.

The National Land Use Database provides 1998 estimates for England of all previously developed land that is unused or may be available for redevelopment. The total of 57,710 hectares includes some 19,340 hectares of derelict land. This figure is lower than the 1993 estimate partly because of reclamation and partly due to the exclusion of some derelict land that has blended back into the natural landscape and was considered to have limited development potential.

Sellafield

Mr. Chaytor: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what assessment he has made of the cost and effectiveness of (a) retrofitting dry store facilities to magnox reactors and (b) using dry store canisters, in his consideration of the closure process for the magnox reprocessing line at Sellafield. [130871]

Mr. Meacher [holding answer 24 July 2000]: I refer my hon. Friend to the answer given by my right hon. Friend the Minister for Energy and Competitiveness in Europe on 25 July 2000, Official Report, column 518W.

Post Offices

Ms Walley: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what discretion the DVLA has in respect of authorising post offices to issue motor vehicle licences; and if he will make a statement. [132416]

Mr. Hill: DVLA's contract with Post Office Network Banking (PONB) requires a 4,000 strong network of motor vehicle licence issuing offices throughout the country. DVLA does not select or authorise the individual offices, that is the responsibility of PONB. DVLA does not have the necessary knowledge of the various catchment areas and characteristics of individual post offices to assess potential demand.

Road System

Mr. Hunter: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions if it is his policy to use quieter surfacing when resurfacing the M3 between junctions five and seven becomes necessary. [132344]

Mr. Hill [holding answer 24 July 2000]: Our 10 year strategy for transport, Transport 2010—The 10 Year Plan, has been published and sets out proposals for dealing with road noise, including the provision of quieter surfaces on over 60 per cent. of the network, including all concrete surfaces.

I have asked the Highways Agency to draw up a programme for all such trunk roads for agreement. Junctions five to seven of the M3 will be included in this programme.

Mr. Sanders: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions (1) how many bypasses will be constructed during the course of the Transport 2010 10 year plan within (a) the strategic road network and (b) other routes; and if he will make a statement; [132507]

(2) what public funding will be available for the construction of bypasses outside the strategic road network in the next 10 years. [132508]

Mr. Hill: The Secretary of State announced last Thursday our 10 year plan, Transport 2010, setting out the resources to be made available to fund our integrated transport policies. Included in the plan is funding which will allow 30 bypasses on the core network, at a cost of around £600 million, and over 70 bypasses on the local road network to be built over the 10-year period. Specific schemes will need to be brought forward through the regional planning system in the case of trunk roads or the local transport plan system in the case of local roads. Schemes will also have to be appraised using the New Approach to Appraisal.

Mr. Luff: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions if he will instruct the Highways Agency to resurface the A46 at Harvington, Worcestershire, with a low-noise road surface. [131835]

Mr. Hill: Our ten year strategy for transport, "Transport 2010—The 10 Year Plan", has been published and sets out proposals for dealing with road noise, including the provision of quieter surfaces on over 60 per cent. of the network, including all concrete surfaces.

I have asked the Highways Agency to draw up a programme for all such trunk roads for agreement. The A46 at Harvington will be included in this programme.

Mr. Luff: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions if he will instruct the Highways Agency to resurface the M5 at Whittington, Worcestershire, with a low-noise road surface. [131834]

Mr. Hill [holding answer 25 July 2000]: Our ten year strategy for transport, "Transport 2010—The 10 Year Plan", has been published and sets out proposals for dealing with road noise, including the provision of quieter surfaces on over 60 per cent. of the network, including all concrete surfaces.

I have asked the Highways Agency to draw up a programme for all such trunk roads for agreement. The M5 at Whittington will be included in this programme.

Mr. McLoughlin: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what the nature was of the test carried out on the A30 before the decision was taken to resurface it on account of noise nuisance; and how much the resurfacing work will cost. [132650]

Mr. Hill [holding answer 25 July 2000]: The tests comprised a period of continuous noise monitoring at six locations agreed with the "Resurface the A30" Campaign Group, in order to compare the actual noise levels with those predicted at the Public Inquiry into the scheme.

Our 10-year strategy for transport, "Transport 2010—The 10 Year Plan", has been published and sets out proposals for dealing with road noise, including the provision of quieter surfaces on over 60 per cent. of the network, including all concrete surfaces.

I have asked the Highways Agency to draw up a programme for all such trunk roads for agreement. The A30 Honiton to Exeter Improvement will be included in this programme.

Mr. McLoughlin: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions if he will carry out noise tests on the A50 at Doveridge, Derbyshire; what estimate he has made of the cost of resurfacing that section of the road; and if he will instruct the Highways Agency to carry out this work. [132651]

Mr. Hill [holding answer 25 July 2000]: As part of the 10-year Plan for Transport announced last week, we will resurface all concrete-surfaced trunk roads with quieter materials.

I have asked the Highways Agency to draw up a programme for all such trunk roads for agreement. The A50 at Doveridge will be included in this programme. No detailed estimate of the cost of resurfacing the A50 at Doveridge exists.

Millennium Dome

Mr. Paul Clark: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions when he plans to announce the winning bid for the future of the Millennium Dome at Greenwich. [133774]

Mr. David Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions when he plans to announce the winning bid for the future use of the Millennium Dome at Greenwich. [133776]

Ms Armstrong: Dome Europe has won the competition to take over the Dome when the Millennium Experience ends on 31 December. We believe their proposals will deliver a high quality, innovative and economically sustainable long-term future for the Dome, of which the people of Greenwich and the United Kingdom can be proud.

The proposals will build on the remarkable achievements in constructing the Dome and delivering the Millennium Experience this year. Provision of a world-class visitor attraction will continue, and will benefit from Dome Europe's investment of around £400 million in the core Dome site over the next five years.

In supporting the Dome's transition from the current Millennium Experience to another major visitor destination, Dome Europe is proposing to create an urban entertainment resort, through a combination of uses inside the Dome and on adjacent land. The latter will include hotels, a convention centre, commercial leisure, restaurants, residential units, offices, retail and community facilities. While the proposals are all subject to the granting of planning permission, and much work remains to be done to complete the sale of the site, we are confident that Dome Europe's proposals will deliver an exciting contribution to the continued regeneration of the Greenwich Peninsula.

We have further decided that of the overall consideration for the sale of the Millennium Dome (details of which must remain commercially confidential at this stage), some £53 million should be paid to the New Millennium Experience Company from total expected early payments from the competition of £105 million. There is also provision for additional payment for land value in certain circumstances and a share of profits if and when the business changes hands. The remainder of this total amount, after meeting third party commitments, will go to English Partnerships. In reaching this view we took account of the benefits to the Greenwich Peninsula and the Thames Gateway in terms of continuity of jobs and assured future private investment in the site, building on the substantial public investment already made—more than one billion pounds—towards major environmental, transport and other improvements on the Peninsula.

AGRICULTURE, FISHERIES AND FOOD

Wild Salmon

12. Mr. Cousins: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what steps he is taking to protect wild salmon from the consequences of salmon farming. [131275]

Mr. Morley: In the UK salmon farming takes place almost entirely in Scotland. There is no evidence that it is adversely affecting salmon stocks of English origin.

Pig Industry

13. Mr. David Taylor: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food when he plans to open the pig industry restructuring scheme to applicants. [131276]

Ms Quin: As I have said previously, the outgoers element of the pig industry restructuring scheme will be opened to applicants immediately following European Commission clearance of the scheme.

19. Miss McIntosh: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what recent discussions he has had with the European Commission about state aids for pig farmers. [131282]

Ms Quin: Ministers and officials in MAFF have frequent formal and informal meetings with European Commissioners and Commission staff. The Pig Industry Restructuring Scheme and the welfare linked pigmeat promotion campaign, both UK state aids in the pig sector, have featured prominently in recent discussions.

Beef Ban

14. Mr. Hoyle: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food how many countries have lifted bans on British beef since 1 May 1997. [131277]

Ms Quin: The critical date is 1 August 1999 when the EU ban on the export of British beef was lifted for beef produced under the Date-based Export Scheme. Since then 26 countries have informed us that they have lifted their import bans. We have ascertained that a total of 81 countries do not have import bans.

Fur Farming (Prohibition) Bill

15. Mr. Crausby: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what representations he has received concerning the Fur Farming (Prohibition) Bill. [131278]

Mr. Morley: In excess of 3,000 representations have been received about the Bill. All but a few have been from members of the public and animal welfare organisations supporting the banning of fur farming.

Bovine TB

16. Mrs. Organ: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will make a statement on the report of the independent Husbandry Panel on TB and cattle husbandry. [131279]

Ms Quin: We welcome the report of the independent Husbandry Panel on TB and cattle husbandry which was published on 16 May and we are considering its findings in consultation with the Independent Scientific Group on Cattle TB, the TB Forum and other interested parties.

Mr. Andrew George: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what assessment he has made of the co-operation among (a) farmers and (b) others in the proactive cull sites in the MAFF bovine TB trial areas with those carrying out the trials. [131762]

Ms Quin [holding answer 24 July 2000]: Co-operation by farmers and landowners with the badger culling trial is very good and participation is in excess of 80 per cent. of those approached to participate. There has been some interference with the trial by protesters, which we deplore. The trial design allows for these factors and the Independent Scientific Group overseeing the trial has advised that it remains on course to produce valid conclusions about whether and in what circumstances badger culling can help reduce TB in cattle.

Mr. Andrew George: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food how many badgers have been killed in each of the eight identified MAFF trial triplet areas so far identified in the (a) reactive and (b) proactive cull sites. [131760]

Ms Quin [holding answer 24 July 2000]: Culling of badgers has begun in five triplets. The data for completed operations as at 20 July 2000 is shown in the table:

	Number of badgers culled
Triplet	Proactive area	Reactive area
Gloucester/Hereford	55	0
Devon/Cornwall	323	73
East Cornwall	246	128
North Wiltshire	602	0
West Cornwall	451	0

EU Enlargement

17. Dr. Naysmith: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what recent discussions he has had with his counterparts in Central and Eastern Europe concerning the effect of enlargement of the European Union on agriculture. [131280]

Ms Quin: Since the beginning of the year, my ministerial colleagues and I have held discussions with our counterparts from Poland, Hungary, the Czech and Slovak Republics, Latvia, Bulgaria and Romania.

Organic Farming

18. Mr. Rendel: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food how many farmers applied in each of the last three years for grants from the Organic Farming Scheme. [131281]

Mr. Morley: The number of farmers that applied for grants under the Organic Aid Scheme in these years is as follows:

1997–98: 216

1998–99: 222

1999–2000: 3.

The Organic Farming Scheme attracted 1,214 applications between its introduction in April 1999 and its temporary suspension in November 1999.

Dairy Calves

21. Mr. Paterson: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will make a statement on the situation relating to male dairy calves. [131284]

Ms Quin: The Government recognise that the market for male dairy calves is depressed. Following the ending of the CPAS, (which put an artificial floor to the male dairy calf market at the expense of beef finishers), prices have fallen and remain at a low level. However the Government are supporting a number of initiatives to try to improve the market.

Livestock Farming

22. Mr. Gray: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will make a statement on the Government's economic objectives for livestock farming in the coming year. [131285]

Ms Quin: The Government have a strategy which focuses on helping farmers become more competitive and more sustainable in the medium and long term, while it is also providing short-term relief for those sectors which are particularly hard hit by the present economic difficulties in the agricultural sector.

Dairy Production

23. Mr. Swayne: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what estimate he has made of the productive capacity of the dairy industry over the next year. [131286]

Ms Quin: The UK's milk production capacity is constrained by the milk quota system. The UK's current allocation of quota is 14.2 billion litres. Although current milk production is running at a little below the seasonal profile, at this stage of the year there is no reason to believe that the UK production will not be close to its quota allocation, as has been the case in previous years.

Regulation (Farm Incomes and Operating Costs)

24. Mr. Fabricant: To ask the Minister or Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what assessment he has made of the impact of Government regulation on agriculture with respect to farm (a) incomes and (b) operating costs. [131287]

Ms Quin: All regulations affecting business costs are subject to a Regulatory Impact Assessment and these are published. Most recently, and in addition to earlier cuts, farm incomes will be saved some £30 million by the removal or freezing of charges imposed by certain regulations announced in the Action Plan for Farming. Operating costs are helped where we can save farmers' time through simplified forms and census requirements, co-ordinated inspections and the move towards electronic forms.

Dairy Regime

25. Mr. Best: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what his priorities are for the next reform of the common agricultural policy dairy regime. [131288]

Ms Quin: The Government's priorities for the reform of the dairy regime are clear—we want an orderly removal of milk quotas in combination with a reduction in EU support prices to world levels. We will press the European Commission and our EU partners for this in the run up to the review of the regime in 2003.

BSE

26. Mr. Pike: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what progress has been made in identifying the reason for the most recently announced BSE case. [131289]

Ms Quin: Although our investigations are not quite complete, we are unlikely to discover sufficient further information which will lead us to form a definite conclusion on the cause of infection in this case.

Investigations now indicate that the mother died suddenly on the farm in mid-November 1996 and that it was not slaughtered as a casualty in November 1996 as previously thought. The farm was a mixed dairy and pig fattening enterprise. I am still unable to rule out infection by maternal transmission or infection by accidental exposure to infected feed. In so far as the investigations can determine, the animal had not been vaccinated as a calf or exposed to organophosphates or oestrus synchronisation using pituitary extracts. There is no evidence of any other likely source of infection.

Any further significant information will, however, be published on the MAFF BSE internet site.

Fisheries Regulations

27. Mr. Andrew George: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what assessment he has made of recent industry proposals for the reform of fisheries regulations. [131290]

Mr. Morley: The Government have welcomed the document issued jointly by the National Federation of Fishermen's Organisations and Scottish Fishermen's Federation, "Zonal management: a new vision for Europe's fisheries" as a helpful and constructive contribution to the debate on how to secure an improved regional dimension to the Common Fisheries Policy (CFP). The document contains a number of useful ideas for ensuring increased involvement by fishermen and other stakeholders in fisheries management and a greater focus on issues at the regional level. It builds upon the recent experience gained with the regional consultations which underpinned the development of the Irish Sea cod recovery programme. The Government will take the industry's ideas fully into account in further developing its approach to the 2002 review of the CFP.

Dolphins

Mr. Nigel Jones: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food (1) how many dolphins have been (a) killed and (b) injured as a result of fishing in United Kingdom coastal areas in each of the last five years for which figures are available; [130375]

(2) what recent estimates he has made of the dolphin population in United Kingdom coastal areas; and what guidelines he has issued to the fisheries industry regarding dolphins and their protection. [130376]

Mr. Morley: Information on the full extent of dolphin casualties caused by fishing is not available. MAFF is funding a research programme to obtain better information on by-catch figures.

The Sea Mammal Research Unit (SMRU) estimate, on the basis of 1994 data, that there are some 75,000 Common dolphins and 12,000 White-Sided and White-Beaked dolphins in the Celtic and North Seas. No information is available for populations of Risso's or Striped dolphins in these areas or any of these species elsewhere. Estimates however indicate discrete populations of Bottlenose dolphins of up to 350 in Cardigan Bay and 130 in the Moray Firth.

Pilot projects are currently being carried out on gear modification and acoustic pingers. Following evaluation appropriate action will be taken.

Pesticides Tax

Mr. Alan Simpson: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will list the (a) representations he has received and (b) meetings he has held on the proposed pesticides tax with the (i) British Agrochemicals Association, (ii) UKASTA, (iii) NOAH, (iv) the National Farmers Union, (v) Country Landowners Association and (vi) agrochemicals companies indicating which companies. [131105]

Ms Quin: MAFF Ministers meet from time to time with the organisations listed and discussions typically cover a range of issues.

The Government have received a number of representations on a possible pesticides tax and on a voluntary package of measures to reduce the environmental impact of pesticides use.

The Department of the Environment, Transport and the Regions (DETR) has just completed a period of consultation on a formal set of voluntary proposals published by the British Agrochemicals Association. DETR wished to receive the views of all interested parties on these proposals and their effectiveness in tackling the environmental impacts of pesticides use.

Animal Carcases (Disposal)

Mr. Gareth Thomas: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will seek to amend European Commission proposals relating to the disposal of animal carcases on farm land. [131599]

Ms Quin: The European Commission has not yet formally presented its proposals for revising the Animal Waste Directive to the Council of Ministers and the European Parliament. However, in preliminary discussions officials have advanced the view that a complete ban on the burial of fallen stock in all circumstances would not be practicable.

Farmers' Grants (Shrewsbury and Atcham)

Mr. Paul Marsden: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will list the total grants paid to farmers in Shrewsbury and Atcham for each year since 1992 for the (a) beef industry, (b) sheep industry, (c) pig industry, (d) poultry industry and (e) arable sector; and if he will make a statement. [131709]

Ms Quin: Information at lower than county level is available only at disproportionate cost.

Farmers (Ribble Valley)

Mr. Evans: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will list the type and amount of farm aid which has been given to farmers in the Ribble Valley in each year since 1994. [131644]

Ms Quin [holding answer 24 July 2000]: Information at lower than county level is available only at disproportionate cost.

Mr. Evans: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food how many farm holdings there were in the Ribble Valley in each year since 1994. [131671]

Ms Quin [holding answer 24 July 2000]: The requested figures are provided in the following table:

Farm holdings within the Ribble Valley

	Number
1994	835
1995	802
1996	798
1997	793
1998	809
1999	812

The above data were taken from the June Agricultural and Horticultural Census and relate to main holdings only

Organic Food Standards

Mr. Breed: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if the British Egg Industry Council will be consulted prior to the finalisation of the United Kingdom Register of Organic Food Standards standards on organic livestock products. [132639]

Mr. Morley: I understand that UKROFS has already taken into account the concerns of the British Egg Industry Council about its proposed standards, which will shortly be considered by Ministers.

Mr. Breed: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if the British Egg Industry Council was consulted on further proposals concerning the egg industry made by the United Kingdom Register of Organic Food Standards on 30 May. [132637]

Mr. Morley: The British Egg Industry Council was included in the list of consultees whose comments were sought by UKROFS on their proposals for implementing Council Regulation (EC) 1804/1999, which were issued on 10 April. In the light of responses to the initial consultation, UKROFS subsequently consulted organic producers, through the organic inspection bodies with which they are registered, on amendments to the proposals.

Mr. Breed: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food for what reason the United Kingdom Register of Organic Food Standards has made proposals concerning organic livestock and livestock products for standards which go beyond those required by European Council Regulation 1804/1999. [132638]

Mr. Morley: UKROFS has made a limited number of such proposals, which are permitted by Council Regulation (EC) 1804/1999. In some cases UKROFS has done so in order to carry forward existing UK organic standards and in others because it believes it necessary to do so in order to maintain consumer confidence in organic standards.

Parliamentary Questions

Mr. Stunell: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food how many written parliamentary questions were tabled to his Department between 19 October 1999 and 20 April 2000 which requested information, pursuant to his previous answers. [132137]

Mr. Morley [holding answer 24 July 2000]: For the period in question, 35 parliamentary questions were tabled to my Department which requested information pursuant to previous answers out of a total of 1,189 questions.

Organophosphates

Mr. Curry: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what the date was of the most recent meeting of the Veterinary Products Committee at which the availability of organophosphate sheep dips was discussed. [132450]

Ms Quin: [Holding answer 25 July 2000] 15 June 2000.

Edgware Flood Defence Scheme

Mr. Dismore: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will make a statement on progress on the Edgware flood defence scheme. [132936]

Mr. Morley: I understand that the Environment Agency have been considering the responses to their consultation on an Environmental Statement for the Silk Stream flood alleviation scheme, and are now aiming to submit a planning application in September.

Worcester Regional Service Centre

Mr. Luff: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food how many staff will be employed at the Worcester Regional Service Centre; what functions it will continue to perform; and where it will be located. [132912]

Mr. Morley: I refer to the answer I gave to my hon. Friend the Member for Stroud (Mr. Drew) on 24 July 2000. When the changes announced in that statement are complete, I expect the total number of staff employed by my Department in Worcester to be about 160. This includes staff of the new national service which will take over functions from the Farming and Rural Conservation Agency and from Regional Service Centres, staff of the State Veterinary Service and a number of MAFF inspectors.

PFI Contracts

Mr. Alan Williams: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food in how many of his Department's PFI contracts KPMG has been an adviser. [132860]

Mr. Morley: None.

Countryside Stewardship Scheme

Dr. Strang: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food how much money has been spent to date on the Countryside Stewardship Scheme in England, broken down by (a) county and (b) region. [132301]

Mr. Morley: The table shows the total expenditure on the Countryside Stewardship Scheme by county and Government Office for the period 1996–97 to date. This covers the period during which MAFF has administered the Scheme following its transfer from the Countryside Commission. A regional breakdown of expenditure prior to 1996 is not available.

Intervention Board

Mr. Drew: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food when the Intervention Board will publish its 1999–2000 annual report and accounts. [133688]

Mr. Nick Brown: The Intervention Board's 1999–2000 annual report and accounts were laid before Parliament today. Copies are available in the Library of the House. Under separate arrangements copies will also be made available in the libraries of the devolved legislatures.

GM Crops

Mr. Yeo: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food, pursuant to his oral statement of 18 May 2000, Official Report, column 473, concerning the absence of modified DNA from oil produced from GM oil seed rape, what assessment he has made of (a) whether modified DNA may be present in animal feed produced from GM oil seed rape and (b) the extent to which the elimination of genetically-modified DNA entails the elimination of other molecules not normally produced in conventional oil seed rape but produced in GM varieties. [124158]

Ms Stuart: I have been asked to reply.

I am advised by the Food Standards Agency that studies on DNA in various commercial materials used in animal feed indicate that DNA is totally degraded in extracted rape seed meal but is present in other rape seed products and by-products. These results are expected to read across to material derived from genetically-modified oilseed rape. When the Advisory Committee on Novel Foods and Processes carried out a rigorous safety assessment of the RT 73 GM variety, extensive compositional analysis revealed no significant differences between the GM line and its parental line. This indicates that there are no different molecules in the GM variety.

Mr. McWalter: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what assessment his Department has made of the capacity of different forms of genetically-modified crop to render various forms of plant, and the organisms dependent on them extinct. [128696]

Mr. Meacher: I have been asked to reply.

The Advisory Committee on Releases to the Environment (ACRE) routinely assess the potential of any GMO to render a plant species and other organisms dependent on it extinct, whether through becoming more invasive, toxic to animals or through other means. To date no existing GMOs have been identified with the potential to render other species extinct. ACRE's remit has recently been extended to take into account effects of the ways that GM crops may be grown on biodiversity, compared to use of equivalent conventional crops. ACRE's work is augmented by a research programme funded by my Department.

Salvage Meat

Mr. Yeo: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if salvage meat sold by his Department into the human food chain is identified as such to members of the public likely to purchase and consume it. [121413]

Ms Stuart: I have been asked to reply.

No. I am advised by the Food Standards Agency that all fresh meat produced in Great Britain for sale for human consumption is subject to full ante mortem and post mortem inspection by meat Hygiene Service inspectors. Only meat that has been passed as fit for human consumption is health marked and allowed to be marketed. These same general rules apply to "salvage meat" produced from tuberculosis reactor cattle and meat produced from cattle which may be infected with Mycobacterium bovis. However, the same rules require the total condemnation of all carcases with generalised TB infection, and in cases where evidence of TB infection is present (but infection is not generalised) the partial condemnation of affected organs or parts of the carcase is required. These requirements are based on harmonised European Commission rules.

Meat produced from cattle that have reacted positively to the tuberculin test, or from cattle which are found, at post mortem, to show signs indicative of being infected with bovine tuberculosis (M.bovis) is not therefore subject to any special labelling requirements when sold at either wholesale or retail level. The Department does not, in any case, sell "salvage meat" into the human food chain.

CABINET OFFICE

Advisory Bodies

Tony Wright: To ask the Minister for the Cabinet Office if she will list all the (a) task forces, (b) action teams, (c) policy reviews and (d) other temporary advisory bodies with external members currently in existence within her Department; and on what date each body (i) was set up and (ii) is expected to terminate. [131459]

Mr. Jim Murphy: To ask the Minister for the Cabinet Office when she will publish the six-monthly update of information on task forces, ad hoc advisory groups and reviews established since 2 May 1997. [133606]

Mr. Stringer: I have today placed in the Libraries of the House lists containing updated details about those live task forces, ad hoc advisory groups and reviews established between 2 May 1997 and 30 April 2000. The lists also contain details about those bodies that have been wound up since 1 November 1999.

Departmental Groups

Mr. Stunell: To ask the Minister for the Cabinet Office (1) if she will list each group that is responsible to her Department, with significant and plural membership from outside the Civil Service, and to which the Nolan rules on non-departmental public bodies do not apply and for each such group, if it (a) is a company limited by guarantee, (b) is a charity, (c) has no formal legal basis and (d) has some other legal basis, giving details; [131241]

(2) if she will list each group that is responsible to her Department, with significant and plural membership from outside the Civil Service, and to which the Nolan rules on non-departmental public bodies do not apply; and for each such group, if it (a) is a private company, (b) is a charity, (c) has no formal legal basis and (d) has some other legal basis, giving details. [131181]

Mr. Stringer: I refer the hon. Member to the answer I gave today to my hon. Friends the Members for Eastwood (Mr. Murphy) and for Cannock Chase (Tony Wright), Official Report, column 799W. None of the groups for which my Department is responsible has a formal legal basis.

Government Car and Despatch Agency

Helen Jones: To ask the Minister for the Cabinet Office what performance targets she has set for the Government Car and Despatch Agency for 2000–01. [132832]

Mr. Ian McCartney: I have set the Government Car and Despatch Agency the following key performance targets for the year.

Financial:

1. to break even on an accruals basis;
2. to maintain expenditure and receipts within voted provision.

Efficiency:

3. to increase income per pound of direct labour cost to £2.08.

Quality of Service:

4. (a) to improve customer satisfaction by 2 per cent. against the outturn of the 1999–2000 survey.

   (b) to identify and address causes of dissatisfaction.

Environmental:

5. to convert to environmentally friendly fuels 50 per cent. of the cars purchased in the year and capable of such conversion.

Devolution

Mr. Rooney: To ask the Minister for the Cabinet Office if additional guidance will be offered to show those issues for which Ministers remain responsible, following devolution to Scotland, Wales and Northern Ireland. [133607]

Marjorie Mowlam: I am today placing in the Library a Devolution Guidance Note (Number 11) on ministerial accountability after devolution, covering Scotland and Wales. The guidance note will also be made available on the Cabinet Office website www.cabinet-office.gov.uk. While the note does not supplant the devolution legislation, it is intended to offer a lay guide to the broad areas which remain the responsibility of UK Ministers, and for which they are accountable to the UK Parliament. The note will be expanded over the summer to include guidance on Northern Ireland.

Merchant Navy Day

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Minister for the Cabinet Office if she will ensure that the Red Ensign is flown from departmental buildings on Merchant Navy Day, 3 September. [132970]

Mr. Stringer: I refer my hon. Friend to the answer given today by the Under-Secretary of State for the Home Department, my hon. Friend for North Warwickshire (Mr. O'Brien).

Ministerial Duty Roster (Summer)

Mr. Luff: To ask the Minister for the Cabinet Office if she will publish the daily Ministerial Duty Roster for her Department during the summer adjournment. [133077]

Mr. Lansley: To ask the Minister for the Cabinet Office if she will publish the duty roster for her Department during the summer adjournment. [132974]

Marjorie Mowlam: It is not normal practice of Government to publish the daily Ministerial Duty Roster. This Department will ensure that it has sufficient cover through the summer recess in line with the requirements of the Ministerial Code.

Regulations

Mr. Lansley: To ask the Minister for the Cabinet Office if she will estimate the cost of regulations (a) introduced and (b) repealed since May 1997 to the (i) private and (ii) public sectors. [132773]

Mr. Stringer: Since 1998, the Government have required Departments to publish a thorough assessment of the impact of any regulatory proposal likely to impose a significant cost on business, charities or the voluntary sector. These assessments do not disaggregate the costs to the other groups affected by regulation, for example consumers and the public sector, nor are the cost savings of Deregulation Orders routinely collected. This information would be available only at disproportionate cost.

For the cost of regulation on business, I refer the hon. Member to the answer given by my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry to the right hon. Member for Horsham (Mr. Maude) on 21 December 1999, Official Report, column 450W.

Mr. Lansley: To ask the Minister for the Cabinet Office how many sunset clauses have been included in regulations since May 1997. [132693]

Mr. Stringer: The Government always consider whether sunset clauses are appropriate when bringing forward legislation. Examples of sunset clauses that have been introduced since May 1997 include Part I of the Electronic Communications Act 2000 and the Football (Disorder) Bill. In addition, many road closure orders are limited by statute. However, information about sunset clauses is not routinely collected and would be available only at disproportionate cost.

Opinion Research

Mr. Don Foster: To ask the Minister for the Cabinet Office, pursuant to her answer of 12 July 2000, Official Report, column 608–10W, on opinion research, what the reasons were for withholding from disclosure the three pieces of market and opinion research. [132007]

Mr. Stringer: A report on customers' views on the Central Office of Information was withheld under exception 14 of the Code of Practice on Access to Government Information (Information supplied in confidence). Business research on the Inter Despatch Service was withheld under exception 7 (Effective management and operations of the public service).

The third report is "Communicating With Women". This is minor research into the appeal of the magazine format of the publication "Voices" and its effectiveness in reaching target audiences. It was considered of limited significance and was not deliberately withheld. However, it is now being placed in the Libraries of the House in response to the hon. Member's request.

Parliamentary Questions

Mr. Stunell: To ask the Minister for the Cabinet Office how many of the written parliamentary questions tabled to her Department between 19 October 1999 and 20 April 2000 have not received substantive answers, citing as the reason that the information is (a) not held centrally, (b) not held in the form requested and (c) not available. [131232]

Mr. Stringer: The written parliamentary questions tabled to the Cabinet Office between 19 October 1999 and 20 April 2000 which did not receive substantive answers because the information was:

(a) not held centrally was five;

(b) not held in the form requested was three; and

(c) not available was none.

Knowledge Network Computer System

Mr. Lansley: To ask the Minister for the Cabinet Office what her most recent estimate is of the total cost of the Knowledge Network computer system. [132687]

Marjorie Mowlam: Phase 1 of the Knowledge Network—an initial period of scoping and piloting—came to an end in July 2000. It was completed on time, on budget and cost £241,000. A report on Phase 1 will be published in the summer.

The budget for Phase 2 has not yet been agreed.

NORTHERN IRELAND

Union Flag

Mr. Donaldson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland when he will publish regulations for the flying of the union flag on Government buildings in Northern Ireland. [132149]

Mr. Mandelson: The flying of flags on Government buildings is in the first instance a matter for the devolved administration in Northern Ireland. I would much prefer the Executive to reach a consensus view on this issue but am ready to use my powers under the Flags (Northern Ireland) Order 2000 if necessary. I have sought the views of the Executive Committee of the Northern Ireland Assembly and of the political parties in Northern Ireland about the coverage and content of any regulations. When I have received and considered the responses, I will make my own view known.

Press Releases

Mr. Lansley: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many press releases were issued in (a) 1997, (b) 1998, (c) 1999 and (d) this year to date; and what the total cost of the production and issuing of these press releases was in each year. [132756]

Mr. Mandelson: The Northern Ireland Information Service issued the following numbers of press releases for the periods as stated. Included are the total production costs in each of the years concerned:

Year	Number of releases	£
1997	1,180	33,202.74
1998	1,313	34,427.67
1999	1,055	30,323.49
2000 to date	848	21,222.46

Press Officers

Mr. Lansley: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many press officers were employed in his Department in (a) May 1997, (b) January 1998, (c) January 1999 and (d) January 2000; and what the total expenditure on press officers by his Department was in each of the years concerned. [132769]

Mr. Mandelson: The Secretary of State for Northern Ireland employed the following numbers of Press Offices for the periods given. Also stated are the following expenditure figures on Press Officers, by the NIO in each of the years concerned:

Year	Number of Press Officers	£000
May 1997	29	667
January 1998	32	649
January 1999	36	940
January 2000	37	985

Official Visits

Mr. Matthew Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will list the visits outside Britain made by his Department's permanent secretary on official business since 1 January 1999, indicating the date and purpose of the visit in each case. [132754]

Mr. Mandelson: Since 1 January 1999 the permanent secretary of the Northern Ireland Office has made the following visits outside the United Kingdom on official business:

Date	Visits
18 March 1999	Dublin—Meeting with an official from the Irish Department of Justice
9 April 1999	Dublin—Meeting with officials from the Irish Department of Justice

Chief Electoral Officer Report

Mr. Colman: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will publish the report of the Chief Electoral Officer for 1999–2000. [133346]

Mr. Mandelson: I am pleased to announce that the annual report of the Chief Electoral Officer for the year 1999–2000 has been laid before Parliament today. Copies are available in the Library.

Firearms

Mr. McNamara: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what the standard procedures are for removing a firearms licence following misuse of a firearm. [132657]

Mr. Ingram: The Chief Constable has advised that following clear information that a person had misused a firearm, it is police policy to seize the firearm from the person and consider the revocation of his firearm certificate.

Mr. McNamara: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what conditions are placed on the use of firearms by licence holders who have criminal records. [132656]

Mr. Ingram: The Chief Constable has advised that the criminal record of an applicant is, in the first instance, one of the matters taken into consideration in assessing his suitability to possess a legally held firearm. If a person with a criminal record is considered suitable to hold a firearm, no special or additional conditions are applied. Should the holder of a firearm certificate subsequently be convicted of a recordable criminal offence, then his suitability to retain a certificate will be reassessed.

Mr. McNamara: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland when Mr. Richard Monteith first applied for a licence to carry a firearm. [132655]

Mr. Ingram: The Chief Constable considers that it is not appropriate to comment publicly on such a matter.

Arms Dumps

Mr. Peter Robinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what estimate the security services have made of the number of arms dumps the IRA have in (a) Northern Ireland and (b) the Irish Republic. [132838]

Mr. Ingram: No official estimate is made of the number of IRA arms dumps.

Mr. Peter Robinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what assessment he has made of when IRA arms dumps in Northern Ireland and the Irish Republic will be inspected by the international inspectors. [132839]

Mr. Ingram: Mr. Ramaphosa and Mr. Ahtisaari have reported that they have completed their first inspection of several IRA arms dumps. It represents substantial progress and an honouring of commitments given at the beginning of May. I am confident the inspectors will report any further progress that has been made when they deem it appropriate to do so.

Merchant Navy Day

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will ensure that the Red Ensign is flown from departmental buildings on Merchant Navy Day, 3 September. [132963]

Mr. Mandelson: I refer my hon. Friend to the answers given today to the hon. Member for Lagan Valley (Mr. Donaldson) by the Parliamentary Under-Secretary of State for the Home Department.

Drumcree

Mr. McNamara: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what his estimate is of the additional police and security costs incurred as a result of Orange Order protests against the ruling of the Parades Commission on parades at Drumcree to date this year; and what estimate he has made of (a) the financial loss for businesses and (b) the damage to persons and property. [131394]

Mr. Ingram: It is still too early to give accurate figures for the additional cost of Royal Ulster Constabulary operations during the July period. Preliminary costs resulting from all riot, arson and bomb damage, which occurred across the Province over the period 4 to 10 July 2000, have been estimated at £3.25 million.

Police Federation for Northern Ireland

Mr. McNamara: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what the membership is (a) in total and (b) broken down by rank of the Police Federation for Northern Ireland; what subscription is paid by members; and what other sources and amounts of income are available to the Federation, including commission and payments arising from services and facilities for members from commercial and other activities. [131399]

Mr. Ingram: The Police Federation for Northern Ireland represents all police officers below the rank of Superintendent. At 31 March 2000, the total numbers in these ranks was 12,061 broken down as follows.

	Total numbers
Chief Inspector	170
Inspector	498
Sergeant	1,390
Constable	6,163
Full-Time Reserve	2,688
Part-Time Reserve	1,152

The current voluntary subscription is £6.51 per month and 11,291 officers currently subscribe. Commercial companies pay no commission on the services they provide as this is used to lower costs for members. Advertising, for example in the Police Beat magazine, does not cover the production costs of the publication. There are no other sources of income.

Mr. McNamara: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what plans he has to review the regulations and role of the Police Federation for Northern Ireland to require independently audited direct postal ballots for the election of the chairman and other officers of the Central Committee; and if he will require the Police Federation to circulate periodically its members with audited financial accounts and statements of its affairs. [131396]

Mr. Ingram: There are no plans to carry out such a review. Officials of the Police Federation for Northern Ireland are elected in a similar manner to those of the Federations of England, Scotland and Wales. The elections are audited by the Chief Constable and the Federation plays no part in the election procedure.

The Police (Northern Ireland) Act 1998 sets out the financial constraints placed upon the Police Association and regulation 21 of the Police Association Regulations 1991 provides for the accounts to be properly audited and published in a suitable manner (at Conference) and forwarded to the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland. Full accounts are available for inspection by any member and are also forwarded to the Chief Constable and the Police Authority for Northern Ireland.

Mr. McNamara: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland when the next election of the Police Federation for Northern Ireland will be held; and what plans he has to reform its election procedure in line with existing statutory obligations for trade unions. [131397]

Mr. Ingram: Membership elections to the Police Federation for Northern Ireland Regional Boards are held triennially. The next scheduled elections are due in January 2001. The Federation is not a trade union and its activities are strictly controlled by regulation.

Mr. McNamara: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what the date of the last election for the Police Federation for Northern Ireland was; how many candidates there were broken down by (a) category and (b) area; how many were returned unopposed; how many contested elections have been held; and what was the (i) actual and (ii) percentage turnout in each case. [131398]

Mr. Ingram: The last membership elections of the Police Federation for Northern Ireland Regional Boards were held on 27 and 28 January 1998. It is not possible to provide the remainder of the information requested as ballot papers are destroyed after a period of three months.

Royal Ulster Constabulary

Rev. Martin Smyth: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many full-time reserve or mobilised constables with 25 to 30 years service will be retired from the RUC without pension entitlement. [132951]

Mr. Ingram: It is impossible to say because this will depend on the RUC Chief Constable's assessment of when he decides he is in a position to phase out these groups of officers.

Ministerial Duty Roster (Summer)

Mr. John M. Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will publish the daily ministerial duty roster for his Department during the summer adjournment. [133073]

Mr. Mandelson: It is not normal practice of Government to publish the daily ministerial duty roster. This Department will ensure that it has sufficient cover through the summer recess in line with the requirements of the Ministerial Code.

PRIME MINISTER

Websites

Mr. Maclennan: To ask the Prime Minister if he will list the expenditure incurred on (a) the setting up and (b) the operation of websites that are his responsibility, indicating the cases in which the expenditure has been above that budgeted; and if he will list for each website (i) the topics covered, (ii) the average number of hits in the last three months and (iii) the estimated expenditure on each website for each of the next three years. [122115]

The Prime Minister [holding answer 18 May 2000]: My office is directly responsible for only one internet site; the 10 Downing street internet site. The design of the site cost £55,000. A further £20,000 was needed to upgrade computer equipment within No. 10. The total start-up costs for the new site came to £75,000. Pay and running costs of £32,000 have been incurred to date during the current financial year.

The 10 Downing street internet site currently covers over 20 topics. It can be viewed at http://www.pm.gov.uk. The site has averaged 2½ million hits per week over the last three months. Estimated expenditure for the next three years is not available.

Government's Annual Reports

Mr. Evans: To ask the Prime Minister how much the difference was between sale receipts and production costs of the Government's Annual Reports in (a) 1997–98 and (b) 1998–99. [131045]

The Prime Minister [holding answer 17 July 2000]: Under the arrangements entered into by the previous administration when The Stationery Office was privatised, receipts from the sales of Government publications do not usually accrue to the Government but to The Stationery Office: that has been the case with all three editions of the report. Under the same arrangements, production costs are divided between the Government and The Stationery Office.

Mr. Evans: To ask the Prime Minister what estimate he has made of the cost to public funds of the Government's Annual Report 1999–2000; how many copies were printed; and how many copies he intends to give away free of charge. [131047]

The Prime Minister [holding answer 17 July 2000]: The budget for the Government's Annual Report 1999–2000 was £165,000, compared to £180,000 in the previous year. 49,000 copies have been printed: 39,000 for retail sale and 10,000 for the Government (mainly for internal distribution without charge within the public sector).

Mr. Evans: To ask the Prime Minister what plans he has for a Government Annual Report next year. [131044]

The Prime Minister [holding answer 17 July 2000]: Decisions will be announced in due course.

Mr. Evans: To ask the Prime Minister how many civil servants were involved in preparing the Government's Annual Report. [131043]

The Prime Minister [holding answer 17 July 2000]: The report was prepared by one civil servant; other civil servants will have dealt with the Annual Report as part of their other duties.

Mr. Evans: To ask the Prime Minister what outlets received copies of the Annual Report in advance of publication; and what profits retailers make on the sale of each copy of the Annual Report. [131046]

The Prime Minister [holding answer 17 July 2000]: This year's Government Annual Report was published in the same way as almost all Government priced publications. Copies were distributed in advance to the retailers under an embargo preventing further distribution or sale before the report was made available to Parliament.

The retailers included The Stationery Office and other bookstores as usual, plus Tesco and W H Smith. Profits made by the retailers are a matter for them.

Mr. Redwood: To ask the Prime Minister when the section of the Docklands Light Railway shown on page 43 of the Government's Annual Report was brought into service. [131328]

The Prime Minister [holding answer 18 July 2000]: The Docklands Light Railway opened in a series of sections between 1987 and 1999.

Mr. Redwood: To ask the Prime Minister when the airline shown on page 43 of the Government's Annual Report commenced services at London City Airport. [131400]

The Prime Minister [holding answer 18 July 2000]: CityJet started flights from London City Airport to Dublin in January 1994. Since September 1999, the route has been operated by British European Airways using aircraft leased from CityJet.

Mr. Redwood: To ask the Prime Minister when the sections of the Manchester Metrolink pictured on pages 30 and 31 of the Government's Annual Report were brought into service. [131327]

The Prime Minister: [holding answer 18 July 2000]: At page 31 of the Annual Report says,

"the new tram system operated by Metrolink was opened in 1992. The specific section shown is the partially-completed extension to Eccles via Salford Quays brought into operation in December 1999."

Mr. Yeo: To ask the Prime Minister what the basis was of the statement on page 15 of the Government's Annual Report concerning the impact of the Agenda 2000 reforms of the Common Agricultural Policy on the price of an average four person family's food bills. [131368]

The Prime Minister [holding answer 18 July 2000]: The statement is based on an assessment of likely benefits to UK consumers from the implementation of the cuts in support prices reached at the Berlin Council, of £1 billion a year or 2 per cent. of the retail food price index or 0.25 per cent. of the all items retail price index. The statement in the report contains a drafting error; it should read "annual" instead of "monthly" and "£65" instead of "£50".

Stealth Bombers

Mr. Dalyell: To ask the Prime Minister if he will make a statement on the conditions under which stealth bombers of the US Air Force are to be stationed at Fairford. [132824]

The Prime Minister: I refer my hon. Friend to the answer given by our hon. Friend the Minister for the Armed Forces on 21 July 2000, Official Report, column 342W, to our hon. Friend the Member for Stroud (Mr. Drew).

PRESIDENT OF THE COUNCIL

Speaker Nominations

Dr. Lynne Jones: To ask the President of the Council if she will bring forward proposals to provide for all nominations for Speaker to be considered by the House. [131418]

Mrs. Beckett: The procedure for the election of a Speaker is set out in "Erskine May", pp 237–241.

When the Procedure Committee last considered this issue (1st Report, Session 1995–96, HC386) they recommended no change to the procedure for electing the Speaker.

Merchant Navy Day

Mr. Flynn: To ask the President of the Council if she will ensure that the Red Ensign is flown from departmental buildings on Merchant Navy Day, 3 September. [132964]

Mrs. Beckett: I refer my hon. Friend to the answer given by my hon. Friend the Parliamentary Under-Secretary of State for the Home Department (Mr. O'Brien) today, Official Report, column 895W.

Duty Roster

Mr. Grieve: To ask the President of the Council if she will publish the daily ministerial duty roster for her Department during the summer adjournment. [133145]

Mrs. Beckett: No. It is not normal practice of Government to publish a daily ministerial duty roster. This Department will ensure that it has sufficient cover through the summer recess in line with the requirements of the Ministerial Code.

Westminster Hall

Mr. Forth: To ask the President of the Council if she will list the hon. and right hon. Members who have initiated debates in Westminster Hall since its inception, stating the number of debates initiated by each Member. [132841]

Mrs. Beckett: The information is as follows from the beginning of the Session to 26 July. It does not include Government Adjournment debates or debates on select committee reports:

CULTURE, MEDIA AND SPORT

New Millennium Experience Company

Mr. Peter Ainsworth: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport if all the design and construction contracts awarded by the New Millennium Experience Company complied with EU competition rules. [125029]

Janet Anderson [holding answer 8 June 2000]: The New Millennium Experience Company (NMEC) voluntarily followed EU competition rules for the key, large-scale construction and design contracts, having considered and taken on board legal advice that it was exempt from compliance.

All construction contracts to which the EU rules applied were tendered in compliance with them. Those construction contracts whose value fell under the EU threshold were competitively tendered in accordance with non-departmental public body (NDPB) procurement rules. When tendering for design services, NMEC also complied with EU competition rules or NDPB procurement rules whenever possible, however, the nature of these services meant that it was not always appropriate to do so. This was particularly the case when tendering for very specialist and/or unique goods and services, or when the timetable did not allow for a full-scale tendering process. In all cases where services were procured without competition, NMEC complied with Single Tender Action procedures.

Mr. Peter Ainsworth: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport, pursuant to his answer of 14 June 2000, Official Report, column 648W, what fees (a) have been paid and (b) are estimated to be payable to each of the accountancy firms employed by the New Millennium Experience Company. [127844]

Janet Anderson [holding answer 26 June 2000]: Over the lifetime of the project to date, the New Millennium Experience Company (NMEC) has paid its official auditors, Ernst & Young, a total of £1,132,923 (excluding VAT) for audit services and other operational non-audit duties. Details of these fees have been and will be included in each of NMEC's Annual Reports and Financial Statements as recommended by good accounting practice.

Under the terms of the contracts with the other accountancy firms employed by NMEC, the company is obliged to seek permission before disclosing information about terms of employment. NMEC has written to these companies seeking their agreement to the release of the information requested. Should they agree I will write to the hon. Gentleman with details and place a copy of my letter in the Library. Any future fees payable will be dependent on the nature and scope of work to be undertaken and will be negotiated accordingly.

Mr. Baker: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what the policy of New Millennium Experience Company is in respect of the speed of payment of bills; and how much money has yet to be paid for bills submitted on or before 31 March. [128398]

Janet Anderson: [holding answer 4 July 2000]: It is the New Millennium Experience Company's (NMEC) policy that payments to suppliers should be made in accordance with those terms and conditions agreed between the Company and its suppliers, provided that all trading terms and conditions have been complied with. In the period from 1 April 1999 to 31 December 1999 over 75 per cent. of invoices, by value, were paid within 30 days of invoice date.

Of those bills submitted on or before 31 March 2000, there are currently invoices to the value of approximately £1 million awaiting payment (subject to final authorisation).

Ann Clwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport if all (a) Government and (b) other papers relating to the New Millennium Experience will be released under the proposed Freedom of Information Act. [132547]

Janet Anderson [holding answer 26 July 2000]: My Department will respond to any requests for information within the spirit of the Freedom of Information Bill and, until a Freedom of Information Act comes into force, within both the letter and the spirit of the Code of Practice on Access to Government Information. We expect the Millennium Commission and the New Millennium Experience Company to do the same.

Millennium Dome

Mr. Simon Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport how many tickets for the Millennium Dome have been sold from outlets in (a) Wales and (b) the UK; and if he will make a statement. [128161]

Janet Anderson: There are various ways of purchasing tickets to visit the Dome; from Lottery outlets around the country, from the Dome ticket line, from travel and tourism companies and in person at the Dome. With so many possible purchase sources it is difficult to monitor the exact number of visitors from one particular location. Since 1 January 2000, a total of 2.9 million tickets have been sold; 639,693 of which have been sold direct from Lottery outlets across the UK; 7,981 have been sold from Lottery outlets in Wales.

Mr. Mitchell: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport where the millennium products, on sale in the Millennium Dome, are available for purchase elsewhere. [130290]

Janet Anderson: The New Millennium Experience Company's (NMEC) Licensing programme allowed certain companies to sell approved products through their own wide-ranging distribution channels, including the main high street stores, such as WH Smith and Tesco. The Dome merchandising range is a mixture of licensed products, which were made widely available, and exclusive products, which were manufactured for sale at the Dome.

Funding (Sports Events)

Mr. Alasdair Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport how much financial assistance was made available by (a) the National Lottery, (b) the English Sports Council and Sport England, (c) the Government, (d) the UK Sports Council and (e) other public sector bodies to assist with (i) the preparation of the bid by Manchester to host the Olympics, (ii) the preparation of the bid by Manchester to host the Commonwealth Games, (iii) the upgrading of stadiums and other facilities for the Commonwealth Games in Manchester, (iv) the running costs of the Commonwealth Games in Manchester, (v) the preparation of the bid to host the World Student Games in Sheffield in 2003, (vi) the preparation of the bid to host the World Student Games in Sheffield, (vii) the upgrading of stadiums and other facilities for the World Student Games in Sheffield and (viii) the running costs of the World Student Games in Sheffield. [131793]

Kate Hoey: Most Government money specifically allocated to sport in England is channelled through the English Sports Council (Sport England). This is an independent body sponsored by this Department which, within an overall policy framework set by the Department, dispenses these funds according to its own detailed policies and priorities.

(i) Regarding support for Manchester Olympic bids: Manchester made two unsuccessful bids for the Olympic Games for both 1996 and 2000. The bids received support from central Government in various ways, and much of the infrastructure assistance has been carried over to the Commonwealth Games. The overall cost for completing projects for the Olympic Bid 2000 programme was circa £73 million.

(ii) No funding has been made available from the sources listed for the bid for the Commonwealth Games.

(iii) Regarding the upgrading of stadiums and other facilities for the Commonwealth Games in Manchester, Sport England have made the following lottery grant: £92 million towards a total cost of £110 million for the Commonwealth Stadium and English Institute of Sport at Eastlands, Manchester, the venue for the Games athletics, cycling, squash, table tennis and rugby 7's events; £1 million to enhance facilities at Belle Vue, Manchester, to provide the venue for the Games hockey event; £6 million towards a total cost of £6.7 million, for the National Shooting Centre at Bisley, Surrey, the venue for the Games shooting events.

(iv) No funding has been made available from the sources listed to meet the running costs of the Commonwealth Games. The World Student Games in 2003 will be held in Korea and no UK bid was made for these Games. The World Student Games were held in Sheffield in 1991. The English Sports Council and National Lottery did not exist at that time. However, I can say that £3 million was made available through the Sports Council for the 1991 World Student Games.

Tourism

Mr. Paul Marsden: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what proportion of the United Kingdom's tourism earnings has benefited the Shrewsbury and Atcham constituency, or other similar area for which figures are available, in the last two years for which figures are available; and how many new jobs connected to tourism have been created in this area in each year. [131668]

Janet Anderson [holding answer 21 July 2000]: Official sources do not provide estimates of tourism expenditure in Shrewsbury and Atcham or any other sub-county local authority areas, due to the lack of reliability of the information at that level. Information is made available at the county level, although due to the small sample sizes for some counties these figures should be treated with caution. Figures for tourism expenditure in the county of Shropshire for 1998 and 1999 are as follows:

£ million

	1998	1999
Expenditure by UK and overseas tourists on trips of one or more night[1]
Shropshire	93	136
UK	25,748	27,821
Tourist spend in Shropshire as percentage of total tourist spend in UK	0.4	0.5

[1] Excludes expenditure by visitors from the Republic of Ireland

Source:

UK Tourism Survey (UK tourists)

International Passenger Survey (overseas tourists—1999 data are provisional)

It is likely that the inclusion of the spending during tourism day visits would at least double these amounts.

Information from the Annual Employment Survey shows that the number of employee jobs in the tourism-related industries in Shrewsbury and Atcham stood at 2,500 in 1996, 2,600 in 1997 and 2,900 in 1998, the last three years for which information is available. Information on self-employment in the tourism-related industries is not made available at local authority level on the grounds of reliability.

BBC Online

Miss Kirkbride: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport (1) when he will begin his review of BBC Online; [132422]

(2) on what date his Department was informed of the free trials of BBC news on mobile telephony and ADSL services; [132424]

(3) if his Agreement with BBC Online permits the distribution of content free-of-charge to commercially-funded Internet portals; [132423]

(4) if he will publish his Department's 1998 Agreement with the BBC on BBC Online. [132421]

Janet Anderson: A copy of my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State's approval to the BBC's proposals for BBC Online has been placed in the Library of the House. The BBC's formal request, to which the approval referred, has not been published because it contains confidential information. In relation to future approvals of BBC proposals for new public services, reasoned decisions will be published, under the new arrangements announced on 21 February.

Details of the review of BBC Online will be announced in due course.

My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State has not been requested by the BBC to consider whether the approval given in 1998 for BBC Online permits the distribution of content free-of-charge to commercially funded internet portals. It is for the BBC in the first instance to consider whether any further approval should be sought and for the BBC Governors to satisfy themselves that Charter obligations are being met. My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State is not, therefore, in a position to take a view on the scope of the current approval unless and until such a request, including detailed information, is received.

The BBC informed the Department of the trials for the provision of BBC News content over mobile phones on 26 January 2000.

Independent Football Commission

Mr. Peter Ainsworth: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what steps he has taken to advertise (a) the position of Chairman of the Independent Football Commission and (b) other appointments to the Commission. [133137]

Mr. Chris Smith: I shall shortly announce details of the Government's response to the Football Task Force's report on commercial issues. The announcement will include the membership of the Independent Football Commission. As its name suggests, the Commission will be fully independent of the Government and the football authorities. As the Commission will not be a Government-sponsored body, the position of Chairman will not be advertised. A number of people with the relevant skills and experience are being considered for the position of Chairman. The Chairman will then appoint the members of the Commission.

Merchant Navy Day

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport if he will ensure that the Red Ensign is flown from departmental buildings on Merchant Navy Day, 3 September. [132962]

Mr. Alan Howarth: I refer my hon. Friend to the answer given by my hon. Friend the Parliamentary Under-Secretary of State for the Home Department today, Official Report, column 895W.

World Cup

Mr. Greenway: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport, pursuant to his answer of 24 July 2000, Official Report, column 599W, on what date the Minister for Sport wrote to the Football Association about the costs of the World Cup bid. [133158]

Kate Hoey: As I advised the hon. Member in my answers to him on 24 July 2000, Official Report, column 416W, and 25 July 2000, Official Report, column 599W, I wrote to the Chief Executive of the Football Association on 20 June 2000 to request details of his plans to publish accounts for the 2006 World Cup bid.

Public Bodies Reviews

Mr. Dismore: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport if he intends to undertake reviews of the (a) National Heritage Memorial Fund, (b) National Gallery, (c) National Portrait Gallery and (d) Royal Commission on Historical Manuscripts. [133733]

Mr. Alan Howarth: As part of the Department's programme of quinquennial reviews of its public bodies, I am today announcing that this summer we will be starting reviews of the National Heritage Memorial Fund, National Gallery, National Portrait Gallery and Royal Commission on Historical Manuscripts.

The reviews will include an evaluation of the role and functions of these bodies and how those functions can best be carried out, and a review of the efficiency and effectiveness of the way in which they deliver services to their users. We estimate that the reviews will be completed next spring. A copy of the announcement has been placed in the Libraries of the House.

FOREIGN AND COMMONWEALTH AFFAIRS

UNITA

Liz Blackman: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if violations of the United Nations sanctions against UNITA are continuing; and if he will make a statement. [133608]

Mr. Hain: Sadly, we have reason to believe that violations of the sanctions against UNITA are continuing. We are aware of reports that UNITA continue to fuel their war effort by selling diamonds, and that such private sales have taken place recently in Libreville, Gabon. We have heard that another private sale may be held in Libreville within the next month. We will be raising these reports urgently with the Gabonese authorities, and urging them to do everything in their power to prevent this illicit trade. We will also be passing this information to the Chairman of the UN Angola Sanctions Committee.

We also have reason to believe that Victor Bout continues to supply arms to Angola in breach of the UN arms embargo. We call on all States to fulfil their international obligations to implement and enforce the mandatory sanctions imposed by the Security Council of the United Nations; there can be no excuse for any State to provide support for Bout in his continued flouting of UN sanctions.

European Union

Helen Jackson: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will list the forthcoming business in the Council of the European Union for August and the major European Union events for the next six months. [133609]

Mr. Vaz: The information is as follows:

European Calendar: August-January 2001

This calendar is primarily concerned with European Union matters, but certain other relevant events are also included. Events and dates quoted are based on the information available on the date of issue.

International Criminal Court

Ms Moran: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will publish in draft the legislation to enable UK ratification of the Rome Statute of the International Criminal Court. [133611]

Mr. Hain: The draft International Criminal Court Bill will be published on 22 August for consultation. We are publishing the Bill as soon as it is ready, although this is during the recess, because we are anxious to make progress on legislation as soon as parliamentary time allows. We hope that the draft Bill will receive support from all sides of the House and look forward to receiving comments from interested parliamentarians, individuals and organisations to whom we will be sending unsolicited copies. Any hon. Members who would like a copy of the consultation document sent directly to them at their constituencies or homes should contact the ICC Bill team, United Nations Department, at the Foreign and Commonwealth Office. Copies will be despatched on the day of publication. Comments should be received by 12 October.

Single Market

Mr. Mitchell: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what civil and police resource is being planned under Article 308 of the Treaty of the European Community in respect to threats to the operation of the single market from (a) inside and (b) outside the European Union, as envisaged in Commission document (00) 119; what form of voting will govern the decision on its establishment; and what estimate he has made of (a) how many personnel will be involved and (b) the cost in the first year of operation. [132573]

Mr. Vaz: Commission document COM(2000)119 proposes the creation of a Rapid Reaction Facility. This would allow for rapid intervention in the form of money from the community budget in situations of emerging or actual crisis in third countries. It would complement humanitarian intervention and other tools deployed in crisis situations. The proposal's legal base is Article 308 and voting in the Council would therefore be by unanimity. The Commission has proposed a budget of 30 million euro in year one. The proposal is still under discussion in the Council.

Turkey

Mr. Cox: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what recent discussions he has had with the Turkish Government on human rights; and what specific cases were discussed. [132704]

Mr. Vaz: The Foreign Secretary discussed human rights issues with the Turkish Foreign Minister, Ismail Cem, when he visited London in September 1999, and in the margins of the OSCE summit in Istanbul in November 1999. Human rights have also been raised in other ministerial contacts, for example by my hon. Friend the Member for Neath (Mr. Hain) when he met the Turkish Ambassador in December 1999, and at my meeting with the Turkish Justice Minister, Mr. Sami Turk, in June this year.

There have otherwise been regular discussions with the Turkish authorities on human rights issues in contacts between officials, both bilaterally and by the EU Presidency and Commission with our support. Points raised in such discussions included our opposition to the death penalty, the imprisonment of HADEP mayors and Akin Birdal, allegations of torture, treatment of Christians in Turkey, many other individual cases and resettlement and other aspects of the Ilisu Dam project. We have also regularly discussed Turkey's proposals to meet the Copenhagen criteria for EU membership.

We will continue to make our concerns clear to the Turkish authorities.

Press Officers

Mr. Lansley: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs how many press officers were employed in his Department in (a) May 1997, (b) January 1998, (c) January 1999 and (d) January 2000; and what the total expenditure on press officers by his Department was in each of the years concerned. [132761]

Mr. Robin Cook: The News Department of the Foreign and Commonwealth Office employed:

(a) 10.5 press officers in May 1997

(b) 14.5 press officers in January 1998

(c) 16.5 press officers in January 1999

(d) 16.7 press officers in January 2000; now 17.

These figures include the management positions of the Head and Deputies in the Department.

The total expenditure on press officers (salaries and running costs) in each financial year was:

Financial year	£000
(a) 1996–97	997
(b) 1997–98	1,317
(c) 1998–99	1,477
(d) 1999–2000	1,509

This is an estimate. Exact costings for 1999–2000 will not be available until September.

These changes were introduced at the initiative of the Department's management in response to rising pressures on the Department.

Press Releases

Mr. Lansley: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what the total cost of the production and issuing of press releases was in (a) 1997, (b) 1998, (c) 1999 and (d) 2000 to date. [132782]

Mr. Robin Cook: The total cost of the production and issuing of press releases through the Central Office of Information was:

(a) £19,111.37 in 1997

(b) £23,488.95 in 1998

(c) £19,037.82 in 1999

(d) £9,469.75 so far this year.

These figures include a proportion of standing charges as well as per release delivery. In addition, a number of press releases are issued each month direct from the FCO out of hours for which cost and other figures are not available.

Drugs Control

Dr. Tonge: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs (1) what criteria are used by the UN Drugs Control Programme when developing their environmental impact assessments for fungal herbicide field trials; [132545]

(2) pursuant to his answer of 13 July 2000, Official Report, column 653W, on drugs control, what environmental impact assessment of pleospora papaveracea took place before the field trial project in Uzbekistan began; and what environmental impact assessments are taking place during the field trial project; [132544]

(3) pursuant to his answer of 13 July 2000, Official Report, column 653W, on drugs control, what evidence he has received which shows that pleospora papaveracea is a control agent specific to opium poppy. [132543]

Mr. Battle [holding answer 26 July 2000]: The purpose of the United Nations International Drugs Control Programme research project into pleospora papaveracea is to determine its viability as a control agent specific to the opium poppy and to establish whether there are any environmental risks in its use.

UK funding was made available in 1998 exclusively for this project, which is expected to last a total of 3½ years. Before committing funding, the FCO sought advice from UK agricultural experts at MAFF and at Natural Resources International Ltd (who provide advice to DfID). Their comments, including an assessment of the risks to legitimate cultivated crops, were incorporated into the final design of the project. A British consultant, until recently at the Long Ashton Research Station, has been employed by UNDCP to review and oversee the project and, in particular, to conduct a detailed examination of host specificity of pleospora papaveracea. There has been no direct funding of Long Ashton.

There are no indications in progress reports from UNDCP so far of any adverse effect on agricultural crops or of any risk of uncontrolled spread. Research has explicitly eliminated effects on 112 different plant species. The research is not yet complete.

The Government had made it clear that if research into pleospora papaveracea showed it to be harmful to the environment, the UK would withdraw support and press for closure of the research programme.

Dr. Tonge: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs which chemical herbicide field trial projects his Department supports to combat (a) coca, (b) opium and (c) marijuana. [132546]

Mr. Battle [holding answer 26 July 2000]: None.

Antarctic Treaty

Mr. Donald Anderson: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he intends to remove his unofficial reservation on the siting of the Headquarters of the Secretariat of the Antarctic Treaty in Buenos Aires when the Antarctic Treaty Consultative Meeting takes place in The Hague in September. [132365]

Mr. Battle: The Special Antarctic Treaty Consultative Meeting is due to consider only one Agenda Item, the Report of the Committee for Environmental Protection. Discussion on the Antarctic Treaty Secretariat is not envisaged.

Correspondence

Mr. Arbuthnot: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs when he will reply to the letter of 28 March from the right hon. Member for North-East Hampshire regarding his constituent, Mr. Goddard. [132913]

Mr. Vaz: I regret that we were unable to trace the letter to which the right hon. Member refers. As he has now kindly provided a copy, I will be replying as soon as possible.

Missile Defence System

Mr. Menzies Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what representations Her Majesty's Government have received from (a) EU countries, (b) the United States of America, (c) NATO partners, (d) Russia and (e) China, regarding US proposals for a national missile defence system since the test failure of the system's interceptor rocket on 8 July; and if he will make a statement. [132366]

Mr. Vaz: The Government continue to consult with the United States and with other allies, both bilaterally and in NATO, on US National Missile Defence plans. We also continue to discuss the issue bilaterally with Russia and China.

The outcome of the latest test will no doubt be carefully considered in any assessment the US Administration makes this year of the technological feasibility of proceeding with the deployment of such a system.

Mr. Menzies Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what assessment his Department has made regarding the likelihood of an initial nuclear strike on (a) countries of the EU and (b) the United States of America by (i) North Korea, (ii) Libya and (iii) Iran; and if he will make a statement. [132370]

Mr. Vaz: Our current assessment is that there is no significant threat that North Korea, Libya or Iran might use nuclear weapons against the UK in present circumstances. We continue to monitor developments in this area closely.

It is not for us to make such assessments in respect of other countries.

Israel

Mr. Menzies Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what steps his Department has taken to seek to persuade Israel to become a party to the (a) Non-Proliferation Treaty and (b) Comprehensive Test Ban Treaty; and if he will make a statement. [132170]

Mr. Hain: We consistently call on Israel to adhere to the NPT as a non-nuclear weapon state, to place all its nuclear facilities under IAEA safeguards and to ratify the CTBT. We have raised these issues in both bilateral contacts with Israel and in multi-lateral fora such as the NPT Review Conference.

Middle East

Mr. Menzies Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what representations calling for financial assistance following the prospective peace settlement in the Middle East, have been made to Her Majesty's Government by (i) Israel, (ii) the Palestinian Authorities and (iii) Jordan; and if he will make a statement. [132171]

Mr. Hain: The Palestinian Authority, Israel and Jordan are naturally keen that any peace settlement in the Middle East should be supported by the international community. The G8, in its conclusions from Okinawa, invited the international community to participate in the efforts to help the parties implement a peace agreement when it is reached. We support that call.

Merchant Navy Day

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will ensure that the Red Ensign is flown from departmental buildings on Merchant Navy Day, 3 September. [132957]

Mr. Robin Cook: I refer my hon. Friend to the answer given by my hon. Friend the Parliamentary Under-Secretary of State for the Home Department today, Official Report, column 895W.

Ministerial Holidays

Mrs. Gillan: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what are the dates of holidays which are to be taken by him and the other Ministers in his Department. [132939]

Mr. Robin Cook: It is not normal practice to disclose Ministers' holiday plans, as this is personal information.

Official Trips

Mrs. Gillan: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what are the destinations and the purposes of the official trips which are to be undertaken by him and the Ministers in his Department between 24 July and 23 October. [132940]

Mr. Robin Cook: I visited Hungary and the Czech Republic on 24–26 July for meetings with my opposite numbers. The Minister of State, my hon. Friend the Member for Leeds, West (Mr. Battle), is currently visiting Nicaragua, El Salvador, Guatemala, Belize and Honduras in connection with his responsibilities for Central and Latin America.

I shall be accompanying Her Majesty The Queen during the State Visit to Italy in October. As plans are finalised bilateral visits will be announced in the usual way. In addition to regular EU commitments, a number of multilateral events are being arranged for the period in question, including attendance at the UN General Assembly and ASEM.

Molluccan Islands

Mrs. Gillan: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what representations he has received from (a) the Indonesian Government and (b) representatives of the Christian community in Indonesia concerning the conflict in the Molluccan islands; and what response he has given. [133147]

Mr. Battle: The information is as follows:

(a) I discussed the situation in Maluku with the Indonesian Ambassador on 3 July. The Indonesian Foreign Minister also briefed our Ambassador in Jakarta on developments on 10 July. The Head of the Diplomatic Service and our Ambassador in Jakarta have also discussed very recently the situation with President Wahid.

(b) A delegation of Christian clergy from Maluku called on officials of the South East Asia Department on 18 July. They gave a first hand account of the situation there.

We continue to keep up diplomatic pressure on the Indonesian Government to take effective action against extremists in Maluku and to guarantee safe access for humanitarian agencies.

Duty Rosters

Mrs. Gillan: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will publish the daily ministerial Duty Roster for his Department during the summer adjournment. [133072]

Mr. Robin Cook: It is not the normal practice of Government to publish the daily ministerial Duty Roster. This Department will ensure that it has enough cover through the summer recess in line with the requirements of the Ministerial Code.

Zambia

Dr. Marek: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what measures he has urged the Zambian Government to take to maintain the existing state of bilateral relations. [132825]

Mr. Hain: Our relations with Zambia are very good. I visited Lusaka from 10–11 May. I discussed governance, economic reform and corruption issues with a wide range of Zambians, including President Chiluba and the Ministers of Finance and Legal Affairs.

St. Helena

Dr. Marek: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will define the Government of St. Helena and list its members and by whom they are appointed. [132826]

Mr. Battle: The Executive Council of St. Helena is the Government of St. Helena, as established by Section 5 of the St. Helena Constitution Order 1988. The Executive Council consists of:

(a) three Ex-Officio Members,

(i) the Chief Secretary, Mr. John Styles

(ii) the Financial Secretary, Mr. Robert Dolan

(iii) the Attorney-General, Mr. Kurt Delano DeFreitas OBE

all appointed by the Governor with the approval of the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs. The Attorney-General is a non-voting member of Council.

(b) Five Members of the Legislative Council who are Chairmen of Council Committees,

(i) the Hon. Terrence F. Richards, Chairman, Agricultural and Natural Resources Committee

(ii) the Hon. Robert M. Robertson, Chairman, Education Committee

(iii) the Hon. William E. Drabble, Chairman, Employment and Social Security Committee

(iv) the Hon. Eric W. George MBE, Chairman, Public Health and Social Services Committee

(v) the Hon. Stedson R. George, Chairman, Public Works and Services Committee all elected as Council Chairmen by Legislative Council and appointed by the Governor.

At present two Councillors, the Hon. William E. Drabble and the Hon. Eric W. George, are overseas. The Hon. Mervyn R. Yon, the Acting Chairman of the Public Health and Social Services Committee, and the Hon. Clive R. Duncan, the Acting Chairman of the Employment and Social Security Committee were appointed as Temporary Members of Executive Council by the Governor under section 5(2)(a) of the Constitution.

As provided for by the Constitution the Governor presides at Meetings of the Executive Council. The President Governor Mr. David J. Hollamby was appointed by Her Majesty the Queen with effect from 24 June 1999.

Airline Safety

Mr. Jim Murphy: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs (1) what advice officials in his Department have offered to the travelling public about the safety of specific airlines within India; [133054]

(2) what advice officials in his Department have offered to British civil servants and diplomats regarding the safety of specific airlines in India; [133056]

(3) about which airlines officials in his Department have conveyed safety concerns to British diplomats and civil servants in each of the last 10 years. [133055]

Mr. Hain: I will write to my hon. Friend shortly and place copies of the letters in the Libraries of the House.

Pakistan

Mr. Rooney: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs when the explanatory statement in respect of Riffat Begum, Islamabad, reference 15B/GO290, will be forwarded to the Independent Appellate Authority. [133133]

Mr. Vaz: The explanatory statement in respect of Riffat Begum, Islamabad reference G0290; was despatched to the Independent Appellate Authority on 7 December 1999.

Opium

Dr. Tonge: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs when he expects the UN Drugs Control Programme research into pleospora papaveracea to control the cultivation of illicitly grown opium poppies to be completed. [132852]

Mr. Battle: The project is expected to be completed in the last quarter of 2001.

Dr. Tonge: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs (1) what financial support his Department has provided to Long Ashton Research Station of the Institute of Arable Crops Research since 1997; and what this financial assistance is intended for; [132856]

(2) pursuant to his answers of 13 July 2000, Official Report, column 653W, on drugs control, what steps he has taken to ensure that United Kingdom funding of UNDCP research into pleospora papaveracea to control the cultivation of illicit opium poppies is not used for research (a) into other fungi or (b) the control of other illicit crops. [132830]

Mr. Battle: I refer the hon. Member to the answer I gave earlier today.

Dr. Tonge: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what assistance the Long Ashton Research Station of the Institute of Arable Crops Research provides the UN Drugs Control Programme in respect of research into pleospora papaveracea. [132853]

Mr. Battle: Two scientists from the Institute of Genetics in Tashkent, who are working on UNDCP sponsored research into pleospora papaveracea, visited the Long Ashton Research Centre in April 1999 to study methods used in the formulation and application of microbial herbicides. A scientist from Long Ashton has been acting as an adviser to the research programme since its inception.

PFI Contracts

Mr. Alan Williams: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs in how many of his Department's PFI contracts KPMG has been an adviser. [132867]

Mr. Hain: KPMG has not been engaged to advise on any PFI contracts.

WALES

Council Tax

Mr. Evans: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what discussions he has had with the First Secretary with regard to the council tax reduction scheme in Wales. [115594]

Mr. Hanson: My right hon. Friend has regular discussions with the First Secretary covering a range of issues, including issues relating to local government finance.

Any council tax reduction scheme in Wales is a matter for the National Assembly. There is a scheme in operation this financial year 2000–2001 which has cost £17 million. The National Assembly is currently consulting on proposals for a new standard spending assessment formula and in the context of those proposals, a joint local government/National Assembly group is considering options for a transitional reduction scheme, should this be required in the next financial year.

Mr. Evans: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what discussions he has had with the First Secretary with regard to the increases in council tax in Wales in the current year. [115595]

Mr. Hanson: My right hon. Friend has regular discussions with the First Secretary covering a range of issues, including issues relating to local government finance. Increases in council tax are a matter for the local authorities themselves.

Elected Mayors

Mr. Evans: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what representations he has received with regard to the introduction of elected mayors for the (a) regions, (b) cities and (c) towns of Wales. [115584]

Mr. Paul Murphy: I have received a large number of representations relating to the introduction of executive arrangements, including elected mayors, in the Local Government Bill, but these have not been detailed representations relating to mayors for specific regions, cities or towns of Wales.

The Local Government Bill, which has now completed its parliamentary stages, provides a tailor made framework for executive arrangements including cabinets and directly elected mayors. All local authorities in Wales will need to consider which form of executive arrangement is most appropriate in their areas, and those who consider that a directly elected mayor would be appropriate will need to consult their electorate and hold a referendum on their proposals.

NHS

Mr. Llwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what estimate he made of the current state of indebtedness of the 26 health trusts in Wales when preparing his announcement of additional funding to the NHS in Wales. [118411]

Mr. Hanson: Additional funding for Wales announced in the budget as a result of increases in health spending in England was determined by applying the Barnett formula.

Decisions on how this funding is spent, including the effect on the indebtedness of Trusts in Wales, are a matter for the National Assembly for Wales.

Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what discussions he has had with the First Secretary concerning the reform of the NHS in Wales; and if he will make a statement. [132379]

Mr. Hanson: Over the past year there have been regular discussions about the NHS in Wales between my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State and me and the Assembly First Secretary and Health Secretary.

Our discussions have covered many issues including reform and modernisation particularly at the time of the three meetings of the Joint Ministerial Committee on Health.

Any decisions on reform in Wales are however for the National Assembly to decide and their main plans were set out in Jane Hutt's statement to a plenary session of the National Assembly on 12 July.

Regional Selective Assistance

Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what talks he has had with manufacturers on the areas in Wales to be covered by regional selective assistance; and if he will make a statement. [124423]

Mr. Paul Murphy: I have had a number of meetings with manufacturers in Wales, some of whom have raised the issue of the Assisted Areas map, which determines the areas in which regional selective assistance can be paid. My right hon. Friend the Minister for Trade and I were delighted to announce on 26 July that the European Commission has approved the new Assisted Areas map for the UK. I have written to all Welsh MPs and MEPs with details of what this means for Wales.

Education Funding

Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what discussions he has had with the First Secretary concerning paying of moneys from central Government to each local education authority school in Wales for books, with particular reference to the manner of giving the moneys to the schools; and if he will make a statement. [126519]

Mr. Hanson: My right hon. Friend and I have regular discussions with the First Secretary about a range of matters, including the National Assembly's arrangements for allocating education funds.

The Assembly provides resources specifically for books through the annual Grants for Education Support and Training (GEST) programme. The Assembly believes that local education authorities are best placed to decide the allocation of these funds locally. They are encouraged to target schools with the greatest need in terms of improving standards of literacy and numeracy.

Schools may also use their delegated budget to purchase books.

Child Poverty

Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what discussions he has had with the First Secretary on measures to eliminate child poverty; and if he will make a statement. [129503]

Mr. Hanson: I have regular meetings with the First Secretary to discuss a range of issues including children's issues in Wales.

We are the first Government to have made a commitment to end child poverty in 20 years, and halve it within 10 years. The Government have announced measures this year which will assist child poverty, such as an increase in child benefit to £15.50 from April 2001, 40 per cent. more than in 1997, and an increase in the Sure Start maternity grant from £200 to £300.

Toxic Waste

Mr. Llew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what discussions he has had in the past 12 months with Ministers at the Department of the Environment, Transport and the Regions concerning the imports into Wales of toxic waste for (a) disposal and (b) treatment. [129972]

Mr. Paul Murphy: I have met DETR Ministers to discuss a range of issues affecting Wales, and I have also met the Environment Agency Wales during the past 12 months to discus environment issues including imports and exports of waste. Policies on exports and imports of waste are not devolved and are dealt with by DETR. Nevertheless, I have taken a keen interest in these issues, especially during the consultation period of a UK-wide set of policies on exports and imports of waste, which the National Assembly for Wales were involved in.

A55

Mr. Alasdair Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales how much of the money spent on construction work on the A55 was EU funding, broken down by EU source fund and budget, in each of the last 10 years. [129465]

Mr. Paul Murphy: During the 10 years up to 1 July 1999, £6.9 million was allocated in 1990 from the EC Transport Infrastructure Fund to the A55 Pen y Clip tunnel scheme. The money was drawn down in instalments over the next few years but information on the size and date of each instalment is not obtainable without incurring disproportionate cost.

For that part of the A55 in England, the Highways Agency has reported no EU funding in the last 10 years.

All functions with regards to trunk roads and motorways in Wales were transferred to the National Assembly for Wales on 1 July 1999.

Government Annual Report

Mr. Evans: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales how many copies of the Government's Annual report 1998–99 were sold in Wales; and how many were given away. [131070]

Mr. Paul Murphy [holding answer 17 July 2000]: I regret this information is not held centrally.

Labour Statistics

Mr. Evans: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what proportion of New Deal participants in Wales have been (a) unemployed for over six months, (b) unemployed for over 12 months and (c) never worked. [130990]

Mr. Paul Murphy [holding answer 17 July 2000]: The information requested at (a) and (b) could be provided only at disproportionate cost. That requested at (c) is not available.

Hill Livestock Compensatory Allowance

Mr. Gareth Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what discussions he has had with (a) the First Secretary and (b) the Rural Affairs Secretary of the National Assembly for Wales as to the impact on farm incomes in less favoured areas in Wales of the reform of the Hill Livestock Compensatory Allowance regime. [131604]

Mr. Paul Murphy: I meet the First Secretary on a regular weekly basis and I am in continuing contact with my colleagues in the National Assembly for Wales and we discuss a wide range of issues. The new scheme for the Less Favoured Areas, known as Tir Mynydd, forms part of the Rural Development Plan for Wales. It has not been possible to devise a new area-based scheme which exactly replicates payments under the old HLCA headage based scheme, and satisfies the European Commission. The new National Assembly scheme therefore includes a safety net over three years to help farmers who would otherwise lose out, to adjust.

Mr. Gareth Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what discussions he has had with the Minister for Agriculture, Fisheries and Food in respect of the effect on farm incomes in Wales of the reform of the Hill Livestock Compensatory Allowance regime. [131603]

Mr. Paul Murphy: I speak to my Whitehall colleagues on a regular basis and we discuss a wide range of issues. The National Assembly for Wales' new scheme for the Less Favoured Areas, known as Tir Mynydd, forms part of the Rural Development Plan for Wales. It has not been possible to devise a new area-based scheme which exactly replicates payments under the old HLCA headage based scheme, and satisfies the Commission. The new scheme therefore includes a safety net over three years to help farmers who would otherwise lose out, to adjust.

Farm Incomes

Mr. Evans: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will list the average income for hill farmers in Wales for each year since 1994. [131669]

Mr. Paul Murphy [holding answer 24 July 2000]: The average Net Farm Income for hill farmers in Wales for each year in question was:

Year	£
1994–95	7,000
1995–96	18,400
1996–97	14,300
1997–98	8,100
1998–99	4,400

After 1 July 1999 these matters became the responsibility of the National Assembly for Wales.

Mr. Evans: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will list the average farm income in Wales for each year since 1994. [131653]

Mr. Paul Murphy [holding answer 24 July 2000]: The average Net Farm Income for each year in question was:

Year	£
1994–95	11,600
1995–96	23,200
1996–97	18,700
1997–98	11,400
1998–99	5,800

After 1 July 1999 these matters became the responsibility of the National Assembly for Wales.

Steel Industry

Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what discussions he has had with the First Secretary concerning prospects for the steel plants in Wales; and if he will make a statement. [132381]

Mr. Paul Murphy: The First Secretary and I meet regularly and have held several discussions on prospects for the steel industry. We have also held meetings with my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry, with the Chief Executive of Corus and with representatives of the ISTC.

I deeply regret recent job losses announced in the steel industry. This is a commercial decision for the company, but the Government and the National Assembly for Wales are working in partnership to do all we can to help those affected. We have put together a package of measures and the First Secretary has confirmed that he is seeking to set up an all-Wales taskforce to help deal with the immediate consequences of the Corus announcement and with shaping a longer-term strategy for assisting the areas affected.

The best contribution the Government can make to the future of the industry is to secure long-term economic stability based on low inflation and sound public finances. This allows business to invest and plan ahead with confidence. It is this consistent, long-term approach which is the foundation for steady growth.

Manufacturing

Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what discussions he has had with the First Secretary concerning the prospects for manufacturing in Wales in relation to (a) the strength of sterling and (b) the Comprehensive Spending Review; and if he will make a statement. [132380]

Mr. Paul Murphy: The First Secretary and I meet on a regular basis and discuss a number of issues including manufacturing in Wales. Overall, manufacturing output in Wales for the four quarters to the first quarter of 2000 was 2.9 per cent. higher than this corresponding period a year earlier.

The Government understand the concerns about the fall in value of the euro, but are determined to take a long-term view. Manufacturers who have suffered from the old boom and bust would not want a return to short-term quick fixes which put at risk long-term stability. The Government's careful handling of the economy across the UK will allow business to invest and plan ahead with confidence

The Spending Review supports manufacturing through a number of routes including the £530 million launch investment for the A3XX, which will be of particular benefit to manufacturing jobs in Wales. There will also be an important role for the Small Business Service and increased funding for commercial exploitation of science in supporting investment and innovation among manufacturing firms, especially SMEs.

Press Releases

Mr. Lansley: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales how many press releases were issued in (a) 1997, (b) 1998, (c) 1999 and (d) this year to date; and what the total cost of the production and issuing of these press releases was in each year. [132749]

Mr. Paul Murphy: In 1997 the Welsh Office issued 650 press notices, 774 in 1998 and 776 in 1999. So far this year the Wales Office has issued 64 press notices.

The cost of issuing a press notice in 1999 was something in excess of £40. Figures for earlier years are not available.

Press Officers

Mr. Lansley: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales how many press officers were employed in his Department in (a) May 1997, (b) January 1998, (c) January 1999 and (d) January 2000; and what the total expenditure on press officers by his Department was in each of the years concerned. [132758]

Mr. Paul Murphy: From 1994 until the start of the National Assembly in July 1999 the Welsh Office Press Office had between eight and nine press officers. The Wales Office employed two press officers in January this year.

The cost of the Press Office was £319,000 in 1996–97, £318,000 in 1997–98 and £370,000 in 1998–99. Because there were only two press officers in January 2000, in the interests of confidentiality I am unable to disclose salary costs for this year.

Plaid Cymru

Mr. Wigley: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will make a statement on the files compiled by his Department on the activities of Plaid Cymru between 1958 and 1973 which are filed as restricted in the Public Record Office, file reference BD-25/59; and if he will lift this restriction. [132789]

Mr. Paul Murphy: The file to which the right hon. Member refers is one of a series of files containing general papers on various organisations, including the Welsh Language Committee, the Welsh League of Youth, the Welsh Advisory Committee of the British Council and the Council of Social Services for Wales in Monmouthshire and Plaid Cymru. I am advised that it contains a collection of press cuttings, correspondence with and about Plaid Cymru, and briefings for Ministers in connection with a meeting with the President of Plaid Cymru.

The file does not have a security marking and contrary to press speculation last weekend is not "Top Secret" and is most definitely not concerned with "political surveillance".

In common with other retained files the file is stored at the Public Record Office at Kew and will be released on 1 January 2004. If, however, the hon. Member felt the file should be made available sooner, I would be pleased to consider this with the appropriate authorities.

Departmental Staff

Mr. Wigley: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales how many staff are employed directly by his Department; how many were employed on 1 July 1999; and how he expects these figures to vary in coming years. [133123]

Mr. Paul Murphy: The Wales Office currently employs 42.5 staff directly. One member of staff is a part-timer. The Department also employs a further four casual staff who are supplied by an employment agency.

On 1 July 1999, the first day of its existence, the Wales Office employed 27.5 staff.

I have no current plans to increase or decrease the current staffing levels, but it is not possible to foresee how things may develop in the years ahead.

Resource Allocation

Mr. Wigley: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales by what means he intends to report to Parliament on his use of resources other than those which are by way of payments to the National Assembly for Wales. [133124]

Mr. Paul Murphy: The annual Departmental Report, which is presented to Parliament, contains details of the use of resources by the Wales Office.

Ministerial Duty Roster

Mr. Evans: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will publish the daily Ministerial duty roster for his Department during the summer adjournment. [133064]

Mr. Paul Murphy: It is not normal practice of Government to publish daily Ministerial Duty Rosters. This Wales Office will ensure that it has sufficient cover through the summer recess in line with the requirements of the Ministerial Code.

Merchant Navy Day

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will ensure that the Red Ensign is flown from departmental buildings on Merchant Navy Day, 3 September. [132969]

Mr. Paul Murphy: I refer my hon. Friend to the answer given by my hon. Friend the Parliamentary Under-Secretary of State for the Home Department today, Official Report, column 895W.

Private Finance Initiative

Mr. Alan Williams: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales in how many of his Department's PFI contracts KPMG has been an adviser. [132863]

Mr. Paul Murphy: My Department does not have any PFI contracts.

Cardiff Bay Development Corporation

Mr. Evans: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales (1) for what reason discounts were offered to Cardiff County Council on the transfer of land to Ferry Road as a result of the winding-up of Cardiff Bay Development Corporation; [133214]

(2) who took the decision to discount the land to Ferry Road that was passed to Cardiff County Council as a result of the wind up of Cardiff Bay Development Corporation; [133216]

(3) what discounts were offered to Cardiff County Council on the transfer of the land to Ferry Road as a result of the wind up of Cardiff Bay Development Corporation. [133217]

Mr. Paul Murphy: These are matters for the National Assembly for Wales.

Permanent Secretary (Official Visits)

Mr. Matthew Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will list the visits outside Britain made by his Department's Permanent Secretary on official business since 1 January 1999, indicating the date and purpose of the visit in each case. [133272]

Mr. Paul Murphy: Neither the Permanent Secretary of the Welsh Office between 1 January 1999 and 30 June 1999, nor the Head of the Wales Office between 1 July 1999 and today, has made any visits outside Britain on official business.

Rural Bus Subsidy Scheme

Dr. Strang: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales how much money was spent in Wales under the rural bus subsidy scheme in (a) 1998–99 and (b) 1999–2000; and how much is expected to be spent in 2000–01. [132298]

Mr. Paul Murphy: Audited expenditure in 1998–99 was £2.17 million. In 1999–2000, the scheme was extended to include urban areas, with a total allocation of £5 million. Actual expenditure in that year and provision for 2000–01 are matters for the National Assembly.

Hotel Industry

Mr. Fearn: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what Government training schemes are available to those working within the hotel industry in Wales. [132311]

Mr. Paul Murphy: The New Deal programmes, Modern Apprenticeships, GNVQs, and National Traineeships for Work Based Learning are available to those working within the hotel industry in Wales. The Employment Service in Wales has recently put into operation an initiative involving hotels and catering companies encouraging them to recruit New Deal clients in its Cardiff District. Also, until very recently, the Wales New Deal Advisory Task Force included a member representing the hotel industry and an approaching review of the Task Force's membership will hopefully ensure that the hotel industry continues to be represented.

Ministerial Code of Conduct

Mr. Evans: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what guidelines Ministers should follow if their Department deals with a matter affecting their own constituency. [133215]

Mr. Paul Murphy: Section 6 of the "Ministerial Code", published by the Prime Minister in 1997 and setting out detailed guidance for Ministers on how they should conduct business, deals with Ministers' Constituency and Party Interests.

Paragraph 64 of the Code states that,

> Where Ministers have to take decisions within their Department which might have an impact on their own constituencies, they should, of course, take particular care to avoid any possible conflict of interest.

SOCIAL SECURITY

All-work Test

Mr. Andrew George: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how many people (a) failed the All Work Test, (b) appealed against the decision and (c) had their appeal successfully upheld broken down by each benefit applied for, in each of the last 10 years. [132931]

Angela Eagle: The information is not available in the format requested. Such information as is available is as follows. The All-work Test (AWT) was introduced in 1995.

Information on disallowances following the AWT (which was replaced by the Personal Capability Assessment from April this year) is in table 1. Disallowances include claimants who have failed to return the All-work Test (AWT) questionnaire or to attend for medical examination.

Data on appeals are in table 2. The time lags between disallowance, lodging an appeal and hearing an appeal means there is no direct relationship between data on decisions to disallow benefit and appeals made and heard in each calendar year.

Table 1: Total AWT disallowances

Mr. Andrew George: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what documentation is needed to proceed with an appeal against an All-work Test decision; and if he will make a statement. [132933]

Mr. Bayley: The only documentation required from a person who wants to appeal against a decision on an All-work Test (replaced by the Personal Capability Assessment from April this year) is a written statement setting out the reasons for the appeal. Appellants may provide additional evidence to support their case if they wish, but there is no requirement for them to do so.

Mr. Andrew George: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what guidelines he issues on GP charging for the documentation needed to proceed with an appeal against an All-work Test decision; and if he will make a statement. [132932]

Mr. Bayley: None. The only documentation required for an appeal against a decision on an All-work Test (replaced by the Personal Capability Assessment from April this year) is a written statement setting out the reasons for appeal. If appellants wish to provide additional medical evidence in support of their appeal, it is open to them to do so and the provision of such evidence is a private matter between the appellant and their doctor. The British Medical Association issues a list of suggested fees which GPs may charge patients for providing medical reports in general.

MENCAP Study (Wales)

Mr. Wigley: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will make a statement on his findings of the MENCAP in Wales study, conducted by the Wrexham Welfare Rights Unit, regarding the non-take-up of benefits by disabled people, a copy of which has been forwarded to him. [132904]

Mr. Rooker: We will write to the right hon. Member next week.

National Insurance Fund

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what the National Insurance Fund balance would be and how far above the minimum level recommended by the Government Actuary, at the end of each of the years 2002–03 and 2003–04, if the basic pension and linked benefit rates remained at their present level in 2000–01 and were uprated in line with prices thereafter. [133067]

Mr. Rooker: We have accepted the Amendment laid by our right hon. and noble Friend Baroness Castle to the Child Support and Pensions Bill to supply such figures in respect of uprating by earnings. We have said that we will publish these in the next available scheduled report by the Government Actuary which is due to be published in January 2001. We shall also publish the figures requested in that report.

Merchant Navy Day

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will ensure that the Red Ensign is flown from departmental buildings on Merchant Navy Day, 3 September. [132966]

Mr. Rooker: I refer my hon. Friend to the written answer given by my hon. Friend the Parliamentary Under-Secretary of State for the Home Department (Mr. O'Brien) today, Official Report, column 895W.

Pensions

Mr. Field: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security (1) if he will estimate for (a) 2000, (b) 2001 and (c) 2002 how many men turning 65 will be entitled to (i) an occupational pension and (ii) a personal pension; [132947]

(2) if he will estimate for (a) 2000, (b) 2001 and (c) 2002 how many women turning 60 will be entitled to (i) an occupational pension and (ii) a personal pension. [132946]

Mr. Rooker: The information is not available on which to make an estimate.

Mr. Webb: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will estimate the number of (a) single pensioners and (b) married pensioners who would gain (a) £15 per week or above, (b) £10 to £14.99, (c) £5 to £9.99, (d) £3.50 to £4.99, (e) 0.01 to £3.49 and (f) nothing from a package comprising an increase of £5 per week in the basic pension, the introduction of age additions of £5 for those aged 75 to 79 and £10 for those aged 80 or above, taking account of any offsetting loss of means-tested benefits or rise in income tax liability. [133250]

Mr. Rooker: The information requested is not available.

Duty Roster

Mr. Randall: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will publish the daily ministerial duty roster for his Department during the summer adjournment. [133057]

Mr. Rooker: It is not normal practice of Government to publish the daily ministerial duty roster. The Department will ensure that it has sufficient cover through the summer recess in line with the requirements of the Ministerial Code.

Working Families Tax Credit

Mr. Love: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what plans he has to introduce a disregard for Working Families Tax Credit when assessing an individual's entitlement to Housing Benefit; and if he will make a statement. [133150]

Angela Eagle: Limited situations exist where Working Families Tax Credit (WFTC) is partly disregarded in the assessment of Housing Benefit (HB). People who work 30 hours a week or more and who have children may get a partial disregard of WFTC if their earnings are very low. In addition, people with relevant child care costs which cannot be fully met from earnings can have the balance of those costs deducted from WFTC. We have no plans to introduce a wider disregard of WFTC.

SERPS

Mr. Field: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security (1) if he will estimate for (a) 2000, (b) 2001 and (c) 2002 the number of men turning 65 years who will receive (i) 0 to 25 per cent., (ii) 26 to 50 per cent., (iii) 51 to 75 per cent. and (iv) 76 to 100 per cent. of the maximum SERPS pension; [133044]

(2) if he will estimate for (a) 2000, (b) 2001 and (c) 2002 the number of women turning 60 who will receive (i) 0 to 25 per cent., (ii) 26 to 50 per cent., (iii) 51 to 75 per cent. and (iv) 76 to 100 per cent. of the maximum SERPS pension; [133043]

(3) if he will estimate for (a) 2000, (b) 2001 and (c) 2002 how many (i) men turning 65 and (ii) women turning 60 will receive a SERPS pension. [132952]

Mr. Rooker: The information requested is not available in the format requested. Such information as is available in the tables.

Personal Pensions

Mr. Field: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will estimate the number of group personal pension plans. [132943]

Mr. Rooker: The information is not collected.

KPMG are providing input into the Network and Office Services project (NOSP) strand of the ACCORD programme. The NOSP stand is at the Invitation to Tender stage and is not yet a formal contract. Charterhouse are providing overall strategic direction across the ACCORD Outsourcing, CSR and NOSP strands.

KPMG have not provided advice to the PRIME project.

Mr. Rooker: The information is not available in the format requested as the information is not collected on an annual basis. Such information as is available is as follows.

At the end of 1995 there were around 151,000 occupational pension schemes. 37,980 defined benefit, 109,440 defined contributions and 3,580 schemes which have elements of both defined benefit and defined contribution.

Ms Harman: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what percentage of women's average earnings flat rate Statutory Maternity Pay constituted in each year since 1970. [133139]

Industrial Injuries Compensation

Mr. Trickett: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how many former miners who have been compensated for industrial injury involving vibration white finger under the DTI scheme have been refused a pension by his Department; and if he will make a statement. [132439]

Mr. Bayley: The information is not held.

Payment of compensation by an employer does not automatically mean that someone is entitled to industrial injury benefits. In considering a benefit claim, the decision maker will consider any supporting evidence before applying the appropriate Social Security law to the facts of the case.

Pneumoconiosis

Mr. Clapham: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how many pneumoconiosis awards have been made in the last three months for which figures are available, broken down by coalfield area in respect of (a) working miners and (b) former mineworkers. [132506]

Mr. Bayley: The information is not available in the format requested. Such information as is available in the table.

Household Income Statistics

Mr. Webb: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will provide the estimates of the proportion of the population in each county with income below 60 per cent. of median income which underlay Figure 3.6 of his Department's report, "Households Below Average Income". [131749]

Mr. Bayley [holding answer 21 July 2000]: Figure 3.6 presents information for counties ranked into five equal sized groups. Although the underlying data were used in the production of the maps, DSS statisticians advise that precise results for individual counties are not robust enough to be presented separately. Results for individual counties are affected by sampling error and response biases and by the fact that the Family Resources Survey, from which HBAI estimates are drawn, has a sample stratified at regional, not county, level.

Care Services

Ms Walley: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what enhanced payments independent sector organisations which provide care services receive; and what assessment he has made of the implications of this for local authority social service departments. [132419]

Mr. Bayley: Independent sector organisations which provide care services do not receive enhanced payments of Social Security benefits. A resident in an independent sector care home who was there on 31 March 1993 remains entitled by way of preserved rights to higher levels of Income Support as a contribution towards the fees charged by such homes which the resident is responsible for meeting.

A person who took up residence in such a home from April 1993 under community care arrangements would receive Income Support, including appropriate premiums in broadly the same way as they would if they remained at home, with the addition of a Residential Allowance as contribution towards their housing costs. The relevant local authority is responsible for meeting the fees and collecting a contribution from the resident; subject to the resident retaining from their income at least £15.45 per week for personal expenses.

My right hon. Friends the Prime Minister and the Secretary of State for Health announced today in the context of the NHS plan that the preserved rights scheme will end in April 2002 and cases will become the responsibility of local authorities with an appropriate transfer of funding from this Department to local authorities, and that the funds for the Residential Allowance will also be transferred to local authorities.

Benefit Statistics

Mr. Berry: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how many households among those having less than half average income in (a) 1996–97, (b) 1997–98, (c) 1998–99 and (d) 1999–2000, depended primarily for their income on (i) National Insurance pension benefits, (ii) other National Insurance benefits and Child Benefit, (iii) Income Support or the Minimum Income Guarantee and (iv) other types and combinations of benefit. [131958]

Mr. Bayley: The following table shows the number of families with less than contemporary half average income that receive Social Security benefits which account for more than 50 per cent. of their gross income. The figures come from Households Below Average Income (HBAI) series and cover the period up to and including financial year 1998–99 for Great Britain. Figures for 1999–2000 are not available.

Number of families, in households below contemporary half average income, that are dependent primarily on selected Social Security benefits

Million

	1996–97		1997–98		1998–99
	BHC	AHC	BHC	AHC	BHC	AHC
Families below half average (mean) income	5.1	7.2	5.2	7.1	5.4	7.3
Those dependent primarily on:
National Insurance pension benefits	1.4	1.8	1.5	1.8	1.6	1.9
Other National Insurance benefits and Child Benefit	0.3	0.5	0.4	0.5	0.4	0.5
Income Support	0.9	1.1	0.8	1.0	0.7	0.9
All benefits	3.5	5.0	3.4	4.8	3.6	4.9

Notes:

1. All figures are estimates and are taken from HBAI which is based on the Family Resources Survey. All estimates are subject to sampling error and response bias.

2. 'Dependent primarily' has been defined as income from benefits exceeding 50 per cent. of the family's total gross weekly income. HBAI counts the number of families/benefit units in receipt of Social Security benefits, not the number of households. Therefore figures are quoted on family/benefit unit level. An individual household may consist of more than one family/benefit unit therefore figures presented in the table will be higher than counting the number of households.

3. National Insurance pension benefits consists of the Retirement Pension (including SERPS). Other National Insurance benefits include Jobseeker's Allowance (Contributory based), Incapacity Benefit and Widows Benefit. Income Support includes the income based element of Jobseeker's Allowance.

4. The 'All benefits' line relates to the number of families with income below half average that are dependent primarily on income from Social Security benefits.

5. All figures include the self-employed.

6. Figures are presented for families in households below half average income before the deduction of housing costs (BHC) and after (AHC), in line with HBAI conventions.

Benefit Recipients

Mr. Matthew Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will estimate how many people in households in the bottom two deciles of household income whose hourly earnings were below the minimum wage level, deflated from the 1999 rate, were receiving each social security benefit, and in what combination, using data from the Family Resources Survey 1997–98; and if he will make a statement. [129955]

Mr. Bayley: The information requested is not available in the format requested. Such information as is available is as follows.

The number of individuals who were in the bottom two equivalised income deciles and where the hourly earnings of the head of the family in which they belong would have been below the national minimum wage had it existed in 1997–98, deflated from the 1999 rate is 800,000. The estimate is calculated using data from the 1997–98 Family Resources Survey. Of those 800,000 individuals it is estimated that 290,000 were in receipt of Council Tax Benefit. The sample size of the Family Resources Survey is not large enough to allow reliable estimates to be made of the number within the 800,000 who were in receipt of other benefits.

Asbestos

Mr. Field: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security (a) when his Department withdrew leaflet N1272 on asbestos, (b) for what reasons it was withdrawn, (c) what plans he has to issue a new leaflet covering this subject and (d) when replacement literature will be available. [132489]

Dr. Tonge: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security (1) when he intends to replace or reissue leaflet N1272 relating to diseases caused by asbestos; [132641]

(2) for what reason leaflet N1272, relating to asbestos-related diseases, has been withdrawn. [132642]

Mr. Bayley: Leaflet N1272 was withdrawn on 1 November 1999 as part of a review of all the Benefits Agency's leaflets. The review was carried out following extensive research with customers to find out what they wanted from leaflets. The research showed that customers did not find leaflets the best source of detailed information.

For those who would use a leaflet, the research showed that customers wanted the leaflets based on specific life events rather than covering specific benefits. They also wanted the leaflets to contain basic information about all the help they could get in that circumstance and they wanted the information to be just enough to help them to decide whether to claim. Based on the research we withdrew leaflet N1272 and replaced it with a less detailed leaflet SD6 "ill or disabled because of a disease or deafness caused by work".

There are no plans to issue a new leaflet specifically on asbestos-related diseases. However, the Benefits Agency issued replacement literature on 1 November 1999. Its leaflet SD6 "ill or disabled because of a disease or deafness caused by work" is aimed at customers and gives brief details of the Industrial Injuries scheme. It also issued a technical guide, DB1 "A guide to Industrial Injuries scheme benefits", on the same date. This gives detailed information about the scheme, including asbestos-related diseases. It is freely available to the public although it is primarily aimed at customer advisers.

Winter Fuel Payments

Ms Walley: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will make arrangements for the payment at post offices of Winter Fuel Payments for men aged 60 to 63 years. [132418]

Angela Eagle: The majority of men aged 60–64 who are newly eligible for Winter Fuel Payments as a result of recent changes to the qualifying criteria, will have to make a claim for Winter Fuel Payments in respect of either past winters, or this coming winter or both.

Customers are given a choice as to the method of payment they prefer and payments can be paid directly into a bank or building society account or by Girocheque—which can be cashed at their local post office. Claims are currently being processed and payments for past winters are being issued just as soon as entitlement has been determined.

Official Visits

Mr. Matthew Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will list the visits outside Britain made by his Department's Permanent Secretary on official business since 1 January 1999, indicating the date and purpose of the visit in each case. [132774]

Mr. Rooker: The Permanent Secretary visited the USA in October 1999 to meet the senior management of EDS and see some of their large scale partnerships in operation. She visited Northern Ireland in September 1999, and her predecessor visited Northern Ireland in February 1999. Both visits were to meet with staff at the Benefits Agency and Child Support Agency.

Press Officers

Mr. Lansley: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how many press officers were employed in his Department in (a) May 1997, (b) January 1998, (c) January [illegible] and (d) January 2000; and what the total expenditure on press officers by his Department was in each of the years concerned. [132767]

Mr. Rooker: I refer the hon. Member to Appendix 11 of the Report on the GICS by the Select Committee on Public Spending (29 July 1998), where Appendix 11 lists the number and cost of press officers per Department 1997, 1998 and 1999. Information for 2000 is as follows:

January 2000

Total number of Press Officers—11

Total expenditure—£373,000.

Press Releases

Mr. Lansley: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how many press releases have been issued so far this year; and what the total cost of the production and issuing of press releases was in (a) 1997, (b) 1998, (c) 1999 and (d) 2000 to date. [132771]

Mr. Rooker: The information is in the table.

Correspondence

Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security when he proposes to answer the letter of 25 May, sent by the right hon. Member for Alyn and Deeside, regarding Mrs. Boaden of Deeside, Flintshire. [133127]

Mr. Rooker: A reply was issued on 27 July 2000.

EDUCATION AND EMPLOYMENT

New Deal

Mr. Brady: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment how many employees of his Department and its agencies have been recruited from the New Deal; and what percentage this represents of total staff. [129102]

Mr. Wills: I refer the hon. Member to the answer given by my right hon. Friend the Minister for the Cabinet Office to my hon. Friend the Member for Bradford, North (Mr. Rooney) on 6 July 2000, Official Report, column 286W.

The number of New Dealers within my Department and its executive agencies represents four per cent. of total staff.

Teachers' Pension Fund

Mr. Purchase: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what estimate he has made of the contribution from public funds to the teachers' pension fund; and if the contribution is estimated (a) to rise, (b) to fall or (c) to remain the same in real terms over the next 20 years. [129304]

Mr. Blunkett: Teachers' pensions in England and Wales are mainly funded through taxation. Pension contributions from teachers and their employers in the public sector provide most of the cash income. The table gives cash forecasts for the four years to 2003–04. No further cashflow figures are available.

£ million

Financial year	Gross expenditure	Gross income	Net expenditure
2000–01	3,680	2,030	1,650
2001–02	3,850	2,150	1,700
2002–03	4,200	2,420	1,780
2003–04	4,550	2,570	1,980

A longer term view of the financial position of the Teachers' Pensions Scheme is given in the 1996 Valuation Report laid before the House on 30 March 2000. This compares the notional assets of the fund, derived from past pension contributions, with current and future pension liabilities. Every five years the Government Actuary reviews this position and specifies a pension contribution rate which will eliminate any surplus or deficit identified in the report over 40 years.

Grants

Mr. Clappison: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment if he will give a breakdown of the costs involved in the transfer of responsibility for grants for four year olds referred to in the DfEE press release of 18 July 2000 entitled, "Schools to get up to £70,000 each in direct grants"; and what is the total cost involved in the transfer in each year to 2003–04. [132404]

Ms Estelle Morris: The SSA increase for 2001–02 of 5.5 per cent. covers the £125 million paid in grant to LEAs in 2000–01 for four year old nursery provision. The total of Education SSA for 2002–03 and 2003–04 also includes funding for the increased pressure on local education authorities resulting from this transfer.

Sixth-form Curriculum

Mr. Clappison: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what estimate he has made of the cost of progressive implementation of the broader sixth form curriculum in each year in the period covered by the Comprehensive Spending Review. [132405]

Mr. Wicks: We have provided £35 million in the Education Spending Settlement for 2000–01 to help meet the costs of the broader curriculum. The figure for 2001–02 will be announced in due course.

Comprehensive Spending Review

Mr. Clappison: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment if he will list the additional responsibilities resulting in (a) cost and (b) additional costs which he expects to be met by schools in the period covered by the Comprehensive Spending Review; and what estimate he has made of the total of such costs broken down for (i) primary schools and (ii) secondary schools. [132406]

Mr. Blunkett: Schools will be responsible for boosting standards of attainment at the relevant Key Stages over the period of the Spending Review. Full details of these additional responsibilities and the extra resources we are making available to help schools meet them will be announced in due course. We have already announced that headteachers in England will be given £540 million in special grants next year as part of an increase in education spending in the UK of nearly £12 billion from 2000–01 to 2003–04 and that the Year 2000 Spending Review means a real terms increase of some £370 per pupil over the three years bringing the total to almost £700 per pupil in real terms between 1997–98 and 2003–04.

Education SSA

Mr. Clappison: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what the change is for each year from 2000–01 to 2003–04 in (a) the education SSA and (b) the education SSA plus direct grant from Government to schools, adjusted using the GDP deflator in both cases. [132407]

Ms Estelle Morris: In addition to SSA and direct grant increases, funding for schools through the Standards Fund and specific grants, including class size grant, and for schools capital will be increased as a result of the Spending Review. Full details of the extra resources we are making available to schools for these aspects will be announced in due course. On SSA and direct grant, the information requested is set out in the following table:

	Real terms year-on-year increase in education SSA (£ million)	Percentage increase	Real terms year-on-year increase in education SSA plus direct grants to schools (£ million)	Percentage increase
2001–02	525	2.4	760	3.5
2002–03	749	3.4	751	3.3
2003–04	744	3.3	745	3.2

We have already announced that headteachers in England will be given £540 million in direct grants next year, and that this will be sustained with 2.75 per cent. increases over the following two years. This is part of an increase in education spending in the UK of nearly £12 billion from 2000–01 to 2003–04. The Year 2000 Spending Review means a real terms increase of some £370 per pupil over the three years bringing the total to almost £700 per pupil in real terms between 1997–98 and 2003–04.

Connexions

Mr. Clappison: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what is the spending total for the Connexions programme in the year 1999–2000; what are the planned spending totals for each to 2004; how much of these totals is further spending following the Comprehensive Spending Review; and if he will give a breakdown of the costs of the programme, including administrative costs. [132408]

Mr. Wicks: The Connexions Service will be progressively introduced from April 2001. Following the Year 2000 Spending Review settlement, the Secretary of State for Education and Employment will make an announcement in due course about the outcome for individual programmes in 2001–02 and beyond, including the new resources for the Connexions Service.

Standards Fund

Mr. Clappison: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what the spending totals are of each of the grants administered under the Standards Fund for 2000–01; what are the planned totals for each year to 2004; and how much of the total in each case is further spending allocated under the Comprehensive Spending Review. [132409]

Ms Estelle Morris: Total expenditure allocated, and taken up by local education authorities, for each of the grants administered under the Standards Fund for 2000–01 are shown in the following table. Figures include both Government and local authority contributions to the Standards Fund. Planned totals for future years will be determined as part of detailed decisions to be made following the outcome of the Spending Review.

Mr. Clappison: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what is his estimate of the cost of administering Standards Fund grants in (a) his Department and (b) local education authorities over the period of the Comprehensive Spending Review. [132410]

Ms Estelle Morris: No figures are available of the administrative costs of the Standards Fund. The Government have recognised the need to restrict the burden on schools as the size of the Fund has grown. The Department is reviewing the arrangements for the Standards Fund in consultation with schools, Local Education Authorities and other interested parties. As a result of the review changes will be made to simplify the operation of the Standards Fund from April 2001, details of which will be announced in the Autumn. The main changes resulting from the review will involve reducing the paperwork by simplifying the mechanics of payment and accounting; encouraging an approach focused on outcomes; giving schools and local authorities greater spending freedom; sharing timely management information, and spreading best practice.

Education Policy

Mr. Clappison: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment for each year since 1979, how much his Department, and the previous Department of Education, spent in real terms on (a) focus groups, (b) opinion polls, (c) press releases and (d) television and radio advertising relating to education policy. [132411]

Mr. Wills: The Department for Education and Employment does not undertake focus groups or opinion polls of the public. However it has sampled and consulted on views of teachers, Heads and other groups affected by the Department's policies on specific issues; for example literacy and numeracy strategies.

Expenditure on press releases is not available in a form which would enable comparable figures for each year (1979 to 2000) to be compiled without disproportionate cost.

Expenditure on television and radio advertising relating to education policy from 1979–80 to 1999–2000, was as follows:

Financial year	Expenditure[1]	Expenditure (£000)
1979–80	—	—

The expenditure in 1998 onwards is largely accounted for by the Department's campaigns on literacy and numeracy.

Employment Service

Mr. Clappison: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what was the total of Departmental HQ and the Employment Service, gross running costs in 1997–98; what are the planned totals for gross running costs for the years up to 2004; and if he will give the total of administration costs referred to in Table 7.1 on Page 48 of the Spending Review 2000. [132412]

Mr. Blunkett: The gross running costs of the Department and the Employment Service since 1997–98 are as follows:

	1997–98[1]	1998–99[1]	1999–2000[2]	2000–01[2]

The planned totals for gross running costs for the years up to 2004, and the total of administration costs within the Year 2000 Spending Review settlement have not yet been finalised.

Angela Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment when the Employment Service Annual report and Accounts for 1999–2000 will be laid before Parliament. [133690]

Mr. Blunkett: I have today laid before the House the Employment Service's Annual Report and Accounts for 1999–2000 which gives full details of the Agency's performance and expenditure for that year.

The Annual Report records an excellent year's work by the Employment Service. For the first time since 1994–95 it has achieved and in many cases significantly exceeded all its targets for helping unemployed people into jobs. Jobcentres have also been giving record levels of customer service to jobseekers.

During the course of an extremely challenging year, the Employment Service:

placed directly into work more than 1.33 million unemployed people, including over 220,000 who had been unemployed for six months and just under 97,000 people with disabilities; handled 2.7 million job vacancies; and helped 191,000 young people through the New Deal for Young People and directly placed over 111,000 into jobs.

This has been achieved against a background of major change and new challenges. During 1999–2000 the Employment Service also:

built on the continuing success of the New Deals, including the national implementation of the New Deal for Partners of Unemployed People and the launch of pilots for New Deal 50plus; worked with partners in the public, private and voluntary sectors to launch 12 pilots of the ONE service to provide a work-focused, one-stop entry into the welfare system and, as part of the Working Links partnership, to bid for, and run, nine of the 15 Employment Zones; introduced a programme to improve the service it gives to its employer customers, including a set of explicit service delivery standards; and prepared the ground for its ambitious Modernisation programme which will see touch-screen kiosks in every Jobcentre, place all vacancies handled by ES on the Internet and introduce a single, national telephone number for employers to register job vacancies.

The Employment Service missed only one of its targets last year, for the correct application of the Jobseeker's Allowance process. It ended the year on 90 per cent. against a target of 96 per cent. Even here, however, there was a substantial improvement in performance during the course of the year.

1999–2000 was a very good year for the Employment Service. Its success was down to the effort and enthusiasm of everyone working in it. I am very grateful to them for that effort, commitment and determination to succeed. I look forward to building on this success in the year ahead and in setting up the new agency to deliver work-focused services to people of working age. I know that people in the Employment Service will rise to the new opportunities and challenges involved in making it a success.

Sure Start

Mr. Clappison: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what is the spending outturn for the Sure Start programme for 1999–2000; what are the planned spending totals for the programme for each year to 2004; how much of this spending is further spending following the Comprehensive Spending Review; if he will give a breakdown of the cost of the programme, including administrative costs; and when he expects to have an evaluation strategy for the Sure Start programme in place. [132413]

Yvette Cooper: I have been asked to reply.

The requested spending figures are set out in the following table with supporting notes. The Sure Start evaluation strategy is almost finalised. Tenders are currently being invited to carry out the national evaluation and a contract should be in place by the autumn. The national evaluation should begin soon after.

Sure Start Spending

£ million

		Of which:
	Sure Start spending	Spending review	Administration costs[1]
1999–2000[2]	5	—	1.1
2000–01[3]	184	—	1.6
2001–02[4]	284	—	3.4
2002–03[5]	449	265	4.1
2003–04[5]	499	315	4.2

[1] Includes the baseline, plus spending review allocations and administration costs. The baselines for 2001–02 onwards are on a resource rather than cash basis.

[2] For 1999–2000 and 2000–01, Sure Start running costs were included in the DfEE's gross running costs limit, from 2001–02 onwards there will be a separate limit.

[3] The total for 2001–02 includes a projected carry forward of £100 million from previous years.

[4] Provisional outturn.

[5] Plans.

Circulars

Mr. Clappison: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment for each year since 1979, how much his Department, and its predecessors, spent in real terms on circulars relating to education. [132414]

Mr. Wills: Information on the Department's circular communications relating to education is not available in a form which would enable comparable figures for the expenditure on those circulars for each of the years 1979 to 2000 to be compiled without incurring disproportionate cost.

Pathfinder Projects

Mr. Clappison: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment, pursuant to his answer of 12 July 2000, Official Report, column 556W, on pathfinder projects, how many expressions of interest have been received regarding city academy pathfinder projects. [132415]

Ms Estelle Morris: We have received several expressions of interest from potential sponsors and are having further discussions with them about the scope for developing more detailed proposals.

Children (Mental Health)

Ms Julie Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what plans he has to ensure that teachers receive training about the mental health of children and young people; and if this will form part of their (a) initial or (b) in-service training. [132484]

Ms Estelle Morris: All teachers, as part of their initial teacher training, are trained in how to identify and deal with special educational needs. In order to gain Qualified Teacher Status (QTS) trainees must demonstrate that they meet all of the standards for the award of QTS which include specific references to special educational needs. All teachers must also meet induction standards, which cover special educational needs, at the end of their induction year.

With regard to in-service training in special educational needs for teachers, the Department is supporting expenditure of £26 million under the Standards Fund for 2000–01. In addition, £6 million is being supported through the Standards Fund for work on emotional and behavioural difficulties, including projects to identify and provide for the learning needs of children with mental health problems. Good practice arising from these projects will be widely disseminated, alongside other guidance on child mental health issues currently being prepared by the Department.

Ms Julie Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what percentage of children in mainstream schools have mental health problems; and what steps he proposes to take to provide them with support. [132548]

Jacqui Smith: Based on the survey of 10,000 children conducted by the Office for National Statistics, and published in March 2000, it is estimated that 10 per cent. of children aged 5–15 years have a mental disorder. This includes emotional disorders—anxiety and depression—conduct disorders and hyperactivity. The majority of children with these mental ill health problems are being educated in mainstream schools.

My Department, working closely with the Department of Health and taking advice from experts in the child mental health field, is preparing good practice guidance, based on existing case studies, for a range of school settings. This will help teachers work effectively with pupils with emotional and mental health problems. It will be followed by further guidance next year, including examples of effective working between schools and local Child and Adolescent Mental Health services.

The Special Educational Needs element of the Standards Fund grant for England provides scope for funding projects for identifying and providing for the learning needs of children with mental health problems. A number of projects currently underway involve schools working with health services and educational psychologists, including projects with a specific focus on child mental health. We aim to include examples of good practice from these projects in our guidance and make them available on the Department's Internet site. In addition, the support provided under the Standards Fund for Special Educational Needs training may be used for training in relation to children with mental health problems.

Overseas Pupils

Mr. Clappison: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment, pursuant to his answer of 20 July 2000, Official Report, column 306W, regarding the exclusion of overseas pupils from performance tables, ref. 132063, what criteria are to be used in determining which pupils are to be excluded; and what estimate he has made of the number of pupils likely to be so excluded. [132658]

Jacqui Smith: Pupils will qualify for exclusion from the school roll for the purpose of calculating school and Local Education Authority level results in the performance tables, if they:

are eligible for Key Stage 2 assessment (for primary schools) or are in their final year of compulsory schooling (for secondary schools); are from overseas and were admitted to an English school for the first time on or after the start of Year 5 (for primary schools) or Year 10 (for secondary schools); and do not have English as their first language.

These changes will have no impact on national level information, against which the Government's performance is measured.

We do not expect the number of children of asylum seeker or refugee families excluded from the performance tables under these arrangements to exceed 1,000. The total number of pupils likely to be excluded is expected to be very small in relation to the total number of pupils included in the tables.

Performance-related Pay

Mr. Clappison: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment following the Government's decision not to appeal against the decision of Mr. Justice Jackson regarding performance-related pay, what his estimate is of the additional costs which will be incurred as a result of Mr. Justice Jackson's judgment. [132659]

Ms Estelle Morris: It is not possible to say at this stage what, if any, additional costs there may be.
